There were 56,756 fewer farm owners in the United States in 1925 than in 1920, and 7,724 more tenants, according to the survey. After a study of the details of the situation the report declares that the situation is "not at all reassuring."

Increase in teaancy has come in the actual farming districts, and especially in the newly developed cotton areas of the Southwest. Farm ownership has increased only in surburban areas of industrial states.

HOOVER REPORTS CENTRAL AMERICA CAN GROW RUBBER

Must Conquer Country And Lower Wage

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON. Rubber can be grown commercially in southern Mexico, Central America and northern South America at cheap labor cost, but only if the labor is right.

That's the nub of the report just made public by the department of commerce. The same department made a similar report on rubber production in the Philippines last year. Cheap labor. Cheaper labor than is now available. Labor that can be made to work at a rice wage, and that never will organize and never will demand a living wage, even as gauged by tropical natives' standards. Cheap rubber produced by peons.

Can Steal Lands.

Herbert Hoover is anxious to secure an American source of raw rubber supply. Latin America is almost an American colony today. And Hoover may become secretary of state when Kellogg resigns. Hence the importance of this report.

"In the northern part of South America", says his statement, "and in the Central American countries, there are at least 6,000,000 acres of land adapted by climate and soil to successful rubber production. These lands can be obtained by concession, lease or purchase at a low price. A fair percentage of them have adequate transportation facilities to the seaboard, and their ports of call are within 5 days sailing time of the United States. Rubber could be delivered in the United States quicker by one month than from the regions which now supply most of our plants.

Mexico and Nicaragua.

"Northern tropical America has natural advantages over the area now available for new planting of rubber in the East Indies. Among these are the low cost af land, better trasportation, availability of cleared land, absence of destructive grasses, and soil suitable for the plow.

Unfortunately High Wages.

"The outstanding handicaps to successful rubber growing in this region are the lack of sufficient labor and the relatively high wage scale prevailing in the districts suitable for rubber planting. The only appreciable surplus of labor in northern tropical America at present is in the West Indian Islands which could supply from 30,000 to 40,000 workers.

"In the lowlands of Central America laborers are paid from $1 to $1.50 a day as compared with 35 cents to 40 cents per day in the East Indies. In the highlands farm hands receive from 20 cents to 60 cents per day but the climate in those regions is not favorable to rubber growing."

"Bust The Unions."

This report obviously will lead ingenious American investors to urge the Coolidge administration to "stand for no nonsense" from the few labor unions now existing in Central America and Colombia and Venezuela, but to deal with them in Nicaragua, for instance, with a strong hand.

Chinese Rebuke Sabotage by Socialist

'Hands Off China' Conference To Hold Mass Meetings

The "Hands Off China" conference held at the Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave., Tuesday night furmed a permanent organization and laid out plans for future work is spite of socialist obstructionism that received a sharp rebuke from one of the Kuomantang delegates, who was designated for that purpose by the Chinese delegation to the conference.

An executive committee of 21 was elected with instructions to arrange mass meetings, visit trade unions, obtain the support of church organizations, print leaflets and carry on special work among youth organizations.

Give Five Minutes

Towards the end of the conference Edward Levinson, delegate from the Young People's Socialist League, who had been trying to break up the conference from the very beginning, asked for the floor for five minutes. On a motion by delegate Therne, seconded by delegate Pat Devine, it was granted.

Levinson then delivered a violent attack on the Workers (Communist) Party, claiming that it "cares nothing about China, but wants to use it for its own needs."

Chinese Delegate Speaks.

At this point the Chinese delegates asked that one of their delegation should be given the floor to state their position.

Samuel Hu of the Chinese Workers Alliance in his rebuke to Levinson said that "I am going to be very frank. The Chinese delegates are very much puzzled at what is happening here tonight. We have come here to ask for your support in our fight against Imperialism. We do not ask whether you are a Socialist or a Communist, but don't ask your color of your nationality. All we ask is that all of you help us in our struggle.

"The Chinese cause is not only for themselves but is a part of the world revolution."

Levinson Sneers

"We have great hopes for this conference," Shu continued. "Whatever causes unnecessary debate and trouble is not a true friend of Chinese freedom."

Socialist Betrayal

He was followed by Bertram D. Wolfe who said he was glad that "Levinson provoked the Chinese delegates to take the leadership of the conference."

Elect an Executive

The executive committee elected by the conference consists of: William Pickens, Chairman; Patrick McCellen, vice-chairman; Vivian Wilkinson, secretary and Rosenberg, Lifshitz, Chernow, Hofbauer, Lerman, Devine, Linson, Yung, Dobel, Rosenman, Chadbourne, Ogino, Adams and Baum. There was 130 delegates present.

CAP MAKERS WIN ST. PAUL STRIKE AND UNION SCALE

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 16.—The strike which the cap makers have been waging against the firm of McKibbens of this city was settled today with full union conditions, notwithstanding the fact that the firm had a permanent injunction against the union.

The factory is moving back from Minneapolis to St. Paul.

Worker Encouraged.

A membership meeting of Local 16 of the Capmakers' Union was held March 15, where a representative of the general office, J. Roberts, together with a local committee made up of Brothers S. Smoliak, L. Levi and P. Gardner, reported in full about the satisfactory settlement. Their report was accepted unanimously by the membership.

The local labor movement considers this victory of the capmakers a great gain for all the needle trades unions in this vicinity, and for the general labor movement as well.

WON'T DEPORT VIRGIN ISLAND LABOR LEADER

Conspiracy of Harding, Hughes & Co. Fails

Reginald Grant Barrow, a Bishop of the Episcopal Church and pastor of the Christ African Orthodox Church, Brooklyn, will not be deported to the Virgin Islands.

This was decided when Federal Judge John C. Knox, of the Southern District, New York, upheld the writ of habeus corpus which had been obtained by his attorneys.

Persecuted Four Years.

Barrow's release comes after more than three years of persecution at the hands of various government officials who considered him "a dangerous irredentist." He had been for a number of years active in the agitation for improved conditions among the workers in the Virgin Islands, with the result that he incurred the enmity of the authorities there.

Barrow came to the United States after he had been ordered out of the Virgin Islands under the threat of prosecution. When the governor of the Islands discovered that he had come to this country, he called to the attention of the U. S. authorities to that fact, urging them ta expel him from this country.

Governor's Hate Follows.

Declaring that Barrow's further stay in the United States was "unadvisable," Henry H. Hough, the American governor of the Virgin Islands, writing to the U. S. department of labor complained that he was a source of labor agitation on the Islands, and especially at St. Croix.

"The element of which he is a member," Gov. Hough, "has done more to disrupt the business and inundate the composure of Saint Croix than any other one thing. The working people of their group have been taught, amongst other things, to do as little work as possible, on the theory that eventually the plantation owners would have to give up their estates and in the end the estates will fall to the people."

He Served Labor.

The American governor then called the attention of the department of labor official to an enclosed newspaper article which accused Barrow of "Serving in the ranks of labor in various capacities in connection with the St. Croix labor unions," as indicative "of the manner in which he mixes his religion with politics."

Documents offered at the hearing before Judge Knox by attorneys for Barrow brought out illuminating correspondence between officials on the Virgin Islands and U. S. government officials at Washington.

Hughes, Harding Campaigned.

Ex-Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, the late Warren G. Harding, and Former Secretary of the Navy Denby were involved in the campaign to make things uncomfortable for Barrow while he remained in the United States.

Writing ta the secretary of labor, Denby stated that his department would be pleased if the department of labor could see its way clear to support the decision and action already taken by the governmeat of the Virgin Islands."

Coal Operators In Open Shop Threat

Lewis' Order Not to Strike Results in Short Contract

ALTOONA, Penna., March 16.—The Altoona offices of the Association af Bituminous Coal Operators has immediately taken advantage of United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis' statement that he will under no circumstances order a strike on April 1, and has practically issued an open shop threat to all of its employees.

From the Association of Bituminous Coal Operators of Central Pennsylvania comes the announcement that the offer of the union to permit local mining operations to continue at old rates pending the negatiation of a new agreement has been accepted.

But the association adds:

"It is to be distinctly understood, however, that this arrangement may be terminated at any time by this association, or by any individual member, acting on its own behalf, and that this acceptance does not commit this association or any af its members to any definite extension of the present wage scale agreement or to any agreement which may hereafter be made between the United Mine Workers of America and any other district of operators."

To Prevent Strike

This means, say miners here, that if any strike breaks out later during extended negotiations over a wage scale this spring, the central competitive field, western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, will strike without central Peansylvania. A temporary arrangement will keep miners at work there, breaking the strike, and when the strike is broken, the operators' combine will repudiate its agreeaent, and lawer its own workers' wages.

Not To Save the Union

Lewis' disastrous diplamacy is exactly the opposite of the "Save the Union" policy laid down by John Brophy, recently prevailing president 2, and candidate against Lewis at the last international election. The progressive forces in the miners' union made three most important slogans, "No Separate Agreements," "No Short Term Contracts," "No Wage Cuts."

Warniag From Brophy

Brophy, whose place is taken April 1, by James Mark, former vice-president of the district, issuaed a ringing message to all members of the union after a committee's conference with the operators broke down a short time ago at Miami, Florida. He called on them to prepare for a desperate fight to preserve the union, and foretold the present attempts to divide its forces and wear it down piecemeal.

Only preparation of a nation-wide strike, with all the unorganized drawn into the conflict, will prevent the coal operators from carrying out their expressed determination to reduce the miners' already low wages, in the opinion of Brophy and the progressives.

Lewis Ties Union Hands

Lewis' answer to this has been his oft-re statement that "there will never be a strike ordered, and his series of timid attempts at short term agreements with just enough of the outlying operators to prevent a strike from succeeding, if by some miracle it came about.

3,000 MOTHERS SCORE DELAY IN HOUSING RELIEF

Filth in Tenements a Menace to Workers

Protesting the wretched housing conditions in New York City, three thousand mothers gathered at the Hotel Pennsylvania Tuesday night to urge city and state officials to take more active steps toward providing satisfactory dwellings for families unable to pay more than $5 or $10 monthly per room.

Representing 105 mothers' clubs, forty-five women described the frightful congestion and filth which is characteristic of the notorious Law of the state ritualised; they demand the scrapping of unsanitary tenements and they ask the enactment of a city ordinance to permit the building of low-priced tax-exempt houses by limited-dividend corporations.

The menace of the poorly lit and poorly ventilated tenements to New York workers was indicated by Commissioner of Health Louis I. Harris, who declared that he saw a "constant potential source of danger in the congested areas should there be an epidemic in New York." Even now he said there was three or four times as much scarlet fever as there was last year.

Colored Children Go On Strike; Segregated By School Principal

TOMS RIVER, N. J., March 16, (FP).—Colored children and their teachers are fighting the efforts of Toms River supervising principal, Edgar M. Fink, to segregate them from their white fellow students. Fink, upon his return from Texas, ordered the colored children out of the fine new school building into an abandoned little church house.

Both the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the American Civil Liberties Union have protested to Governor Moore. Aid is being given the colored parents in the court fight against segregation.

Sinclair Jury Has Little to Decide

reading growing out of the senate investigation in 1923-24 into the leasing of naval oil reserves. In the first, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Edward L. Doheny, wealthy California operator, were acquitted of charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in the leasing of the Elk Hills California reserve.

In the present case, Sinclair is charged with contempt of the United States Senate for having refused to answer certain questions propounded by the senate committee upon his refusal to testify before the Teapot Dome, Wyoming, reserve, both leases were executed in April, 1922.

Bribery and Conspiracy.

Six legal proceedings were based upon the revelations of the senate committee. Two attacked the leases as void proceedings, two charged criminal conspiracy, one charged Doheny and Fall with bribery and another charged Sinclair [illegible] the other civil suit recently ended in the supreme court, where the lease was invalidated. The Sinclair civil case is now before the same court.

Fall and Doheny were acquitted last November in the Elk Hills conspiracy case. The Fall-Sinclair case, involving Teapot Dome, is set for trial in the supreme court of the District of Columbia on April 25. The Fall-Doheny bribery case is yet to come to trial.

Judges Decides Pertinency.

Attorneys for Sinclair laboriously reared an elaborate defense before Justice Hitz only to have it toppled over like a paper house by a ruling of the court that the pertinency of he unanswered questions was for the determination of the court rather than the jury. This ruling and its companion, holding that all the questions Sinclair declined to answer were pertinent to the oil inquiry, left for the consideration of the jurors only the admitted facts that Sinclair had appeared before the committee on March 22, 1924, and had refused to answer certain questions.

Under the law, a jail sentence of one month to one year and a fine of $100 to $1,000 is mandatory when a jury returns a verdict of guilty.

That the innocence of Police Lieut. Charles Becker who was electrocuted in 1915 in connection with the Rosenthal murder in New York has been established, was charged yesterday by Assemblyman F. L. Hackenburg.

Klein, former Commissioner of Accounts of New York City, has in his possession complete vindication of Becker. BIG RED REVEL DRIVE TO END NEXT SATURDAY

Gathering of Gaiety Seekers Guaranteed

(Special To The Daily Worker.)

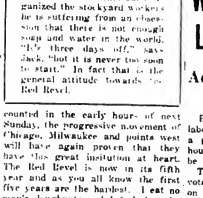
CHICAGO, March 16.—The Fifth Annual Red Revel Masquerade Ball is already the talk of radical circles here. In fact there is little else to talk about, outside of the approaching mayoral elections and until the Red Revel is over politics take a back seat.

Myron Hall, 1856 North Western avenue will be the scene of this gay festival which will take place on March 19, next Saturday evening. In addition to other attractions, chiefly the beautiful and bewitchingly decked damsels of many lands, there is an inventive offered for the costume that makes the best impression on the judges.

The chairman of the committee of arrangements insists that there are more entries for the prize this year than ever before. One hundred dollars is nothing to sneeze at. Nobody is barred except the judges and the Chicago correspondent of the DAILY WORKER.

Closing Speech.

Arne Swabeck, general secretary of District 8 of the Workers Party, in a final appeal to potential customers in the closing hours of the Red Revel drive said:



"I predict—and I am no false prophet—that when the dollars are counted in the early hours of next Sunday, the progressive movement of Chicago, Milwaukee and points west will have again proven that they have this great institution at heart. The Red Revel is now in its fifth year and as you all know the first five years are the hardest. I eat no man's dead meat and I feel that the good workers of Chicago will see that I don't have to. The proceeds of the Red Revel will go to spread Communist propaganda and this banner district must still realize the load that it has held for several years. I thank the members of the party in this district and the sympathizers who have helped to make the Red Revel the success it is sure to be. My election is certain". (Comrade Swabeck forgot himself momentarily and that he was running for office—Ed.)

Greetings From Daily Worker Staff.

The following touching message was received in Chicago from the DAILY WORKER editors who left Chicago for New York when the Daily moved:

Comrades: Red Revel publicity appearing in Daily has us all weeping. If we were in Chicago we would not have enough money to take a street car home from the Red Revel not to mention a taxi. In fact we might have to walk to as well as from but we would be there and depend on luck. New York is a great city but we have yet to see a Red Revel or anything like it here. I hope you raise enough money to buy postage stamps and send some news about your city.

(Signed) Four Little Editors.

HERE IS THE EVIDENCE!

This unique picture of Jack Johnstone, local labor leader, was snapped by Steve Eolucci, techin of the Bolkins, as Johnstone was walking up to the Red Revel. Since Jack organized the stockyard workers he is suffering from an obsession that Bolkins are pumping soup and water in the world. Only three days off," says Jack, "but it is never too soon to start." In fact that is the general attitude towards the Red Revel.

ART. VII. THE SPY SYSTEM: ART OF THE "DOLLAR-A-DAY" MAN

By ROBERT MITCHELL

As compared with the part played by the "Beakey", the character of the "dollar-a-day" man stands out as that of a star performer. His importance was early recognised by the Interborough Intelligences but it is only in recent times that the role of the dollar-a-day man has been brought to the necessary perfection. A highly developed technique has come into use:

The New Men.

A new man seeking employment with the Interborough who shows himself to be above the average mentally may be sent to the intelligence department. There he is received by Mr. Rhatigan, chief of the "Beakey" division. The men say: "There goes the rat again!" Mr. Rhatigan congratulates the worker upon having been singled out from the large mass of employes. The procedure thereafter is about as follows:

"Now, Mr. Smith, our intelligence department needs men like you for the work we are doing. You know we are trying in every way possible to improve the conditions of our men, adopt better ways of conducting our business, etc. We are trying in every way to make our employes contented and happy.

All For Kindness.

"Naturally, when we have such a large force it is almost impossible to know exactly what is desired by our men. Nor can we always tell what is best for them. What we need to know is what they want, what are their grievances and demands.

"Now, Mr. Smith, if you are the man who can help us with ideas and ran learn to understand the grievances and complaints of the men, you will do a great deal towards making this the best railroad in the country.

"Besides, we will give you something in addition to your salary—as high as a dollar a day, perhaps ten dollars a week. As you see, your job will be a very important one. You will become one of our 'improvement' squad. But in order to do your work most successfully, it will be necessary to keep quiet about your special task so that the men will feel more free in talking to you.

Just Be A Spy.

"In other words, you have to keep your eyes and ears open but say nothing. Make friends with the men, get them to confide in you, learn what their grievances are, report them to us that we may know exactly how to correct them."

The new worker is usually highly elated at receiving the special work as "welfare expert". He makes friends with the others and draws them out as to their complaints and demands.

Being honest, and speaking quite openly about unsatisfactory conditions, he soon wins confidence. Perhaps weeks or even months go by before the dollar-a-day man is summoned to report. Usually he seeks to prove his ability and attention to duty by relating every scrap of news he has overheard. Sometimes he has a whole set of improvements to suggest!

Either Corrupted or Quits.

Sooner or later, of course, he discovers the true nature of the role which he has been playing. Then one of two things happens. Either he leaves the company or, as is more often the case, he accepts definitely and consciously the part of a paid spy.

Mention has already been made that the company legal department is in many of its workings the chief spy agency of the Interborough and that Mr. E. L. Quackenbush is the leading inquisitor and "Beakey".

"Put On The Carpet".

When there is any reason to suspect that a particular worker is "agitating" or is connected with any movement towards organization, he is sent to 165 Broadway, the office of the Interborough and "put on the carpet". To be "put on the carpet" is to be put through the third degree in a manner which would shame the [illegible] CONNOLLY ..... ingenuity of the heroes of the New York industrial squad of the police force. Men have reported that to be grilled for three hours is no uncommon thing.

The method is usually to inform the man first that he is fired for disloyalty to the company or the "brotherhood". When he protests, he is told that that he has been carefully watched for the past few months, that all his movements have been known and that if he had not been such a good worker in the past no consideration would be offered him at all. The attempt is then made to entrap him by all manner of insults and abuse. This method usually "works" to secure what little information or suspicion he may have of [illegible] organization plans and members. If he possesses even the slightest bit of information, he is forced to make an affidavit of his claims. Thereupon he is graciously sent back to work with a warning, and the man or men whom he may have mentioned or only suspected is called in and "put on the carpet". In their case the procedure is even more abusive and insulting. Very often, however, these tactics do not work.

Defiance Pays.

Many a man has told Mr. Keegan or Mr. Quackenbush to "Go to Hell!" or "You know what you can do with your job!" The most interesting fact is that nothing is done to them thereafter. They are invariably sent back to work because the company needs the men much more badly in most cases than the workers need the kind of employment which this corporation provides.

Yellow-Dog Oath.

A further development of the spy system should be mentioned. Since the last strike, the company has been at its wits end to devise plans to stop the steadily increasing organization and agitation. Circular letters threatening dismissal have been sent out; the men have been forced to renew their oaths of allegiance to the Brotherhood; the "yellow-dog" contract has been extended to men who had not previously signed one; in the case of the Third Avenue Railway Company, they have even gone to the length of compelling the new employes to make out an affidavit that they do not and will not belong to any labor organization. None of these schemes, however, have prevented the steady growth of the new union. Even the recent injunction has not prevented the movement which has now become inevitable.

Raise Their Price.

As a last desperate effort the Interborough has offered a reward of $100 to any employe who will report another worker who speaks to him or agitates in any way about organizing. No questions are asked nor are steps taken to verify the truth of the report made by the spy who "turns in" a man. The intention is merely to intimidate the workers and for this purpose it does not matter whether the information is arrurate or not. It must be said to the great credit of the men that in spite of the temptation of the reward very few of the many thousands of men have reported anyone.

In order to make some kind of showing, however, in one instance, a man put forward one of its chief "rats", a motorman by the name of Bill Ryan to make a report about a worker.

This worker was fired according to the pre-arranged scheme. Big Bill Ryan received no reward and no one is deceived by the trick. Everyone knows that he is just a petty "dollar-a-day" man. He was one who stayed in during the last strike. The reason has now become clear to everyone. Although he has never passed the regular motorman's examination, he is being "made" into a motorman.

The Law of The Club.

These are the kind of "petty larceny" tactics which that great corporation, The Interborough Rapid Transit Company, resorts to. They are the methods of the pickpocket and the sneak thief with this difference that the law is on the company's side as was so well illustrated during the last strike. Men like Frank Hedley and E. L. Quackenbush stop at no extremes to secure their ends. The law which they always are calling upon and the order which they do piously seek to preserve is the law and order of the possessing class: the law of the policeman's club and the order of the soldier's bayonet.

If you see no silk hose which Mr. Quackenbush made during the 1926 strike: "All the law which is required in this case will be found at the end of a policeman's billy."

BILL WEAKENING WOMEN'S 48-HOUR LAW HITS SNAGS

Adversely Reported In Mass. Legislature

BOSTON, March 16.- Organized labor's state wide campaign to prevent a partial repeal of the forty-eight hour law in Massachusetts, seems to be winning.

The labor and industries committee voted to report "leave to withdraw" on the measure filed by the Arkwright Club, an organization of textile manufacturers, asking for a repeal of the law as it affected the hours of labor of women in cotton mills.

Under the bill women would be allowed to work 54 hours a week provided the average for the year was not in excess of 48 hours a week.

The bill will be adversely reported to either the senate or the house and a debate may be launched to overthrow the adverse report of the committee.

Sapiro's Associates Were U. S. Senators

tine Jardine in President Coolidge's cabinet, are identified with and associates of the so-called Sapiro cooperative association," said Gallagher.

Cash From Government.

Furthermore, according to Gallagher, the "cooperatives" founded by Sapiro can not even borrow their money from Jews.

Gallagher showed the jury a series of pictures, published in the Independent depicting strawberry, celery, and pear fields in California. Over each photo was a caption saying the California growers were "paying tribute" or were dominated by the Jewish organization.

No Jewish Ring.

"We will prove," said Gallagher, "that not one cent of tribute was ever paid by these farmers to a Jewish ring."

Gallagher also touched on Ford's charges that the Sapiro cooperatives borrowed money from Jewish bankers.

"We will show that millions of dollars were borrowed by these cooperatives from the American government and national banks," he added, "but that not one cent was borrowed from Jewish bankers."

Gallagher told the jury how a group of western cooperative leaders sought to see Ford to "set him right" on their movement while it was under attack in the Dearborn Independent. The group was denied an audience with the auto king but did succeed in stopping publication of the attacks for a little while.

Ford Wouldn't Listen.

The evidence will show that when this group appealed to Mr. Ford for a hearing to explain how wrong he was, he refused to hear their appeal or to give them the chance to set him right. He finally granted them an audience with Fred Black, business manager of the Dearborn Independent. A committee did see Mr. Black and explained how unjust the articles were, that had been published.

"The articles stopped after that for a few months but were started again later. The later articles all libelled Mr. Sapiro in the same manner as before."

FRIEDMAN SCORNS BRIBERY ATTEMPT BY SIGMAN CREW

In Prison Cell Writes of Scheme to Fool Him

Another imprisoned cloakmaker has written to his friends about the tirrks the reactionary international officials have played in their efforts to make him attack the joint board and its leaders.

From the Tombs comes his letter addressed to "Comrade Goldman, and all other comrades of the joint board":

Right Wing Bribery.

"Enclosed please find a telegram which I have received the 9th of February from these fakers. They have tried to bribe me in different ways so that they may have some sensations for their treacherous newspaper.

"If I could only be free at present I would have exposed a great deal of my discoveries. My strong will desire is now to expose my full hate and condemn that Sigman and his gang.

"I've read the letter that my comrade Berliman sent you from Sing Sing prison, and my best wishes to him and his family. Good luck and good health for his strong bravery. We all here in the Tombs consider the bravery of our comrade. My best regards to our comrades Borochowitz and Hyman.

"I remain, Yours, as comrade, Harry Freedman, Local 2."

The telegram referred to by Freedman, was sent by Sigman's appointed lackey of local 2, and in it they tried to convince the imprisoned cloakmaker that the progressives had betrayed him and it would be to his best interests to abandon the Joint Board. If he did that, the reactionary rights would try to do something for him.

Another protest against the same sort of telegram was printed in The DAILY WORKER on March 5th, and was sent by Berliman who is also carrying on behalf prison labor the struggle for a "cloakmaker" union free of all the union-smashing barons like Sigman.

"ORIGINAL HAT" BOSS VIOLATES HIS AGREEMENT

Chicago Strike at Once Begins Again

CHICAGO, March 16.—The strike at the Original Hat Works, 21 South Wabash, is still on. When the workers came down yesterday morning, after a settlement of the strike had been effected, they found the bosses breaking their agreement by refusing to take back the women milliners workers.

Fine Solidarity.

The strike started again immediately. The cutters and operators refused to work until the agreement was kept with the women millinery workers.

A joint meeting of all millinery workers is arranged for tomorrow, March 17, at the Redwin Bldg., 70 North Wells St., immediately after work. It is for members only, and representatives of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Women's Trade Union League, Millinery Workers International Union, and the Chicago organizers will speak.

COMMUNISTS OF GERMANY HOLD 11TH CONGRESS

Discuss Year's Work; Plan Future Action

ESSEN, Germany (By Mail). — The second session of the XI Congress of the German Communist Party was opened on the morning of the 2nd of March with the election of the congress chairman. The following comrades were elected; Geschke, Pieck and Becker (Essen). The following comrades were elected as honorary members of the presidium of the congress: Stalin, Bucharin, Rykov, Tomski and Tchen Duo Siu (Chairman of the Communist Party of China).

The Party Congress honored the memory of Comrade McManus by the delegates rising in their seats and standing a moment or so in silence.

After the acceptance of the agenda which grants the most important oppositional group a lengthened speaking time, telegrams of greetings were read amidst great applause from the FKKI and the Communist Parties of the Soviet Union, Norway and Australia.

Comrade Pieck then honored in a few brief words the memory of the proletarian victims in the mine catastrophes in Great Britain and in the Ruhr district, who were, he said, the latest victims of capitalist rationalization.

A unanimous decision of the congress sent its revolutionary greetings to all proletarian class-war prisoners in the jails of capitalism.

Representatives of the Red Front Fighters League and of the Red Women and Girls League then addressed the congress.

Comrade Dengel then delivered the report upon the work of the party since the X party congress. The party he said had altered the wrong non-bolshevist relation between the German C. P. and the Comintern established by Ruth Fischer and Maslov and established really fraternal relations with the brother parties. The opposition talked very much in great meetings about internal party democracy, but the party had established democracy in all the nuclei where 30 to 40% of the membership were active in solving the political problems facing the party.

The recruiting work of the party was not sufficiently systematic, the cause of this was to be found in the weakness of the work of the nuclei. Where the work of the nuclei was good, the membership has been greatly increased.

The greatest energy would have to be directed in the future to the large factories where the party was still very weak.

The party would systematically remedy its weaknesses. The main cause of the existing weakness and defects was that the party leadership was compelled to concentrate the greatest part of its energy on countering the work of those disruptors within the party. This party congress would create the guarantees for a real unity in the party and thus make it possible to overcome the weaknesses and errors.

The third session was taken up with a speech of Comrade Thaelmann upon the political situation and the tasks of the party, which lasted three hours.

The fascist coup d'etat in Lithuania, the Chinese revolution, the attack of the United States of America against Nicaragua and Mexico, the formation of a bourgeois block government in Germany and the note of Chamberlain to the Soviet Union are all signs of a serious intensification of the international social contradictions and constitute a threat to the whole capitalist system which is to-day a real and only a temporary episode in the epoch of the world revolution.

The Chinese revolution is developing from victory to victory. It is the opening of the decisive revolution of the oppressed Eastern peoples against imperialism. It is a great support for the class struggle of the European proletariat and a part of the world revolution. The greatest counter factor for the stabilization of the capitalist world is the Soviet Union with its advancing socialist construction work. The capitalist stabilization is also internally threatened by the intensification of the class struggle of the European proletariat.

"His" Decision Final, Says Borno, Puppet of U. S. Sugar Interests

PORTO RICO, Haiti, March 16. — President Borno, puppet of the National City Bank and the American sugar interests, declared that "his" decision to exclude Senator William H. King from Haiti was irrevocable.

Although the state department refuses to intercede, it is believed by those acquainted with the facts that Senator King was excluded at the request of American High Commissioner John H. Russell, puppet of the administration and virtual dictator of Haiti.

Drive Against the Wages of American Workers Is On the Cards

Slowly but surely, keen competition between American and European manufacturers of steel and steel products is developing.

Germany has followed France in establishing practically prohibitive tariffs on these commodities while making intensive efforts to break into the American market.

According to Elbert H. Gary of the United States Steel Corporation the competition in the European market has forced a considerable reduction in prices secured abroad and even on the Atlantic seaboard by his company. Although the export tonnage showed a gain, net profits were lower.

In his report to the stockholders Gary said: "The average price received for dom-stic and export tonnage combined was $1.28 a ton less than in 1925. Prices obtainable in the foreign markets and to some extent for domestic tonnage in markets bordering on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts were . . . relatively low owing to the severe competition of the European manufacturers, whose labor costs in production and transportation are materially less than those of the mills in the United States . . .

Commenting on these facts the New York Herald Tribune says editorially:

"The increased duties have all the appearance of being retaliatory. The Fordney McCumber Tariff Act was aimed particularly at Germany. The promptness with which Germany is fighting back call to mind the recent forecast of Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Company and a notably keen business observer. He predicted that before very long we shall see something which we have never seen before—namely, a pressure of manufacturers calling upon congress to lower the tariff. Our productive capacity is constantly expanding and more and more we shall feel the need of free markets abroad."

The handwriting is on the wall and the American working class needs to take the warning it gives to heart.

American gold saved capitalism in Germany and that capitalism now, at the expense of the German working class, is challenging American capitalism for the markets which take the products of basic industry. American finance capital, anxious to protect its loans to Europe, has won a victory over industrial capital—a victory the rest of which industrial capital, backed by the bankers in this instance, will try to make the American working class bear.

How will American capitalists proceed to meet this competition? By the time honored method of reducing wages. The New York Times, speaking of this question says:

"Their (the steel manufacturers) greatest disadvantage in the present competitive struggle was the relatively high cost of labor . . . There has been talk recently of wage reductions in the steel centers, but officials of the largest companies have denied any general cut is contemplated."

There probably will be no general cut, at least immediately, for the reason that this would provoke united opposition by the workers, but that there will be a series of cuts affecting various departments there can be no doubt.

America under pressure of the new world situation, with European workers crushed down by the Dawes plan and its variations, forced to pay the interest and principal charges on billions of war debts is discovering that the mortgages held on European governments and industries by American bankers cannot be paid unless Europe can sell in the country and other markets now supplied by America.

It is clear that the present tariff wall around America is acting as a brake on the further expansion of American finance capital.

The American working class is in competition with lower paid European workers in spite of the immigration restrictions. The next thing on the cards is a steady drive on the wages and living standards of the American working class. This will take place whether there is a downward revision of the tariff or not.

The labor leadership that has accepted the worker-employee co-operation doctrine and is putting it into practice, that is putting forward the theory that American capitalism has developed a system that avoids industrial depression by creating an inexhaustible domestic market, does not see that with increasing foreign competition the same machinery that now gives small wage increases will be utilized to force huge wage cuts on the workers.

Now is the time to organize the unorganized, strengthen the trade unions, build a labor party and prepare the working class for struggle. If the task is shirked and sabotaged the American masses will learn only by bitter experience that American capitalism has solved nothing but has, by forcing down the standards of European workers, lowered the level to which it will try to shove the American masses.

The Dawes plan, pictured by capitalist apologists in the guise of the dove of peace, is in reality a vulture which will soon be tearing at the vitals of the American working class.

400,000,000 people in China are in revolt after centuries of native and foreign oppression. There are thousands of foreigners in China but not a single one has lost his life in the last year since the nationalist revolution took definite shape.

It is not the lives of their citizens and subjects the imperialist powers are worrying about nor is it for this reason that battleships and troops are sent to China. It is the power to plunder the Chinese masses, the power that is being torn from their hands by these same masses, that brings the threat of armed intervention.

MINNEAPOLIS AND ST. PAUL PAY TRIBUTE TO RUTHENBERG'S MEMORY

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Hundreds of workers of many nationalities gathered in Humboldt Hall here to commemorate the life and work of C. E. Ruthenberg, General Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party. The Finnish Workers' Band and Chorus and the Proletarian Gevangs Verein gave their best and the audience, deeply moved by the speakers and the music, sang the Internationale.

Telgan and Lundeen Speak.

Speakers included Henry Telgan of the State Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party, who said that everybody must admire the strength of C. E. Ruthenberg, whose convictions were not only of the head, but of the heart, and who withstood persecution and imprisonment without weakening. Ex-Congressman Ernest Lundeen, one of the ablest supporters of the Farmer-Labor movement, voiced his admiration for Ruthenberg's consistent opposition to imperialist wars, citing his strong support of the St. Louis resolution.

"His record," said Lundeen, "must stand as an inspiration to all who have the courage of their convictions."

Norman H. Tallentire, Minnesota organizer of the Party, related a few incidents in the career of Comrade Ruthenberg, and V. R. Dunne spoke on behalf of the District Committee, urging the workers of Minneapolis to redouble their efforts for class solidarity thus endeavoring to make up in a measure for the loss of this outstanding leader of the workers.

The St. Paul meeting was held in the evening in Labor Temple. A packed meeting hall gave testimony to the fact that C. E. Ruthenberg's ceaseless service to the working class has fixed his memory and his example deep in the hearts of the workers. C. R. Culgren of the St. Paul Carpenters' Union related how he had met Comrade Ruthenberg fourteen years ago for the first time and watched with interest and sympathy his consistent work in the labor movement. William Watkins of the Switchmen's Union spoke with emotion of the loss sustained by the workers, and paid tribute to Ruthenberg's integrity.

Butterlam at Both Meetings.

Alexander Butterlam, of the National Committee of the Workers Party, spoke at both meetings, to audiences who showed close attention. Butterlam cited Ruthenberg's efforts in every manifestation of the class fought for the building of a Farmer-Labor Party, and how he had at all times and in all places opposed the imperialist wars of aggrandizement.

The enrollment of a score of members at the meeting is indication that Ruthenberg's last message to the workers, to close the ranks and fight on his found response in the workers of these cities.

PITTSBURG DISTRICT COMMITTEE TO DOUBLE PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN HONOR OF RUTHENBERG

To All Units and Members of the Workers (Communist) Party, greetings:

Pittsburg, Pa.

Dear Comrades:

Our beloved Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, the general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party died in Chicago March 2nd. His death is an unestimable loss to our party and to the labor movement of the countries generally.

Comrade Ruthenberg was undoubtedly, the most courageous and outstanding figure in the Communist movement of this country. As a true follower of Lenin and the Leninist policy, he continually carried on the fight against both the leftist sectarian dangers and against the right stop opportunism and capitulatory tendencies. Always striving to deepen our influence among the large masses of workers, he was continually on guard that the correct Leninist policy was never lost sight of but inside the party ranks and in the work among the masses.

When Most Needed

The passing of Comrade Ruthenberg came at a time when the capitalist class, the government and the labor bureaucracy have formed a solid organized united front with a view of complete destruction of the Communist movement in the country. This climax are going that with the passing of this powerful leader of the party, it will be much easier for them to disrupt our ranks and thus make it easier for them to carry out their plans of exterminating the Communist movement. The hope that new internal struggles will arise which will tend to weaken our party.

Can Hardly Be Replaced.

Comrades, these facts must be born in mind by every comrade, by every worker to whom the party is dear. The loss of our leader can hardly be replaced, except by the joint efforts of the entire party membership. The party is in danger. We must close our ranks and present a solid front against our enemies. We must redouble our efforts in order to continue the work for which Comrade Ruthenberg spent years and years in jail and for which he gave his life. The courage and devotion of Comrade Ruthenberg must serve as an example to every one of us.

Montana Farmer-Labor Leaders Mourn Death Of C. E. Ruthenberg

(Special To The Daily Worker.)

HELENA, Mont., March 16. — State Senator Charles Pratzaber and Representative Robert Larson, Farmer-Labor Party members of Sheridan country have sent the following message on the death of C. E. Ruthenberg:—"We mourn the untimely death of our great comrade, Charles E. Ruthenberg whose rare ability and great energy have been given unstintingly to the working class, feeling that his demise is an irreparable loss to the toiling masses of America and the world and his departure from the midst of a productive and busy life, a great bereavement to his friends and associates whom we sincerely condole.

VILLAGE IS PURE, SAYS J. S. SUMNER THE SMUTHUNTER

Won't Judge Demurity At New Masses Ball

John S. Sumner, champ smut-hunter and former right-hand man of Anthony Comstock, has decided to confine his activities to plays and books. He refuses to pass judgment on the purity or demurity of "the other sex."

In a letter to Egmont Arens, editor of the New Masses, Sumner declines to act as judge of the demurity contest at the New Masses Anti-Obscenity Ball, Webster Hall, March 18th, on the ground that he has been "warned by teachings of mythology to shrink from the mere suggestion of acting as a judge in any capacity, whether it be demurity, beauty, skill in dancing or any other feature where the other sex is involved."

Branding as a lie the vile allegation that Greenwich Village is not spotless in its purity, Mr. Sumner declares, "Greenwich Village has been given a character by certain magazine and newspaper writers, but I am quite sure that the residents of that section of our city average as well as do the residents of any other section from the standpoint of decency and they are probably as industrious in their way."

Tammany Council Tells Walker to Carry Out His Traction Program

The entire much-muddled subway problem has been left on the hands of Mayor "Jimmy" Walker by Tammany Hall, it became known last night. His decision is a result of a meeting of the "best minds" of the Wigwam held yesterday at 7 P. M. Hall, on the side of designation of the city's committee on Housing, Zoning and Distribution of Population of the Mayor's Committee on City Plan and Survey.

Conceal Decision.

The committee was very careful that previous information on what they had discussed should not become public, but it is known that the members present at the confab were definitely in favor of the administration's independent subway system and proposed to any plan which included linking up of the new lines with the existing lines.

A DAILY WORKER reporter at the De Valera meeting held in Carnegie Hall last Monday evening interrogated individuals who came to hear the speakers. Since the audience was a select one, mostly politicians, ward heelers, lawyers and clergymen, the working class followers of the Irish republican movement had to coal their feet on the sidewalk and run the risk of getting their skulls acquainted with the virtues of Pickwick sticks from policemen who showed as little respect for Irish republicans as they do for the rights of Jewish cloakmakers.

THE reply given to our reporter showed that Irish workers in America who hitherto followed De Valera and his kind with open ears and shut brains are now beginning to do a little thinking for themselves. And while the reporter was asking questions, a so-called publisher of a weekly Irish sheet, scenting danger to his literary tripe business in the thinking aroused by our reporter's questions came along with the unoriginal suggestion that the newspaperman was a "British spy." As long as this type of fakir is allowed to pose as a friend of Irish freedom, so long will the wily British diplomats have an easy task keeping Ireland divided and in subjection.

The Manager's Corner

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

In a Lynn shoe factory there was a comrade who was so active in urging the workers to join the union, he made sure to post himself in pertaining this necessary task, that the workers gave him the nickname of "Union."

In Section One of the Workers Party of New York we have Comrade Kling. Comrade Kling has become so identified with work for our paper, he has by his devotion and activity stamped himself so plainly as its representative, that as soon as he takes the floor there is a general hum of "Daily Work."

As soon as we develop a battalion of comrades of this type, who make a specialty of The DAILY WORKER, who take its welfare and progress personally to heart, and as soon will The DAILY WORKER become the servant and spokesman of thousands of workers throughout the country, who will follow the lead of comrades like Kling.

In the work of securing readers for The DAILY WORKER, in the work of building up the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund, these comrades will be the steel backbone supporting The DAILY WORKER. The success of The DAILY WORKER depends upon the number of such comrades we can enlist.—BERT MILLER.

COMMITTEE OF A.F. OF L. ARRESTS MORE FURRIERS

Basoff Picks Schneider, Lenhard

The reactionary, union-smashing forces of the International Fur Workers' Union and the "Special Committee" of the A. F. of L., brought about the arrest of Jack Schneider and Otto Lenhard, last night at the Joint Board headquarters, 22 East 22nd street.

These two active union members were taken into custody by plain-clothes men who visited the office in the company of Bernard Basoff, well-known right wing tool, who identified them as having been connected with the Mineola case which grew out of the fur strike last year and has already involved many workers.

Regular "Informer."

It was Basoff who caused the arrest of Ben Gold, I. Shapiro, and S. Mencher several months ago, on the charge that they too were connected with this case; and these three leaders are at present out on bail waiting to be called when this case comes to trial.

Basoff was a fur worker arrested with others on an assault charge preferred by an employer of Rockville Centre, L. I., during the strike. This case was tried at Mineola and the men were convicted and given heavy sentences. The case was appealed and a new trial was granted, but no date has been set for it so far.

Became Professional Witness.

However, while the appear was pending, Basoff, doubtless under the promise of freedom, yielded to the pressure of certain interests who wanted to use this case as a weapon against leaders in the union. He was taken out of jail and became a series of "identifications" of those who were wanted, willingly stating that this one or that one had been with him in Rockville Centre, or had sent him there.

It was evident from the first that someone was directing Basoff's "identifying" activities. Someone had supplied his bail, and someone was selecting those who were to be arrested.

Part of Campaign.

Basoff, with the detectives, was seen at intervals in the fur market yesterday; but it was not until 7 o'clock that he visited the Joint Board office and Schneider and Lenhard were pointed out. They were taken to Mineola jail last night, and at a late hour efforts were still being made to bail them out.

There is little doubt that these arrests are part of the plot to drive the progressive leaders from the union so that the right wing traitors may take possession. It follows the lines of Special Organizer Edward McGrady's announcement at the meeting of the Boston fur local, on March 9th, that within 72 hours the future of the New York Furriers Joint Board would be accomplished. A few leaders would be in jail, some would be deported, and the whole thing would be over.

Is McGrady's Scheme.

While McGrady's plans have gone somewhat awry, he showed what the reactionary forces have in mind and what dastardly deeds they will attempt in their efforts to break the union. No act is too low or despicable for them. They are enemies who must be routed and driven out of the labor movement before the workers can hope to progress and better their conditions.

100 DELEGATES ORGANIZE "HANDS OFF CHINA" CONFERENCE IN N. Y.

The "Hands Off China" conference held last night at the Labor Temple, 14th street and 2nd avenue, was attended by over a hundred delegates representing 61 labor unions, workers' organizations, and political bodies throughout the city.

The Provisional Committee which issued the call for this conference invited all groups interested in the fight for Chinese freedom, to join in formulating ways and means to protest further interference by foreign powers in the internal affairs of China and its people.

Pickens Chairman.

Last night's conference chose William Pickens as temporary chairman, and he was later made permanent chairman with Patrick McClellan as vice-chairman, and Vivian Wilkinson, secretary.

Almost the entire first hour of the conference was wasted by the obstructionist tactics of a socialist party representative, Edward Levinson, who brought in a minority report from the delegations of the Credentials Committee.

The following organizations were represented: Carmakers' Union Local 1; Carpenters' Union Local 2163; Furriers' Union Local 5; Photographers' Union Local 12830; Architectural Iron and Bronze Workers; Millinery Workers Local 43; Shoe Workers' Protective Union Local 60; Amalgamated Metal Workers, District Council; Carpenters' Union Local 2725; Amalgamated Food Workers' Local 1; Jewelry Workers' Local 1; Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Local 10; Union of Technical Workers Local 57; Chinese Seamen Association; Venezuela Labor Union; socialist party, delegates Karlin and Bromberg; Armenian Workers' Club; Workmen's Circle, Branches 224, 408, 629, 512, 329, 350, 695, 20, 145, 564; Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society, Local 91 and 185; Japanese Workers' Assn.; Negro Labor Congress; Chinese Workers' Alliance; Marine Transport Workers; of Special District Council of greater New York; Butchers' Union Local 660; Kuo Ming Tang; Workers Party, delegates Wolfe and Dunn, Harlem and Bronx Center.

The majority report presented by H. Chernow of Branch 330, Workmen's Circle stated there were 61 organizations represented; but a minority report, introduced by Mr. Levinson, objected to seating the delegate from Local 5 of the Furriers Joint Board since this body was "non-existent as far as this conference is concerned. It is an enemy of the labor movement."

A lengthy discussion followed, Levinson continuing to object that because this local had been expelled by the A. F. of L. it should not have a part in this conference. A rising vote was then called for by Chairman Pickens, and the minority point threrefore, the report being adopted by a majority of over a hundred.

Karlin Tries Disruption.

Further discussion arose when William Karlin, one of the Socialist delegates, refused a position on the ways and means committee. His remarks provoked comments from several delegates, as well as the chairman, and one representative finally asked whether they had come to help China or union politics. The socialists then submitted four of their.

Chairman Pickens in his opening address told how, when he was in Russia recently, he had met 25 of the Chinese generals who were fired with indignation as they told him of the fight of China against its foreign exploiters.

Reads Message From China.

M. Poun, member of the Kuomingtang, who was one of the speakers read a message from Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Cantonese government, saying:

"It is absolutely untrue that property has been destroyed belonging to members of the foreign settlement. It is also untrue that China is hostile to foreigners. The Chinese people are only fighting for freedom."

Kuomingtang Greetings.

As representative of the Kuomingtang, Pomn, extended greeting of appreciation to the delegates who had gathered to help China in her struggles.

Among the other speakers at the conference were William F. Dunne and Bertram D. Wolfe.

'Heretic Bishop' Draws Large Crowds in Frisco At Labor Defense Meet

(By HOWARD HARLAN.)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.

Bishop Wm. Montgomery Brown has made first visit to the city, and many of our fifteen were anxious to see and hear the man they had read so much about.

The first meeting was held in California Hall and more than a thousand people packed the place and remained to the end. They were not disappointed. The Bishop was in form and delivered a scathing arraignment of the government officials, bankers, dry law custodians and grafters in general. He well explained the workers' position in society and showed how easily they could tear down the present social structure and replace it by a sane social system where the needs of the masses was the first consideration.

Much literature was sold, and a collection of about one hundred dollars taken to assist in defending class war prisoners throughout the United States.

The following night a banquet was given in honor of the Bishop and close on three hundred persons paid their dollar admission to dine, and listen to one of the best programs ever enjoyed in 'Frisco. Comrades from points many miles away attended the banquet, and another contribution of one hundred and fifteen dollars was made to the war chest of the I. L. D.

No Limit to Censors' Desires; Bar Decameron Catalog from U.S. Mail

Charles & Albert Boni, publishers, have been notified by Postmaster John J. Kiely that catalogs offering for sale copies of an edition of the "Decameron" of Baccaccio could not be permitted to be distributed by mail. He said that the book had been adjudged "obscene," and therefore cannot be offered for sale.

This action was taken by the official in spite of the fact that the book has been "expurgated," and is considered one of the classics.

GANGSTERS FAIL; SO GIRL PICKETS TAKEN TO COURT

Joint Board Announces More Successes

Ten girls were arrested on the picket line at the A. I. Dress Shop, 361 West 36th St. yesterday morning and were later released with payment of $1 fines.

They were accused of shouting "scab" at workers going into the A. I. Dress Shop, where workers were discharged for refusing to register with the International. The pickets arrested were Sarah Green, Ida Goodman, Sarah Bagoon, Mary Feingold, Dora Barbo, Ida Lipsky, Mary Allene, Sally Shore, Rebecca Adams, and Mary Russo. Picket lines were large and the gangsters who have been terrorizing the district did not dare to appear, according to the girls arrested.

Bond Issue Going Good.

The continued success of the Save The Union Bond Issue was announced today. Julius Portnoy, treasurer of the bond issue said that an additional $300 had been received from Chicago, $180 more from Baltimore, $100 from Boston, $100 from New Haven, $143 from Newark, $30 from Schenactady, $25 from the Women's Auxiliary to the Workmen's Circle in Minneapolis, $25 from the Workmen's Circle Branch of Hamilton, Canada, and $25 from the Philadelphia branch; $25 from the branch at Petrovert, Russia; $81.05 from the Workmen's Club of Coney Island, $115 from the progressive groups of the shoe workers.

Third Or Fourth Gift.

"Most of these cities have already contributed to the bond issue and are making their third or fourth contribution," Mr. Portnoy said. "Chicago has given more than $4,000 before this last contribution was received, with more to come."

Collections in shops have been large during the past few days according to Portnoy. He announced another $150 from the Peerless and Finer shop, $75 more from the Merskin and Louis shop, $75 from the Pelsen shop, $26.16 from the Schneider and Canyin shop, $18 from the Arge dress shop, $50 from the Goodman and Fiovitch shop, and $25 from the Harlem Progressive Youth Club.

Arrange Mass Meetings.

Mass meetings are being arranged in Harriford, Massarhusetts, where A. Black will speak, at the Labor Lyceum, and throughout Massachusetts where I. Weisberg of the Joint Board will discuss the situation in the needle trades.

"All Labor Loving Italians."

"All Liberty loving Italians" have been rallied to a meeting in Webster Hall, Monday, March 21, to "protest against the use of injunctions against the workers," and especially against the seizuring of injunctions by the officers of Italian dressmakers' Local 89 which attempted to frame Italian leaders of the Joint Board from enlisting them in the struggle of the workers against the domination of Sigmanism.

Got Two Injunctions.

Luigi Antonini, manager of Local 89, has recently taken on two sets of injunctions against officers of the Joint Board and against the chairladies of the largest shops, with the object of restraining them from issuing leaflets, books, calls to meetings, holding meetings, collecting dues, or in any way assisting the workers of the local in their fight.

Leaders who will discuss the injunctions at the protest meeting, speaking in English or Italian, will be Louis Hyman, Ben Gold, Ben Gildow, Robert W. Dunn, Carlo Tresca, E. Sormenti, Francesco Coco, P. Allegra, E. Fresina and N. Capraro. The chairman will be A. Raponilla. All Italian and other workers are urged to rome to hear the truth about the present situation.

The Unista Club, a social organization of Brownsville, has arranged regals ball at 529 Hopkinson Ave., Brooklyn, to be held Saturday evening for the defense of imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers and the relief of their families. Admission will be thirty-five cents.

Brotherhood Bank Official Appeals To Mercy of Court

PITTSBURGH, March 16.—Charles E. Knapp, central figure in the $320,000 Brotherhood Savings and Trust Company failure, today threw himself on the mercy of the court when he appeared before Judge H. H. Rowland in criminal court and was sentenced to serve one and a half to three years in prison and to pay a fine of $500.

Edward Goodfellow, alleged associate of Knapp in the deal, also pleaded no defense. Sentence will be passed later.

Eighty-Year-Old Lady Unarmed Thru Africa; Ruins Many 'Explorers'

CAPETOWN, March 16.—Mrs. W. D. Cornish, 80 of New York, and her cousin Miss Hooper have arrived at Johannesburg after a journey of four thousand miles unarmed and unescorted through Africa.

They declare that for a time they were just in a central Africa forest. From Nairobi they drove at night into a game reserve and their car broke down. They kept the headlight burning and the car was surrounded by wild beasts, hyenas and zebras.

All South Africa is laughing at the way the eighty year old lady has taken the breeze out of the sails of many a professional, wind-jamming "explorer" and British "colonial administrator."

German Cabinet Backs Stresemann's Report

BERLIN, March 16.—The German cabinet this evening heard a full report from Herr Stresemann, foreign minister, on the Geneva meeting of the league of nations council and gave its approval to the results obtained by Herr Stresemann.

There had been reports that Herr Stresemann might be attacked because he compromised the question of evacuation of the army of occupation from the Sarre Valley.

Glad to Spend Last Dollar for Fun of Slapping Kerensky

Miss Catherine Barry, the Russian woman who slapped Alexander Kerensky, once a premier of Russia, at a monarchist meeting at the Century Theater on Sunday, said that she spent $4.50 of her last $5 for the flowers which acted as decoy for her compliment.

"It was a luxury to slap him," she declared. "I have lost everything and I am just one of the many," she said in explaining the incident. It was just one of those things I had to do."

ROOSEVELT DAM PROJECT RUINS FARMERS IN IT

Mismanagement Aids Power Companies

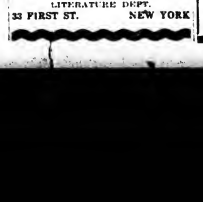
(Special to The Daily Worker).

PHOENIX, Arizona, March 16.—Through the efforts of F. H. Shoemaker of the Progressive Farmers of America in making an exposure of the mismanagement and graft in the operation of the Roosevelt reclamation project in the Salt River valley in Arizona, Secretary Hubert Work of the department of interior has authorized an investigation into the entire affairs of the project.

The officers have been forced to admit that monies collected from the farmers to make payments to the U. S. government for last year amounting to $069,000, were not paid to the government, and that the money has been misappropriated and spent. Secretary Work suspended the last payment that was due from the farmers, and now he finds that the local officers simply used the farmers property as an excuse to avoid making the payment.

With U. S. Funds.

Secretary Work now finds that instead of assisting a group of farmers who were broke that the officers of the association were the ones that benefitted by the extension of time without interest from the U. S. government. It now comes to light that the money was used to build power lines to the mining companies of the state and that the mining and power interests are buying power from the farmers below the rate of production, and with the aid of U. S. funds. The project which rest about $7,000,000 to build is now in debt approximately $27,000,000 and is about to go into bankruptcy.



The association makes every acre of land in the project call for one share of stock. Thus the farmers now find that they have been mortgaged by their officers for about $100 per acre and that a receivership will rob them of any and all equity that they may have in their own farms. Copper, power and eastern banks have a stranglehold upon the entire project consisting of 270,000 acres of land besides three large dam and power sites including the Roosevelt Dam built by the U. S. government.

The Bronx Rents Range From $35.00 to $60.00— Wages, $30.00 to $55.00

The Wage and Rental Table of the Bronx is surveyed and interpreted in today's article by Will de Kalb, DAILY WORKER housing investigator. The next article in the series will be concerned with Brooklyn and other sections of the city.

By WILL DE KALB.

How the Bronx workers make ends meet is one of the unanswerable problems of sociology, paying as they do $44 a month for rent, and receiving an average wage of only $38 a week. Of course, except in the slum sections, the average rent for that $44 than the average New York tenant. But the rooms are smaller and fewer.

It would accomplish little, as far as we are concerned, to compile a tabulation of the various sections of the Bronx. A small table, like the one that follows, will not only serve the purpose, but bring home the fact that the Bronx tenant is being sadly exploited.

Wage And Rental Table.

Section	Wage	Rental	Per Cent
Slums	$30	$15	29
Poor Sections	$26	$15	31
Average Sections	$46	$52	23
Fine Sections	$55	$60	27
Total—Bronx	$38	$44	29

The average Bronx apartment consists of only three rooms, in all sections. Where then, are the rooms at $4 and $5 the State Housing Board is talking about? Fifteen dollars a room is more like it. When the Bronx worker moved to that borough, they left their former communities because rents had jumped to ten dollars a room. But the crafty Bronx landlords did no scabbing on their fellow exploiters. Rents jumped. Now Bronx rents equal those of all the other boroughs.

Long Ways To Work.

The average Bronx apartment costs as much as the average Manhattan apartment. On the whole, the Bronx is a better, lighter and more airy borough to live in. But workers who live there must spend an hour on the transit lines to get anywhere and they must suffer inhuman crowding.

Rooms in the Bronx are much smaller than those anywhere in the city except in the new buildings erected in Queens. Apartments are smaller, averaging three rooms. The buildings are taller, making walk-ups another drain on the tenant's energies. Only one, if any, of the rooms are light and airy. And clothes lines are on the roof, a dread to all housewives.

Rents in the Bronx have mounted steadily since 1919. Even before that time they were on the increase, but in 1919 the boosts became phenomenal in the history of real estate. Many Manhattan realtors sold their property and built new houses in the Bronx. Their investments have already been covered by their incomes; their rapital is now free to be invested in new fields for exploitation.

That is the adding machine picture of the Bronx. Housing commissioners insist that there are rooms to be had for $4 and $5. They may be, but not in New York, and esperially not in the Bronx.

Soldier in Next War To Wear Bullet Proof Coat and Die by Gas

BERLIN, March 16. — A bullet proof coat weighing only two or three pounds has been invented by Herr Schaumann, an engineer of Berlin. The vest consists of a flexible material no thicker than a winter overcoat. A whole suit of that material weighs only six or seven pounds. Soldiers will wear it in the next war, and this is expected to stimulate the use of poison gas.

Ruthenberg Saw Necessity of Wiping Out Nationality Lines Among the Workers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

C. E. RUTHENBERG recognized from the beginning of his activities in the American revolutionary movement that the barriers of nationality had to be overcome in order to build a unified struggle.

It was no accident, therefore, that the first speech he made in a National Socialist Convention (Indianapolis, 1912) was on this very subject. More than half of the Socialist membership at that time was contained within foreign-language federations. These federation members paid their dues directly to their own national secretaries, many of whom had the thinnest relations with the Socialist Party national headquarters.

The result was that little unity existed between the different sections of the socialist party.

Ruthenberg as the organizer and the executive of the Socialist Party, in Cleveland, Ohio, realized this weakness. As an organizer of the forces of the American revolution he fought against this condition.

His first proposal was that the members of the foreign language organizations get their dues stamps directly from the local Socialist secretary. He felt that this would at least force a contact between the party's membership that could result in closer relations.

He pointed out that in Cleveland, at that time, the only propaganda carried on by one group of foreign-language members was the distribution of literature calling for the separation of church and state. This propaganda would have been very much in place in the home country where the church and state are practically identical. But entirely different conditions prevailed in Cleveland, Ohio, where the revolutionary movement must necessarily adapt its propaganda to meet the local situation.

The socialist party never made any real headway in solving the problem of the foreign-language groupings. The federations all retained their status practically unchanged up to the split in 1919 and the organization of the Communist Party. It was only in the Communist Party, of which he was the first secretary, that Ruthenberg was able gradually to blend workers of all nationalities into a unified movement.

Thus, in a sense, 15 years ago, seven years before the break in the socialist party that resulted in the building of the Communist Party, Ruthenberg beheld the weaknesses characteristic of the pre-war social-democracy in this country. Huge obstacles did not prevent him carrying on the ceaseless fight to solve them.

It was inevitable that in the same spirit Ruthenberg should seek to develop the struggle for Communism among all the varying groups of the working class; among the Negroes, among the women, among the children; among the farmers, and, in the spirit of Leninism, reaching out and putting emphasis on the anti-imperialist work of the party, and developing its relations with the oppressed of the subject colonial and semi-colonial countries.

Thus the New York Times snarls against what it calls "the skillful efforts of Ruthenberg to fan race as well as class hatred."

The writer had just seen Lovett Fort-Whiteman, the champion of the Negro workers, speak glowingly in memory of Ruthenberg at the Carnegie Hall Memorial Meeting in New York City. There there had followed a speaker for the Chinese workers. But the appearance of these workers of different races was merely an evidence that Ruthenberg had carefully carried on the struggle for the unity of all workers, of all races, as well as all nationalities, which is true working class unity.

It is only natural that American imperialism, all, dominant in the world today, should fear this unity of the downtrodden.

It was no accident that "Time," that calls itself "The Weekly News Magazine," but delights in publishing almost exclusively the pictures of and eulogistic remarks about foremost capitalists, should point out that, "Editor Linson of the Chinese Nationalist Daily, news organ of the Kuomintang (Chinese Nationalist Party), wrote, 'We are very sorry that such an able man as C. E. Ruthenberg leaves us so soon'."

To point out that a Communist is lauded by a spokesman of the Chinese masses, is supposed to create, in the belief of the editor of "Time," prejudice against Communism among backward American workers and farmers. But it is the crushing force of capitalism that is bringing about the unity of labor of all nationalities, of all races, of all religions. It was Ruthenberg's task to fan the flames of class hatred. It was ruthless to help organize and direct that hatred in the right direction.

Ruthenberg was thus agitator, educator and organizer in the growing effort to carry out the appeal of Karl Marx, "Workers of the World, Unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains! You have a world to gain!" Before that growing cry world capitalism trembles as it beholds its doom.

President Hindenberg of Germany as viewed by Der Knueppel (The Club) of Berlin. It quotes Hindenberg as saying, "The republic that I support can be acknowledged by all monarchists with a clear conscience."

Personal Recollections of Arthur McManus

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.

I FIRST met Arthur McManus when I arrived in England, in 1925, after being deported from the United States, at the expiration of a prison sentence. The annual Congress of the Communist Party of Great Britain was being held in the town hall of St. Pancras, in London, and McManus was chairman. At that time, he was also chairman of the Party—an office that was subsequently abolished. He has been a member of the Central Executive since the Party's formation.

After thirteen years' absence from England, including three years in an American prison, I felt a stranger in London, the city of my birth. But the welcome I received from the British revolutionists speedily dispersed any sense of strangeness. And, among those who tried so hard to make me feel that I was indeed among comrades, was McManus. He was busy and harried at the time, and not in the best of health, but he had time and inclination for the cordial extension of His friendship to the returned exile. Since those days, we have been close personal friends.

My first impression, I remember, was that of surprise at his shortness of stature. His face, I knew from photographs, but I had not imagined that he was so unusually short—about five feet, two inches, I would guess. Yet, this detracted in no way from the effect of decision and mastery, when he was on a public platform. His sincerity, and the confidence born of assured knowledge, made him as striking and commanding figure, despite the deficiency in height. During the rather difficult congress of 1922 these were the central formative days of the British Communist Party—he showed an easy skill in directing the deliberations and preserving order.

He was "Mac" to all his friends, and he had many friends. There were at times something almost suicidal about this man of young middle age —and then that west-fulness would be gone, and an elfin humor would take its place. His sensitive face reflected immediately the swift changes of mood and thought. And to this, add certain quality of soul—a hospitableness which, one knew, would always be with him, throughout the years. There was the quick emotional saturation, and the readiness of repartee and wit, which perhaps were in our heritance from his Irish forebears.

But this quality of elf-ishness, this capacity for mischievous banter, and for play in the war against time to affect the keenness and steadiness of his political reasoning. He had a background that was reasonable a thorough theoretical Marxist training, and practical experience of proletarian life and the working class struggle. Trained in the school of the Socialist Labor Party, which gave its best Marxist writers and students to the Communist Party in Glasgow, his native town, he had the advantage of grasping exactly what was then the best school of revolutionary economics in Britain.

In Wage Disputes Early.

As an engineer, a wage-earning machinist, in the great industrial centre of the Clyde, he early became involved in wage disputes, and won to a position of trust among his fellow trade unionists. He was prominent in the "shop stewards" movement, and, during the war, was one of those, with Gallacher and others, who organized militant resistance to the attacks of Lloyd George. So effective, in fact, that the British government deported him and several colleagues from Glasgow.

This early experience of the industrial struggles of the workers, combined with excellent theoretical training, fitted McManus for the part he was to play in the formation of the Communist Party of Great Britain. The Russian Revolution, the triumph of the Bolsheviks, and the establishment of the Communist International, all this was the insuperable logic of events which his mind—elastic, dialectic and earnest—immediately acknowledged and proclaimed.

Of his work, both in the Communist International, as a member of the Communist International and as a leader in the British Communist movement, I need not speak here. I wish merely to give some inkling of the personality of the man, whose death is such a loss to the workers of all countries.

Abounding Mental Energy.

Conspicuous in McManus was his abounding mental energy, and the versatility of his interests. Besides his political work, and his organizational labours, he had an uncommon knowledge of literature and the arts. During one of those long evenings in London, when a group of comrades and sympathizers were gathered in somebody's apartment for supper and talk, the conversation would range widely. Perhaps the subject would be the occupation of the Ruhr, and "Mac" would devastate, with masterly ease, the arguments of some learned liberal, who had been invited to meet him. And, without effort, from this, he would turn to a consideration of modern poetry; and he would show, with copious quotation, how this or that "school" represented principally the decay—the partly conscious desire to escape from reality—of the middle-class intelligentsia of Britain. In this cunning fashion, he was equally at home. And then, perhaps, a casual remark from someone would reveal that our "Mac" also possessed an unusually complete layman's knowledge of astronomy or biology!

It was this wide acquaintance with the culture of our times which sometimes won McManus friends from those outside the Communist camp—writers, artists and others, who, while not opposed definitely to Communism, thought but little at all on political subjects. Often, these good people would try to adopt McManus as one of their own clan. "He is not like the rest of the Bolsheviks," they would say hopefully, after the first half-hour of acquaintance, hearing him discuss a new symphony, just then being performed in London. Usually, of course, they had never met the "rest of the Bolsheviks!" But a smashing disappointment awaited them. "Mac" was just feeling around his man; and then, at some remark by the hapless intellectual, "Mac" would pounce ferociously upon him, and pin down fallacy after fallacy with the steel points of his relentless Marxist logic. And, besides dialectics, there would be bitter passion and derision in his words, if the conversation turned some remark anent the workers which revealed the snobbishness of the academic.

Knew Life of the Poor.

Born in one of the poorest quarters of Glasgow, McManus knew the life of the poor, the slow crucifixion of the proletariat at the cross of profit. And he was always conscious of this. The passion of protest and pity, which possessed him, also, during the children of the workers, and their limited, unfulfilled lives, was wrought from experience. His eyes had seen a thousand tragedies, and his soul was seared with suffering. In the midst of his enjoyment of a painting, a theatrical performance, or of beautiful scenery, he would remember the millions who could not enjoy, and he would point out how the enjoyment of beauty is mainly a class privilege.

Had Gift of Friendship.

"Mac's" good nature, his gift for friendship and sympathetic observation, extended even to the least of creatures. In the corner of his room at the hotel was a small sack of flour, part of his regular ration in those earlier days, just before the "boycott" or food patrol was abandoned with the famine's end. This naturally attracted the mice, and "Mac" liked to watch the little creatures tiptoeing out from their burrows, and nervously attacking the flour. One of the mice, he singled out for its courage and impudence.

"It doesn't give a damn for me," he would relate "it just sits up on its hind legs, in the middle of the room, curls its whiskers, and looks me straight in the eyes. I bet you it's a step steward of the other mice!"

An inexhaustible capacity for enthusiasm was one of McManus's chief traits. Perhaps it would be a revolutionary play, at Meyerhold's Theatre; or a visit to a Moscow factory; or a trip to Tver, to visit the military establishment there; or a banquet given by the metal workers of Moscow—they never forget, and "Mac" never forget, that he was a metal worker, and old engineer! Whatever the occasion, he would have the fresh curiosity and complete enjoyment of a boy, coupled with an understanding of the political significance of the event. He lacked the jaded attitude, and, on the rare occasions of his leisure, he played hard, not sparing his frail body in the least. His health was never very good, and, all the time, his untiring energy and interests were burning this body of his—this body which would sometimes get tired, despite the flogging of his will.

And so he died. The overstrained heart gave way. He died still young, with many more years to give to the workers' cause. He died after having lived to see, and to rejoice in, the general strike, the greatest demonstration of workers' solidarity in Britain, despite its surrender by leaders who will one day pay the price of their treachery. He lived to see the party which he loved grow, double its members in a few months and to see the Red International, at whose councils he had assisted, established as the defense, leader and hope of millions of the oppressed. He died a few days after returning from the first Congress of the Oppressed Peoples, at Brussels, where he had heard, and greeted, the articulate voice of China's rebellious masses.

His name will be honored by thousands of workers, in Britain, when the names of those who capitulated, during the general strike, are lost in obloquy and contempt. He was a soldier and leader in the class struggle, valiant and alert; and he was our dear comrade.

He lies now, sleeping. We who were inspired by his words and example, we who loved him as our comrade, shall make his name perpetual, by building it into the fabric of the British Workers' Republic.

HAS THE Y.P.S.L. COME TO THIS?

By P. FRANKFELD

AT the "Hands off China" conference held on Tuesday, March 15th, twelve youth organizations were present. Amongst the twelve youth organizations were college groups from City College of New York, both day and evening sessions, Columbia, Hunter, the Young People's Socialist League and Young Workers League.

When Edward Levinson, a so-called socialist who seems to know just a bit too much for an honest man, began with the work of disrupting the conference by demanding that the delegates of the Furriers Union Local 5 be not seated, I inquired from one of the delegates what organization Levinson represented. I was surprised to learn that he came from the YPSL, especially, in view of the fact that the other Yipsel delegate had previously informed me that he alone represented the young socialists.

Once It Fought.

The YPSL in the past was a fighting, militant working class youth organization. Even to-day, in the ranks of the Yipsels there are still honest and sincere young workers and students who believe that the YPSL is a revolutionary organization that fights in the interests of the working class.

It would have been quite enlightening to those honest young Yipsels to have been present at the Hands off China conference to listen to the provocative speeches of Levinson, and the contortions of position deliberately brought into the conference by Levinson, delegate of the Young People's Socialist League!

Issue Was China.

The real and only issue at the conference was China. The fact that the Chinese masses have arisen with guns in theis hands to redeem China from the world imperialists is an event of world importance to the working class the world over. It is the international duty of the working class in America as well as elsewhere, to give all possible aid to the Chinese people in their struggle for emancipation. Not only is it the duty of the workers in America to help their Chinese brothers, but also an act to safeguard their own standard of living that makes it imperative for the workers of America to support the Chinese workers and peasants.

Actual Sabotage

Any attempts to divert the issue, and raise others, false and controversial, is a direct attempt to sabotage the struggle of the Chinese people. The conference was called for the purpose of considering ways and means of helping revolutionary China, and Levinson, in the name of the young socialists, tried to demoralize the conference, and sidetrack the problem before it. Especially repugnant and unscrupulous were his actions, when one considers the fact that the Chinese Nationalist Party, the Kuomingtang, accepts and welcomes into its ranks the members of the Chinese Communist Party, and the Young Communist League of China, (which incidentally has a membership of over 15,000 young workers and students).

In America, as a result of foreign imperialist aggression, there are developing many military institutions. The militarization of the youth is proceeding with leaps and bounds At this conference, the question of how American imperialism in China, and other places affects the youth should have been discussed, since there were 12 youth organizations present, but due to Levinson, the matter was not even broached. In that way, the representative of the YPSL, not only sabotaged the work of the conference, but placed the organization in a light of sabotaging the problems of the working-class and student youth.

"Disruption Is Imperialism"

The Chinese speaker said in answering Levinson. "The question of China is broad enough to include all elements in the labor movement. The Chinese revolution demands the support of everyone opposed to world imperialism. The Chinese revolution is part of the world revolution and therefore needs your support." However there is one force that is no friend of China but a friend of imperialism."

We say to the rank and file of the YPSL: "The Hands off China conference has proven that your leadership is corrupt and reactionary, full of treachery and dishonesty in the ranks of the conference than in helping the Chinese workers and peasants. Will you stand fur a delegate that plays the part of a provocateur in sabotaging labors' struggles?

Where Does YPSL Stand?

We say to the membership of the Young People's Socialist League: "Do you agree with the tactics of Sigmanism and Levinson? Are we Needle Trades Unionism dorsed by the Socialist Party? Do you agree with the policy of fighting against the Communists and no struggle at all against the capitalist class?

The rank and file of the YPSL must answer these questions as did Upton Sinclair in a recent issue of the New Leader in which he wrote." Instead of concentrating our energies in the fight against the communists, let us concentrate our energies in the fight against the capitalists."

The real dangers confronting the young workers and students in America are the dangers of a new imperialist war, and the growing militarization of the youth. All the honest young workers and students in the YPSL must join in the fight against imperialism and militarism, give their utmost support to the struggle of the Chinese masses for emancepation, and sharply repudiate the actions of Edward Levinson and the disruptive tactics of Sigmanism.

THE QUESTION.

Should the United States government recognize the Soviet Union?

THE PLACE.

Fourteenth street between First and Sixth avenues.

THE ANSWERS.

Max Gronich, First Ave., Manhattan neckwear worker: "The state department maintains diplomatic relations with the black shirt governments of Italy, Hungary and Roumania, it therefore has no right to discriminate against the workers' government of Russia. Recognition of the Soviet Union would offer employment to thousands of American workers in the basic industries."

Paul Rosler, Church Ave., Brooklyn, postal employe: "The United States government cannot lose anything by granting de jure recognition to the Soviets. It would undoubtedly stimulate more trade between the two countries, and help check unemployment here."

Fred Mirsky, Tremont Ave., Bronx, druggist: "Wall Street has recognised the Soviets. Russia imports more from the United States than from any other country in the world. It is rather short of hypocrisy for the state department to deny recognition to the Soviet government."

Samuel Ravin, 167th St., Bronx, traction expert: "It would be immoral as well as unsafe, for our government to recognise the present regime in Russia until the Communists change their attitude toward religion, women and property."

Miss Becker, White Plains, teacher: "I agree with Senator Borah that the Soviet Union should be recognised. It has been in power for ten years and proven itself to be stable. Most powers have granted de jure or de facto recognition to the Soviets and there is no reason why we shouldn't."

Last Summer at a Picnic

I T happened last summer at a left wing Workmen's Circle picnic.

Workmen, "free" on a Sunday; the children, having a wonderful time nagging the grown folks, mostly their mothers, on a Sunday—and all in a lovely grove near a brook dignified by the name of a river.

By and by, the sandwiches of pastrama and salami and corned-beef, the dill pickles, the pickled tomatoes and the two-per cent beer take the stage and the crowd draw together to eat, to talk to one another, and to be addressed all together by one at a time.

The smaller children scream, shout, cry. The mothers parify them with food, with chewing gum, with anything.

Speeches are made. The main talk, on the need for political understanding, the need for organizing, for learning the lessons of the class struggle more clearly. One talks of the necessity of sending the children to the Left Wing school "There is one in the town of ——— (Connecticut), get your neighbor's children to attend—help them to grow up class-conscious revolutionary young workers!" etc., etc., etc.

All the speeches are made for the men, the children. No one even mentions the women! And a little proletarian grandmother, a rebel in bolshevik, a white haired Red, begins to "get her dander up." She asks for "the floor," gets it, and plants herself under the young maple tree before the knot of thirty or forty men, women and children grouped around "the cause."

Her English is bad but she makes her speech in English. She flays the men speakers, she tells them they ignore the women of the working class in their speeches, the awakening of the revolutionary movement. By delaying the organization of the fighting forces, she exclaims, we delay the revolution. Her illustrations bring a chuckle, but they are telling.

"Take a hexempie dis year de June bockss: dey soochule come in June. But dis year dere was a late Spreeng and a vet Summer. So de June bocks didn't arrie till August!"

Men, women and older youngsters howl with delight.

"Dunt be happeenps," she glares quizzically at the men. "If you dunt vunt de vives to go to mittings, say, 'Ve vill go in two weiks shoot de hoose and stay home vit de children'! say, yes!"

The women shout approval. The men, a bit sheepish, expostulate with their wives.

"Yah, yah, vimmen!" cries the little grandmother. "Dot's de vay! Tell it to your hosbands! I go too to a mitting. I vant to lern someting about de vorld. I too vant to be a pot from de struggle."

A man in the group calls, "But we got five children!"

"Vife! do you hear dot?" sallies the white-haired Red, "do you hear dot? Tell him something; five children ha? Vell, dey are your children as gut as day are mine. We are partners—no? From every fourteen nights I take off one night. You, get toiteen—und I take yat Dora und Faigi mit me, so you hafe only Jakie, Molly und Rosie in de house to mind. Coot you say yat dot I am a bad partner—dot I take out too moch from de bisness?

So I am too a somebody. Vat? You dun't vant? Vell, I take my het, my cape und on a vet night my sombrella und I shot ds door—und good-night! und I leave yat Dorke und Faigi too for det—und I am still a fair partner—und I dun't take so much yat from de bizness as you take.

"Yes, sisters, dot's de vay to fix 'em!"

The men scratch their heads and look to each other for comforting glances, for learning the lessons with good-natured smiles in the bargain.

The women, some laughing and clapping their hands, some thrusting out playfully at their better (organized) halves, others shaking their heads dolefully, give every moral support to the speaker.

A little man, "tired, pale, a tailor teleaning, dyeing, pressing—no air, no fight, no space) protests weakly.

"But de children cry. Momma! Momma! und dey make me crazy."

"Hear tu dot men! The little grey Bolshevitchki" withered him with her scorn.

"Vy make you crazy, hah? Und dey call mamma' mamma' you—a mirade, und you talk like dis, eh? aint you be ashamed from such a talk? Look your wife. Look, Comrades, look everybody? De vife is vexing aboad ninety-five puns. If you aint very big, she ias yet lest bigger like you—und you can't stend a little de children crying 'mamma!' one in two sacks for one evening!"

"Vot? dey is used to de modder. So dey holler Mamma! Vell, den de mi dem a few times und dey vill get used to de fadder und dey vill be glad by holler Pappa instet from Mamma."

She exhorted them to organize. Strike while the iron was hot. Went from woman to woman. Names, addresses, friendliness, enthusiasm. They formed a group. I don't recall what they named themselves. A meeting night was chosen, a place for the first meeting. Have they held together? I don't know. I haven't inquired.

The little grey mother of the future generation of growing children did not live in those parts. She was a visitor. Whether those women will have held fast to their organization or not depends on whether or not they had among their number one or more from the vanguard, conscious, clear, disciplined enough to realize that without organization there is nothing and without constant activity, no organization.

Our Friends The Socialists.—Over 6,000 women workers of Mississippi work more than 10 hours a day for an average wage of $8.80 per week. Isn't our friends, the socialists, have a law ag'in it passed, or is the New Leader too busy hnuing the Alger-like rise of "Roxy" to fame and fortune.

The Holy Men Are Howling.—With the appearance of "Elmer Gantry," the story of a small-town youth who goes through a christian college, a christian seminary, and a christian minister's life as a hypocrite, crook, liar and seducer, Sinclair Lewis bids fair to knock the ministerial smugness and security for a row of Gideon bibles.

Representatives of the consecrated cloth of all creeds are cringing like Brother Sinclair's methods and manners. The Reverend William Stidger, erstwhile Kansas City friend of Lewis, predicts the failure of the book because of its "unfair, irreverent treatment of deep religious emotions."

Every knock from the holy men will act as a boost as far as the book's sale is concerned. But our friend, the flapper, will find it only mildly titillating, the sophisticate will yawn and the psychopathic sex studies, and not a few nice people will be pleasantly shocked.

The Imperialist's Creed.—While you take with a grain of salt the mushy propaganda for the Citizens' Military Training Camps dished out by the Recruiting Publicity Bureau remember the militarist creed, as it is expounded by James Joyce:

"They believe in god, the scourger almighty, creator of hell upon earth and in Jacky Tar, the son of a gun, who was conceived of unholy boast, born of the fighting navy, suffered under rump and dozen, was sacrificed, flayed and curetted, died, and was bloody well, the third day he arose from the bed, steered into haven, sitteth on his beamend until further orders where he shall come to drudge for a living and be paid."

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IRELAND is not yet free from the grip of imperial Britain, but what a calamity it would be for the Irish-American capitalist politicians if a St. Patrick's day came around without there being some legitimate excuse for pulling the lion's tail. The president of the Irish Free State in a message to The World expresses the hope that every son and daughter of Erin in the United States will be true to their ancient patrimony. What their patrimony is beyond slaving for a living, we are at a loss to know. As long as they keep thumping their chests and imploring Jehovah via the Pope for consolation they may forget their misery in life and look forward to a nice little pair of wings when the grim reaper wields his scythe.

WHETHER the St. Patrick of the annual Fifth Avenue parade ever existed in the flesh is a moot question. Bruce Barton might do worse than write a book on: "The St. Patrick Nobody knows." In the early days of "scientific socialism" in Ireland anti-papal adherents of what went for socialism—as a matter of fact its proponents were left wing theosophists—oscillated between the theory that St. Patrick never existed or that he was a magician like the rest of the priests of that period. Some radicals attributed all the woes of Ireland to the saint who, if reports be true, was a rather decent fellow and no blue nose reformer.

THAT he was a good politician is beyond question, granting that he is not a mythical character. It appears that he did not waste much time explaining the program and platform of christianity to the heathen Irish. He stepped right up to the old druids and beat them at their own game. They were getting away with murder for generations. They had the masses buffaloed with their miracles. They could bring on storms at will, walk upon the waters and return to land with dry feet. They could turn the rebellious into any kind of an animal that appealed to their conception of appropriate punishment. They were on the top of the heap and the populace had a mighty respect for the gods that could delegate so much power to their servants.

WHEN St. Patrick landed in Ireland the old druids smelled a rival. The easiest way to dispose of rivals in those days was to lop off their heads. But when the headsmen came along bent on saving Ireland from a bitter factional struggle, the alien saint would drop to his knees and ask for divine assistance. Then things would happen to his foes. Either the latter would be suddenly converted to a new faith or they would grow wings and become sparrows or pigeons. Then Jehovah would send a flight of hawks along and the druid's headsmen would be reposing in the innards of the carnivorous birds. Saint Patrick would then thank his god and the audience would swear allegiance to the envoy of the new deity.

THERE was no waste of time here preaching the philosophy of christianity. Patrick delivered the goods. Having conquered everything in his path he finally ran into the big guns of the old priestcraft. "Now," they said, "we will fix this upstart, who is out to rob us of our leadership." They challenged the saint to play at miracles with them. He was invited that he was taking a chance but he had confidence in his leader. The druids rolled up their sleeves, spat in their fists and went to work. Rods were turned into snakes, but no sooner would the serpents begin to make a bee line for Patrick than he would thumb his nose at one of them

Firestone Wants Hindu Slavery In U. S.

"Cheap Labor" for Southern Rubber Plantations

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 17.—Not content with buying out Liberia and enslaving the Liberian population, Harvey Firestone, rubber magnate, proposes to establish a Liberia or Belgian Congo in the United States.

"If the problem of labor costs can be solved", he and his side-kick, Thomas A. Edison, propose to raise rubber for commercial purposes. The waste cotton lands of the South can be used for rubber production, it is said.

Americans Not Docile.

Fearing that Americau labor cannot be exploited savagely enough to yield Firestone the huge profits which he is seeking, the importation of Hindu labor has been suggested. "These laborers can be brought over for a period of three to five years and paid at the same rate that they are being paid at home, with their board and keep provided," according to Captain A. H. Vaughan-Williams, who as a British Army officer has acquired an acquaintance with methods of enslaving and exploiting Indian labor.

Handful of Rice Per Day.

By feeding the Hindus on a "handful of rice a day" and thus "keeping down labor costs", the Edison-Firestone-Williams triumverate hopes to reap handsome profits. "Hindus can live on a handful of rice a day and it would cost little to keep them", declared Captain Vaughan-Williams, who is at present in Palm Beach.

The plan openly advocates a state of peonage for the Hindu laborers. By "providing board and keep for them," the rubber magnates propose to force the Hindu workers into debt and to keep them so.

British Cooperation.

The British government will cooperate with the rubber magnates in establishing a slave colony in the United States, it is said. "I am quite sure that if this country were to ask the British government for permission to import several thousand Hindu laborers from India such permission could be obtained easily enough", Captain Vaughan-Williams declared.

The proposal for using southern cotton lands for rubber-growing has long been contemplated by Edison and Firestone. Firestone has also been planning to establish extensive rubber plantations in the Philippines, but has thus far been balked by the Philippine land laws.

Hindu More Profitable.

The obstacle in the way of rubber-growing in the United States has been the refusal of American workers to live on a handful of rice a day. The exploitation of Hindu labor is far more profitable for the Firestone-Edison clique.

Plague on "Floating University."

ROTTERDAM, March 17. — The steamer Ryndal, which brought to Europe the American "floating university" on a college cruise, today was held at quarantine here by the authorities, who state that cases of bubonic plague had been discovered among members of the crew. The American professors and students left the ship at Havre planning to come here March 21 by train.

The press is strenuously protesting against the admission of the Americans to the country, on the ground that they might cause the disease to spread.

British Failed To Prove Case, Says Pravda

Seems to Think China Part Of British Empire

MOSCOW, Feb. 28. (By Mail)—Today's "Pravda" declares that the reply of the Soviet government has completely refuted the apparent proofs offered in the note of the British government. The British note declares the "Pravda" was particularly weak in connection with the Chinese question although Chamberlain quoted from speeches of Soviet statesmen made upon Soviet soil concerning the perspectives of the Chinese revolution.

The Soviet answer declared that the Soviet government according to the agreement of 1923 had refrained from supporting persons and organizations "pursuing the aim of stirring up discontent or insurrection in any part of the British empire". Even if the legendary "Soviet agents" referred to by the British note had been proved not to be legendary, Chamberlain would only then be justified in his complaints on the assumption that China was a part of the British empire. It was a fact that the British government was sending British troops and British warships to China although it spoke continually of non-interference in Chinese affairs.

The Soviet note declared that the

SYNDICALIST LAW BARBAROUS, SAYS DR. G.W. KIRCHWEY

Measure Branded as a Tool of Class Hate

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The injustice and the barbarity of the California criminal syndicalism law were attacked by Dr. George W. Kirchwey, warden of Sing Sing prison and former Dean of the Columbia University Law School in an address here last week. Dr. Kirchwey has just completed a survey of the law and its administration.

Condemning the law as a "concrete expression of war psychology", Dr. Kirchwey declared that the law was enforced with the barbarity and the vindictiveness of "a man-hunt". The law has been used both as a weapon of class hatred and as a cover for private malice and vengeance, he said.

Dr. Kirchwey found that 531 people in California had been charged with criminal syndicalism and 504 arrested. More than half of these, 292, were dismissed without trial. Of 264 tried, 164 were convicted and 114 appealed their cases, half of the decisions were reversed and other are still pending.

"The law passed as a result of mass fear" he declared in branding it as the product of war hysteria. "we find nothing to justify the dread which engendered it."

The constitutionality of the law is challenged by Dr. Kirchwey on two grounds. It violates the constitutional guarantees of equality before the law by discriminating against advocates of industrial or political change; and it makes mere membership in a prescribed organization a crime, he said.

To Offer Proof Sapiro Cheats Farmers

Reed Says Ford's Opponent Drained "Cooperatives"

DETROIT, Mich., March 17.—Senator Jim Reed, presidential possibility for the democratic party, today defended Henry Ford, the richest man in America, with a great outpouring of eloquence against Aaron Sapiro who is suing Ford for a million dollars for libel.

"Ford's defense will be that the Dearborn Independent printed the truth about Sapiro," said Reed. He relegated to the background the charges of "Jewish control," said nothing about the "radical" accusations made against Sapiro by Ford, and declared that every charge that Sapiro mulcted the farmers by a series of fake cooperatives would be proven to the hilt.

Sapiro Dislikes New Trend.

An effort by Sapiro's attorneys to stop this line of argument resulted did not care who he injured in the judge's chambers between opposing counsel, at the end of which Judge Fred S. Raymond ruled that Reed could continue while the judge looked up precedents.

Reed pictured Sapiro as a clever schemer, who wanted to corner the agricultural markets of the world, and did not care who it injured in the process, nor by what untruthful advertising he accomplished his ends. He charged that Sapiro and his friends looted the "cooperatives" thru exorbitant salaries, even when they knew the pools were about to fail.

Big Loot From Cotton.

Reed told the jury a story of how Sapiro operated the southern cotton cooperative. After Sapiro got $142,000 in fees from the association, said Reed, a receivership was asked because it was in bad financial straits. Reed next followed Sapiro's activities into Kentucky where the plaintiff organized tobacco growers.

Says Sapiro Lobbied.

"The evidence will show that Sapiro went through the states lobbying to get state legislatures to enact bills validating the contracts of his cooperatives," said Reed.

Reed declared Sapiro had told the farmers that the average earnings of each cotton worker's family was $340 a year.

"Sapiro told them their low returns were due to the middle man's profits," Reed shouted, "and yet he took these same middle men into his associations and let them fatten and fatten upon the farmers."

Promises to Child Slaves.

"He told them that if his cooperative plan went through 32,000 women and children who had worked in the cotton fields could return to their homes. He said the whole trouble in the south was the rotten marketing system, he said the cooperative system would establish a new system of prosperity throughout the south."

War Finance Board Aids.

Reed definitely linked Eugene Meyer, Jr., former head of the War Finance Corporation, to Sapiro's cooperative program. The Missourian charged Sapiro had boasted he was the only man who could get loans of government money from Meyer. "The board," said Reed, "was made to North Carolina tobacco growers."

Then Reed charged Sapiro with breaking his promises to farmers.

"We will show you that these promises were never fulfilled," Reed asserted. "We will show that Sapiro then made threats against the individuals who would not come into his associations and threats against the towns in which they lived."

Amalgamated Calls Out St. Paul Garment Shop Workers; Shuts It Down

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 17.—The Twin Cities Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has declared a strike on the St. Paul Garment Manufacturing Co.

All the workers left the struck factory, shutting it down completely.

The Amalgamated will have the help of all unionists in this vicinity to win the strike.

Report Nanking Has Fallen to Nationalists

Capture of City Would Open Road to Shanghai

PEKING, March 17.—Nanking, the ancient capital of China and key position in the drive of the Nationalist armies, is reported to have fallen into the hands of the Nationalists.

The General Labor Union of Shanghai has accepted the report of the fall of Nanking and has ordered a general strike. Thirteen thousand workers have already walked out and it is expected that thousands of other workers will join them. That 250,000 Shanghai workers will eventually be involved in the strike-celebration of the Nationalist victories, is confidently predicted here.

If reports of the fall of Nanking are correct, the fall of Shanghai is imminent.

Strenuous efforts are being made by foreign troops to prevent general strikes and demonstrations, as well as to forestall mutinies of the Sikh troops, of whose loyalty the British are doubtful. British guards, with naked bayonets, are posted on the outskirts of the international settlement in an effort to prevent the entrance of Chinese demonstrators.

The British authorities arrested two Mohammedans and one Sikh who will face charges of attempting to incite sedition in the ranks of the Indian regiments. Sikh troops wavered in their loyalty to the British imperialists in Hankow and it is quite possible that they may go over to the Nationalists in event of a direct attack on Shanghai.

Preparing To Quit

LONDON, March 17.—General Chang Tsung Chang's Shantung forces, which have been counted upon as the main defense of Shanghai, are making preparations for evacuation in the face of the continued and persistent drive forward of the Cantonese armies, according to a dispatch to the Daily News.

Launches and pontoons have been commandeered by the Shantung forces, it was reported, and this is accepted as meaning an early evacuation.

Wants Big Money

Earlier dispatches had stated that General Chang Tsung Chang had demanded that he be paid $2,000,000 before Friday, threatening otherwise to leave Shanghai to its fate at the hands of the Nationalists.

The Hankow correspondent of the Daily News cables that the old regime in the British concession there has ended and that the new Anglo-Chinese council, which gives a large measure of control to the Chinese, has taken over administration of the city.

"Mussolini Is Always Right," Declares Rule For Fascist Puppets

ROME, March 17.—The puppet-like obedience and the blind reverence for Mussolini that is inculcated into Fascist militiamen are brought out by the "ten rules of conduct for perfect militiamen" which have been posted in the Fascist barracks.

Some of the rules are as follows:

Mussolini is always right.

One thing must be precious above all—the Duce's life.

If you are punished you probably deserved it.

Remember the Fascist, especially the militiamen, must not believe in perpetual peace. (How true.)

One's country must be served even by standing guard over two-gallon can of gasoline.

Coal Operators May Lock Out Illinois

Lewis Continues Temporary, Separate Agreements

HILLSBORO, Ill., March 17.—Signs of a union mine shut-down for three months are strengthened by announcement that the Perry mine at Hillsboro will remain closed 90 days. Perry, the owner, was chairman of the abortive national conference between operators and the United Mine Workers at Miami, Fla. A recent tour of the Illinois mine fields revealed unprecedented stores of coal above ground.

The progressive forces in the United Mine Workers of America, who backed John Brophy for president in the last international election, have steadily warned that the coal industry is producing more than it can find a market for, and that the only way to prevent unemployment is a smashing campaign of organization thruout the non-union fields, with the development of union power to shorten the day's work, and distribute the labor requirements over the whole group of miners.

The unprecedented profits made in non-union fields by the operators there can just as well be utilized, in part, at least, towards lessening of the danger of a shut-down, say the progressives.

Companies Prepare.

The present situation is aggravated by the fact that under the leadership of John L. Lewis, no organization campaign was made in preparation for the expiration of the present contract (March 31) and the employers, feeling sure of winning a strike if they only had enough coal above ground, mined extensively during the last few months. Now Lewis announces that there is going to be no strike, and the coal operators counter by declaring what is in effect, a lockout.

Continue Separate Contracts.

Lewis reported to labor department officials today that he was making substantial progress in signing provisional wage and working contracts with soft coal operators outside the central competitive field of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

The effect of this series of provisional agreements, contracts which are not really contracts but can be terminated by the employers as soon as the strike is over in the Central competitive field, will be to force [t]he following strike there, if one should occur, in spite of Lewis' preliminary agreements, break out.

Big-tie Union.

Progress comes because the administration of the United Mine Workers [w]ith out only surrendering their armament and playing the game at the mercy of the operators, as far as [t]he situation is concerned, but of planning to make it impossible for any spontaneous or district strikes to take place.

No Joint Conference.

Union officials have practically declared against getting any joint wage [c]onference for the central field. The [c]onference collapsed at Miami [w]hen the miners refused to renew [t]he proposal for [t]he Jacksonville pay scale. ORDERS JERSEY SCHOOL TO LET NEGRO BOY IN

Raison Says Son Sent to Unhealthy Building

TRENTON, N. J., March 17.—Supreme Court Justice Frank T. Lloyd here today signed an order asked by John F. Raison, a Negro, directing the board of education of Brielley township to admit Raison's son, Frank, 10 years old, to the Toms River public school, or, failing that, to show cause on April 6 next for refusing to admit the boy to that school.

While Raison was asking for this order, State Senator Alexander Simpson, democrat, of Hudson County introduced a bill in the senate, making the segregation of children "by reason of color, race or religion," a misdemeanor.

To Insanitary Building.

Raison said that his son, Frank, had been attending the Toms River school for the last two years. On February 1 last, Frank and 21 other Negro children were taken out of the Toms River school, and moved to a school established in a Negro church at Bushwick. The church building has walls without plaster, retains moisture, is cold and damp, is poorly heated, and unsanitary, and drinking water there is kept in an unsanitary galvanized pail, Raison said in an affidavit.

Color Discrimination.

"I believe I have a right to have my child educated in the school nearest his home," Raison said. "That is, the Rover township school at Toms River, a half mile from where the boy lives. My son has been and still is excluded from that school because he is a Negro, which means he is excluded because of his color."

British Imperialists Failed to Prove Their Case, Says "Pravda"

only concern's accusation raised against the Soviet government was in connection with the so-called "Zinoviev letter" which was manufactured in the workshops of the British secret police and which helped the existing British government to win the election campaign. It was a well-known fact that this letter was a forgery and that up until now no one has been punished for it. This forgery was used as a threat to break economic relations as a threat to armed invasion.

The Pravda writes: "The more serious the British accusations are the more they betray the flimsiness of Chamberlain, for instance, is not satisfied with Kameneff. We do not know whether perhaps Chamberlain has been instructed by Mr. Salter to express the dissatisfaction of the latter with Kameneff. If that is not the case why does Chamberlain consider it necessary to interfere in the affairs of the Soviet Ambassador in Berlin? When only Anglo-Russian relations are under discussion?" By people in the Soviet Union Baku has come a part of the British empire. And the presence of the Soviet agent Kameneff there is not agreeable to Scotland Yard?"

Answers With Dignity.

The Soviet government has answered the "Pravda," despite the harsh words of the accusations made against it and despite the unforgiving tone of the British note, answered with the greatest reserve. The Soviet government had exhibited great self-control and a great will for peace by expressing once again its complete preparedness to settle all difficulties and conflicts by peaceful negotiations. However, the Cabinet men of Richards was running at top form. There was a certain danger in the air and it was the task of the working masses to rally to the conservative ranks.

Secretary Has Record Of Strict Economy

A summary of the accomplishments of last year's left wing administration of Custom Tailors' Local 38 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and an answer to the various untruthful and misleading charges made by the leaders of the "rights," are given in a full report issued yesterday by Don Wishnevsky, the secretary-organizer.

Win Forty Hour Week.

The membership of the local has been increased by 373, plus 47 applicants; the present total membership being 1391. Twenty-seven new shops were completely organized. A substantial increase in wages was gained. The 40-hour week was established; and the agreement securing these gains until September 15, 1928, contains a clause stating that should the cost of living rise, the question of increased wages shall come up for discussion.

Wishnevsky points out that the left wing administration succeeded in making these gains for the workers in spite of great handicaps, arising both from the strike in the trade, and from the active opposition of the reactionary elements within the union.

Right Wing Hinders.

"Brother Torchinsky, at the installation meeting last year," says the report, "stated that he and his friends would do their utmost to hinder our work. He has kept his promise throughout the year. There was not a solitary thing proposed by us for the welfare of the members about which they would not spread insinuations and lies of the vilest nature in order to achieve their egotistic, political and material ends. Yes, material ends I must say, because many of these obstructors happen to work in shops where they make twice the amount of money that other workers make. There are, among them, people who work fours seasons a year."

Oppose Organization.

These have been the ones most active in opposing the job of organising the unorganised workers, who form a very large proportion in this trade, and who are a constantly increasing menace to the unionized workers and the standards they have won.

Unorganized women workers are replacing more and more of the male workers—members of Local 38—in the large Fifth Avenue shops, and only an aggressive organization campaign can stop this undermining of the work which has been accomplished in the past.

Lefts Will Support.

If such an organization drive is taken up and vigorously carried on by the new right wing administration this next year, Wishnevsky promises the fullest cooperation on the part of the "left wing," in spite of the opposition and sabotage practised by the reactionaires during the last year.

Will Organize Anyway.

But, if, on the contrary, the new administration is going to fall asleep and do no work among the unorganized women, and the other non-union workers, Wishnevsky promises that they will not give up the fight for organization work.

"Because we realize, as workers who have to make our living in this trade, that we must not only see conditions today but we must also look into the future and therefore, desiring to secure ourselves for the future, we shall hammer away until all the members of the union come to realize that this problem is the most important and they will unite to elect an administration that will do this work."

Rigid Economy.

Wishnevsky gives a set of figures calculated to answer effectively those objectors who have been howling about extraordinary and extravagant expenditures by the left wing administration. The rights have been talking constantly of the $12,000 in the treasury when the lefts took office; but they neglected to mention the $7,958 debts which were also there. The report states that:

"Today, after an organization drive and a strike—which according to the auditor's report cost us $9,028—we have as assets $9,247.48 and as liabilities $9,182.57. In comparison with what there was when I entered office, there is $2,000 less now; $5,000 spent in a year of strenuous activity."

Tax Money Still Due.

This financial accounting also shows that of the $5 tax levied to meet the expenses of the organization work and the strike, over $2,000 is still due.

The year's work of the left wing administration shows a gain in abolishing illegal overtime and Sunday work in many shops; a large increase in the amount collected as wages for discharges, overtime and strikes; an increase in pay, and shortening of hours for the unorganized workers, due to the effects of the organizing campaign; and a definite policy of cooperation between Local 38 and other unions such as Locals 41 and 66, and the furriers, particularly during their strike of last spring.

POLICE ARREST WORKERS; LET GANGSTERS GO

Try To Give Sigman Control Strikes Shop

The testimony of right wing gangsters was accepted, and that of left wing fur workers was rejected when four union members who refused to register with the International Fur Workers' Union were arrested after they had been attacked at Seventh Ave. and 29th St. yesterday morning.

Nicholas Harris, who was out in several places, Philip Klapberg, George Diamond and Sam Ansheer were arrested and charged with assault on complaint of Jack Karp, Philip Feinberg and Benjamin Margolis.

Officers refused to arrest these last three when the workers complained that they had launched an attack with knives and lead pipes.

The workers were arraigned in Jefferson Market Court and released on bail for a hearing next week.

Strike Kanik Shop.

To avoid just such an attack, and as a protest against the methods of intimidation being used by the foreman and boss to force registration with the International, the workers of Kanik & Greenberg, 307 Seventh Ave., continued yesterday to refuse to return to work until the boss agreed to discontinue efforts to force the workers to register.

This shop stopped work at noon on Tuesday because they were "unwilling to continue there until efforts to intimidate them into registering with the International had ceased."

Voluntary Act.

This was not a "stoppage" ordered by the Joint Board, as the International misstated yesterday. It was a voluntary act on the part of the workers, who last Monday elected a new chairman in this shop and pledged themselves to support the Joint Board in its fight against the reactionary officials.

State to Continue Morales Frame-up; Defense Gets Delay

CHICAGO, March 17.—When the cause of Agustin Morales, the Mexican, accused of the killing of Policeman Lyman J. Stahl at Melrose Park on Dec. 7th was again called in Judge Miller's court this morning, without subpoenas, the prosecution was very eagar to try the case at once.

The reason was doubtless to take advantage of the prejudice against Mexican that may have been aroused by the sensational jail-breaking of three Mexicans under death sentence at Joliet.

Mary Belle Spencer, the defense attorney, moved for delay, which she secured after a sharp passage at arms with the assistant state's attorney, Dougherty.

It is now the announced intention of the state to prosecute to the limit and demand the death penalty for a man who is believed by all disinterested observers to be entirely innocent. Morales will be given a defense such as probably has never prepared for any Mexican ever tried in this country. The trial, which is now set for May 2nd, promises to be sensational.

New Jersey Republican Senator Thinks Cal Out

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Senator Edwards of New Jersey is predicting that President Coolidge "will not be a candidate for renomination," directly challenging the assertion of Senator Fess of Ohio that Mr. Coolidge "will have to run again."

The New Jersey Senator declared that Coolidge "is not the strong silent, impregnable candidate that he was in 1924" and forecast strong opposition to the president's candidacy by the farmers. "The farmer does not nominate presidents but he wields great power in electing them. The G. O. P. is not going to nominate as a candidate who will be the target for the poisoned arrows of one-third of our population."

NEEDLE TRADES UNITY COMMITTEE INITIATES ORGANIZING CAMPAIGN

The Unity Committee, whose formation marks the first step toward the amalgamation of the needle trades, issued yesterday its first official statement of plans for its campaign against the reactionary bureaucrats of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the International Fur Workers' Union.

Organized by the New York Joint Boards of the furriers and the cloak and dressmakers, this committee will direct the joint activities of these two progressive groups and defend the interests of the workers against the exploiting tactics of both employers and traitorous officials.

"Gangsterism, graft and betrayal have been rampant in both unions under the right wing leadership," says the committee, "and the result has been the demoralisation and discouragement of the needle workers. The employers in the needle industries have taken full advantage of this sad state of affairs to foist upon the needle workers more cruel schemes of exploitation, and have even tried to bring back the hateful sweatshop system."

Rally Against Corruption.

The committee calls upon all organized labor to supports its fight against corruption, gangsterism and treacherous officialdom; and to rally round the committee in its fight for the defense and preservation of the unions.

The Unity Committee is the official body "which will lead the struggle against the union breakers."

United Action.

"The Unity Committee stands for the united action of the two Joint Board. The Unity Committee stands for the complete amalgamation of the needle trade unions. The formation of this committee, marks the first step toward the realization of the dream of all progressive workers. The amalgamation of all these into powerful instruments of struggle for the betterment of the workers conditions.

"The Unity Committee will centralize and mobilize all the forces of both unions for the defense of the workers against the gangsters employed by the officers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the International Fur Workers' Union.

Will Free Prisoners.

"The Unity Committee will make it possible to defend the workers in their shops and maintain their union conditions.

"The Unity Committee will conduct a struggle against the corrupt officials to a victorious conclusion.

On behalf of the Joint Board of the Furriers

On behalf of the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union and the Joint Board, of the Furriers' Union the Unity Committee appeals to the workers to help, morally and financially, to free the brave workers who were imprisoned due to the betrayal and frame-up by the treacherous International officials. We appeal to the workers to pay their dues to taxes to the Joint Board."

Two Unions Together.

In this effective way, the Joint Boards of the two powerful unions will unite their "organizational strength and resources in order to combat their common enemy which seeks to deliver the unions to the employers."

The left wing representatives, chosen by the workers, will in this way continue to fight militantly, as they have in the past, for the interests of the needle trades workers.

The fighting spirit of the workers is undaunted by the treachery of the international officials. The workers are only more determined than ever to rid themselves of the old type of bureaucrats.

Start Weekly Paper.

A weekly paper for the workers, cloak and dressmakers, will be issued regularly beginning next week, as it was announced yesterday by representatives of the Unity Committee formed of delegates from the Furriers, and the Cloak and Dressmakers Joint Boards.

The decision about the paper was made at a committee meeting at which an executive sub-committee was selected to carry on the activities of the united forces of the two unions. This sub-committee consists of Louis Hyman, I. S. Zimmerman and Ben Gold who is secretary.

The Unity Committee will hold a joint shop chairmen's meeting next Tuesday, at a hall to be announced later. Further plans will then be formulated for carrying on the joint work in the fight against the forces of treachery and reaction in the International Fur Workers' Union and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Workers Cheated Out Of Pay in Penn. Mill By a New York Firm

By ARNOLD.

UNORGANIZED FOOD WORKER FACES UNDERPAY, OVERWORK, NO LUNCH TIME, AT MESSINGERS

By RUFUS P. HEATH.
(Worker Correspondent.)

CHICAGO, March 17. — Nine ren and twelve hour work day is still in style in the Messinger lunch rooms here, as I have explained several times previously. But! On top of that now comes overtime without pay. Perhaps that is music to the ears of the unorganized food workers, about time to wake up and organize. Don't you think? I do!

$14 A Week.

While working for Messingers recently, on the night shift, working as both porter and dishwasher (combination men they call it) for the same wages as the day men get, for porter work and dishwashing ($14) per week.

The day men came in an hour late several mornings and I had to work right on through until they arrived, the manager said he would fix me up for the overtime, pay day. Pay day came, but no overtime pay. When I asked the manager about the overtime, he said he was forbidden by the office to pay overtime. By this rule they can save a lot of money for the bosses.

Five Minutes Late.

That evening I came in to work five minutes late as the result of oversleeping. The manager asked me why I was late and I informed him that I had overslept. I proceeded to eat supper, as you always eat supper on the night shift before going to work so the night inspector came over and asked me why was I not on the job, when I explained to him that I had overslept, he said 'Don't you know it's after seven o'clock and that you are supposed to be on duty at seven sharp." "Sure I know that", I exclaimed, "but a fellow has to eat don't he." "Well" said the inspector, "If you keep this up we will have to pay you off". I didn't feel like working that night "no way," so I said: "Well! you can pay me off right now if you want too, I've been kicked out of classier dumps than this and furthermore I worked before I came here and I will work after I leave". He said: Alright get your coat, hat and pay and get out-o-here. I did.

SWEAR BRIBE WAS OFFERED TO PASS JERSEY BLUE LAW

Say $150,000 Raised To Hire Assemblymen

TRENTON, N. J., March 17. The first meeting of the committee appointed to investigate rumors that a member of the assembly had been offered $5000 to vote in favor of the Sunday blue law bill, passed last Monday after its defeat the week before, was held this evening.

Four witnesses, two members of the assembly and two newspapermen, were heard, after which the meeting was adjourned until next Monday.

Assemblyman Dater took the stand and described a conversation in a locker room in which Assemblyman Blunt of Ocean had told him he had heard another assemblyman had been offered $5000 to vote for the bill. Dater also told of a conversation which occurred at dinner at a hotel at which were Assemblywoman Jones, of Essex, Assemblyman Blunt and himself.

He said Blunt told him at that time he had heard of $150,000 being raised in Essex county to pass the bill. Other witnesses will be called next Monday.

Positive refusal to discuss the Jacksonville wage scale, or its equivalent, with the miners was reiterated by the coal operators.

The Chinese Workers Avenge Their Murdered Comrades

The Chinese nationalist liberation movement not only knows what it wants but how to get it. This much can be gleaned from even the prejudiced dispatches in the capitalist press.

Not the least amusing feature of recent dispatches is the emphasis placed by the correspondents on the "terror" campaign alleged to have been launched by agents of the People's government in Shanghai. The New York Times, for instance, heads one story: "Shanghai Workers Are Murdered Daily—Cantonese Agitators Resort to Strong-arm Campaign for General Strike."

Before dealing with veracity of such statements we should review the occurrences of the last two weeks. It was only a short time ago that the same correspondents who now pen shocked phrases about "strong-arm" methods were writing gleefully of the execution without trial of hundreds of Shanghai workers and students. The headsmen of Chang Tsung Chang, the Shangtung war lord, aroused only enthusiasm in the breasts of these brave gentlemen of the pen and typewriter when they thought his wanton butchery would cow the Shanghai workers into submission—to the glory and profit of the imperialist powers.

Now the tables are turned. It is entirely probable, and certainly there is no reason for any worker to regret it if true, that the People's government has passed sentence of death upon certain persons whom it has cause to believe were responsible for the murders of workers and students during the recent massacres.

The Chinese people are fighting for liberation and we see no reason to get excited over the fact that tools of the war lords and imperialists are being bumped off in Shanghai. If executions are taking place now, before the entry of the People's armies, they will have less cleaning up to do and can begin the work of consolidation all the quicker.

Workers were killed in Shanghai by the militarists and by British police but if there is one thing certain in the whole Chinese situation it is that not workers but enemies of the workers are being killed there now if killing is going on.

It would be a shameful thing if the workers, peasants and students did not wipe out the tools of the bloody tyrants who tried to drown their movement in blood.

In the meantime, the People's armies are advancing on Nanking, the clash between Chang Tso Lin, the Mukden war lord, and Wu Pei Fu, who apparently has some agreement with the People's government—or may be merely defending his own dunghill from Chang Tso Lin—is becoming more open, the railroad workers are striking and interfering with the advance of what is left of Chang Tsung Chang's troops, and the workers in Shanghai are preparing a welcome for the People's armies.

It is a foregone conclusion that without armed intervention the consolidation of China under the People's government is a matter of months. The certainty of this victory is precisely the reason why the demand of "Hands Off China" should not be allowed to die down but expressed in action that will force withdrawal of all foreign troops and warships from China, allowing the Chinese masses to reap the full fruits of their long, bloody and heroic struggle.

The Coolidge-Kellogg Collection of Colonial Traitors

There is cold comfort for the Coolidge administration in the recent Latin-American news.

The forces of Kellogg's pet, Diaz, have been given a work manlike drubbing by the popular army at Muxmuy in spite of the "neutralization" of sections of liberal territory by U. S. marines which left the popular army just about enough land to stand on.

Loud predictions came from Diaz headquarters before the battle to the effect that the popular army was doomed but Diaz seems to be the one over whom doom is hovering.

In Cuba, the murderous regime of Machado, tool of the National City Bank, has slaughtered trade union leaders and members until their blood has attracted even the attention of Chester Wright.

In Haiti, the populace took advantage of the fact that the American marines were looking for Senator King to demonstrate in a most convincing manner their hatred and contempt for President Borno and Secretary Kellogg.

Things are not turning out very well in Mexico either and the state department has had to resurrect de la Huerta who in turn revives the "red menace" bogey for the edification of newspaper correspondents who did not believe the story of this moving tale when it was first put out with the backing of the state department.

Coolidge and Kellogg have what amounts to genius for picking out the lowest form of vermin for support of their policies. Diaz of Nicaragua would probably be scorned by department of justice agents but de la Huerta would be blackballed by a meeting of volunteer stool pigeons like the four-minute men of the war period.

He tries to betray his countrymen before the whole world by telegraphing Coolidge among other things:

"I hope that President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg will not allow themselves to be deceived by the trickery of Calles."

This great patriot is now in California organizing a counter-revolution which, rumor has it, is to be financed by Doheny—another sterling citizen caught with the goods.

If the leadership of the American Federation was not tied hand and foot to the political parties of American imperialism it could and would start a barrage against the Wall Street-Coolidge administration and its collection of colonial traitors which would give new hope and power to the labor movements of the Latin-American countries—the backbone of the anti-imperialist agitation.

Failing to secure co-operation from above the American workers can and should raise in their local unions, fraternal and co-operative societies the demand for the resignation of Kellogg and the withdrawal of all troops and battleships from Latin-America.

It Only Shows That We Must Be Very Careful

By ANTHONY BIMBA.

"THE Proletarian," an organ of the "Proletarian Party of America" which party is composed of our "friend" Kerscher and a few other up-side down "Marxians," in its February issue reprinted my article "Do We Believe in Parliamentary Action" from The DAILY WORKER of January 6, 1927, with the following introductory note: "The following article bears out what the Proletarian Party has many times charged, namely, that most of the alleged activities of the Workers Party are bombast and bluff."

My article deals with certain shortcomings in our electoral campaigns and the lack of proper estimation of the value of these campaigns for the revolutionary agitation and propaganda on the part of some of our comrades. My only aim was to arouse the interest among our comrades in these campaigns and to stir them up to more intensive action in our future parliamentary work. Now our "proletarian" opponents are using this article in their attack upon our party and its activities by alleging that we only talk a lot, but actually do very little. The aim of these people is to discredit the Communist in the eyes of the workers. Of course, they cannot succeed. If they cannot produce any other arguments against our movement and are only attempting to use our own self-criticism, it shows that, first, they are politically bankrupt, and second, that we are on the right road.

Nevertheless, I read my article once more, having in mind the fact that there must be something lacking in it, if our opponents are attempting to exploit it for their own purposes. And I found that this article of mine makes a one-sided impression about our movement. It deals only with the shortcomings, but it does not take into consideration the circumstances in which at least some of these shortcomings are inevitable.

Let us take, for instance, the same election campaign in New York City about which I spoke in my article. Our comrades were very active at that time in three very important strikes: the Interborough Rapid Transit, the cloakmakers and the textile workers of Passaic. All active comrades were mobilized to help the workers win their battle with their bosses. Some of our best speakers were directly involved in these strikes. Others were taken away by the national organization to tour the country with speeches and lectures. Naturally, in such circumstances the New York party organization could not mobilize all of its forces for the election campaign and, therefore, the campaign had to suffer very greatly." My article "Do We Believe in Parliamentary Action?" did not deal with this problem. Of course, I do not say that all our comrades were engaged in the strike activities and therefore could be excused for not taking active part in the election campaign. Some of them did really neglect their bolshevik duties and deserve criticism. But my article failed to distinguish those comrades who were active in other fields from those who had the opportunity but failed to perform their duties in the election campaign.

My article was one-sided also in the fact that it dealt exclusively with our open-air meetings and failed to point out that we had a few very successful indoor mass meetings during the campaign. It didn't say anything about the distribution of tens of thousands of leaflets in the factories, shops, stores, etc. Many comrades criticized the one-sidedness of my article and I agree with them. I see that I failed to be very careful and therefore missed the point. The action of our "Proletarian" opponents only shows at least to me, how careful we must be in surveying our work. We must always deal with the subject as a whole and not only with certain phases of it.

C. E. Ruthenberg---The Comrade and the Man

By P. P.

IT was in Cleveland, back in 1908, nearly two decades ago, that I first met Comrade Ruthenberg. I remember that it was at an open air meeting of which I was to be the chairman. I was only a youngster then, inexperienced and new to the movement, and I was rather timid and hesitant about getting up on the box and starting things off. Some of the other comrades were advising me as to how to begin, when a tall, youthful man, carrying a package of literature under his arm, arrived.

"Here is Comrade Ruthenberg, the speaker for to-night," one of the comrades whispered to me. A moment later we were introduced. I remember distinctly being impressed by the size of the man, by the deliberate, careful, wording of his speech, his strong, unusual features, his calm and poise. I told him that I was to be the chairman of the meeting, that it was my first attempt at street corner speaking and that I felt a little timid about it when opening encouragement and suggestions. I held out for about 10 minutes, then introduced the speaker of the evening. He took over the box, Comrade Ruthenberg spoke, and thruout, a large crowd of workers stood and listened.

This was how I met Comrade Ruthenberg. During the next few years, I had an opportunity to work with him as a member of the City Central Committee of the Socialist Party of Cleveland. Already at that time, some of the old German comrades on the committee used to say:

"Some day, Comrade Ruthenberg will some day be a leader of the party."

No one in the City Central Committee took the party work so seriously, no one was as energetic, no one brought forward so many practical plans for work, as Comrade Ruthenberg. Whereas some of the old Germans and Hungarians on the committee wanted to have more study classes and more lectures, Comrade Ruthenberg always insisted on more mass meetings with the workers, more outside activity.

Rebelled Against Reformism.

I can see that even at that early time, Comrade Ruthenberg was unconsciously rebelling against the reformism and passivism that was becoming rife in the Socialist Party. Little did I dream at that time, how fully would be realized the prediction of the German comrades on the Cleveland City Central Committee, that C. E. Ruthenberg would some day be a leader.

From the time that I first met Comrade Ruthenberg at that street corner meeting nearly twenty years ago, I have closely followed his activities as a revolutionist. From year to year, thru imprisonments and struggles I have seen him grow politically, and develop his powers of leadership.

I feel sure that had not death taken him prematurely from the revolutionary movement, he would have continued to grow and develop, to grow in more firm and far-sighted leadership. Comrade Ruthenberg, in my opinion, embodied the best traditions of the American revolutionary movement.

He Was Modest.

Personally, I can say of Comrade Ruthenberg, that while he generally gave the impression of being dignified and unapproachable, yet he was exceedingly democratic, modest and considerate. I have never known him to slight or hurt anybody. His attitude was that of a comrade to all comrades who knew him personally. At all times, his individuality was submerged in the work to which he devoted his life.

Up to the very last moments of his consciousness, when the peritonitis poisoning was seeping into his heart, stilling its beat, his thoughts were of the party and the tasks before it. His final words; "Let us Fight on", epitomize the indomitable revolutionary spirit that was Comrade Ruthenberg's.

Textile Workers of Passaic Promise to Fight for Communism

PASSAIC, N. J., March 17. — The Ruthenberg Memorial meeting held here at The Workers' Home, 27 Dayton Ave., adopted the following resolution:

"We, hundreds of workers of Passaic, N. J., assembled at a memorial meeting held March 13, at the Workers' Home, 27 Dayton Ave., express our greatest grief on the death of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

The year long textile strike, we just went through, taught us the correctness of Comrade Ruthenberg's teaching. The brutalities of state power against the strikers, the help of the Workers (Communist) Party in our struggle shows us that the only right road to follow is that of the party of the working class.

We pledge ourselves to fight, to continue to fight for the working class. Comrade Ruthenberg gave his life for.

I unanimously accepted.

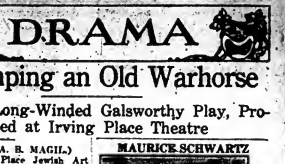
"Justice," Long-Winded Galsworthy Play, Produced at Irving Place Theatre

(Reviewed by A. B. MAGIL.)

At the Irving Place Jewish Art Theatre Jacob Ben-Ami is rattling the bones of Galsworthy's "Justice," freshly exhumed and dressed in stiff, creaky Yiddish.

I emerged from the theatre feeling as if my head was full of cobwebs. It is several years since I last saw or read a Galsworthy play. I wasn't prepared for such a smell of camphor.

I don't know why Jacob Ben-Ami has trotted out this fusty, spavined old war-horse. I suppose he feels it will have some attraction for the theatre-goer who is interested in "problems." For here is a problem as thick as fog, as tough and dry as hard-tack. And it squats all over the stage.



At a certain point in his career John Galsworthy, the bourgeois British liberal with a sociological bee in his bonnet, discovered that there is sometimes a monkey-wrench in the elaborate machinery of justice. In moments of weakness, goaded by certain social maladjustments, honest human beings may yield to temptation, may commit a felony. The law is precise and pedantic. It considers neither a person's past nor his future. Inexorable Justice.

Look what happens, says Galsworthy. Terrible!

It is so easy to poke fun at John Galsworthy, yet so cruel perhaps. The fellow is so desperately in earnest, so humorlessly honest. Sitting through a performance of "Justice" is like listening to an Oswald Garrison Villard editorial for several hours.

Galsworthy is a good craftsman, a dramatic artisan of the first order. Given certain crude, commonplace materials, he will labor over it, saw off a piece here, nail down a piece there, and put together a play that will stand up for a couple of hours and glitter with all its 100-watt electric lights.

That's about all. I suppose it accounts for Galsworthy's exaggerated reputation as a dramatist. His plays are always "good theatre," though poor drama. But I can account for the Romain Rolland's "Wolves," a drama of the French Revolution which is being revived at the Yiddish Art Theatre tonight.

Galsworthy's reputation as a social seer only by saying that there must be a large and carefully preserved meadow in the minds of the fashionable British and American intelligentsia. "Justice" is the reformism of Dickens minus the humor, freshness and ingenuity of the great Victorian. It is polite, it is grave, it is stiffly eloquent. There is nothing in it to offend the most hidebound tory. Galsworthy merely criticises a defect in a piece of machinery. He never questions the nature or uses of that machinery or the foundations upon which it rests.

As the last act drew to its close, my friend turned to me and said: "He leaves nothing to the imagination." No, nothing. Every point is hammered home relentlessly. The "dull and creeping Saxon" is manifest on every line. A "message" got stuck in Galsworthy's throat and he had to get it out. Old, obvious, threadbare stuff. Pick up almost any issue of The Nation or The New York World and you'll find it all done very elegantly. I know half a dozen parsons in the Bronx who are saying the same things and nobody pays any attention to them.

The play is excellently produced by a competent cast. And Jacob Ben-Ami in the leading role does superb work. He actually achieves the miracle of creation that Galsworthy failed to do.

COMMUNIST TRAINING CAMPS.

With the first blush of spring the cry is "Let's go!" On every hand brilliant posters lure our youth to the glories of the capitalist military training camps. From the president to the smallest employer there is a united front in praise for these cannon fodder factories. Every postage stamp is made the automatic carrier of jingo propaganda.

To us the coming of spring marks an opportunity of quite a different character—one which the live wires in our movement will seize upon with the greatest zest. The milder weather offers us the opportunity to reach out to new sections of the working class whom we have never reached before.

The Communist Training Camps which we propose to establish consist of squads of active comrades who will use this season of the year to invade the territory at large scale industry. It does not matter to us what type of equipment you use, whether it is a bicycle, an old Ford, or just foot power and a soap box. What we want to see in each district is the organization of a squad of active field agents who will go out and organize outdoor meetings at factory gates at noon hour, make a rattling speech on some current issue or on conditions in the factory or the industry and then use the occasion to sell The DAILY WORKER and Party literature, and get subs.

Expeditimus of this kind can be made to pay for The DAILY WORKER as well as for the comrades undertaking the work. Traveling agents can earn their expenses by making profit on literature sold and commissions on subscriptions obtained.

Those who are yearning for adventure, and those who want to "See the World" are promised plenty of experience. Pass the word along, "Let's go!"—BERT MILLER.

FILIPINO CAUSE LINKED UP WITH CHINESE VICTORY

Leader Says Revolution Is Hope of Oppressed

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press).

WASHINGTON, March 17 (FP)—Freedom for the Philippines, and conversion of Japan from an imperialistic to a democratic force, in the Orient, depends upon the success of the Nationalist revolutionary movement in China, says Pedro Guevara, one of the two resident commissioners of the Philippines in congress.

"This Chinese Nationalist movement has strengthened the nationalistic sentiment in the Philippines," Guevara told the Federated Press, because of the policy adopted by the western powers in China. The instinct of self-preservation of the Filipino people convinces them that now more than ever nationalism must be developed in the islands. They have no hope at all to be treated by the western powers on a basis of equality and justice.

Strengthened Nationalism.

"What we say about the western powers applies also to the United States in her relations with the Philippines and in fact the legislation presented to congress and discussed in the committee on insular affairs with reference to the Philippines has strengthened the nationalistic sentiment in the Islands. The Filipino people believed with good reason that this proposed legislation in the recent session constituted the initial steps toward adoption by the United States of the policy of the western powers as applied to China, India, Java, Singapore and Indo-China.

Bids To Imperialism.

"We feel that the triumph of the Chinese Nationalist movement in the present Chinese civil strife will mean the downfall of the imperialistic policy of Japan. No longer a factor for imperialism, Japan will then become a factor for democracy in the Far East. A democratic Japan could be no menace to the independence of the Philippines—a point of the highest importance to us in overcoming the fears of Americans who now oppose our independence.

"But a defeat for the Chinese Nationalist movement will mean the triumph of imperialism in Japan. That country will be encouraged to develop an imperialistic policy in competition with the western powers.

"So the future of the Far East—and not merely China but Japan and the Philippines—will be profoundly affected by the triumph of the Cantonese Nationalists."

The measures discussed in the recent congress that were hostile to Filipino hopes of independence were the bills offered by administration members to increase the power of Gov. Gen. Wood and to restrict the authority of the Philippine legislature. None of them passed, but they had the full support of President Coolidge and Speaker Longworth.

Speech by Manuel Gomez

TO THE BRUSSELS ANTI-IMPERIALIST CONGRESS

Manuel Gomez represented the United States Section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League at the Brussels Congress of Oppressed Colonial Peoples and Anti-Imperialists. His speech is an analysis of the present financial imperialism of Wall Street, and shows its roots in the exploitation of American and foreign workers.

PART I.—THE AMERICAN EMPIRE.

Comrades of all nations and races:

Coming from the land of the dollar, and of dollar diplomacy, I present to you the American dollar empire as the common problem of all of us, because it is an empire which takes tribute from the whole world.

This newest imperialism of the United States speaks its own peculiar language, the language of democratic-pacifism, if you please. It is "the friend of China." In contradiction to the British, Japanese and other vulgar imperialists, its policy in China is the "Open Door," "equal opportunity for all."

But my Chinese friends, I want you to bear in mind that our Uncle Sam, who can talk so eloquently on behalf of the "Open Door in China," insists upon a closed door—closed, locked and bolted—in Latin America, whose territory the Monroe Doctrine treats as a special preserve of U. S. finance-capital. The democratic-pacifist method represents only one phase of American imperialist policy. It is inevitably succeeded by the phase of open, brutal aggression, such as the entire Caribbean and Central American populations of the Western Hemisphere are already familiar with.

Modern imperialism has been described here as imperialist capitalism—the present, final stage of that capitalism which now exploits whole populations abroad as well as millions of workers at home. Nowhere is this more obvious than in the United States. Some of you are familiar with the accompanying progressive development of expansionist foreign policy. Concentration and centralization of industry led to monopoly, which means that all the economic and therefore political—power of the nation was concentrated in the hands of a small group of plutocrats centered in Wall Street.

In 1901 the United States Steel Corporation came into existence, bringing together the most powerful financial groups, such as the hitherto warring Rockefeller und Morgan interests.

At the same time that these developments were taking place the United States made its appearance upon the world imperialist stage. The Spanish-American War, entered into with the characteristic innocent declarations of libertarian purposes, was the initial move in a foreign policy which continues its consistent march to this day. Conquest of Cuba, Porto Rico and Guam and the Philippine Islands are the spearhead of U. S. imperialist policy with regard to Asia.

Developments during and since the World War brought the United States into the very front rank of imperialist powers. Industrial capacity was tremendously increased. Wall Street succeeded the City of London as the dominant center of world finance. The United States passed from a debtor to a creditor nation, with huge interests in Europe as well as in Latin America and Asia. Before the war the total foreign investments of American capitalism did not reach $2,500,000,000. Now the amount exceeds $13,000,000,000.

To the lines of imperialist policy represented by the Monroe Doctrine and the "Open Door," was added that of the Dawes Plan. Reaching full consciousness at last, American imperialism became everywhere aggressive. From the four corners of the earth, the super-profits of imperialism began to pour into the United States.

On the basis of the American dollar empire—which, as all Latin Americans know, is created not merely by dollars but also by the flesh and blood of human beings slain and tortured—the so-called American standard of living is maintained in the United States.

Even the American working class shares to a certain extent in the profits of imperialism, and as a result is permeated with social-patriotic and imperialist ideology. I speak particularly of the skilled workers and, in general, of the dominant elements making up a large body of the membership of the American Federation of Labor. Recent economic developments in the United States furnishes no more striking phenomenon than the rapid growth of "business unionism" and what, for want of a better term, we call class collaboration.

Without going into detail regarding the rapidly multiplying forms of "class collaboration," I need merely cite labor banking, labor insurance schemes, "company unionism" and the tendencies toward applying "co-operative union" principles through the bona fide trade unions. Outstanding examples of the latter are the so-called "B. & O. Plan" and the machinery established under the recently adopted Watson-Parker Law.

So satisfactory have they been to American capitalists that some of these forms are being transplanted to Europe, as part of the program of "rationalization." Thus we hear that Europe is studying the "American method" from America. We should not forget, however, those features which are similar to those sometimes indulged in by middle class "liberals" and pacifists—perform a real service to imperialism, because they make it seem that there is nothing fundamentally wrong.

FEDERATION OF LABOR, COLOMBIA JOINS THE R.I.L.U.

Latin - Americans Are Greeted by R. I. L. U.

BOGOTA, Columbia (By Mail)—The Syndicato Central Obrero De Colombia (Central Federation of Workers of Colombia) announced receipt of a communication from the Red International of Trade Unions calling to the request of the Colombian labor movement for admittance into the ranks of the R. I. L. U.

The letter of the S. C. O. D. C. requesting affiliation addressed to "Comintern, members of the R. I. L. U., Moscow," reads:

Foundation Labor Movement.

"Greetings of the International Social Revolution!

"I am very glad to send you our greetings and to inform you that the Sindicato Central Obrero de Colombia (Central Federation of Workers of Columbia) which 12 years ago laid the foundation in our country of a workers' trade union movement, purely socialistic in character, has lately radically changed its programme with the aim of directing its chief activities to fight for the abolition by means of the dictatorship of the proletariat of the division of humanity into classes.

Request Admittance.

"Taking its stand on this point of view, the Sindicato Central Obrero de Columbia at its recent congress unanimously decided to send greetings to your Red International of Trade Unions and to request to be admitted in the ranks of the latter.

"We are writing the present letter to inform you of the foregoing resolution and to ask you to give us the necessary instructions as that the Sindicato Central Obrero de Columbia can resolutely itself accepted in your international.

"In anticipation of the decision of the R. I. L. U. we send you our greetings."

In reply to the above the Profintern (R. I. L. U.) sent the following letter:

"Your letter of the 25th of September 1926 was discussed by the Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions at their meeting of the 24th of January.

Accepts Affiliation.

"The Executive Bureau of the R. I. L. U. decided to accept your affiliation, and through you send their hearty greetings to the working class of Columbia. The Executive Bureau of the R. I. L. U. is very glad, indeed, to set up fraternal relations with the workers of your country, which finds itself continually threatened by the covetous and plundering imperialism of the United States. The events now developing in this continent herald the seizure contemplated by the United States bourgeoisie, not only of the central part of America, but of the whole of South America in the very near future. United States imperialism having enriched itself on the war now dresses all democratic forms, and not only endeavors by force to dominate the whole of America, but to seize control of the politics of the world. With such a situation facing us the union of the workers of America, Europe and Asia, including the proletariat of U. S. S. R. and China, is especially necessary.

"The Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions greets your entrance into the family of the revolutionary trade union movement, and from this time onwards hopes that connections with the labor movement of your country and the workers' movements of other countries will remain firm and constant.

"The Executive Bureau hopes to meet your representative at the next—the IVth—world congress of the R. I. L. U. On date of its convening we shall inform you separately."

With fraternal greetings,
General Secretary R. I. L. U.

Comrades and Fellow Workers:

After a year's heroic struggle of the Passaic textile workers, the mill barons were forced to submit to a union in the textile industry of Passaic. They are however putting obstacles in the way of maintaining such an organization. Although the strike is almost over, they are taking the workers back very slowly, with the result that thousands of families are without means of existence. Their children are hungry.

There are many families whose sole supporters were sent to jail for long periods because of their activities in the strike. You must come to their rescue. Relief must go on with full speed!

The General Relief Committee, who is maintaining a few food stores in Passaic, appeals to all those who have taken milk coupons to send in their money as soon as possible, no matter how much you have collected. Send the money immediately to the General Relief Committee, 799 Broadway, Room 225, also ask for more coupons to sell.

The office is open from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. daily.

GENERAL RELIEF COMMITTEE.

Peace Union, Jingoes, Quarrel Over Meaning Of Term 'Americanism'

A conference of the national commanders of the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans decided upon a definition for Americanism, as follows: "Americanism is an unfailing love of country; loyalty to its institutions and ideals; eagerness to defend it against all enemies; undivided allegiance to the flag; and a desire to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and posterity."

The Women's Peace Union immediately wrote another, reading:

"Americanism is the brave and true love of and loyalty to the belief, that the people of the United States, as individual citizens, are free and equal, and that the government of the United States is established by the people to exercise powers delegated by them, in order to secure the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity."

So there's going to be a war over Americanism between the soldiers and the peace-lovers. Workers who bitterly resent the "Americanism" of union busting and low wages have yet to be heard from. Likewise the foreign-born, to whom "Americanism" is coming to mean finger-printing, constant spying, and occasional arrest and deportation for militant union action.

Royal Marriage to Seal Italy's Ratification Of Bessarabian Treaty?

ROME, March 17.—Denials of reports of the forthcoming engagement of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy and Prince Ilena of Rounania are renewed from the Villa Savoia today. If the status of Prince Carol is settled a formal courtship may be countenanced by the Italian house-hold.

Princess Helene, the abandoned wife of Prince Carol, is a great friend of Princess Mafalda of Hess, sister of Prince Humbert.

Since in these days of royal matrimony is merely a part of international politics, the talk of a match between the two royal houses is taken by observers to indicate a degree of permanency to the Roumanian-Italian partnership in the Balkans, signalized by ratification of the Bessarabian treaty.

New Jersey Forest Burns.

BUTLER, N. J., March 17.—What probably was the first forest fire of the year in northern New Jersey occurred today on the slope of Kakeet Mountain, five miles from here. The fire was discovered by a lookout of the state forestry department's fire patrol and was extinguished by volunteers from here and the surrounding country before any great damage was done. About twenty-five acres of forest was burned.

GERMAN PARTY CONGRESS ENDS AMID CHEERING

Delegates to Work for Party Concentration

ESSEN, Germany (By Mail)—The fourth session of the congress of the German Communist Party was opened on Thursday morning March 3 with the presentation of the report of the committee on credentials. The report showed 183 delegates with decisive votes and 89 with consultative votes.

Comrade Koetter then declared: "The differences between the Imperialist powers are being intensified from day to day. It is not possible to declare that in one part of the world a revolutionary situation exists and in another part a stabilization of capitalism. The Chinese revolution and the capitalistic stabilization of Great Britain are open contradictions. The opportunistic deviations criticized by Dengel are no accident, but products of the general policy of the German C. P."

Discuss Opposition.

A general discussion followed upon the former opposition group of Ruth Fischer, Maslov, Scholem, Schwan und Urbahn, in which the comrades Weber, Bartels, Schlecht, Wittorf, und Thalmann participated. The latter informed the delegates that Maslov was calling a conference of his followers at Essen and warned against taking part in it.

Comrades Pfeiffer, Mildenstreit, Bottcher, Breland, Meyer, Dickmann, Ulbricht, and Haussen then discussed the problem of establishing a closer contact with left wing organizations, to follow up the gains made by the party since the X congress, and to watch the growing opposition movement inside the social democratic party.

Close of the morning session.

During the following sessions delegates from other countries were given the floor who told of the problems and advances made by their respective parties.

The congress then discussed various internal problems in the German situation, the necessity of strong opposition to the fascisti propaganda in Germany and the military mobilization against the Soviet Union.

Other delegates spoke of the importance of a strong women's organization and urged greater activity among the women in the party. Representatives from the Young Spartacus League gave a detailed account of the League's work.

After again discussing the financial struggle within the party, a demand was made for the liquidation of opposition fights between ultra lefts and rights, and to work to-ward party concentration.

Comrade Jansen then took the floor. He brought greetings from the Communist International to the party congress and declared that the Soviet Union is accomplishing the task of industrializing their country without financial assistance from the United States. The trade between the Soviet Union and other countries is carried on on the basis of exchange and not credits. Today's assertion that the Soviet Union is becoming more and more depending on capitalistic countries, Russia now has a favorable trade balance, which has even been acknowledged by the economic council of the League of Nations. Comrade Jansen warned the German delegates that they must not underestimate the actual temporary industrial stabilization and its strength.

The congress adjourned on Sunday, March 6th after greetings had been sent to the Communist International and all other parties represented by delegates present. The delegates rose to sing the International, and then cheered the cause of International solidarity.

Germans Balks The British.

GENEVA, March 17.—Germany geographically, politically and economically the keystone to any Western European combination of powers against Russia, has blocked the British informal, but none the less well-designed move here for concerted action against Soviet propaganda.

That was the chief feature of the first quarterly League of Nations' council meeting this year.

Despite all officials' denials, information coming from sources which ought to know something about it, insists that Sir Austen Chamberlain in his private talks with Herr Stresemann, the German Foreign Minister, and others, touched on the subject of a blue against the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Five Delegations to Pres. Coolidge Want No War For Mexican Oil Land

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Five delegations today presented Secretary of State Kellogg with petitions urging that the differences with Mexico be submitted for arbitration. They were:

The petition of the Foreign Policy Association bore 11,383 signatures and was presented to the secretary by George M. Lamonte, of New York.

and he, this snake would suddenly grow to five times his original size and swallow all the rest. And after wrapping himself around his fellows he would cast longing eyes on the lands. The saint had easy sailing after this. It is true that a few diehards here and there clung to the old system for a while, but St. Patrick finally convinced them that they could have anything they wanted from him as long as they did not make any trouble. He was a good politician.

ST. PATRICK informed the Irish people of that time that there was nothing entirely new under the sun. A spiritual revelation had taken place in Ireland—that was all. Whereas formerly the people worshipped rivers and trees, the sun and the moon, from now on they would worship a god who never came into indignified contact with his followers. After all, gods must insist that their followers do not get too familiar. Any lowly god can scratch his back against a fir tree and pretend that he was looking for spiritual satisfaction instead of physical relief. Here was a god that kept his distance and expected his followers to do the same. Furthermore on the ground of economy the new system was superior to the old.

TREES might be destroyed by fire or blown from their roots by the wind. Rivers might go dry, the sun might be eclipsed by a cloud, like unto the moon. This would cause the people to worry about the fate of their gods and the druids would be compelled to rise from their festive boards and sober up sufficiently to explain the phenomenon to their followers. Under the new dispensation there was no need for explanations since it was a sin meriting eternal damnation to ask the priest questions, once christianity was accepted.

SO we are for St. Patrick. Long may he thrive. Furthermore he may have been a revolutionist for all we know. Revolutions have a habit of happening in March. Spring is an intoxicating season and the people have a tendency to develop a fever for toppling things over when the trees begin to sprout and the birds begin to twitter in the fields. Here is a good idea. Let us grant that Patrick was either a revolutionist or the predecessor of the great magician Houdini. We are bound to win either way. Tammany Hall would never allow the 69th regiment to march in honor of a dead radical and it is not reasonable to expect that Tammany would care to play second fiddle to a man who was sufficiently well up in magic to be capable of stealing an election without having to resort to the crude device of stuffing the ballot boxes.

Won't Have to Disarm.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The United States has assured France and Italy that they may como into President Coolidge's proposed naval disarmament conference without risk of weakening their sea power, the State Department announced today.

These assurances were contained in new invitations to the two powers to reconsider their recent flat rejection of the proposed Coolidge parley. Copies of these invitations, quite similar, were made public today.

Ruthenberg, the Leader, Marks New Advance of the American Working Class

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

C. E. RUTHENBERG was the outstanding representative of the new type of revolutionary leadership that is developing in the United States.

The mere fact that the American working class struggle for power could produce a Ruthenberg, and the party of Ruthenberg, the Workers (Communist) Party, is the best reply to those pessimists who refuse to admit the forward surge of the labor movement in this country.

Ruthenberg, as the founder and leader of the Workers (Communist) Party, was a product of the development of the American class war. Thus he belongs to the whole working class, out of which the Communist Party also springs.

Thus the progress of the American revolutionary movement may be judged by the type of leadership of labor in the various stages of advance achieved by the working class in this country.

Twenty years ago the Socialist Party had reached the same age, to which the Communist Party has grown at the present time.

In 1904 Eugene V. Debs had polled nearly half a million votes as the socialist candidate for president, and extraordinary prophecies were being made for the inauguration of Socialism at an early date in this country.

Thus the Socialist Party attracted to itself many peculiar elements, among them the highly advertised "millionaire socialists." The socialist party developed the referendum as one of the methods of reaching decisions, not only in determining policies but in selecting officials. Thus the selection of such "millionaire socialists" as J. G. Phelps Stokes, Robert Hunter and Joseph Medill Patterson for prominent positions in the Party was a fairly accurate reflection of the desires of the Party's membership at that time, expressed thru the referendum. The common saying was that socialist party leadership fell on the shoulders of the "writer and speaker," because of his coming most frequently in contact with the party's membership, but it was declared with equal truth that the capitalist press often selected socialist party leaders thru the publicity that it gave to "millionaire socialists," first, upon their entrance into the party and later because of their activities within the party.

Certainly J. G. Phelps Stokes, who joined the Socialist Party in 1906, and became a member of its national executive committee a few years later in 1908, never displayed the least symptom of a qualification for leadership in what claimed to be a revolutionary organization of the working class. He turned 100 per cent pay-trior with the outbreak of the world war and has since been lost in oblivion.

Robert Hunter, no doubt never a millionaire, but given the title of "millionaire socialist" by the capitalist press, graduated from social work in Chicago, London and New York, to socialist party leadership as a member of its executive committee, 1909-1912, and then disappeared. He made some contribution to the socialist literature of the time. He showed no qualifications for the political direction of the forces of labor, however, being content to fall in line with the Berger-Hillquit-Spargo leadership. One characteristic anecdote concerning Hunter told of his attending campaign meetings on New York's East Side during the heat of an electoral struggle. Great throngs were in the streets, as well as in the meeting held, which led Hunter, who lived over in less populated Connecticut to declare, "With such numbers following us, the revolution is surely near."

It was the same outlook that brought Joseph Medill Patterson, now one of the editors of The Chicago Tribune, and also editor of its weekly magazine, "Liberty," into the Socialist Party. Young Patterson, in 1905-6, was commissioner of public works in Chicago under the regime of the liberal democratic mayor, Edward F. Dunne. But he thought the social revolution was coming on, in a hurry. He quit his job in the city hall, joined the socialist party and helped start the Chicago Daily Socialist in the fall of 1906. He co-operated with Algernon M. Simons in its editorship, and for a brief space became one of the most prominent figures in the party.

But the social revolution didn't hurry, not even to accomodate young Patterson. Months measured the length of his stay in the movement. I met him in the Calumet copper country, in northern Michigan, during the bitterly fought strike of the copper miners in the winter of 1913-14. At that time he reiterated the views I have here attributed to him. He confessed he had lost what faith he had had, if he ever had any, in the working class; pointed out with true capitalist superiority that the copper strike was a miserable mistake, and drank the wine of the mine owners at the exclusive Calumet Club. The world war made him "captain" and now his biography in "Who's Who in America" omits all mention of his connection at any time with the Socialist Party and its press.

It might be added that none of these even gave lip service to the revolution. In this they differed from Jack London, who worked with Stokes in organizing the Inter-Collegiate Socialist Society; William English Walling, and the most recent example of William Bross Lloyd. Instead they belonged peculiarly to the reformist wing of the party. They helped make up the leadership that was thus constituted with Berger, Hillquit, Spargo, Stokes, Hunter, Simons as outstanding figures. Berger and Hillquit are the lone survivors, not even being able to retain such figures as Charles Edward Russell and Allan L. Benson, who later joined the party, coming on the scene with the period starting in 1910, that brought the first socialist electoral victories of any magnitude in Milwaukee, Wisc., and a few other localities. Both Russell and Benson proved the thinnest intellectual froth. Russell was a jingo from the beginning of the war. In spite of this fact he nearly became the party's candidate for president in 1916. He was replaced, however, by Benson, who held to a pacifist anti-war stand until 1918, when he quit the party "because of its attitude toward the government during the war."

That the socialist party has not changed is shown by the fact that many of these renegades are now being asked to contribute and are actually offering their contributions to a symposium on "The Problems of American Socialism" appearing in The New Leader, the party organ in New York City. The socialist party leadership has not changed. The working class has changed. It has brushed the reformist socialist leadership aside and developed as its revolutionary expression, a Communist leadership, that has won mass support in many instances and is developing it on an increasing scale. Ruthenberg was the symbol of this leadership. Its organized expression is the Workers (Communist) Party. Ruthenberg and his party both measure satisfactory progress achieved by American labor in the face of great problems and obstacles resulting from the developing class war.

"Shingle Weaving Is a Battle"

By CARL BRANNIN.

"Shingle-weaving is not a trade; it is a battle. For ten hours a day the sawyer faces two teethed steel discs whirling around two hundred times a minute. To the one on the left he feeds heavy blocks of cedar, reaching over with his left hand to remove the rough shingles it rips off. His eyes can not leave it to see what his left hand is doing. His eyes are too busy examining the shingle for knot-holes to be cut out by the second saw swirling in front of him.

Saw Sets Pace.

"The saw on his left sets the pace. If the ringing blade rips fifty rough shingles off the block every minute, the sawyer must reach over to its teeth fifty times in sixty seconds; if the automatic carriage feeds the odorous wood sixty times into the hungry teeth, sixty times he must reach over, turn the shingle, trim its edge on the gleaming saw in front of him, cut out the narrow strip containing the knot-hole with two quick movements of his right hand and toss the completed board down the chute to the packers, meanwhile keeping eyes and ears open for the sound that asks him to feed a new block into the untiring teeth.

Unprotected Hands.

Hour after hour the shingle weaver's hands and arms, plain, unarmored flesh and blood, are staked against the screeching steel that cares not what it severs. Hour after hour the steel sings its crescendo note as it bites into the wood, the sawdust cloud thickens, the wet sponge under the sawyer's nose fills with fine particles. If "cedar asthma," the shingle weaver's occupational disease, does not get him, the steel will. Sooner or later he reaches over a little too far, the whirling blade tosses drops of deep red into the air and a finger, a hand or part of an arm comes sliding down the slick chute."

Most Lose Fingers.

Thus wrote Walter V. Woehlke, editor of the Sunset Magazine in 1917. Except for the supplanting of the ten-hour day by eight hours, through organization, the description of the working life of the sawyer is much the same today. A two-days' meeting of strikers here for a show of hands and concrete evidence will be afforded of the awful hazards of the industry.

Ninety-five per cent of the workers have lost one or more fingers, but so long as a thumb and one finger remain, even the little one, a man can still battle with the saws for a livelihood. I asked one man what compensation he had received for a missing digit. Two hundred and fifteen dollars was the answer. No wonder strikers say that it would really be a blessing if the mills should remain closed and the workers forced to find their living in some less hazardous industry than the making of shingles. But under the present industrial system there are too many men for the jobs. And there's the rub.

Wages Pitiful Low Wages.

Wages in the shingle industry are pitifully small considering the dangerous nature of the work. The workers of Gray's Harbor are on strike to resist the attempt of the bosses to reduce wages still further. Payment is on a piece-work basis and the bosses declare they will be eliminated when their union is stronger. Skilled workers receiving an average of from $5 to $6.50 per day the bosses would cut to $4.10 and $5.00. The sawyer receives from 17 to 20 cents per thousand for the shingles, which the consumer buys at $4 or more per thousand.

Always Cutting.

The packer receives a little less. Day labor, relatively unskilled, the boss would cut from $4 per day to $3.50. The former wages may be a trifle higher than those paid in some other shingle districts but the increased cost of living in Gray's Harbor more than makes up the difference. Food is from 15 to 20 per cent higher than in Seattle.

High Rent.

A dilapidated four or five room house, unfurnished, will rent for $22.50 per month. Water, light, etc., is extra. Board at one of the company hotels is tonight set at $10.50 per week. The fact that most of the strikers now have to buy their groceries on credit boosts the living costs still higher. While the merchants thus far have extended credit freely there is a disposition now on the part of some of them to cut this off. Ninety per cent of the strikers are married men with families and the problem may become acute. The strikers are endeavoring to raise money locally but they need help from the unions in other cities. Have your union vote a monthly contribution at its next meeting and send same to International Shingle Weavers' Union, 306 Eighth St., Bellingham, Wash., R. E. Lovelace, Treas.

Sure Thing Sportsmen

By SPECTATOR.

Those who appreciate the humor of the "Honest John" title adopted by a thousand Main Streets' thousand politicians will find an added source of entertainment in the antics offered by defeated ring favorites. The sting of the trouncing, actually handed to the suckers who swallow the ballyhoo prepared by subsidied sports writers, is cleverly healed.

Swelling Swells.

Thus, the slight swelling noted in Jack Delaney's thumb after his unexpected defeat by Mickey Walker last month became a fracture. And the light heavyweight's unexpectedly poor showing was due to worry over his wife's illness. When Tom Gibbons took the count in his bout with Gene Tunney in June, 1925, the upset was accounted for by the "fact" that one Gibbons' children was ill. In an earlier fight with the champion, Dempsey, Gibbons' had stayed the limit. When Tunney kayoed Bartley Madden who had lasted with Harry Wills, sports writers proclaimed the "fact" that Madden's pugilistic star had outworn its brilliance. After a decent interval of "retirement" Bartley came back and recently defeated "Soldier" King.

Useless Bribe.

Recently the writer was in the office of a manager who had just returned from an up-state club where one of his meal-tickets had decisively trounced a local heavyweight.

The manager bemoaned the fact that he had been so uncertain of his proteges worth that he bribed the two judges to give him the decision. The TAMMANY is out to clean up the city. So far, Tammany has not decided to move to Hoboken. Grand Sachem Olvany, of the 14th Street menagerie applauded the campaign of Police Commissioner McLaughlin to make the city safe for professional betting. It appears that democratic and republican aldermen and other heads of republican and democratic clubs thruout the metropolis were whiling away the lagging hours by planting excess dollars on fleet-footed steeds. The police commissioner, having no strikebreaking work on his hands, decided to break up the gambling clubs. This caused considerable dissatisfaction among the horse-loving politicians.

IT seems to us that sheik or Sachem Olvany is right. Give a democrat an inch and he will take an Irish mile. There are enough obstacles in the way of legitimate gambling without the competition of politicians who draw more than one salary. And Olvany was rather moderate in his language. In substance he said: I like a quiet game of stud poker or Kelly pool but I am opposed to the use of knock-out drops or the skinning of up-state democrats. Furthermore we cannot very well go ahead closing theatres for putting on intelligent plays and keep our gambling joints running openly at the same time. Here is where open diplomacy does not work.

THE Rev. John A. AN irate reader did not like the tone of a paragraph on the Ford-Sapiro suit that appeared in this column recently. He thot our observations smacked of anti-semitism. There is very little new under the sun. A Clark scrivener is sure to be misunderstood. We can understand how a Kluxer could see the hand of a catholic priest at our typewriter or how a catholic could see a hood on our head but how we could be chorged with anti-semitism is a little beyond us.

WHILE on the subject there is not much to choose between the two parties to the trial. Sapiro the wealthy lawyer and Ford the billionaire exploiter. Sapiro has the support of our sympathies, not because his motives in tilting legally with Ford are of the purest but because we are opposed to race prejudice whether it is directed against the Jews, the Negroes, the English or the Irish. Otherwise Ford and Sapiro leave us as cold as did the Peaches-Browning case. We are much more interested in the cause of the Jewish cloakmakers who were sentenced to jail by the Jewish judge Rosalsky than we are in the injured feelings of a millionaire lawyer.

HARRY SINCLAIR was not as lucky or as generous as Harry Daugherty in the matter of picking a jury. Harry Daugherty's man stood like the rock of Gibraltar against the arguments of the wilful eleven that favored the defendant's conviction. ARREST OFFICER WHO KEPT PLAN OF SUBMERSIBLE

English Mystery Craft Deadliest Ever Made

LONDON, March 18.—Lieutenant Commander Colin Moyers, retired, late commander of the submarine M-3, one of England's super-submersibles, was arrested today and arraigned in Bow street charged with with saving and retaining in his possession, contrary to duty, certain plans relating to submarines Z-1 and P-1, two of the British mystery submersibles.

Commander Mayers was remanded to jail until March 24. Bail was refused, the police stating that the case was one of "considerable gravity."

Davis Says Big Coal Strike Impossible

Shows Partial Agreements by Lewis Shackle Union

WASHINGTON (FP) — Secretary of Labor Davis has given out information of regional settlements between the United Mine Workers and bituminous operators in Central Pennsylvania, and of negotiations for settlement in other fields outside the central competitive field of western Pennsylvania and Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, to prove his belief that there will be no extensive coal strike this year.

Coal operators' representatives in Washington are inclined to agree with Davis that a strike will be avoided.

Miners Divided.

As seen by these operators, the Illinois field is likely to sign up with the union, due to the large proportion of Illinois tonnage consumed by the railroads in that area and hence not subject to southern competition.

This narrows the real struggle to Ohio and western Pennsylvania, whose product is in competition with the southern bituminous output. Yet some of the big companies in western Pennsylvania are also operating in West Virginia, and vice versa. The Consolidation Coal Co., for instance, reports record-breaking production and profits for 1926. It made $10.37 a share on its $10,000,000 preferred stock as compared with $2.25 the previous year. Its output in 1926 was 15,058,000 tons. Several of its properties are in western Pennsylvania, where the claim is made that wages must be reduced to meet West Virginia competitive coats.

To Wreck Union.

J. E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, in a circular letter has predicted that the Illinois and Indiana operators will sign up with the union either on the Jacksonville scale basis or on a $6 a day basis with present rates for tonnage miners. He assumes that there will be a strike in western Pennsylvania and Ohio, and says: "Apparently most of the present union production in western Pennsylvania—60 per cent in this field is already independently mined —and in eastern Ohio will become independent of the union after April 1."

Confidential assurances have been given by the press by a cabinet member "close to Coolidge" that the strike will come off as scheduled, but that the administration believes it will not "affect coal prices to any extent." In other words, the administration expects to beat the miners in western Pennsylvania and in Ohio.

May Strike At Glace Bay.

GLACE BAY, N. S., March 18.—New labor troubles loomed in the Cape Breton coal mining region today. Members of the United Mine Workers of America announced their refusal to work under a new wage scale and members of the one big union demanded a closed shop. The new wage scale goes into effect tomorrow and meanwhile negotiations looking to an adjustment of the difficulties were in progress between union representatives and representatives of the Eastern Trust Company, operators of the collieries.

Secretary Of War To Visit Hayti; Does Not Expect To Be Barred

Secretary of War, Dwight F. Davis, sailed yesterday for the Panama Canal Zone. He said that he would stop off in Hayti, "if they don't think me desirable." Apparently referring to the exclusion of Senator King of Utah.

Observers here felt that there was little likelihood of Davis encountering trouble in Hayti as President Borno the "puppet ruler" of that country is known to be on extremely friendly terms with both the war and state departments of the U. S.

RUTHENBERG RECRUITING DRIVE IS LAUNCHED BY THE WORKERS PARTY

CHICAGO, Ill., March 18.—The Workers (Communist) Party of America is planning the biggest drive in the history of its existence to win new members. This is to be known as the Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive.

Every district thruout the country is mobilizing all its resources to secure the largest possible number of new members in a special Ruthenberg enrollment.

Drive Is Important.

The Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive is considered by the Workers (Communist) Party as the most important drive it has undertaken in a long time. The objective of the campaign is to appropriate for the Party, the traditions of Comrade Ruthenberg as the leader of the Party and as the outstanding revolutionary fighter in America today.

The Organization Department and the Agitprop Department of the Workers (Communist) Party are now elaborating details for the carrying on of the campaign. A special Ruthenberg Enrollment card, that is, a new membership application card is being gotten out. A political letter is being sent to all Party units on the history, significance,

UNION AND OPEN SHOPS VISITED BY AUSTRALIANS

4 Disputed Union Men Traveling Over Land

CHICAGO, March 18 (FP) — Breathless from a continuous round of banquets and luncheons given by chambers of commerce and employer associations ever since they landed in Vancouver, the Australian industrial delegation to the United States is intrenched for a week's stay in Chicago. Four of its members are employers nominated by the Australian employer associations and four of its members are labor men about whose eligibility a hot dispute is raging in Sydney and Melbourne, the principal Australian labor centers. Each of the labor members has been nominated by some Australian labor organization or other. The Australian government is paying the delegation's expenses.

"Conditions from the labor point of view are very different in America from those in Australia," remarks delegate J. G. Valentine, president, Queensland Trades & Labor council and secretary of the Queensland Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. This union embraces both engineers and firemen but not hostlers because in Australia the engine crews do their own engine wiping and preparing for the run.

All In Union.

"In Australia," he explained, "every worker, practically without exception, belongs to a union. In America practically nobody does in the basic industries and in many other industries the same seems to be true. In Australia employes deal with unions as a matter of course. In America it not always the case, so far as I can judge."

"My casual observation in Chicago indicates that there is an enormous amount of unemployment and misery in spite of the propaganda we hear in Australia about American prosperity."

Visit Many Places.

Not content with the official round of visits to selected open-shop establishments, Valentine called on Secy. E. N. Nockels of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Leland Olds, industrial editor of The Federated Press and other labor spokesmen and experts. He also expressed a desire to see the 100 per cent unionized Hart Shaffner & Marx clothing plant, which was not on the scheduled list of the delegation's itinerary. Swift & Co., pioneer in company unionism and welfare work as antidotes to unions, tendered lunch to the delegation Monday.

Industrial efficiency and mass production are the principal subjects under inquiry by the delegation.

Million Dollars Sapiro's Loot, Says Reed

Charge He Ruined Farmers By Flimsy "Cooperatives"

DETROIT, March 18.—American farmers have lost millions of dollars through the Sapiro plan of cooperative marketing, while Aaron Sapiro collected $1,000,000 in fees, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, charged in federal court here this afternoon in closing a defense plea for Henry Ford in the Ford-Sapiro million-dollar libel suit.

The losses to the farmers, the Missourian said, would be laid directly upon Sapiro. For this reason, Reed added, Ford asked the jury to find that Sapiro actually had exploited the American farmar.

When Reed finished, William J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent was called as the first witness.

Shields Ford

Cameron insisted that Ford did not always direct policy on the Independent, which was more jingoistic than Ford, and took a stronger attitude in opposition to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

During his summing up of the alleged Sapiro extortions, Ford's attorney stated that a "Jewish ring," composed of Sapiro, Governor Frank O. Lowden, a presidential possibility, Eugene Meyer, Jr., former head of the War Finance Corporation, and Robert H. Bingham, had attended a secret meeting in Chicago, in October, 1925, to arrange a program for a world farm group, to dominate agriculture.

"We will show that Bernard Baruch advanced $5,000 to this plan. Julius Rosenwald loaned them $15,000; Bingham gave $20,000; Sapiro himself gave $5,000," said Reed.

When Wm. Gallagher, Sapiro's attorney, objected that Lowden was not a Jew, Reed admitted it, and hurried on to more devastating charges.

In rapid order, he picture Sapiro's activities among the tobacco growers in Kentucky, potato growers in Minnesota and Idaho, wool growers in the northwest, tomato, prune and citrus growers of California.

"In Minnesota," said Reed, "the cooperative failed in less than a year, but Sapiro got a fee of $7,500. He had asked for $17,000," Reed added.

Short Lived Coop.

In Idaho, when the association failed, Reed said, Sapiro assigned his claim for fees to his law partner, who "duped the farmers and collected in the court." In California, the tomato association "lived less than one year."

Reed declared Sapiro sought to or-

BRITISH ENGINEERS' UNION FIRES BROMLEY FROM GENERAL COUNCIL

LONDON, March 18 (FP).—John Bromley, bitterly opposed by the miners for his attitude in the general strike, was forced by the executive of his union to resign from the general council of the British Trades Union Congress.

The executive of the Locomotive Engineers whom Bromley represented on the council, refused to accept the report of the council given at the recent general strike inquest. They blamed the council for the sudden end of the strike without guarantees against victimization from which railroad men have suffered ever since.

Bromley remains the secretary of his union. He claims that the decision of his executive does not represent the rank and file opinion. The incident is claimed as a victory for the left wing. Bromley was a British fraternal delegate to the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L. in 1926.

Ben Gold, With Nine Others Denied Bail

Schachtman's Spy Directly Aiding Frame-up

The exposure of the frame-up plot against leaders of the New York Furriers Joint Board was complete yesterday when Ben Gold, general manager of the Joint Board, Isadore Shapiro, its chairman, Sam Menchar, Jack Schneider and six others were denied bail when they appeared at the Nassau County Court House, in Mineola, L. I., to answer "not guilty" to charges of assault in connection with the Rockville Center strike case of last year.

These men are now in jail, victims of the right wing officials of the International Fur Workers' Union and the Special Committee of the A. F. of L., which has evidently decided to use this old case in order to carry out their vicious plans for putting the left wing leaders behind prison bars.

Get Active Men.

Workers who had absolutely no connection with this strike case, who could not conceivably have had any connection with it, have been arrested, on "John Doe" warrants, upon the "identification" of the International's tool, Bernard Basoff. It is obvious that men have been selected because they are the active and valuable union men whom the International wants to "get." Doubtless the International was, from the very beginning, instrumental in pressing this case against the left wing workers who fought so valiantly to win the strike.

Helped International.

Basoff, the betrayer, together with Leo Franklin and Morris Malkan, were arrested in Rockville Center during the strike on the complaint of a boss, and they were convicted of assault in a trial at Mineola. After the men were released on bail, Basoff, evidently hoping to gain his freedom, gave the International sworn statements that Ben Gold, I. Shapiro and S. Mencher were implicated in this case, and on his affidavits these leaders were arrested several months after he relased on bail. In the meantime a new trial was granted to Franklin and Malkan.

Since then Basoff has willingly stated anything the International wanted, "identified" anyone they wanted, and they have made every possible use of his lies. Within the past few days, "identifying" activities began anew, and he was seen every day in the fur market and at Joint Board headquarters with two detectives looking for those whom the International had marked as too useful to the left wing cause.

Hunting For Lefts.

On Tuesday of this week, Jack Schneider and Otto Lenhard were arrested; on Wednesday Oscar Melliff, Joseph Katz and Martin Rosenberg were taken. These workers, together with Franklin, Malkan, Gold, Shapiro and Mencher, were called to appear in Mineola this morning, on superceding indictments, to plead on the charge of assault which has been lodged against each one of them.

Schachtman Frame.

Altho all ten of them pleaded not guilty, the court refused to fix bail for them and they are still being held with no date set for their release. This is not due to Basoff's testimony alone: it is not even because of the frame-up of Joseph Schachtman, a frame-up planned by Oizer Schachtman, president of the International Fur Workers' Union, A. F. of L. vice-president Woll and by Edward McGrady the A. F. of L. organizer who announced two weeks ago that the Joint Board leaders would soon be in jail, and by all the reactionary union-smashing forces which are trying to destroy the fur workers' union and the cloak and dressmakers' union.

Hope To Jail Leaders.

They hope to put the left wing leaders out of the way for a while, thinking that they can then easily grab the union and force their leadership on the members. They do not care whom they persecute so long as they gain their own ends. They are slugging, killing, terrorizing in every way possible. They have no shot for the welfare of the workers.

It is only the solid ranks of the workers supporting the New York Joint Board that will succeed in foiling the plots of these enemies of the union.

People's Assembly Meets in Shanghai

Unions, Factories, Parties Elect Delegates as Fall of Nanking Is Imminent

SHANGHAI, March 18.—A People's Delegate Assembly is being organized to take over the government of Shanghai after the fall of the militarist regime.

Anticipating the capture of the city by the Nationalist troops, mill workers', students', teachers' and merchants' associations are actually electing delegates to the assembly. At a preliminary meeting held Saturday, which two hundred delegates already elected attended, a committee was appointed to draft a new constitution.

Unions, factories, public organizations and political parties will serve as the basis for representation, according to the proposed constitution, it is stated.

Back of this revolutionary movement are the trade unions, the left wing of the Kuomintang and the Chinese Communist Party. Several members of the executive committee have been directly nominated by the Communist Party.

Militarist Troops Desert.

SHANGHAI, March 18.—The desertions of large numbers of troops today has considerably weakened the position of the northern war lords. Although the reports of the capture of Nanking by the nationalists which were circulated yesterday are premature, the fall of China's ancient capital is imminent.

Fighting broke out in the streets of Nanking when seventeen hundred of General Chang Chung-Chang's men revolted and attempted to take the munitions depot. The rebellion was quelled with great brutality by the troops still loyal to the war lords. (Chong Chung-Chang is the Shantungese dictator who has been making an ineffectual attempt to stop the Nationalist drive against Shanghai).

Chang's Troops Retreat.

Another severe reverse was suffered by the war lords, when three generals of Sun Chun-Fangs, so-called "defender of Shanghai" deserted and joined the Nationalist armies. Sensing the desertion of Sun's generals, Chang's shantung troops retreated toward Nanking, leaving forces at Wukang and Sunkiang. These remnants of Chang's army face complete isolation and capture by Nationalist troops.

The desertions of Sun's generals and the troops revolts make the capture of Nanking certain. Nanking is a key position in the drive of the Nationalist armies and its fall probably means the capture of Shanghai by the Nationalists.

General Strike Call.

SHANGHAI, March 18.—Anticipating the fall of Shanghai, the general labor union today issued a communique calling a general strike to begin tomorrow afternoon and continue until the Nationalists occupy Shanghai.

The communique calls on workers to refrain from mob action and violence, and notifies the public that the strike is purely political in character, being an effort to show labor's sympathy with the Nationalist cause.

More than 13,000 workers are already on strike, and it is expected that another 250,000 will join them tomorrow.

Demand Release of Mme. Borodin.

PEKIN, March 18.—Charging that the three Soviet couriers seized by the Chinese war lords have been subjected to barbarous indignities, the Russian embassy has delivered another note of protest to the Peking government.

Demanding the immediate release of the Pamiat Lenina, Mme. Borodin and the three couriers, the Russian note asserts that the vessel sailed under false pretenses. White Russians in the employ of the war lords placed suspicious looking documents aboard the boat to afford a pretext for its seizure, the note declares.

Student Suicide In New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 18.—The student suicide wave struck New Orleans today, when Harold P. Bergeret, 27, a student at Tulane University, arose from his bed and shot himself to death.

The student's body was found in a bath-room, a pistol gripped in his right hand and a bullet hole through his head.

KELLOGG CARRIES HAYTIAN COMEDY TO LOGICAL END

Kellogg, Moralist, Raps Kellogg, Imperialist

WASHINGTON, March 18 (FP)—Secretary of State Kellogg is unable to persuade his puppet president of Hayti, Louis Borno, to permit Sen. King of Utah to land in Hayti to investigate the American rule of that republic. As Kellogg has only to raise a finger and the people of Hoyti, now intimidated by American bayonets and machine guns, would throw Borno to the sharks in the bay, Kellogg's helplessness is not taken as genuine. The incident is already breeding trouble.

King An Exeluder.

This joke on King, who had insisted on the sovereign rights of small republics, and who had approved the horring of radicals from the United States, left Kellogg in a hole. He knew the senator would raise a protest. He had Under-Secretary Grew cable Borno, asking him to reverse his order. But Borno either had a private tip that Kellogg did not mean it, or he felt that King's visit would endanger his life, and hence he must defy his boss. He stood pat.

Washington experts on precedent say that Kellogg is imitating John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who appointed a man to morally speak for Mr. Rockefeller in argument with Rockefeller's own railroad, the Western Maryland, begging the road to arbitrate with its locked-out workers. In that case Rockefeller, capitalist, won hands down from Rockefeller, the humanitarian moralist, and the lockout continued. Kellogg, moralist, hasn't a chance against Kellogg, dictator of machine guns in Hayti.

Arizona Also Has Its Gold Rush; Dripping Springs Latest Strike

WINKELMAN, Ariz., March 18.—Arizona today was in the throes of a gold rush that has brought hundreds of gold seekers into this vicinity during the past 24 hours.

The strike, which has been verified by James B. Guard, well known mining engineer, was made on cowboy claims in the Dripping Springs district, eight miles from here. The ore runs unprecedentedly $50 a pound, according to reports.

SENATORS RAISE EXCUSE TO STOP GRAFT PROBING

Part of Reed Committee Balks at Private Funds

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The Reed investigating committee will face a legal battle if it attempts to use private funds to impound Pennsylvania ballots, it was indicated here today.

Backers of senator-elect William S. Vare are expected to contend that private funds cannot be legally used to carry on a function of the government.

Don't Want to Probe.

Senatorial legal authorities were sharply divided upon the reported proposal of Senator Reed (D) of Missouri, to have members of the committee contribute money to send after questioned ballots of two Pennsylvania counties.

Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, holds the opinion that the Reed committee would be fully within its rights in financing the effort, while Senator Curtis (R) of Kansas is understood to take the opposite view.

Meanwhile Sergeant-at-arms David S. Barry of the senate was said to be prepared to refuse to go to Pennsylvania on funds that do not come out of the treasury.

The Reed committee has been unable to wrest from Senator Keyes (R) of New Hampshire, chairman of the audits and control committee, enough of the funds of over $30,000 to the credit of the committee, to carry on its Pennsylvania inquiry during the summer recess.

The committee's course will be mapped out here Saturday.

Complete International Merger of Film Makers; Eastman, Pathe, United

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 18.—Economies in the manufacture and distribution of kodak and motion picture film was seen today as the chief purpose of the merging of the Pathe cinema of France and the Eastman Kodak Company.

Charles Pathe, presidt of the vast French combine, stated in a cable to George Eastman that it was with the greatest pride he signed the papers coupling the two great film concerns. The two greatest names in the photographic industry will be centered under the title of Pathe-Kodak.

THEORETICALLY Sinclair is due to spend a minimum of one month in jail and pay a $100 fine. But there is little danger of such humiliation being heaped on one of the pillars of the community. The big oil thief is going to take a well-earned rest on his farm after the ordeal of a trial. It would not be a bad idea to get in touch with Harry Daugherty, A. B. Fall, Doheny and Col. Miller and throw a little party in Bermuda. It would break the monotony of life between trials and the immune patriots could philosophize on the ups and downs of life and the hurdles that are thrown in the way of honest citizens who take the capitalist system at its word.

THE Shanghai masses are ready to receive the Nationalist troops with a grand demonstration. The working class of the big city have declared a general strike to go into effect today. If a commissioner of public defense orders his headsmen to get busy this time, all the beheading will not be on one side. Thousands of northern soldiers in Shanghai have revolted and joined the Revolutionary cause. This is good news. Now for the fall and rise of Shanghai and the tip of the revolutionary boot to the imperialist powers.

Million Dollars Is Sapiro's Loot, Claims Henry Ford's Lawyer

ganize all the potato growers of Colorado into one organization. He said Sapiro tried to get Mortimer Stone, counsel for several local associations to bring in his groups of farmers.

Quarrel With Stone.

"Sapiro offered to split the organization fees with Stone," said Reed. "It didn't go through because the Colorado people wanted Stone to head it and Sapiro wanted to rule it himself. So they split."

Touching on the financial rewards, Reed told how in Colorado, Sapiro asked $810,000 for organizing a separate association of potato growers. This was refused Reed said, and Sapiro then asked $3,000. When this too was refused he added, Sapiro sued the association and got a judgment of $8,100 and costs.

Got Over Half.

In Oregon, Reed said, Sapiro asked $10,000 for organizing the fruit growers. The farmers thought this too much, Reed added, but compromised by paying Sapiro $5,500.

Sapiro spent the funds of his cooperative associations with a lavish hands, according to Reed's explanation to the jury. In Kentucky, Reed said, Sapiro took $48,500 of the farmers money for organizing burley leaf tobacco growers and $30,000 more for uniting the dark leaf tobacco growers with $22,800 more as counsel fees. Some of the latter sued to get the $20,000 fee back, Reed added, but lost.

In California, Reed said, Sapiro took $7,500 from tomato growers and scattered big money bills among his friends in the lemon growers association. One instance cited by Reed was the appointment of a $65 a month stenographer as a sales executive with a $6,000 a year salary.

The largest lump sum mentioned by Reed, as going into Sapiro's pockets, was $112,000. To this sum, Reed said, was paid Sapiro by the Tri-State Tobacco Growers Association in Kentucky. This included incorporation and counsel fees.

Stop Ford Trust.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Henry Ford lost a case before the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

LEGISLATORS CUT TEACHERS' WAGES TO DROP GAS TAX

Educators Organize to Pass Ricca Bill

ALBANY, March 18.—Coincident with the decision of Republican legislative leaders to drop the proposed gasoline tax which would bring into the State treasury revenue totaling $18,000,000 there is a great possibility of the thousands of teachers in the public schools of the state losing all chances of a decent increase in pay.

Easier to Be Rich.

The reason given by the State lawmakers for dropping the gasoline tax idea is that the estimated resources for the next fiscal year will be sufficient to keep the state government going.

At the same time to make sure of a comfortable surplus the proposal to cut $4,000,000 from the total appropriation of $18,500,000 carried by the so-called Friedsam bill for "adjusting teachers' salaries" is now being seriously considered.

Teachers Fight Bill.

Representatives of the thousands of New York teachers are making an active campaign to fight this proposal, and at the same time are urging the adoption of the Ricca bill which is aimed to override the New York City administration in increasing the pay of teachers.

Committee Urges Increase.

Salary increases for every member of the teaching and supervising staff of the public school system of Hunter College and the College of the City of New York, totalling more than $14,000,000 a year, were recently adopted by the Board of Estimate yesterday in a report submitted by Lincoln Cromwell, chairman of a citizens' committee which has been studying the demands of the teachers for higher pay.

The increases recommended by Cromwell's committee, officially designated as the "Mayor's Committee on Teachers' Salaries," are practically the same as those contained in the Ricca bill now before the State legislature.

Delay Action on Water Power Grab Bill

ALBANY, March 18.—Lack of votes caused the republicans to delay action on their water power bill when it came up for passage in the senate this afternoon.

Under the bill, a commission of five members would be created to investigate water power development and report back in 1928. This would delay any change in the present laws which enable republicans to hand over the rich resources of the state to the Andrew D. Mellon interests.

Should the republican bill pass the legislature, which is likely, Governor Smith is sure to veto it. Governor Smith, under the guise of "public development," hopes to bind the paper-selling contracts to the General Electric Company, whose vice-president Owen D. Young has led the "anti-Coolidge-President" campaign.

HILLQUIT STILL HAS BANK STOCK, UNION WANTS IT

No Restraining Order; Real Fight Next

The restraining order asked for by the New York Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers to prevent Morris Hillquit, acting in behalf of the reactionary officials of the International, from carrying on any more slight of hand tricks with the stock of the International Union Bank, was denied yesterday by Justice Nathan Bijur, in the state supreme court.

Wanted Bank Stock Back.

The Joint Board has asked the return of their bank stock and other stock which had been put into the hands of one of Mr. Hilquit's law clerks in the role of trustee, and which was later discovered to have been transferred to his name. Justice Bijur, in denying the Joint Board's application, stated that:

"Regardless of any other consideration, I find that no substantial rights of the plaintiff has been forfeited by the acts complained of".

Emergency Measure.

According to Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board:

"The restraining order which the Joint Board asked to prevent further transfer of its property until the case can be adjudicated in court was merely an emergency measure."

"That Judge Bijur has denied the restraining order simply means that in his opinion there is no immediate danger to the Joint Board of loss of its property. His decision does not mean that the case which will come up in court has been decided on its merits. Judge Bijur did not go into the merits of the case, so the Joint Board still has an opportunity to show in court how the property and stock that were offered as security for the loan were misused by Frederick F. Umhey, clerk in Morris Hillquit's office who was made trustee of the security at Mr. Hillquit's suggestion, and has transferred it to his own name in spite of Hillquit's agreement that no such action would be taken.

Will Not Be Hindered.

"As for the statement of the International that this decision will prevent the Joint Board from collecting funds with which to carry on its fight against the Sigman machine, it is clearly ridiculous. If an adverse decision were to be given even on the merits of the case, which we cannot now, that would not prevent the membership from paying dues and giving money to support the Joint Board."

International Kidnaps.

Hyman also condemned the action of the International in continuing its policy of forcing workers by intimidation and the use of gangsters to register at the International. "The workers of two shops were forced to go to the International today by gangsters who threatened them with iron bars for weapons," he said. "In the Holland and Fleckner shop at 259 Eighth avenue, a veritable riot was started so that women workers fainted with fright, and in the H and E Garment shop, at 22 West 15th street, workers were forced into taxis and driven to the International office to register. By such methods Sigman hopes to establish his authority over workers who have repudiated his leadership. It is my experience that workers who are forced to register with Sigman by terror or by fear of losing their jobs are all the more loyal to the Joint Board, which they consider the real representative of the workers".

Workers Held On Bail.

Joe Dimond and S. Anshor, pickets before the Arline Dress shop at 352 Seventh avenue were arrested yesterday morning upon complaint of Phillip Feinberg and Benny Margolas, who charged them with assault. They were held for March 23 under bail of $7,000.

The cases of Aaron Wortuns, Morris Rosenberg, and Louis Antonofsky, who were charged by Morris Katz with assaulting him on February 24 was heard in 6th district court and were held for the grand jury. These men were "identified" by Katz although Wortuns was under care of a physician at the time of his assault having been assaulted on February 22 by gangsters as he was entering his shop. The other men were equally innocent.

Informer Katz.

Although witnesses of the incident failed to identify the three men, Katz maintained in court that they were his assailants, and upon his statement the three were held.

The cases of Joseph Goretzky, manager of Local 35, Albert Castiglia, I. Cohen, Jack Braff, Sam Grossman, Anton Romanchuk, and Joseph Perlman, who were called to general sessions yesterday, were postponed until Friday. They are charged with misdemeanors growing out of the cloakmakers' strike and picketing activities.

COPS IN ALBANY TO BOOST BAUMES LAW ADDITIONS

Oppose Only Provision Making Them Study

Police Commissioner McLaughlin, District Attorney Joab Banton, together with scores of police officials and prosecutors from various parts of the state made a pilgrimage to Albany yesterday in an effort to tighten the provisions of the present Baumes law.

More than 20 bills recommended by the Baumes Crime Commission were heading for passage, and the added "prestige" of the New York officials helped the process along. While the assembly was hearing the various measures denounced as being attacks against the traditional rights of individuals, many of the bills were sliding through the senate with little difficulty.

Cruel Law.

The Baumes Law under its present working calls for the sentence to life imprisonment of any person who has been four times convicted of crime, the violation being at least in the class of a felony. The courts have interpreted in recent cases that sentence is obligatory on the part of the judge sitting in the fourth case.

As far as the New York City police department is concerned, all but two of the 40 proposals to "get criminals and prevent crime" has its support. Commissioner McLaughlin told the Cozes Committee at the hearing yesterday.

Police Won't Study.

The commissioner said his department was opposed to the bill which would compel police to attend training schools before they could be promoted, and the measure providing for control bureaus of criminal records in cities of more than 200,000.

"The so-called police education bill," complained McLaughlin, "would accomplish nothing in the way of raising the standards of police officers. It would, however, be the means of depriving the police force of the right kind of men. It would be a blow at the civil service system."

Merchants Approve.

Arthur M. Travis, representing the Merchants' Association of New York City, said his organization approved of the amendments to the present Various Baumes Law with the exception of the police education bill.

Assemblyman Esmond, vice-chairman of the Baumes Commission announced that the bill which would have revolutionized the probation system in New York City, will be amended to meet objections raised by judges.

Judge to Influence Jury.

Some of the amendments to the Baumes Law which are pretty certain to pass will call for the "tightening of the presumption of innocence now resting with the defendant," and for permitting judges to express their opinions on the case during the progress of the trial. Policeman on the basis of a minimum of two for each 1,000 residents, and in some localities for 250 residents, is also called for in the amendments to the present law.

Silent on Gambling Probe.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin returned today from Albany where he conferred with Governor Smith and refused to discuss reports that he contemplated more gambling raids on political clubs.

THE PARTY AND THE SUSTAINING FUND.

In every unit of the Party the comrades are taking up seriously the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund. The Party has undertaken to establish on a firm basis The DAILY WORKER as the collective monument to its dead leader. The Party has undertaken to give direction to the widespread grief of the workers, to turn their deep regard for the achievements of Comrade Ruthenberg into a channel that will bring concrete and valuable returns for the revolutionary movement. Inasmuch as Comrade Ruthenberg was the leader of our Party, the workers look to us and expect us to take the lead. We must not disappoint them. We must inspire them.

Units throughout the country are making it mandatory upon their members to become members and contributors to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund. It matters not how much the amount pledged as long as each comrade gives according to his means. It is up to each party unit to take up this matter and maintain a careful check-up on its membership so as to insure the maximum results. If our Party responds we can be sure that the workers generally will take the cue. The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund will win real mass support and The DAILY WORKER will have taken a long step forward toward financial stability.—BERT MILLER.

and meaning of Comrade Ruthenberg's revolutionary activities in which there is especially stressed his role in building the American section of the Communist International. A pamphlet dealing with Comrade Ruthenberg's contributions to the advancement of the interests of the American working class is being prepared by Comrade Jay Lovestone.

The following statement was made today by Jay Lovestone, the Acting General Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party:

"If ever we put all our best forces into a campaign to build the Party, we will now put even more into the present Ruthenberg drive to carry out the last wishes of our leader. 'Build the Party.' I feel sure that every district organizer, every subdistrict organizer, every section organizer and every member of every shop and street nucleus, realizes the pressing need of all of us working harder than ever and closing our ranks so that we can carry on in the spirit of our dead leader. I am confident that every class conscious worker should feel it the highest honor in his life as a member of the working class to join the party now. Especially during the period of reorganization to come back into the party now with a keener desire and stronger determination for Communist activities than ever before. The Ruthenberg Enrollment is the biggest thing now before the party."

Slogans For Campaign.

Photographs, articles, buttons, moving pictures, speakers' manuals, mass meetings, party membership meetings, all of these are to be resorted to in the great Ruthenberg Drive that opened on March 18th, and will last until July 9th, the day on which Comrade Ruthenberg was born.

Every national language fraction bureau, as well as the Young Workers League and Pioneers is being drawn closely into the drive.

Among the slogans in the Ruthenberg Recruiting Campaign are the following: "Every Member Get A Member" "Double The Party Membership" "Let's Fight On" "Get A Ruthenberg Member" "Build The Party" "Let's Close Our Ranks" "Ruthenberg Died Building The Workers Cause—Communism; Build The Workers (Communist) Party".

Organize Memorial Library.

The national Ruthenberg Memorial Library is now being organized. Comrade Ruthenberg, on his deathbed, turned over to the party his entire library on Marxism, Leninism and the labor movement. This library will be used as the basis for the development of the Party National Ruthenberg Memorial Library.

Warren, O., Memorial For Ruthenberg

WARREN, O., March 18.—A Ruthenberg Memorial meeting will be held by the Warren Section of the Workers (Communist) Party at the Hippodrome Hall, Sunday, March 20th, 2 P. M.

Ruthenberg along with multitudes of workers and will express ourselves with the pledge to carry on the work of unswerving devotion of the working class to which our great leader fought and struggled till his last breath."

DETROIT WOMEN MOURN RUTHENBERG'S DEATH.

DETROIT, Mich., March 18.—The Detroit Women's Educational Circle has adopted the following resolution on the death of C. E. Ruthenberg: "We mourn the loss of C. E. Ruthenberg and shall perpetuate his memory by working for the cause to which he gave his life."

Basso Picks Out Three More For Arrest

Gold Holds Green Guilty For Stool Pigeon Work

Three more fur workers, marked by the reactionary International officials for persecution, were arrested yesterday, on John Dee warrants, upon "identification" of Bernard Basso, the right wing tool who has so far caused the arrest of 5 other workers in connection with the well-known Mineola strike case.

Victims of Right Wing.

Oscar Milleaf, Joseph Katz and Martin Rosenberg were those taken into custody today, and with Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, I. Shapiro, S. Mencher, Jack Schneidor, and Otto Lenhard, they will be called for a hearing at Mineola today.

That this wholesale arrest of innocent workers is being instigated by the International officers is evident from the fact that those whom Basoff is "identifying" have absolutely no connection with the Mineola case, which was pressed originally by a Rockville Center contractor who declared his shop had been damaged during the strike by members of the union.

The workers now being arrested on Basoff's charge are among the most active union members and are those whom the International is anxious to put behind prison bars in order to carry on its union-smashing campaign.

Basoff, with two detectives, is seen constantly in the fur market nowadays, waiting to take into custody the next worker whom the International wants to make its victim.

Gold Protests.

Protest against this outrageous and illegal procedure was made yesterday in a letter sent to President Green of the American Federation of Labor by Ben Gold, general manager of the Furriers Joint Board.

Holds Green Guilty.

This communication holds Green directly responsible for this campaign of persecution and provocation and for the resultant criminal brutalities of the police who beat Jack Schneider, after his arrest on Tuesday; and also beat Philip Klapberg, an operator who was arrested on Wednesday after he had been attacked by the right wing thugs. Klapberg was left unconscious, lying in a pool of blood in the police station for several hours.

Green Doesn't Care.

"Brother Green, honorable president of the American Federation of Labor," says Gold's letter, "the blood of the fur workers whose only crime is that they have dared to choose a Communist leadership, may be worthless to you. These fur workers, because they have the courage to support loyally their leaders, who happen to disagree with your methods and your policies, apparently may, according to you, be hounded by the police and slaughtered by thugs and gangsters.

Don't Expect Green's Help.

"Please don't misunderstand me. I am not writing to you about the cruelties suffered by the fur workers because I expect you to use your office and authority to stop these outrages. After all is said and done, what does it matter to you and Brother Matthew Woll and your other appointees if several fur workers become crippled for life, as long as this helps you to achieve your purpose?

Remember Green's Treachery.

"But the Joint Board, and I, as its manager, we do concern ourselves with the lives and welfare of the fur workers. Permit us to assure you that this whole procedure, initiated by you and your committee—the attempts to demoralize our union, the expulsion of our locals and our active members, the brutal treatment of innocent fur workers—all of this will be deeply engraved in the minds and hearts of thousands of fur workers, and will never be forgotten by them.

"So far, you have succeeded in giving these fur workers the bitter taste of your policies. We congratulate you. You may continue with these activities, if you so desire. The labor movement will soon awaken to the true meaning of your policies and methods. And you prattle about the principles, traditions and aspirations of the American Federation of Labor! What is coming next, Brother Green, venerable president of the great American Federation of Labor?"

Verdict Shows Fear Of Police Frame-Up Makes Man Cut Dead Woman

Frank Travia, 42, of Brooklyn, was yesterday acquitted by a jury in County Judge Taylor's court in Brooklyn, on a charge of murdering Mrs. Anna Frederickson.

The prosecution attempted to prove that Travia had forced the woman to inhale gas. Travia insisted that she had died accidentally, and that he dismembered the body and attempted to throw it in the East River because he feared he would be charged with her murder.

Travia was re-arrested as he was leaving the courtroom today on a charge of mutilating a human body. He is to be arraigned tomorrow.

COPPER MINERS CHALLENGE BOSS TO DEBATE WAGE

Reorganized Union In Campaign for Raise

BUTTE, Mont. — The Anaconda Copper Mining Co., is challenged by its miners to send speakers to a mass meeting in the Butte high school auditorium Sunday, March 27 to engage in a public debate. The question put by the man is: Resolved that the mine workers of Butte are entitled to an increase in wages of $1 a day.

Reorganization by the St. Paul convention of the International Union of Mine Mill & Smelter Workers and the elimination from union office of Charles Moyer and his gangs have stimulated activity of the union in metal mining centers all over the country.

Easy For Company.

The present rate for metal miners in Butte is $4.75 a day, not enough to maintain a family. The wage raise to $5.75 a day would take less than 10 per cent of the announced profits of the corporation.

"If we are mistaken in our contentions that the Anaconda can afford to pay the $1 n day increase," the executive board of the workers declares, "then the company can afford to hire the best economists and orators in the country to prove against spokesmen from our own midst that we are wrong.

Argues With Guns.

"This would be much cheaper and more humane than to have their gunmen kill our pickets as the Anaconda lead. If the A. C. M. dodges this challenge it is because their only argument is force and violence."

The $1 a day raise would mean $2,000,000 extra to the total yearly wages paid to Butte miners.

PHILADELPHIA, March 18. The new million dollar sports arena which is to be built here, and which Tex Rickard is interested in, will be known as the "Philadelphia Madison Square Garden."

TRENTON, N. J., March 18.—Edward Lubreske Jr., a cripple, was held in the county jail here today on a charge of atrocious assault and battery made by his stepfather, Rhinehardt Martin, of 153 Houston Avenue, Trenton, who alleged that Lubreske fired three shots at him in their home last night. Lubreske denied the charge. Martin said Lubreske shot at him during a quarrel.

FASCISTI MAKE VAIN THREATS TO PREVENT SORMENTI MEETING

Announcement that a huge mass meeting to protest the deportation of Enea Sormenti, active in the Italian labor movement, would be held at the Philipsburg Hall, Yonkers, Sunday, has brought forth threats from various fascist groups that they would prevent the meeting.

For the past few days the Yonkers papers have been trying to terrify the local populace with the "record" of Sormenti and Carlo Tresca, announced as the principal speakers at the meeting.

Tresca, radical journalist, and editor of "Il Martello," served one year in Atlanta in 1923 on the charge of publishing a birth control advertisement in his paper. It was well-known at the time, however, that the persecution of Tresca was inspired by fascist agents in this country who had become exasperated with Tresca's agitation against the rule of Mussolini.

Threaten To Stop Meeting.

Fascist henchmen in Yonkers declare that the meeting will "positively not be held on Sunday," in spite of assurances from Public Safety Commissioner Cameron that there will be no official interference.

FULL TREASURY BRINGS CHANCE TO LOWER TAXES

But Mellon Wants More For Debt Juggling

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The government will close its books for the fiscal year on June 30th with a treasury surplus of more than $500,000,000, it was announced today by Secretary Andrew W. Mellon.

The enormous surplus is accounted for in part by heavy payment of income taxes on March 15th, which are now estimated roughly at $380,000,000, or about $80,000,000 more than for the same period a year ago.

May Cut Tax.

While the general expectation prevails that the new congress meeting in December will write a new tax reduction bill, Secretary Mellon declined today to predict that the surplus will be used to lower taxes, intimating it could just as well be applied to reducing the public debt.

Income tax payments for the present period demostrated conclusively to treasury officials the enormous revenue producing power of the present tax law, and Mellon is inclined to believe that the law is imposing no unbearable burden upon business generally.

Cal Needs Money.

Congress, however, is almost unanimously set upon further tax reduction. A tax bill was stayed off in the session just ended because of administration opposition to attempting it in the short session.

Refunding operations during the past ten months have resulted in considerable saving of interest. A total of $1,146,000,000 of second liberty bonds, bearing 4¼ percent, have been retired in favor of an equal amount of 3¼ percent five-year treasury notes. The rest of the second issue will be called in November.

Beet Field Workers Find Price Rigged For Them by Bosses

(By Worker Correspondent.)

DENVER, Colo., March 18. The sugar companies and growers of beets fix the labor price for the men who have to do the work in the beet fields here. The men working in the beet fields are not organized yet. Five years to take what they are given as agreed on between the factories and the growers.

Mexican Mexicans and their families have to do the beet work in Colorado. Mr. Ise tells me that a lot of the children of the Mexicans have to help out their fathers in order to help make a living. In the late fall when the Mexican children come into town after being out working with their parents all fall they are away behind in their grades in school and the school board has to have special teachers to get about 300 children up in their grades.

The cause of all is that they do not have enough to eat and then they are overworked in the beet fields. My boy says he would not work in the beet fields for the prices they have agreed on.

There are beet growers right around where we live, 7 miles out of Denver.

Chicago "L" Wreck.

CHICAGO, March 18.—Fifteen passengers, including several women, were badly injured in an elevated train collision late yesterday. The 500 or more passengers in the different coaches of the train were panic stricken, many trying to climb out of the cars onto the tracks of the elevated. The crash occurred when a crowded train bound north from the loop struck an empty southbound train. Three of the cars carrying the passengers were derailed.

They Hate To Spend It.

BOSTON, March 18.—Three million and one half dollars yearly is the average cost of snow removal in the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn and The Bronx, Elmer C. Goodwin, chief engineer, department of street cleaning, New York City, told delegates to the Institute of Public Service, which opened today at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 18.—Fed by torrential rains the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers went on a rampage today, causing traffic tie-ups on highways and railroads, and driving many families from their homes. Considerable damage was reported.

GALESBURG, Ill., March 18.—The name of Earl Main, 17, Williamsfield high school junior, today was added by authorities to the list of student suicides.

Main, who was said to have been moody at times, was found shot to death, a .22 calibre rifle beside his body.

LONDON, March 18.—A proposal to abolish British air forces made by Arthur Ponsonby, former cabinet member in the Labor government, was defeated last night.

LEGAL SHARKS WRITE APPEAL FOR SINCLAIR

Judge Must Sentence to Jail On Four Counts

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Convicted on four counts charging contempt of the United States Senate, Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire oil magnate and sportsman had his attorneys perfect their appeal to a higher court.

A jury in the supreme court of the District of Columbia found the oil man guilty last night after deliberating eight hours and ten minutes. The law carries a mandatory penalty of one month to one year in the District of Columbia jail and a fine of $100 to $1,000.

To Supreme Court.

Sentence will be pronounced by Justice William Hitz, who presided at the trial, within four days, or as soon as the defense attorneys have prepared their appeal to carry the case to the District Court of Appeals. Sinclair's counsel, have asserted they will fight the case to the United States Supreme Court.

Seldom Convict.

Sinclair's conviction is the first on record in federal courts for contempt of the senate since 1795. The case grew out of his refusal to answer certain questions before the senate oil committee, on March 22, 1921, bearing upon his negotiations with former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall for the Teapot Dome, Wyoming, naval oil reserve lease of April 7, 1922.

WEEPAH STARTS STOCK GAMBLING ON LARGE SCALE

WEEPAH, Nev., March 18.—With mining operations in this vicinity confined to the mad burrowings of prospectors in adjacent hills, Weepah today found itself in need of some organization to warn miners not to throw down their lunch buckets and head for the scene of the famous gold strike.

Word has gone out that miners would do well to stay away from Weepah until the boom is further advanced and the mining takes on a larger scope.

Live In Tents.

Although additional tents have been added to the none too adequate housing facilities of Weepah and gold seekers continue to throng into the settlement, Weepah, to date, is marking time—awaiting developments.

Paper activity, however, is tremendous, claims are being turned over at an astonishing rate. In Tonpah and other cities, organizations and companies are being formed. Stock is being printed and the country, is appears, will soon be able to purchase mining stock in any number of newly-launched mining endeavors.

Out of Work Three Months; Stole Buns Worth Forty Cents

By P. SEBASIAN.

(Worker Correspondent.)

WILMINGTON, Del., March 18.—At ten o'clock this morning a "robber" was brought into the police court of this city. His name I did not get, but you could tell that he was a very dangerous person.

He was dressed in rags, his feet were out of his torn shoes, in fact, you could see his misery and overworked body by looking at him.

What was the charge? A bakery owner accused him of stealing two dozen cinamon buns worth forty cents. In answer to the judge's question, if he was guilty or not, he answered, "Yes, I was hungry, my wife and three children were hungry for many days. I was compelled to take those cinamon buns so I could save my family from dying of starvation. I couldn't find a job for the last three months."

He was held in $500 bail and told the case would be brought to trial later. Who is going to bail this poor man out? That was unmaterial to the judge and of course the man will stay in jail. I don't know how long. But as long as he stole he must be punished, that is the law!

ChicagoYoung Workers Learn Public Speaking

This coming Sunday there will be a short debate on the question: "Resolved that Communism is a Menace to the American people." Comrade Gurtz is to take the affirmative and Comrade Rosenberg the negative. In addition to the debate there will be talks by Comrades Stevens, Davis and Shapiro on youth subjects.

TAMMANY RUNS ST. PATRICK'S DEMONSTRATION

Thousands joined the Irish Nationalists in the celebration of St. Patrick's Day yesterday. More than 20,000 men and women marched in a Fifth avenue parade which was reviewed by high officials of the Catholic Church and public officials of various grades of prominence and distinction.

The pageant was followed by numerous celebrations by Irish societies throughout the five boroughs of Greater New York.

Churchill To Fore.

Justice Thomas W. Churchill of the Supreme Court was grand marshall of the procession, which was sponsored by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Friends of Irish Freedom, and kindred other organizations.

At a luncheon of the New York Rotary Club at the Waldorf a message was read from William T. Cosgrave, President of the "Irish Free State."

By Tammany Hall.

The Tammany faction of the Irish Nationalists engineered the present display of national fervor. Eamonn de Valera, now in New York presumably in connection with a lawsuit, was very much out in the cold as far as the celebration was concerned.

The St. Patrick's Day parade has developed into an annual political March Gras at which the Tammany politicians exhibit themselves to the Irish voters with an eye to the forthcoming election.

Catastrophe Threatens Prince Carol; May Lose Income and Go to Work

PARIS, March 18.—Queen Marie of Jugo-Slavia is to attempt the role of peacemaker between King Ferdinand of Rumania, her father, and Prince Carol, her brother, according to information reaching Prince Carol.

There have been some intimations to Prince Carol that unless he accepts the conditions offered him—the abandonment of Mme. Lupescu—his allowance may be cut off.

"He'll take a less expensive place in the country and get along without servants altogether," said Mme. Lupescu today. "I can go to work. I have worked before and I can do it again."

Prince Carol confessed he hasn't considered the possibility of having to go to work.

"What could I do?", he queried. The correspondent being tactful withheld reply.

FERNANDO DE NORONHA, Brazil, March 18.—Major Sarmento Beires, the Portuguese aviator, who is planning to fly around the world in 90 days, arrived off the island of Fernando De Noronha, northeast of the coast of Brazil, at 10.45 o'clock this morning, having crossed the Atlantic Ocean from the Bissagos Islands, Bolama, Portuguese Guinea.

Workers School Grows In Paterson

PATERSON, N. J., March 18.—To meet the rapidly growing demand for its courses, the Workers' School of Paterson is adding several new courses to its curriculum, it was announced yesterday.

A class in Marxian economics as well as classes in advanced English have been added. The students represent a variety of trades as well as varying political opinions.

Classes are held at 3 Governor St.

Dr. Cook Released.

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 18.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, former Arctic "explorer," was granted his freedom today from Leavenworth penitentiary.

Judge James C. Wilson, sitting on the federal bench here, extended leniency to the famous physician, explorer and oil promoter, who was found guilty in 1923 of using the mails to defraud and was sentenced to fourteen years and nine months in prison.

SIGMAN TRIES TO PRISON GORETZKY TO SEIZE LOCAL

that he sign a statement accusing Goretzky of illegal acts.

Out of Sigman promised the workers that if they signed such affidavits they would be freed; but those who were fooled in this way and yielded to Sigman's persuasions are still in prison just as all the rest of Judge Rosalsky's victims are.

Full of Gangsters.

Local 38 is Sigman's own local, and that explains his particular interest in it. Before a left wing administration was elected, this union contained all the gangsters with whom Sigman terrorized the rest of the membership—during the Joint Action Committee fight in 1925, for instance.

Too Much For Own.

Corruption was so thorogoing in this local, that even the Jewish organ of the right wing had considered exposing it, so its editor acknowledged. This acknowledgement, however came only after the left wing administration had published the result of an expert audit of the local's books, and the rights were trying to defend themselves by saying they knew of the situation and were correcting it.

Italians Will Meet.

A mass meeting of Italian workers to protest against the use of injunctions by the reactionary officials of Local 89 has been called for Monday, March 21 and will be held in the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th St., instead of at Webster Hall, it was announced today.

A series of injunctions secured by Luigi Antonini, manager of Local 89 and henchmen of Sigman, against officers of the Joint Board and chairladies of large shops have caused a general wave of protest among Italian workers, and the meeting has been called for general discussion of this situation. The meeting will be conducted in Italian and English.

Morality Minor Issue Says Anderson As He Attacks Bad Grammar

"It's impossible to be immoral anyway", said Sherwood Anderson, noted novelist, on his return here from a sojourn in Europe. "The only salvation for sound immorality is to restore long skirts," said Anderson. "Unimaginative people need something to work their imaginations on and the long skirts would furnish the trick."

Asked his views regarding censorship of novels, Anderson said ownership should be applied only to bad grammar and poor style.

NEGRO WORKERS ON STRIKE FOR LAST 24 WEEKS

Movie Operators Will Fight to Win

The motion picture operators of the LaFayette Theatre, 132 St. and Seventh Ave., who have been striking for the past 24 weeks are still fighting and are determined to continue until they win. The theatre is in the heart of the Negro section of Harlem and the strikers are all Negro workers.

"The boss refuses to accept the union shop," said one of the strikers when interviewed. "The wages we received before we went on strike was $25 for a fifty hour week. Many times we had to work an extra midnight show without any extra pay.

"But the boss has lost some of his patrons on account of the strike. So he is now showing that he is weakening and is giving up his stubborn stand. We will continue our strike until we win."

The Commune Lives

The graves of the Communards of Paris in Pere Lachaise have been draped with red by the French Communist Party—the bearer of their tradition of heroic revolutionary struggle—on the fifty-fifth anniversary of their seizure of power in the name of the workers.

The Communards raised aloft the banner of the working-class and that banner waved for seventy days—long enough to prove that the workingclass has the will to power, the strength to take it and the courage and ability to construct a state form suited to its needs.

It is true that the revolutionary state power of the workers which later made possible the glorious victory of the Russian masses appeared in the Paris Commune only in an embryonic form. But its ultimate development and the mighty role it had to play were clear enough for Marx and Engels to point out unerringly to the world's workingclass the form their struggle for power must take and impossibility of victory without the destruction of the capitalist state and the erection of a working-class government on its ruins.

The Commune made many mistakes but these mistakes we remember today only that we may not repeat them. In the absence of a disciplined Communist party, in a period when capitalist development in France was still in its childhood, surrounded by enemies, with no alliance with the peasantry forming the great majority of the population, it was impossible for the Commune to hold and extend its power.

There was weakness and vacillation within the leadership of the Commune. it hesitated to take the necessary steps to break the resistance of the rulers such as taking control of the financial apparatus. It was too much on the defensive.

But the Communards formed the first government of the workingclass, they defended it with arms in their hands and they died that the revolution might live.

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics stands today voicing with millions of throats the challenge that the Commune hurled to capitalism only with thousands.

"The spectre of Communism is haunting Europe," wrote Marx and Engels into the Communist manifesto in 1848. With the rise of the Paris Commune the spectre took solid form nor did the crushing of the Commune by the combined forces of French and German reaction lay the ghost.

It is no ghost that walks today giving the capitalist rulers endless nightmares but the living embodiment of the class struggle in the brains and muscles of hundreds of millions of workers and peasants in the imperialist and colonial countries.

New China bears the stamp of the Commune as does Soviet Russia and as in the Commune the youth of the revolution is in the vanguard.

March 18, 1927, finds the classic form of the state power of the masses organized in Shanghai and in the Soviet Union it leads 150,000,000 people inhabiting one-sixth of the earth's surface.

The Communards did not fight and die in vain. They live in the workers and peasants who are carrying on their task and in the Communist International—the leader of the world revolution.

Lenin, born the year before the rise of the Commune, who lived to build the greatest monument of all to the heroes who lie in Pere Lachaise, said that:

"The cause of the Commune is the cause of the social revolution, of the complete political and economic liberation of the workingclass, the cause of the proletariat of the entire world. And in this sense it is immortal."

The Coal Miners Face a Fight

Every day brings additional proof that the United Mine Workers of America, after three years of steady encirclement by non-union fields, at the expiration of its contract March 31. is faced with a fight for life.

Those who know the leadership of the UMWA will not find it strange that John L. Lewis and his fellow officials have sounded no warning of danger nor made any preparations for an organization drive in the non-union fields which alone can save and build the union.

The Ohio operators have stated that they will deal with the union only on the basis of a wage cut, there are indications that Illinois and Indiana operators will insist on a wage cut or a modification of the Jacksonville contract that will mean the same thing, the western Pennsylvania operators show plainly their intention to destroy the union and in eastern Pennsylvania Lewis has agreed to a continuation of work pending negotiations which means a defeat for the miners.

The national agreement for the central competitive field on which all other agreements were based, and which the miners fought years to obtain, is being cut to pieces.

Surrounded by non-union fields the UMWA cannot fight successfully the tremendous power of the operators. It must either organize decisive sections of the non-union fields or accept, perhaps after isolated struggles, much poorer terms than are contained in the Jacksonville agreement. The process of straggling the union with non-union mines will then continue. It is a mathematical certainty that unless an organization campaign is made the chief weapon against the coal barons that the union will be beaten in negotiations, greatly weakened and finally destroyed.

The program of the "Save the Union" bloc headed by John Brophy is the program that will beat the coal barons. It means that the union shall take the offensive, bring into its ranks at least 100,000 miners in West Virginia, Kentucky and western Pennsylvania, strike if necessary to prevent a wage cut and the worsening of working conditions.

Outside of the UMWA the left wing must and will do all in its power to put the full force of the labor movement behind the miners.

Ruthenberg the Leader of Negro Workers as Well as White Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

C. E. RUTHENBERG, because he was a leader of the working class, stood out also as an uncompromising champion of the rights of Negroes, of whom the overwhelming majority are workers. Ruthenberg was not a race leader. He was a class leader, struggling for the emancipation of the workers of all races.

Ruthenberg's teachings and his leadership in the American working class struggle will be more appreciated by Negroes and workers of other races in the days ahead, as they become more conscious of their own class interests and unite for the class fight.

A race leader is not necessarily a class leader. In fact, exactly the opposite is too often the case. This is especially true of the Negro race, where the leaders are usually those who have achieved so-called "success" under the present social system. This "success" usually means getting control of property or rising in some profession. The Negro business man finds a cleavage developing between himself and the Negro worker. The same is also true of other middle class Negroes who develop the attitude of middle class whites toward the workers of both races.

Thus race leadership often clashes with class leadership, which has no interests separate and apart from those of the workers. Only race leadership that grows out of the working class mass does not come into collision with class leadership.

The writer of the column entitled "The Week" in The Defender, the Negro weekly published in Chicago, pays quite a tribute to Negro workers in reviewing the incident of the successful fight made by John F. Raison, a Negro, in forcing the board of education at Toms River, Berkeley township, New Jersey, to admit his ten-year-old son to the local public school.

The father pointed out that his son, Frank, had been attending the Toms River school for the last two years. On February 1, last, Frank and 21 other Negro children were taken out of the Toms River school and moved to a school established in a Negro church at Bushwick. This church building has walls without plaster, as pointed out in The DAILY WORKER yesterday, it retains moisture, is cold and damp, poorly heated and unsanitary, and drinking water there is kept in an unsanitary galvanized pail.

The writer in The Defender, in speaking of the fight that was made, declared:

"You should have been glad that there were men and women of your race in that community with backbone enough to refuse to send their children to the 'Jim Crow' school house. They said they'd keep them at home first. And they did. They defied the truant officers to act.

"Humble, hard-working wage-earners, were the parents who made this bold stand. Not a 'leading Negro' among them. But they had too much respect for themselves and too much love for their children to let them be humiliated and shunted off to a tumble-down, ramshackle school house, while the white children enjoyed the fat of the land.

"Whenever you see a firm stand like that taken, look for just such hard working, plain living folks behind it. Don't start looking for any of your 'big leaders'. Youll waste too much time in the search."

But the same issue of The Defender, that contains this eulogy of Negro workers, also contains an extraordinary display given to the campaign mass meeting held by "Big Bill" Thompson recently at the Eighth Regiment Armory in Chicago. Thompson is the republican candidate for mayor. He has a long line of Negro "leaders," as well as white "leaders," old party politicians all, in his retinue.

The "leaders" who are denounced by The Defender, in New Jersey, are applauded, and all have their names published, in Chicago. Yet they are no different. Thompson is a crafty white politician, whose slogan in the primaries was "America First," the pet cry of all the open shoppers. Thompson has supporting him such Negro politicians as Oscar DePriest, Louis B. Anderson and other lawyers who have been elected to the city council, where they have usually voted anti-labor, for the simple reason that they are allied with anti-labor interests, that plunder the wnrkers of all races.

Let the Negro workers of the nation, and white workers as well, take a lesson from the Negro wage earners of Toms River, New Jersey, who waged their own fight. Probably without knowing it, but just as effectively, nevertheless, they were waging the struggle of their class.

When the writer in The Defender says that, "The white children enjoy the fat of the land," he is not entirely correct.

Go into any working class district, in any large city, and the public school conditions approximate those to be found in the Negro neighborhoods. The school buildings are usually old, with plenty of portables scattered about, the facilities are of the worst, the sanitary conditions bad. It is generally accepted for the children of the working class, as well as Negro children, that "anything is good enough for them."

Go into the middle class districts, or the neighborhoods of the rich, and the school conditions immediately change. There the best conditions are to be found.

The struggle for better public schools has always fallen on the shoulders of labor, just as the original establishment of the public school system was effected by the growing strength of the workers. But progress was not achieved by looking for "leaders" among the capitalists, either big business men or their political agents.

If Negro workers in other sections of the land learn the lesson of the Negro wage-earners of Toms River, New Jersey, they will turn instinctively against the so-called "leaders" of their own race, unless they are working class leaders. Those "leaders" who try to lure them into the ranks of the capitalist political parties are their worst enemies. DePriest and Anderson are their enemies as well as "Big Bill" Thompson, who has never tried to lift the condition of the great masses of Negro workers any more than white workers, because to do so would seriously affect the capitalist social system that he supports.

Ruthenberg understood the necessity, not of offering a hand-picked leadership to the Negro workers, but of awakening the Negro workers to a realization of their class position in society and waging the class struggle to win their way to victory.

Thus, in the great Negro neighborhoods of America's great cities, there should spring up the demand for the labor party. Ruthenberg always saw in the labor party a unifying instrument, not only for the workers and farmers, but for workers of all nationalities and races. Ruthenberg was a class leader in this drive toward unity, understanding alike, because he was a Communist, the problems of the Negro as well as the white workers.

SOMETHING GOOD OUT OF VIRGINIA

By WM. PICKENS.

IT seems that the "Angry"-Saxon Clubs of Virginia have not been quite able to enroll the whole state in their program for unconditional white superiority, judging from what we have just observed and heard in the city of Roanoke. They have a just judge in Roanoke, and when a white lawyer carelessly used the word "nigger" in a court trial, that judge as carelessly remarked: "Contempt of court,—ten dollars fine, sir!"—That's good: as frault to a client or to any other person in a civilised court, is an insult to the court.

A Frame-up Falls.

A scavengering "prohibition agent" turned up in the same court with a colored bell-boy whom he had arrested in an hotel as a "bootlegger." The judge inquired and found out that the circumstances were as follows: That said prohibition officer had taken a room at said hotel as a guest,—and as a private citizen had asked the servant, the bell-boy, to go out and get him a little needed "liquor," giving the bell-boy the money to get it with.

The Just Judge.

The boy, the servant of the hotel's guests, went and did as he was asked. Finding this to be the nature of the case, the just judge remarked to the arresting officer: "This boy is discharged—he was only a servant to do the bidding of the guests,—you, sir, are the really guilty party,—you are trying to get a fee by taking advantage of a servant boy. Get out of my court, sir, and I don't want such buzzards as you ever to darken the door of this room!"

Even Solomon could not have given a juster judgment than that.

Negro Assailant Freed.

And while I was in Roanoke the other day, what do you suppose I witnessed? You won't believe it, but a white man who had been badly beaten by a Negro, was fined $50 and costs, sent to jail because he could not pay the fine, and the Negro was exonerated. Of course, the evidence in the case showed that the Negro was justified, —but such evidence would not have saved a Negro who had beaten a white bully in Mississippi or Georgia. The Negro had really protected two white women, whom this white bully had met on the street and was beating up. The woman and her daughter had been accosted and one of them taken by the arm by the white, who had a little bad liquor in him. The woman slapped him,—whereupon the brutal white proceeded to administer a terrible beating to the two white women,—with other white men looking on, who did not interfere.

Punished White Bully.

The affair was occurring in front of the colored man's place of business, and that the white bystanders did not help the women, he did not dare to. But after a while the women broke away from the belaboring brute and ran into the colored man's place of business. The colored man now felt at liberty to protect his own place of business and shut the door on the pursuing bully, who promptly broke the door glass and came in, and was as promptly knocked back thru the opening by the colored man. The bully came back a second time, and made one great mistake he called the colored man's wife, who was busy phoning for police, a bad name. Then the colored brother, to use his own words, decided "to put the real KAGOOT on the white bully,"—whatever that may be.

A Woman Helps.

Anyhow the powerful brown arm knocked the bully back thru the opening a second time,—then reached out and pulled him back for so as to knock him thru it a third time. Meanwhile the older white woman picked up a wrench and mauled said bully over the head, so that he would be still for a little while.

The police came, arrested the Negro,—but talked apologetically to him, took him into court next morning, and, as we have said, the JUDGE, who really is a judge, proceeded to fine the white bully who had been soundly beaten up.

"Chivalry of Southern Manhood."

One will think "Of course,—under that evidence,—the Negro was protecting white women." But do you know that some of the bystanding white men came into court and lied: saying that the Negro attacked the white man without provocation,—that the bully had not bothered the women,—that the bully did not even break out that glass? And when the Negro was administering the beating to the brute, some of the men who had not helped their own women, shouted: "Why do we stand here and allow a nigger to beat up a white man like that?"

This is the "chivalry" of that stripe of "southern manhood." It seems to us that the chivalry was all under the hide of the Black Knight.

THE QUESTION

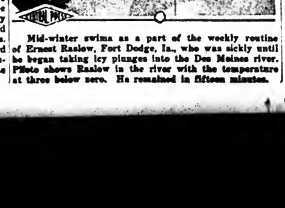
Should Marcus Garvey be released from jail?

THE PLACE

Seventh avenue between 125th and 135th streets.

THE ANSWERS

A. Warren Williams, federal employe, 278 West 119th street: "Yes. I don't believe he was given a fair trial. He was jailed through prejudice. He might have made some mistake in his real estate ventures but they were due to his over-anxiety for his movement. He surely did not defraud the people consciously."



A. M. Smith, 203 West 138th street, N. Y. U. student: "No. The government was justified in imprisoning Mr. Garvey for fraud. The basic principles of the Universal Negro Improvement Association are, in my estimation, unsound and impractical."

Robert Ford, 60 East 132nd street, investigator: "Yes. He meant well for the people. He violated the law without being aware of it. He certainly is sincere and enthusiastic about his cause."

L. C. Petterson, 313 West 139th street, bell hop: "Yes. Garvey was engaged in great work for the race. He has been punished enough for the mistake he made. If given an opportunity I'm sure he'll make good again."

Mrs. Dixon, West 138th street, domestic: "Yes. He wasn't given a fair trial. He did more for the colored people than any other race leader. The colored people should demand his release."

FOOTNOTES TO THE NEWS

By EUGENE LYONS

For the man of ordinary sense life has resolved itself into a struggle against the advertisemants. As he forces his way through the jungles of bill-boards, car-cards, newspaper spreads, sky-writings, etc., he knows that they are all the bunk. But how escape their attack? Advertisements shriek in his ears, pull at his coat-tails, flash on and off before his eyes. Sometimes he flatters himself that he has escaped their power. But one day he takes stock of his life and habits and discovers to his dismay that he is actually regulating his life by the bill-boards. Clothes, food, cathartics, thoughts are decided for him by the ads. Long after the things he learned in school books are forgotten he still remembers that Duteh Cleanser chases dirt. Long after the name of his first love will have escaped his memory he will still remember that Lucky Strikes are toasted.

The story of Ralph Jones is a case much in point. It is a tragic story and one that deserves to become an epic of the advertising age. Maybe several milleniuma hence, when the remains of this epoch will be dug up, his story will be revived as an ancient saga. Men will tell how way back in the advertising age the world was overrun with signs and slogans which blossomed from roof-tops and smudged the skies and filled men's books and papers; they grew in friezes around their homes and their trains; they gathered like moss on stones and fences; they cluttered the world so that there was scarcely room for anything else. They will recount how mankind, having conquered nature, was in turn conquered by advertisements.

And with such a prelude they will come to the story of Jones.

THE LAST MAN.

An Epic of the Advertising Age.

Jones was a sensible man, maybe touched by sophistication. He looked down upon the rabble. He despised their ways and their tastes. He sneered at their credulity. And he had good enough reason for his superior attitude, for he wrote advertisements for a living. Naturally he considered himself immune to their influence.

One morning, over his breakfast, it occurred to him just so that four out of every five have pyorrhea. It was a silly thought and I mean it was silly. He should think it. Then he laughed. Laughed out loud, as though he were an actor on a stage. He recalled that it was not a thought at all—merely the echo of one of those silly advertisements. So he turned to his newspaper, relieved. But almost the first news that struck him, in large bold type, was that four out of five have pyorrhea! This time he only smiled. The thing was distinctly annoying.

Later as he stepped to the street a great sign rushed to meet him. For a moment he was dazed, it came upon him so suddenly. It seemed to shout at him, and the words it shouted were: Four out of every five, etc. By this time quite angry, Jones rushed into a subway kiosk and soon he was jammed into a car. He could turn neither to right nor to left. He could not so much as move his head. And facing him in this imprisonment was a car-sign which told him that four out of five, etc.

After luncheon that day Jones went to the cracked mirror over the washbasin in his office. He went with a sense of guilt. Making sure that no one was looking, he opened his mouth wide and studied his teeth. A shudder passed through him. Could it be? He was unable to work that afternoon, or to eat his dinner, or to sleep a wink. And next morning he went to see a dentist.

He issued forth more calm. He was not of the four. He was the lucky fifth. Strange is it not, Jones reflected, that on a four to one chance he should win!

Had the tale remained at that point we should have nothing more than a happy ending. But luckily for our literary principles that was far from the end. It was indeed only the beginning. Shortly after this episode Jones learned that nine out of every ten have trachoma. He received the news with a sinking feeling. At first he tried to laugh it off, but gradually it got the better of him. Since it could do no harm to consult an optician, he decided to do so.

This time he was really astonished. He was the tenth man! Nine must suffer in order that he, Jones, might be well. It seemed almost miraculous. The more he thought of it the stranger it appeared. He was even a little frightened. Why had fate singled him out for such attention? Why should he of all men be the fifth in every five and the tenth in every ten? He began to wish that it might be otherwise, that he might be more normal, closer to the run of his fellow-men.

Subsequently, realizing that ninety-nine out of every hundred suffer with some form of anemia, he felt reassured. At last he would find a point of contact with the rest of mankind. There was only one chance in a hundred physicians, though he coaxed and pleaded, would not dread that he might not. But to his unspeakable sorrow confess to the least taint of anemia in his system!

It was at that point that the gruesome truth came to him. He understood now that he was not like others, could never be like others. He was doomed for ever and ever to be the Last Man! in every group, in every class, he was the one exception. Scared out of his wits, poor Jones began to test the truth. And it always worked. Whatever nine or 99 or 999 of his fellows did or suffered, it was his fate to be the 10th or 100th or 1000th who did otherwise and suffered not at all.

Such isolation was intolerable. The sense of being the chosen of the gods—of being in some way responsible for the ills of others—was too heavy a burden for a timid and modest man. And wherever he looked were the advertisements to remind him of his cruel lot. His days became a long drawn anguish.

Finally he could stand it no longer. He decided to end it all. That, he knew, would prove easy. Had he not heard that 99 out of every 100 suicides do not succeed? Did he not know it as a fact that 9 out of 10 revolvers miss fire? For once being the last man was useful to Jones. He felt that he would be the 100th whose suicide did succeed and the 10th whose revolver did work.

And he was. The ease with which it took place was the final proof of his tragic fate.

DRAMA

Theatre, Mass and Machine

Em Jo Basshe, Author of "Earth," Draws a Picture of the Coming Workers Theatre

"Em Jo Basshe came to the United States from Russia when he was 14. Though still a good way from 30 he has traveled over a large portion of the country, has written stories, poems, reviews and articles for many magazines, including the Masses, the Liberator, and the Freeman. His first play, "Adam Solitaire," was produced at the Provincetown Playhouse last year. His "Earth," an intense and gripping Negro folk drama is now playing at the New Playwrights 52nd Street Theatre, of which he is one of the five directors.

By EM JO BASSHE.

Several years ago I happened to be in Gary, Indiana, and went to a theatrical performance given by a group of workers for a fund to establish a library. The program consisted of Synge's "Rides to the Sea," Chekoff's "The Boor," Polish and Russian folk dances, and finally mass recitations of poems by Shelley and Joe Hill. The audience stood up and joined in these. As they left the hall, they kept on singing, and at night one could hear them still humming the music they had heard during the day. Audiences like that are rare.

In this miserable and damnable town I saw enough of the proletarian theatre to give me an idea of what it will be when the worker decides that he has supported Hollywood and Broadway long enough. I can visualize a theatre where the worker will portray his own tragedies, laugh at his own foibles, vanquish his enemies and traducers, and glory in his achievements and his future.

But to say that he can do all this alone, discarding the dreams and plans of those artists who for years have been part of his struggle, his defeats, and his victories, would be like undermining the foundation before the house is up.

There is a union of dictatorship today; the Mass and the Machine. They go hand in hand. The rhythm is one. If you believe in fidelity, you must portray both as one. The proletarian theatre will be first to make use of this "character." It will create new types, new dances, new songs—the machine motif running through it all. It will ask such artists as Louis Lozowick to bring his dreams of engines, of serving machines, of tenement houses upon the stage. It will order from Bill Gropper his collection of mad wombat to dance and make gay the passing of the day. It will insist that the playwright forget the impotent middle class, the perfumed social register, and devote his talents to the portrayal of the brothers and sisters of the machine, of the toilers of the soil—the children of the future.

Most of the talk about a proletarian theatre is kosher pork. You can't have such a theatre until you have a place where you can do as you like; where you are not hampered by too much or too little money; where there is no Tammany Hall union (which makes no distinction between Shubert and, say, the Habima, and is ready to strangle you because it hasn't forgotten the days when it labored 18 hours a day); where your audience is not composed of dilletantes and "hold-your-breath mesdames." The worker, if he wants, can force the policy of newspapers, concerts, political platforms, and the theatre. The reason why he has not done it up to now is a mystery.

The New Playwrights Theatre is composed of people who have taken part in the labor movement in various capacities. If up now their plays have not been thoroughly proletarian, the blame is not all theirs. The theatres, directors, and actors of the old school have made it a point to slash, tear, and recast our thoughts and themes on the ground that "propaganda isn't art." In my first long play, produced at the Provincetown Theatre last year, I had a priest represented as a cardboard figure through whose mouth a voice drawls in a monotone singsong "Faith, sacrifice, sin." In the production this cardboard figure became a flesh-and-blood Shepherd of the Lord whose love for humanity knew no bounds and who spoke his platitudes as if they had come red hot from my own mouth. Irony certainly is a clever trickster.

We want working class audiences to mould our policy, direct our efforts, signalize its disapproval when we do something that does not "belong," and help us when we miss our step. Then they can claim us as their own, as we sincerely hope our theatre can claim them.

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

THE Paris Commune. What a source of inspiration, revolutionary energy and deep lessons in the science of class struggle it still presents to the working class of the world!

Fifty-six years ago the working class of Paris raised the banner of revolt against French capitalism and established what is known as the Paris Commune—the first working class government, the glorious forerunner of the Bolshevik revolution and the Soviet Republic. This working class government was in power only a few months, but the historic consequences of the Commune are still making themselves felt in the proletarian struggle for power. The lessons of the victory as well as of the defeat of the French workers in 1871 have contributed greatly towards the victory of the Russian workers in 1917 and are serving as a guide to action for the working class the world over.

It was a brave and glorious struggle. The courage and self-sacrifice of the Paris workers, their wives and children, will forever stand out as an example to be followed and emulated by victims of capitalist and imperialist exploitation. The memory of the heroes of the Paris Commune is still green in the hearts and minds of the revolutionary labor movement. The martyr deaths of the thousands of French workers murdered in cold blood by the beasts of French capitalism still call for account and revenge. The Paris Commune was defeated but the cause of the Communards is marching triumphantly forward. It established itself on one-sixth of the surface of the earth as the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. It is rallying around its banner, carried by the Communist International, ever larger numbers of proletarian revolutionary fighters. The day will soon come when the cause for which fought and bled the French Communards in 1871 will be completely and finally vindicated in the triumphant establishment of the International Soviet Republic.

Marx and Engels, the fathers of the modern working class movement, were the first to open the eyes of the workers to the historic meaning of the Paris Commune. It was they who analyzed the achievement of the Communards as the first revolutionary attempt of the workers to abolish the rule of the capitalists by destroying their government, their state, and to establish the rule of the workers by establishing a workers' government. It was Marx and Engels, the great proletarian teachers, who on the basis of the experiences of the Paris Commune had formulated in concrete form the proletarian dictatorship as the only means for the abolition of capitalism. It was the genius of Marx and Engels that discerned through the primitive forms of the Paris Commune the prototype of the coming proletarian state. And through these teachings of Marx and Engels the image, the tradition, and the great lessons of the Paris Commune have lived through decades of working class struggle until they became embodied in the glorious achievements of the working class of the Soviet Union.

The opportunists and reformists in the socialist movement have treated the Paris Commune practically the same way as they treated the whole revolutionary philosophy of Marx and Engels. They, the opportunists and betrayers of the working class, have persistently strived to blur the revolutionary meaning of the Paris Commune as the first attempt to establish the proletarian dictatorship. They have done all they could to strip the uprising of the Communards and their achievement of the greatest lesson of the event, namely, that the way to abolish capitalism is for the working class to seize political power, destroy the capitalist government and establish a workers' government. It became the task of the revolutionary Marxians in the pre-war Second International and of the Communist International after the war to carry forward the traditions and meaning of the Paris Commune and to make these a living part of present day working class struggles.

The Bolshevik revolution of 1917 was the historical event which gave the Paris Commune its first great vindication. It was through this revolution that the beginnings of proletarian dictatorship and the primitive forms of working class government embodied in the Paris Commune found their mature and complete expression in the concrete proletarian state represented by the Soviet form of government. It was through this revolution that the Paris Comoune came to life again only this time on a much grander scale, with incomparably more consciousness of its own tasks, with a background of nearly half a century of experience, under the leadership of a powerful Leninist party and in the period of the decline of world capitalism. All of which made possible the victory of the Bolshevik revolution which became the starting point of a new social era—the era of social revolutions.

Lenin, like Marx and Engels, never lost sight of the meaning of the Paris Commune. He cultivated its traditions and applied its lessons to the revolutionary struggles of the working class. It was in the teachings of Lenin that the proletarian dictatorship as first realized by the uprising of the Communards came to be organically connected with the more complete form of proletarian dictatorship in the form of Soviets as realized by the Russian revolution 46 years later. In the teachings of Lenin and in the theory of Leninism the Paris Commune, which scored a triumphant victory in the Russian revolution, has again become a dynamic factor in the struggle for power of the working-class throughout the world.

Of the many great lessons of the Paris Commune disclosed to the working-class in the teachings of Lenin, two lessons stand out most prominently. One is the vital need of a Bolshevistic party at the head of the proletarian revolution if the latter is to succeed. The second is the equally vital need of a firm alliance between the workers and farmers in the struggle against capitalism led by the working-class through its Communist Party. It is due chiefly to the incorporation of these two lessons into the Russian revolution that made its first phase—the struggle for power—a complete success.

The American working-class and the labor movement can profit greatly from the experiences of the Paris Commune. A study of these experiences and conscientious application of these lessons to the class struggle in the United States would undoubtedly deepen the political consciousness of the working-class, strengthen and reinforce the movement for independent political action and for a labor party, hasten the crystallization of an alliance between the workers and farmers and generally strengthen the workers against the capitalists. Above all these experiences would convince the class-conscious and militant workers of America that without a strong mass Communist party following in the footsteps of Leninism there can be no successful class struggle against capitalism and no victory of the working-class. The building of the Workers (Communist) Party into such a mass Bolshevik party becomes therefore the task of every proletarian revolutionist in the United States.

In address at several Ruthenberg memorial meetings in the state of Minnesota, I came across various incidents which occurred to me both interesting and instructive. One of them was that in all of these meetings, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth there appeared together with Communist Party speakers also non-Communist speakers. Among these latter there were former socialists, farmer-laborites and prominent trade unionists of various shades of political opinion. This, I think, is quite symptomatic. It speaks very eloquently of the tremendous power of attraction of our movement and of Ruthenberg as one of its outstanding leaders.

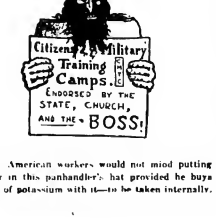
WILLIAM E. McEWEN, a prominent man in the American Federation of Labor and in Duluth labor circles generally, had been invited to address the Ruthenberg memorial meeting held in that city on March 11. Unfortunately, he couldn't come in person but he sent in a short typewritten speech which was read to the audience by the chairman of the meeting, comrade O'Rourke. I noted several expressions in that speech which I wish to reproduce and comment on briefly. Mr. McEwen said:



"Ruthenberg believed in the industrial state. I am opposed to it. I hold there is opportunity to work out by voluntary, cooperative effort every social and economic problem that confronts the workers of the world. That is why I am a trade unionist. That is why I adhere to the policies and principles of the American Federation of Labor. So, you see, Ruthenberg and I held to principles which are diametrically opposed."

Whether or not there is opportunity to solve the problems of the working-class by a cooperative effort with the capitalists (if that is what Mr. McEwen means), we will not discuss at this moment, except to point to the actual conditions of the class struggle. Only on one point we would like to disabuse the mind of Mr. McEwen, namely, that there is some inherent contradiction between trade unionism and Communism, as is implied in the above quotation.

The truth of the matter is there is no such contradiction or hostility between trade unionism and Communism. Trade unionism and trade union struggles are the elementary and basic forms of working-class organization and struggle against the capitalists. In the present era of concentrated industry, monopolistic control by finance capital of the economic life of the country, the centralized machinery of the government functioning as strike breaker and oppressor of the workers, the ever present danger of war caused by the terrific growth of imperialism—all these forces compel the expansion of trade union struggles into struggles of class against class, workers against capitalists, into a political struggle against the rule of capitalism. Communism is the theoretical expression and explanation of this historical process. Communism supplies the scientifically proven theory which guides and directs the efforts of the working-class towards a conscious struggle against capitalism and for Communism. The Communists base themselves on this theory and build a party—a political party—which educates, organizes and leads the struggles of the working-class until its final victory is secured.

Where is the contradiction between trade unionism and Communism? It is only when reactionary trade unionists attempt to degenerate trade unionism into helping the employers against the workers instead of organizing the workers against the employers that conflict arises. But this is a conflict not between Communism and trade unionism but between working-class trade unionism and capitalist company unionism. Which is an entirely different story.

The Murder Mood of Michigan

By STANLEY BOWEN

With thousands of workers on the streets of Detroit as a result of wide-spread unemployment, the legislative chambers and public auditoriums of Michigan are loud with an intensive law-and-order campaign.

There has never been as much agitation from the big and little employers for capital punishment in the history of the state. Hanging appears to be the preferred method of exterminating the men and boys of the working class who turn bandit. The electric chair and lethal gas are not popular. For the first time since the original Michigan punishment law was repealed, many years ago, a capital punishment bill passed the state house of representatives this winter. Sponsors of capital punishment at Lansing, hearing the tramping feet of the unemployed and hearing the choleric fearful demands of the open shop employers, entered into a kind of contest in and out of legislative sessions to see who could most adequately describe the punative efficacy of premature violent death. And the gallery, occupied largely by the wives or other female admirers of these tin-horn tributes of the grilling class, these trumpeting hucksters of the spoiled fruit of a decaying social order, applauded shrilly at each demand for the noose.

The judiciary committee of the state senate has the bill under consideration now. This committee appears to be dubious about reporting it out. In the senate proper the fate of the bill would be uncertain should the powerful capital punishment lobby which is operating in Lansing force it on the floor.

The whole criminal code of Michigan is certain to be tightened up in this law-and-order campaign. A bill resembling the Baumes Law of New York State is before the legislature. It differs materially from the New York law only in that the penalties it prescribes are a little less severe. One purpose of the proposed new Michigan code is to shorten the distance between the scene of a crime and the cell assigned to the man who happened to commit the crime.

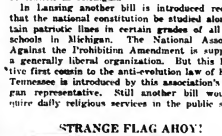
The proposed method of shortening this distance is to eliminate certain portions of the present legal processes. In the language of this law-and-order campaign these portions that are to be eliminated are "mere technicalities" or "technical loopholes through which the guilty escape." Granted, however, that the court is antiquated, unscientific and inefficient, these "technical loopholes" are nevertheless details of the legal process which have gradually been evolved as safeguards for the accused against unscrupulous prosecuting attorneys, police officers and judges, intent upon their own careers. They have a special value as such, no matter how tedious they may cause a trial to become. They are there for the protection of the innocent man who might otherwise be wrongly convicted, even if there exists a risk that some guilty men may go free at the same time because of them.

Fear that an innocent man may be convicted is not being expressed in this campaign. The demand is not for social justice. It is not even for certain or accurate justice. It is for summary justice, quick justice. It is a compromise of legal form with the method of extra-legal direct action employed by the Ku Klux Klan mob. It is as much of a compromise in that direction as the industrialists, the bankers, the merchants and the professional groups believe it wise to essay at this time in Michigan.

And it should not be overlooked that it is only the amateur gunman or thief, the embittered or discouraged worker having his first desperate fling along the predatory path, who will be summarily delivered to the jailer under the proposed summary criminal code. The experienced professional gunman with the high-priced jury-fixing lawyer will suffer little additional inconvenience, nor will the wealthy psychopath with criminal inclinations.

The significance of the proposed criminal code lies not so much in its specific language and machinery as in its spirit and implications. And it is true notwithstanding certain features that are obviously somewhat drastic in themselves. Michigan traditions have necessitated caution.

The truly historical prestige of the right of every man to a trial by "a jury of his peers," for example, is being definitely undermined. Under the proposed code a defendant may waive a jury trial and elect to be tried by the judge sitting as both judge and jury. The provision in the existing law for a jury trial in all cases is a "technicality" or "loophole" which the new code would not eliminate but would qualify. And many factors in the situation in Michigan at this time show clearly that implicit in this proposed qualification of the concept of a "jury of . . . peers" there is a tendency to go much further. The jury concept is basic in traditional law. For the law makers of the ruling class to suggest openly by statute that a defendant in a criminal trial recognise his judge as being also his jury of peers means that juries have become unpopular with the ruling class. It means that what the ruling class would really like to do is deprive the outlawed worker of the right of a jury trial altogether.



Inseparable in its implications from this lessening of the prestige or status of the jury concept, for example again, is an agitation in Michigan at this time for life appointments for judges in county and municipal courts.

The economic or class basis of such developments as this is often difficult to identify. The basis here is clear, however. In the first place, Michigan has its Criminal Syndicalist Law. Many members of the Workers (Communist) Party are defendants in pending cases under this law now. It is the law under which Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg was convicted. The proposed criminal code would effect prosecutions under the Criminal Syndicalism Law equally with prosecutions under any other law, as far as general legal processes are concerned.

And while the lobbyists of the employers are selling the employers' political favorites to enact a capital punishment law and a more "workable" criminal code in the State House at Lansing, Congressman John R. Sosnowski, of Detroit, is busy at Washington. First he reads a paper charging that the Communists are threatening revolution in his home state. Then he introduces a resolution in the national house of representatives calling for the appointment of a congressional committee to investigate not only the plans of the Communists proper but the alliance between the Workers (Communist) Party and any number of miscellaneous organizations. Certainly neither speech nor resolution was original with Congressman Sosnowski. This would be true on personal grounds alone. But for other more material reasons his speech in the hall of congress is like the folk-song. It belongs in a group. It is the expression of a group in a certain situation. And the group here is the Detroit group of industrial capitalists. Under their windows they hear the tramp, tramp feet of the unemployed, undisciplined but not beyond discipline, unorganized but not alien to the organization. Congressman Sosnowski is summoned. He is given his instructions. The propaganda for the defense of the predatory group are put on paper for Congressman Sosnowski to take to Washington. Even if most of the other congressman doze at their desks Congressman Sosnowski does as he is told. The Communists, according to the Congressional record, are threatening revolution in Michigan.

In Lansing another bill is introduced requiring that the national constitution be studied along certain patriotic lines in certain grades of all public schools in Michigan. The National Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is supposedly a generally liberal organization. But this legislative effort in behalf of the anti-evolution law of Klanish Tennessee is introduced by this association's Michigan representative. Still another bill would require daily religious services in the public schools.

STRANGE FLAG AHOY!

The capitalist pirates who have been plundering China for generations look askance at the banner of liberty under which the Chinese are marching to victory.

It was reported out favorably by the educational committee of the House.

Prior to the opening of the present session of the legislature the Detroit Board of Commerce sent agent communications to all Detroit churches. The organized employers wanted an alliance with that element in support of their legislative program. The Detroit clergymen protested to the tone of the communications. They charged the tone was presumptuous. This was reminiscent of a situation in Detroit last fall. At that time the Board of Commerce with considerable success undertook to coerce Detroit pastors into refusing their pulpits to speakers from the convention of the American Federation of Labor on Labor Sunday, so-called. But when the capital punishment bill and the proposed new criminal code were introduced at Lansing this winter the clergy were in line, with the Board of Commerce spokesmen. Reporters assigned to cover their sermons wrote columns eling and amplifying Biblical quotations for the proposed new criminal code. And the clergy filled the mail bags with letters placing God's blessing on the most popular of all improvements on the old-fashioned cross. . . . Protestant and Catholic clergy alike.

An unusual bill awaiting disposition at Lansing provides for an excessive prison sentence specifically for possessing a stench bomb, which its sponsors say is a common weapon in industrial disputes in Detroit. The penalty for the actual use of a stench bomb is from five to 15 years, for the mere possession of such bombs or the material for them, two in five years. Conviction for damaging property with explosive bombs would mean 10 to 25 years.

That there is a growing appreciation of the class basis of agitation in general and the present law-and-order campaign in particular is shown by letters being written to editors of capitalist dailies for publication. Of course most of the letters that are given publication are law-and-order letters. Most of the letters by class conscious workers are basketed. But now and then a letter calling attention to the economic basis of crime and law is printed. The following letter appeared in the "Public Letter Box" column of the Detroit News:

"To the Editor: I am in favor of equal punishment providing the authorities manage to relieve the misery of the many unemployed.

"We have no side to our unfortunate unemployed. One can not imagine what a willing worker, now unemployed through no fault of his own, will do in desperation after being unable to procure work.

"Work is no pleasure but drudgery, seeking it, are willing to line up in the cold because it is, and the result is usually, 'Nothing doing' or 'No help wanted'.

"Crime has reached its highest peak since the army of unemployed has increased to lists of thousands."

Henry Ford is an employer who is expressing opposition to capital punishment. A full-page editorial against it was recently published in his magazine, the Dearborn Independent. But in an experiment which really amounts to an alternative to a criminal code he gave jobs a few weeks ago to 5,000 boys 18 years old or thereabouts. This, he said, was a humanitarian, socially-conscious effort on his part to save the boys from criminal careers. And a very short time thereafter he began laying off older, higher-wage employes. Many of these had worked several years at their machines. Many were the fathers of families. But Ford had become a criminologist, not to say a capitalistic strategist, who was feeling the competition of the General Motors Corporation. The older men were turned out without notice into the streets. Many of them now see around the throats of their children the tightening of the noose of hunger.

CURIOSITIES OF NATURE

READY-MADE STEAM — Everyone is more or less familiar with the way fountains of oil and gas occur in different parts of the world, offering great quantities of fuel without the trouble of mining. But in a few places, nature has gone still further and saved even the expenses of furnaces and boilers, offering ready-made steam power. In some regions which are distinctly volcanic in nature, jets of steam are found issuing from clefts in the rocks under considerable pressure. Both in Southern Italy and in Sonoma County, Cal., attempts have recently been made to utilize this steam for driving stationary engines, etc., and both places report complete success.

AGRICULTURE AND THE AIRPLANE — Few people realize yet what an effective aid to agriculture the airplane can be. In Soviet Russia in 1923-24 when the Society of the Friends of the Air Fleet" was carrying on a membership campaign, great stress was laid on the use of the airplane for spraying parks with insecticide. Recently the U. S. army (which occasionally does something useful when time hangs heavy on its hands and everything is hateful of law and order) reported on some experiments it had made in sowing seed by aeroplane. A large area in Hawaii had been devastated by a forest fire and was to be reforested. Two planes covering an area of four square miles, sprayed the land with 21 bags of forest seed. It was estimated that it would have taken two men working by hand ten years to perform the same amount of work as the plane accomplished in an hour and a half.

A CRAB THAT CLIMBS TREES AND EATS COCOANUTS: Although this sounds pretty much like a pink elephant with wings, the fact is that such a crab does exist. It inhabits the South Sea Islands, and those who have seen the film "Moana" will remember it as the ugly-looking creature that the little boy smokes out of its hole. Cocoanuts are its preferred diet and it will climb palm trees 100 feet high to get them, bringing them down and cracking them against a rock or dropping them from the treetop, carrying them up, and dropping them again, until the nuts are split open. The white planters protect their cocoanuts by putting tin sheeting around the base of the trees, but the natives can't afford such luxuries and have to rely more upon their imagination for settling accounts with the crab. About forty feet from the ground they plaster a little bank of earth and leaves around the trunk of the tree. Going up, the crab easily climbs over the little obstructions and gets his cocoanut. But it seems that he has neither a good memory nor a good judgment of distance. As soon as he reaches the little bank of earth on his way down and feels it under his feet, he concludes that he has reached the ground and lets go of the tree-trunk with the result that he crashes to earth and is killed.

Ballyhoo!

"The Barker" Has Life and Charm—When It Isn't Smothered by Plot

Reviewed by HARRIOR ALLEN.

Kenyon Nicholson, who teaches playwriting at Columbia, has written a play pleasant to the eye. "The Barker" (at the Biltmore) opens with a ballyhoo scene before the Hawaiian tent of a small-town circus. The ballyhoo boys, bells ring, the Hawaiians twang their ukeleles, the dancer shakes her grall skirt, and the barker chops the air with words. The crowd swarms into the tent. One of them returns to argue about having hort-changed. A few minutes later they struggle out: the show's rotten, boys, they've been gyped. The barker laughs.

The scene is perfect. If you've ever seen a tent show in a small town, you will look back with the tingle of recognition. Here is realism and glamor holding hands.

At this point Mr. Nicholson must have remembered that he was a teacher of playwriting. And a play isn't a play unless it has a plot. Any text book will tell you that. So Mr. Nicholson stuck in plot—lots of it and thick. He borrowed bit of it from sex shows, from melodramas, from the good old tearful plays about loving parents and wayward sons. Only rarely is it convincing. The love of the barker for his son rings true enough, but the intrigues among the women are so many shadows snatched from the movies.

Now and then Mr. Nicholson forgets his plot and turns the stage over to half a dozen circus folk: the tattooed sailor, the motherly palmist, the colonel, the carpenter, the hands. Then you get the warm feeling of being close to people. They complain about the weather, they talk about the show business, about the money they've made and lost; they drink together; they borrow from each other and comfort each other with pity and love. Something beautiful and human and simple curls up from the grass floor and the canvas walls and the battered trunks. The next minute it is gone. The author yanks his people off and starts the machinery of plot pumping. Sometimes it is well oiled; too often it creaks.

ANSWER TO PICTURE PUZZLE

BENNIE CARUSO.

The meaning of the picture is that the Chinese workers are starting to understand that there should be no bosses so they are trying to kick out the American and Chinese bosses. But America wants to have bosses. So does England and they send battleships and are trying to stop this affair, but the Chinese workers will outwit them.

I am sticking for the Chinese workers because not only my parents believe in it, but I believe it is too.

Pioneers Organize Ruthenberg Group.

By Our Youngstown Reporter.

The children of the workers who are struggling for better conditions in the steel hells of Youngstown, Ohio, responded to the terrible blow of Comrade Ruthenberg's death by organizing a strong group of children under the name of "Ruthenberg Pioneer Group." The members of the group solemnly promised to give their lives for building up a revolutionary workers children's movement in Youngstown. In the schools as well as in the shops, wherever there are children, these Young Pioneers will get Youngstown's youngsters to join them in fighting for a free workers' world. Already they are making up new games, starting an orchestra and getting ready the issue of the Wall newspaper.

RUTHENBERG CORNER

What shall we do to honor our dead leader, Comrade Ruthenberg? What can we do to best carry out his last message, "Let's fight on!" One of the best ways that we, workers' children, can honor Comrade Ruthenberg is by getting many other children to believe in a workers' government instead of a bosses' government. How can we do this? We can do this by getting them to read The Young Comrade which tells the truth about the workers and their children.

In order to get more readers for The Young Comrade, the Young Pioneers of America have started a big subscription drive with many prizes. Watch this page next week for more details of this big prize subscription drive.

OUR LETTER BOX

Dear Comrades: Once we were going to the Pioneer meeting and we were singing songs. A kozak came running after us, we weren't scared we just kept on walking. The policeman ran after us he said, "If you don't stop singing I'll arrest you." We said, "We want our union, the union will help us." The kozak just laughed and didn't do anything to us.

Your Comrade,
ANNA MOLODOWITH.

Dear Comrades: Our teacher is a big fool. He takes the bible in the morning and reads it to us. Then he asks us questions from it. One day he asked me a question from the bible and I did not know it, he said what kind of a catholic are you. Then we say our prayers after he reads the bible. But I never say it. Then after we say our prayers we sing. On Thanksgiving day he told the children to eat all day. But he did not ask us whether we had something to eat. So that's the kind of a fool he is. His name is Mr. Frances Simpson. He is a mean bad teacher. He always sings holy songs. I hate him with all my might. Every time we make a mistake in something he makes fun of us. That shows how much sense he's got.

I am joining the Children's Page Club.

Your Comrade,

How Workers' Children and Workers Are Treated in Mining Towns.

I am fifteen years of age and attend the Bentleyville High School. My brother who is thirteen also goes to the same school.

Now here is the problem. My brother John had broken his friendship with Joe K. because his father went to work at the Bethlehem mine at Weaver, and had been enemies since then.

One day while John was coming home from school, Joe threw a stone at my brother. His aim was poor and did not hit my brother but broke a window of another school. When asked who did it my brother and another school mate (who was with him) told on him. This increased Joe's anger and he threatened to stab them with a knife, but didn't get a chance because my brother and his friend jumped on him and took the knife to the policeman.

The same night Joe's mother (much intoxicated) went to my brother's friend's home to inquire for the knife. His dad said he would return it willingly soon as his son came home. This answer did not satisfy her. She picked up stones and threw them among a group of boys. Of course they threw stones at her after that. Well, she went to Ellsworth and put my brother and his friend under arrest. The next day two "yellow dogs" (coal and iron police) came to school and took my brother and his friend to Ellsworth police station without consulting their parents. Here the "yellow dogs" threatened to do all sorts of things to them if they wouldn't confess.

That afternoon my dad went to the burgess of our town and told him how circumstances stood. The burgess said he would like to help him, but he couldn't. He could if he wanted to. The first case was held. The "yellow dog" cussed us, and wouldn't give us a chance to talk. So the case was put off until Monday. Dad got a lawyer; but as soon as the "yellow dogs" saw the lawyer they went out. Even the squire didn't like it. He talked nicely because he was a coward, when we had witnesses and a lawyer. He told us the case was over and all was O. K. The "yellow dogs" said to my brother and me, "The Red Necks (meaning the workers) didn't do anything last April and they won't do anything this April." Are we going to do anything? Of course, nothing will stop us.

Let this be our motto, "Let nothing discourage you, NEVER give up."—ANNA SHAYNAK.

PARIS COMMUNE and RUTHENBERG

Did you ever hear of the Paris Commune by-and-by? No, well we'll tell you about it. During the war in 1870 between the French and Germans the poor workers of France suffered very much. Thousands of them were starving and many were thrown out of their houses and onto the streets. At last the workers could stand it no longer. So on March 18th, 1871, fifty-six years ago, the working men and women of Paris arose in revolt and organized the first worker's government. They called it the Paris Commune. For two short months this government of the workers of Paris lived and made many improvements for the workers. During this time they had to resist the attacks of both the French and German capitalist (bosses) governments. Finally the Commune fell and with its fall over 25,000 working men, women and children were brutally murdered. The walls of Paris were stained with their blood and the river Seine was like a river of blood. That ended the first workers' government, the Paris Commune.

But although the Paris Commune was drowned in blood, its spirit lived on. And in October 1917, our Russian comrades took up the fight and established the Commune of the Soviet Union. This Commune could not be killed in two months as the first one. This Commune has already lived about nine years and is still marching forward.

Comrades, while we think of the Communards you comrades who fought and died for the Paris Commune and the Soviet Union, let us pause a moment and give a thought to our leader, our Communard, who died fighting for the Commune, and only of America but of the whole world. Let us think a while, Comrades, are we worthy of such a leader? Are WE following in his footsteps? Are WE Communards? Are WE members of the Young Communards, the Young Pioneers of America? Are WE subscribers to the Young Comrade? You know Comrades, if Ruthenberg were alive he would see, YOU SHOULD BE

When Mussolini Was a Socialist

By ANGELICA BALABANOFF

I MADE my first acquaintance with Mussolini in 1909, on the occasion of my speech to the Italian Socialists inaugurated by Filippo Turati's resident land.

At that time he was a young man of 22 or 23 years of age and drew my attention on his aspect of extreme poverty and penury.

Even then he had an uneasy agitated appearance, like a man who suffers of some hereditary disease.

I thought to myself, "This one is some poor persecuted proletarian who may be in need of a soothing word," and I asked him who he was and whence he came.

Mussolini told me that he had fled from Italy because he did not want to serve in the army. He was in a grave pecuniary need and lived mainly by and sheltered him by the masons and diggers of Lausanne.

One of these masons then told me that his wife had given him some old underwear. It was in this manner that these Italian emigrants, many of whom were poor peasants and workers, aided a refugee who had studied for school teacher, but had not had the capacity to continue at this profession.

Mussolini is the son of a poor worker, a blacksmith who lived in Predappio not far from Forli, in Romagna. His father was a socialist and a member of the First International. Mussolini therefore was brought up in a socialist environment.

The peasants of his village belonged to the party and Mussolini being a man of the sort that adapts himself easily to the ideas of those who surround him, he also became a member of the party.

In my first conversation with him he told me that he had a strong desire to translate "On the Morrow of the Social Revolution," by Kautsky because he would have been able to earn thereby about 50 francs. I offered to help him and when I returned to Losanna I made a great part of the translation for him because at that time he knew very little German. He had no regular trade so he read a lot and voraciously French authors like Blanqui and in this filled his brains with the thoughts of French writers. He had always been a man of a strong adaptability of thought and he possessed beside that faculty of personification common to so many Italians a nervous system of an abnormal impressionability.

In the 1900 we published in Lausanna, a socialist paper which still exists, called "L'avenire del Lavoratore." (The Workers' Future) to which I collaborated from time to time. Mussolini began to contribute articles to this paper many of which were on anti-clerical and anti-militarist subjects.

His anti-clericalism was of a very primitive type. He never gave a scientific interpretation of religious problems, but he attacked the church as an institution. At this time he also published a pamphlet in which he attempted to prove the non-existence of god. It is one of the many ironies of history that this pamphlet is now forbidden in Italy by order of the Prime Minister Signor Mussolini.

A few years later, I think in 1909 or 1910, Mussolini was arrested and returned to Italy where he became director of one of the two hundred or more socialist weekly reviews and especially the one called "The Class Struggle."

At that time he often invited me to speak where he was and I remember having once spoken in Forli on the Paris Commune.

It was a lively meeting. The bourgeoisie of that locality were all republicans and the peasants all socialists, so the caserp was divided into two opposing parties. The republicans attempted to disturb my speech with a howling match in a wine shop close to the place where I was to speak. Mussolini was terribly agitated. I was not disturbed and spoke nevertheless. But when I had finished Mussolini informed me, trembling with emotion that a quarrel had taken place and that a socialist had stabbed a republican.

I remember well that Mussolini's agitation was due not so much to the sentiment of responsibility for this unfortunate accident as to the fear of unpleasant disagreeableness for himself. When the meeting was over we went in a cab towards the station. Mussolini insisted desperately on having carabineers escort and protect us. So a part of the latter preceded us in a cab and others marched beside us. We scarcely had moved when a detonation was heard. They had shot at us but they struck the first vehicle full of carabineers. Mussolini was seized by a deadly terror and pitifully implored me not to leave the town. He did not have the heart to remain alone. No one knew what could have happened. I told him that I couldn't remain because on the morrow, being the first of May, I was engaged to speak elsewhere. But Mussolini continued to disavow me until we reached the station platform and I finally left him after which our comrades promised to protect him personally. At the socialist congress of Reggio Emilia, the radical socialists, to which Mussolini belonged, had a majority over the reformists, whose leaders were expelled from the party on Mussolini's proposal. All the other reformists then went out of the party and were replaced by official radicals including myself and Mussolini, who was elected representative for the province of Romagna.

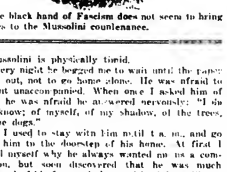
It was on this occasion that Mussolini provoked the expulsion of Bissolati from the party because the latter went to congratulate his King on [illegible]

[illegible] months afterward Enrico Ferri, editor of the "Avanti" [illegible] Milan, was obliged to resign from the party. The executive of the party presided by Lazzari and Mussolini was proposed for the editorship. Some objections were raised that he was too individualistic and did not observe enough the party discipline.

Before the affair was decided we had a separate encounter and at dinner Mussolini told me that he felt little disposed to accept this position so full of responsibility. But at the afternoon session he unexpectedly declared to accept, but on only one condition, that I go to Milan with him to assist him. This happened only a few minutes after we had been in dinner together, and even during all that time, he never spoke to me about it. Evidently he meant to take me by surprise. I consented, having considered Mussolini as a weakling who was in need of help and advice, and thought it my duty as a socialist to aid him. But even though I considered him a weakling, I thought he was loyal to the party and a convinced revolutionary, and even today I believe that such were his sentiments at that period. In the editorial room I worked beside Mussolini several hours of the day and learned to know him intimately.

His bad humor derived from the fact that he was not in Milan willingly, alone, and was obliged to have some one with him to share the responsibility and this thing impressed me so much the stronger the more we were together.

He spoke to me of everything, and wished that I red every important article he was sending to the press. He never spoke much to me other members of the directors and was reserved with them and held them at a distance.



But he let himself be influenced easily.

Once this happened on the eve of a May Day. He called me, agitated, to show me an article which he had written about a syndicalist who had angered him personally. This article had been written in such a violent form that I told him that it did not seem suitable for the "Avanti!" especially for May Day.

Mussolini, all agitated, said that it was for him a question of life or death to redeem himself with this comrade. He wanted to have his revenge now that he was in a position to do it because his man exposed himself by attacking gratuitously. Then he quickly bid me good-bye, adding that he was going to leave for Switzerland on the 1st of May.

Half an hour later he phoned me from the station: "You are right. That article for the 'Avanti!' does not go. Do me a favor not to let it pass."

THE DUCE HE IS.

The black hand of Fascism does not seem to bring smiles to the Mussolini countenance.

Mussolini is physically timid.

Every night he begged me to wait until the papers came out, not to go home alone. He was afraid to go out unaccompanied. When once I asked him of what he was afraid he answered nervously: "I do not know of myself, of my shadow, of the trees, of the dogs."

So I used to stay with him until 1 a. m., and go with him to the doorstep of his home. At first I asked myself why he always wanted me as a companion, but soon discovered that he was much ashamed of his fear and above all he did not like to confess it to any other man. One day Mussolini returned from a tour of propaganda very ill and told me that he could not bear it any longer, that for him it was ended, because he was affected of an incurable disease. And he spoke to me of himself with remarkable frankness, though in a decent manner. I advised him to go to some medical authority to be thoroly examined. On the morrow he came very pale to the office, accompanied by a doctor. He told me that he felt mussolini to have to always stand of chloroform, that the doctor had pinked him to analyse his blood and that he fainted during the operation. I spoke to the doctor who told me he was at the head of a clinic in Milan and that he had cured several thousands of clients, but that he never came across a man that demonstrated so much physical timidity as Mussolini.

Another weakness in Mussolini, which indicates the same nervousness and lack of decisiveness, is his inability to say no.

Once, with the same kind of excitement, he told me that one of our comrades would arrive that evening and that he was the strongest man in the Socialist Party. This comrade wished that Mussolini, as directing member of the party, approve a proposition to be submitted to the executive committee, Mussolini did not approve it but did not wish for the time being to say no to this man and begged me to say it to him. This comrade came at 10:30 and [illegible] Bentir to consider him at Vasa Sera [illegible] and [illegible] to say with me until 4 o'clock in the morning. When he left, without my consent, Mussolini told me that he could not conceive how I had managed to resist his insistence. The day after, at 10 a.m., I met this comrade who cheerfully told me that he had obtained what he desired. He never had gone to see Mussolini at his address and had persuaded him to give his approval in writing.

Things continued in such a way until 1914.

In August of that year Mussolini who, as usual, reflected the sentiment of those by whom he was surrounded, was an ardent internationalist and anti-militarist. He had read in a socialist review that if the war had been prevented it would have been a disaster, because it would have weakened the socialist movement. So for many months after the beginning of the war he defended this opinion, not because he conceived it himself but because it had been suggested to him. In that period the sentiment against intervention in the war were confined only to the proletariat. Notwithstanding, the spirit of war began to be diffused rapidly among the middle classes and to also infect Mussolini. But he published his first declaration in favor of the union with the allies in a bourgeois paper through a friend's intervention.

This article which wanted to demonstrate that the Socialist Party was not unanimous about the war and which showed how a member of the executive was in favor of Italy's fighting on the side of France, caused tremendous indignation.

The Party executive immediately organized a conference at Bologne where Mussolini was called to defend his action. On the eve of this encounter he published an article in the "Avanti!" in which he revealed openly his change of front. He held that Italy should intervene in the war with the western powers and he was evidently anxious to engage the party on this road before the conference took place.

We went to Bolzene together in November, 1914, I read the article on the train and said to Mussolini: "If you have written this you must either go and engage yourself in the army or in an insane asylum. You certainly must not expect to remain in the party."

Mussolini answered (whatingly: "The whole Executive Committee will be with me."

Evidently he deceived himself, because the party was a whole unit against him.

I never shall forget this conference at Bologne. It was one of the worst tragic scenes that I've ever seen.

One after the other the members of the Executive Committee came on the platform and condemned Mussolini's attitude.

He remained silent, gloomy, irresolute, with a slumbering look, like a man accused of a crime. Finally I spoke and said that he should reconsider his position, not because he was indispensable to the "Avanti!" but because he was on the wrong track.

Mussolini did not reply until the Executive Committee had voted unanimously to fire him from his post. I then made a motion asking to give him some money.

Then he rose and said in a rude and villainous manner, "I do not want anything. I'll throw away my pen. I don't want to write anymore. I want to return to my trade as a mason for 5 lires a day."

But the truth was that he had already received funds for a paper in which Mussolini would be free to preach war.

At this congress he gave me the impression of a man terrified by his own bad conscience.

THE OUTCAST

By HELEN CARTON.

Cold was the night, but colder, still
Was the tiny mite clasped tightly to the mother's breast.

Making such a pitiful sight
As she walked along the streets begging for one little bite.

But the only response that her pleading led to
Was the slamming of windows and closing of doors
Into her face, for she had said
Please give me some bread for I am a starving Red.

2.

Thus I watched this pretty Red
As in her arms she carried a form that was dead
And I asked to be led to that woman who said
I am a Red and I am starving for want of bread.
She didn't know that she didn't belong
In this section where her prayer was only an unwelcome song
She didn't know until I came along
That in help for this place she was strong.

3.

Nor did she know that these were the ones
Who would willingly throw dirt from the graveyard
Upon the heads of those Reds and sing at their task
Without hiding their joy under a mask.
For she was in the neighborhood of biggest of thieves
Men who stored their money in shelves torn from the workers with such beliefs
It only a capitalist can nurse when more money is coming into his purse.

In Gay Scotland

By FRANK GALLACHER

THE labor movement in Scotland is no dry-as-dust thing despite the fact that there are as many classes, if not more, studying Marxism in Scotland as in any other country—with the exception of Russia. The leaders early realised that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, and set about with right good will to make these notorious Bolshie engineers of the Clyde, who are demons on economics, a body of men such as would cheer the heart of Robert Morris, if he were alive today.

The greatest success has been achieved in the fostering of choirs. In this, they have beaten, in competition those choral unions which the bosses have encouraged in order to show that they are interested in the workers' welfare if not in a rise in wages. Membership is not confined to members of socialist organizations even if the conductor is.

But not only have Glasgow's labor choirs beaten everything in that town, but one of them, The Orpheus Choir, is champion of Great Britain, and has an international reputation. Roberton, the leader, toured the States a short time ago with those of the choir that managed to get leave of absence from work. Because of the inability of the members to get away from their labors, an invitation to appear in Berlin had to be refused.

Some time ago, the patriotic London Scots brought them down to perform in the Albert Hall there, and while delighted with the performance, they were incensed at Roberton for refusing to finish up with "God Save The King." His plea, on another occasion, for not rendering the national anthem was that "God Save The King" is bad music and worse sentiment.

Under the leadership of Roberton, who, by the way, represents labor on the educational board in Glasgow, the Scottish workers have wrested the laurel crown from Wales, which country, up till a few years ago, was supposed to be unapproachable in choral singing. Other labor choirs more than hold their own with the boss outfits.

Every year, in Glasgow, an art exhibition is held where only the workers' exhibits are shown. All the radical organizations combine to make it a success, and their efforts are rewarded by the artistic paintings sent in by the hardy sons of toil. Tapestries and other things are also shown. Needless to say, the exhibitions are becoming more popular every year, and are paying their way.

The co-operative band, which takes part with other ones in supplying music to the workers in the summer nights in the public parks. And then different labor organisations have their fife bands.

In the opinion of the writer, the bagpipes will play no small part, when the time comes, in rallying the working class of Scotland. Many a time and oft have the capitalists of Britain used them in some tune in their imperialist wars; but the time is not far distant when instead of being gladdened by the skirl of the pipes, they will shudder in their shoes to hear "The Campbells Are Coming, Hurrah! Hurrah!" Yes, once again, they will hear the wild McGregor's slogan:

If they rob us of name and pursue us with bengles,
Give their house to the flames and their flesh to the eagles."

Not only are the Campbells coming, but the other clans as well are coming with the object of raising the red standard. It matters not that there is one black sheep in the MacDonald clan, the others will settle his hash.

One gets a hint of what is to come, each May Day, when the workers in each district march to the central meeting place with red flag flying and the pipes skirling out defiance:

"For a' that, and a' that,
Its comin' yet for a' that,
When man tae man, the world o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that."

"A Night With Burns," is a favorite theme with labor men anxious to get workers interested in poetry. But that is not the only reason for selecting Burns, even though, his music rivals that of Orpheus. Did you ever ask yourself why Scotsmen have such a mania for putting statues up to the beloved bard: why the unsophisticated worker thinks Burns the greatest poet that ever lived? The reason is not far to seek. He sang the sweetest songs; was born of the workers, and was class conscious. In the hills where the propagandists haven't penetrated with Marxism, the peasants know their Burns. And knowing him, they are then fit subjects to know the scientific side expounded by Marx and Lenin.

Do you object to such simple preparation as this:

"We labour soon, we labour late
To feed a titled knave man,
And a' the comfort we're to get
Is that beyond the grave man."

Or this tit bit from "The Jolly Beggars"

"A fig for those by law protected,
Liberty's a glorious feast;
Courts for cowards were erected,
Churches built to please the priest."

The Scotch worker will tell you that "God Save The King" is not Scotland's national anthem but "Scots Wha Hae." And who would blame them for swearing by one of the finest ever written, from which I quote:

"By oppressions, woes and pains,
By your sons in servile chains,
We will drain our dearest veins,
But they shall be free!
Lay the proud usurper low!
Tyrants fall in every foe!
Liberties at every blow!
Let us do or dee!"

Color is lent to the lectures on Burns by pictures on the screen depicting the scenes, where "gorse and grass, and heather, where his footsteps pass the brighter seen." Burns said, on his deathbed, that people would think more of him a hundred years after. So we will, Bobbie, never fear! Yours will be about the only statue the workers will leave standing in George Square, Glasgow.

We won't forget that you sent four little cannons to France during the revolution, "to help to shoot the aristocrats." We won't forget your daring at a big dinner, when asked to toast Mr. Pitt, how you said, "I toast a better man, I toast George Washington." We won't forget how you swore an oath, "My lips are sealed forever on those cursed politics," and couldn't keep it. And our hearts will bleed when we think of you a' the finish, your body sick unto death, and the factor chunning you for five pounds, saying

"Ye banks and braes o' bonnie Doon,
How can ye blaum sae fresh and fair,
How can ye chant ye little birds,
And I sae weary fu' o' care."

Space forbids any more quotations from that great rebel and artist Robert Burns.

As regards sport, the labor representation in most town councils is so strong that tennis, the sport of the elite, has become a proletarian game. It is a common sight to see the lads and lassies issuing from tenements, like those which infest the east side of New York, with tennis racquets under their arms, going to have a game on the courts in the public parks, for two or three pennies an hour.

Labor forced the public swimming ponds and baths to be given free to the unemployed two or three times a week. It is possible to get a day's golf for fifty cents over courses, whose beauty and surroundings distract attention from the game. The Plebian Harriers' Club has made quite a name for itself on the racing track, and the young workers are now being catered for in the labor movement so far as football is concerned.

You must not think that with all this pleasantness that the important thing is neglected. Just as the women there can sew, read, attend to the dinner, cooking and rock the baby in the cradle at one and the same time, so can the workers in the movement find time to play and make themselves fit to propagate the glad tidings. Like "Father O'Flynn," they "have a wonderful way wid them."

Mr. Churchill found this out, to his cost in Dundee, where he met his Waterloo. He found the jute mill workers were no mere village statesmen among whom "brass much sollder than the ale went round," but very wide awake individuals, well up to all the moves in politics. He never got such a heckling in all his life, and since then cannot bear to hear the notes of the song, "Up We The Bonnets o' Bonnie Dundee."

The Scotsman dearly loves to heckle a speaker, and often I have been in fits of laughter listening to an Economic League (supposed by tories to be a more palatable name for the workers than Conservative Party) speaker being put through the mill. They have a keen sense of humor, which has been fostered for generations by all sorts of orators, from the Communists, Socialists, Atheists, Anarchists, Salvationists and quacks, on soap boxes at every second street corner. You will see that, in a certain sense, there is freedom of speech

The Mirage

By WALT CARMON

MIKE CONNOLLY looked out on a fog-dimmed distance of the Frisco waterfront. A swan-like schooner glided from the haze between impatient ferries. A fog-horn moaned. A tramp steamer pushed its nose among small vessels like a hog rooting in a flower garden.

Mike Connolly was canned. Fired Free! No more time-clocks, thank Christ! Free. To see the tropics in all their blaze of glory. The palms. The surf. The breezes that are as soft and smooth . . .

For years Mike Connolly had dreamed of the South Seas. Now he was free.

The "Moana" steamed for Tahiti and return. Mike Connolly was in the stoke hole. Seasick.

"Heave 'er up, John—do you good!"

"Here, get under the ventilator!"

In the open sea the ship rolled and pitched. And pitched.

"Christ, what makes 'em leave an office?"

"Yeah, and what brings 'em to the sea?"

The ship rolled and pitched.

"'Es awright mate. 'E 'eaves 'is bloody guts up, but 'ook at 'im work!"

The heat parched the skin. Like a blast from hell uncovered. Mike Connolly stooped over his wheelbarrow. He pushed the coal between two boilers. The ship rolled. A shoulder touched the boilers and flesh sizzled. Mike cursed and stopped for a moment. Seasick.

"C'mon kid. We gotta get steam. Keep your tail up. The first hundred years is the hardest."

Eight hours off. Four hours work. Eight hours off. To sleep—a little. To wash off the coal and sweat. To eat. To scrub clothes. To heal burns. To dream of—Tahiti.

Four hours work. Work for ages.

"Gotta keep steam up, kid. Let's have some coal!"

The hot coals burned the soles from his shoes. His lungs seemed to shrivel in the parching air.

"Not like an office, eh, mate? Make a man of you!"

"Sit down. Rest a minute."

The ship rolled and pitched. Like a maddened demon. Pitched. On and on.

"Cheer up, old boy. Only eight more days to the islands!"

Throb throb the engines beat like the heart of a giant. Like aching muscles.

"Jim, what is Tahiti like? The natives gentle, friendly? The air soft and smooth?"

"Yeah, it's alright. Damn good liquor the Frenchies have in Tahiti!"

Hand over hand Mike Connolly dragged his weary bones up the ladder. A scorching ladder. You left the skin of your hands on that ladder. Out of the stoke-hole.

"Here, put this in you. My last drop."

The red liquor ran through the veins of Mike Connolly. Warmed them.

"Only one more week, old man."

The air was soft now. And warm. Smooth. A school of porpoise played around the boat. Flashes of silver flying fish glistened in the sun. Sometimes land in the distance.

"Only one more week, old man!"

Christ, how tired he felt!

"Are they beautiful, Jim? Do they look like in the pictures—grace-ful, quiet, colorful?"

"What, the women?"

"No, the islands."

"Aw, hell!"

Daybreak is a riot in Tahiti. First only a light haze. Then quickly the sun appears. Alert. Insistent. Like awakening youth.

"Well, Mike, there she is!"

A green mound that stands up gloriously from the sea and calls to the ships that pass. Near the top, tiny thatched huts. Palms fringe the shore. Movement and gray color on the beach. The surf throws a lacy necklace around it all.

"C'mon, wake up! Don't stand there lookin' stupid!"

The muscles throbbed and ached. Ached.

"Tired, eh! man?"

Tahiti—Christ, how sore his bones felt?

"You'll be awright tonight. Tahiti, boy—liquor, n' women!"

The captain called from the bridge. Officers repeated on the bow.

"Aye, aye, sir."

Anchor chains rattled. Engines stopped throbbing. The giant rests at Tahiti.

The Oregan Cafe was a boiling cauldron of motion. Of men who came from the sea. Sailors. Stokers. Stewards. Natives. Women.

"'Ere Mike, I can't 'andle two o' them. Take this wench on m' right."

Mike Connolly gazed on it all in a stupor. He could not think. Every spot in his body ached. Bones, muscles, burns; his body throbbed like the ship that still rolled under his feet.

"Here, cutie, what'll you have?"

Crash of glasses. Song. Din of laughter and full chested speech.

A glass was placed in Mike's hand.

"Snap out of it, boy, you're in Tahiti!"

The raw liquor ran through his bones and muscles and burns. Warmed them. Christ, it was good!

"Fill 'er up Frenchy."

Another glass. And another.

"Only beer, sweetie? No whiskey? What t' hell!"

White teeth flash in a smiling, oval, brown face. White flowers in smooth black hair. Skin as soft and warm.

The "Moana" was ready to sail for San Francisco. Steam was up. Anchor chains rattled.

"Here, Jim, give me a hand with this fool."

The engine began to throb again. Slowly.

"He never drew a sober breath in Tahiti."

The engine throbbed faster and faster.

"That damn wench had him f'r three days."

"Jesus, look at the flowers she put in his hair. Looks like one o' the natives."

The "Moana" passed the reef and into the open sea. The ship began to roll and pitch.

"C'mon kid, wake up! Here drink this."

The ship rolled and pitched—

Mike Connolly wakened slowly. Every bone still ached. Burns throbbed, like the engine. Hands swollen. Inflamed.

"C'mon snap out of it. Two more weeks and you're back in Frisco."

Frisco?

"Man, you sure was pie-eyed. Here, drink this. Pick you up."

Two weeks? Frisco?

"But Tahiti—Jim. You don't mean—"

Mike Connolly stumbled to the deck. Christ, how his bones ached. The lights of Tahiti blinked in the distance.

Suddenly he recalled bits of a strange world. A small hut. A grass mat. A smiling brown face. White teeth. Skin as soft and smooth—

"Feel better now, old man?"

Mike Connolly looked at his swollen hands. He stared for a moment at the lights growing smaller in the distance. Then he laughed a hard, curse-ridden laughter.

The Fall of a Young Man

By A. HENRY SCHNEER

HE is a young man of 25. A little late in acquiring his laurels. Through no fault of his own. Not being born with a golden spoon in his mouth, he had to interrupt his studies by earning his own living, selling stocks and bonds. But he was not blocked thereby. He put his pennies together and fought his way to a "summa cum laude," graduating with the highest honors.

This intermission in business gave him a touch of reality that brought him to his collegiate tasks with a questioning attitude. It emboldened him to challenge some of the orthodox tenets handed out dogmatically by the best of professors. Which caused him a great deal of trouble and stress, sometimes raising the entire issue of the possibility of losing his diploma. Still he persisted: tenacious, courageous, fearless.

Natively endowed with a brilliant mind, he cultivated it the more by those subtleties of thinking found to hand in the intricacies of mathematics, physics and the exact sciences generally. There was something about their problems and solutions that magically enticed his dialectic attention. He came to love ideas as one loves sport, dancing or women. It was, some said, "a means of escape." Not so, for when it came to the senior subjects, for example, those of economics, politics and history, his classmates found an unexpected militant against the myths and superstitions of the regulation orthodox here too.

For example, in the study of the Civil War, he drove his professor, back of slavery, back of Lincoln, back of the north, back of the abolitionists, until he found himself advancing the "economic interpretation" of history. Out of his own mind. Uncoached by the rising new school of American historians who were flirting with Marxism, unaware of the drastic revolutionary implications. Sanderson was a scientific explorer, and hence probed truth to its ultimates, following whither it led him. Thus, he was brought, willy-nilly, to the whole school of Marxist literature, through the problems raised by the inadequacy of the bourgeois scholarship as coming from the lips of the best of university teachers.

Socially alert, Sanderson began to frequent the meetings and gatherings of the socialists, liberals, anarchists, and found himself invited or taken to by some of his classmates, male and female. He heard the arguments pro and con, eagerly read the references, followed anxiously the free personalities of the men and women who were the protagonists. Armed with these newer truths he came back to the classroom with an arsenal of facts that he had hard time to restrain for sheer fullness of speech. He was really becoming a bombshell. Why not?

Not caring particularly for the limelight (he was simply not built that way), it took a long while for the Dean to spot him. For the administrative details of the Dean kept this versatile young man so busy as to be absorbed to feel this new angle of Sanderson to whom he was really attached as senior to junior scholar. Furthermore, there was already rumor of Sanderson's summa cum laude graduation. A logical step, for there were very few to surpass Sanderson in all-around scholarship.

Dean Mason was not your dry-as-dust academician. He was fully alert to the trend of the times. He had a business sense as well as a devotion to scholarly theory. It was even said, in a whisper, that he had been a revolutionist abroad. Some said a German socialist. So that, Mason knew his man. Sanderson was no phenomenon to him. For all his routine, Dean Mason had been following the evolution of our scholastic friend, now turning towards radicalism.

This issue came to a climax with the Phi Betta Kappa selections. The Dean's was the deciding ballot. He had already had his mind made up in favor of Sanderson, despite all the expectant hostility of his colleagues. But for obverse reasons. The majority was in favor of dismissing the issue by the simple act of refusal. That were a simple matter to those in power. There were decades of precedent. Any one of Sanderson's essays on History would do the trick. But no! Dean Mason brought them around to a point of strategy hitherto unknown to the Alma Mater.

"Vote 'Yes'," argued the wily craftsman. "For only thus shall we have him within our midst for the next three years, when we can influence him away from these dangerous doctrines." And then he sallied forth with all the intensive scholarship he was capable of, going back to the proud days and works of the great masters; quoting Marx and Engels and Bohm-Bauerch and Plechanov of course, with a wilful distortion that would shame the spirit of Truth herself. Waxing hot over the pollution of the modern young mind on the part of propagandist plays, pulpits, press, publications, meetings, societies, pernicious disloyal professors, happily ousted. There was a Freudian hate akin to flagellation—to beated sadism in the Dean's denigration of his "former" gods, his youthful "ideals." Sanderson was the Jacobean sacrifice to the gods Mammon and Moloch.

He won his point. Sanderson was awarded Phi Beta Kappa. Sanderson was made Fellow in History. Sanderson was rapidly advanced to Associate Professor. Sanderson was given the freedom of the university, the choice of the best hours, classes, fellow-instructors, appointments. There was nothing his heart wanted he did not get. The Dean had won. The Dean had been the powerful pragmatist. Success was his. For hadn't Alma Mater taken back unto its bosom this lion in embryo and weaned him away from radicalism only to become another lamb, whilom a more servile one, having been nurtured upon the milk of human kindliness and care! And who that knows American culture. American forces, American life will dare to assert that, within the next generation of college men and women, the Sandersons of today will not be emasculated into the Deans Mason of tomorrow? How shall we prevent history from deflecting itself thus, by inert repetition?

But the pillar of fire is only bits of scenery left over from the Last Great Exodus, the last grandiose trumpet-blare of the bourgeois saviors, the bubbling idealists, the eternal children of the mind.

I know that not all have proved as fatuous and ineffectual as Wasserman. But take the best of them: Rolland. Rolland foresaw the war and hurled his flaming denunciation against it. And Rolland remained unshaken throughout the war and suffered for it. But Rolland has been motivated all along by a pacifistic humanitarianism that has much in common with Wasserman's neo-Christianism.

And Werfel. Franz Werfel, who on the eve of the World War wrote his poems, "Revolutions-Aufruf," ("Call to Revolution") and "Die Wortemacher des Krieges," ("The Phrasemakers of the War"), would probably smile at Wasserman's naive faith. But after denouncing the master classes, neither Rolland nor Werfel has taken the logical step in definite alignment with the working class struggle. This step has been taken by Ernst Toller, the German dramatist and poet, by Imre Balint, the Hungarian novelist, and by a few others. But most of the great leaders remain stuck in the mud of pre-war idealism. And those who remain aloof and withhold their aid, no matter how sympathetic they may be, become in a sense the abettors of the decaying capitalist system that they denounce.

England. Bernard Shaw, a "teacup revolutionist," a droll, quixotic fellow, a doting sage. Bertrand Russell, turned professional popularizer, and very very careful about Soviet Russia. Havelock Ellis, a summarizer, an anthologist of ideas and a great scientist, remains isolated. He opposed the war, but he opposed it largely because it was ugly, esthetically unbeautiful, not because it was criminal.

France. It's hard to tell what's happening in France. Groups and grouplets and sub-divisions ad infinitum, gaudy "isms," seeking chiefly mental aphrodisiacs. The free revolutionary spirits of France have rallied around Henry Barbusse and Georges Duhamel in the Clarte movement.

In Spain Miguel de Unamuno has become the leader of a new nationalist cultural movement. Unamuno, though a philosophical neo-Christian

Twilight of the Gods

By A. B. MAGIL

THE other night I sat in Horace Mann Auditorium in New York and listened to a lecture in German by Jakob Wasserman, author of "The World's Illusion," "The Goose Man," and many other works that have caused a stir in the world. Herr Wasserman, a short, semi-rotund man, with a beautiful dark oriental face, spoke softly in a voice full of compassion and sadness. It was all as gentle as a lullaby and I had to mentally prod myself several times to follow the flow of his ideas.

Herr Wasserman spoke on "Humanitact," Humanity. What the world needs, he said, is humanity. And humanity is understable, it will yet prevail. Revolutions, theories, social upheavals these are mere incidents. Humanity is the important thing. And the religion of humanity is Christianity.

Christianity! I, it took nun ages and ages to develop into the biological being that he is, why should it not take his soul ages and ages to become that pure christian afflatus that it ought to be? Christianity is just beginning. "The God that we must post-date in order that the world should not fall to pieces, demands and possesses patience."

Humanity. Christianity. The voice of Herr Wasserman was very beautiful, very sad.

Never before had the inadequacy, the pitiful helplessness of bourgeois idealism been so starkly thrust upon me.

This is a child, I said.

Concerning Jakob Wasserman's merits as a novelist I have nothing to say. But besides being a novelist, it must be remembered that Wasserman is supposed to be one of the intellectual leaders of Europe. And in Europe's present crisis, in this hour when after four years' agony, she is on the verge of being betrayed again by the hired pups of the master classes, what shining word, what word of fearless denunciation and scorn does one of her intellectual pathfinders bring us?

Humanity. Christianity.

Once more the beery German sentimentality. Once more the soggy phrases that one thought the war had shot full of holes. The old threadbare bunk in modern dress.

Wasserman is a mystic.

"Behold, I bring you a great pillar of fire—Humanity—to light your way by night."

But the pillar of fire is only bits of scenery left over from the Last Great Exodus, the last grandiose trumpet-blare of the bourgeois saviors, the bubbling idealists, the eternal children of the mind.

I know that not all have proved as fatuous and ineffectual as Wasserman. But take the best of them: Rolland. Rolland foresaw the war and hurled his flaming denunciation against it. Franz Werfel, who on the eve of the World War wrote his poems, "Revolutions-Aufruf," ("Call to Revolution") and "Die Wortemacher des Krieges," ("The Phrasemakers of the War"), would probably smile at Wasserman's naive faith. But after denouncing the master classes, neither Rolland nor Werfel has taken the logical step in definite alignment with the working class struggle. This step has been taken by Ernst Toller, the German dramatist and poet, by Imre Balint, the Hungarian novelist, and by a few others. But most of the great leaders remain stuck in the mud of pre-war idealism. And those who remain aloof and withhold their aid, no matter how sympathetic they may be, become in a sense the abettors of the decaying capitalist system that they denounce.

England. Bernard Shaw, a "teacup revolutionist," a droll, quixotic fellow, a doting sage. Bertrand Russell, turned professional popularizer, and very very careful about Soviet Russia. Havelock Ellis, a summarizer, an anthologist of ideas and a great scientist, remains isolated. He opposed the war, but he opposed it largely because it was ugly, esthetically unbeautiful, not because it was criminal.

France. It's hard to tell what's happening in France. Groups and grouplets and sub-divisions ad infinitum, gaudy "isms," seeking chiefly mental aphrodisiacs. The free revolutionary spirits of France have rallied around Henry Barbusse and Georges Duhamel in the Clarte movement.

In Spain Miguel de Unamuno has become the leader of a new nationalist cultural movement. Unamuno, though a philosophical neo-Christian mystic, is important as an inspirational force and because of his unecompromising opposition to both the old monarchists and the present dictatorship.

And everywhere they are turning hopefully to Russia, the child giant of preternatural wisdom and strength. Among Europe's jabbering old men and hysterical old women Russia is shaking off the sleep of a thousand years, and is conquering each day, not with phrases, tears and canned wistfulness, but with plain, hard, prosaic deeds.

And America? The land of the free and home of the etc.?

Before the war. Everything was lovely. Utopia was only a short way up the road. Capital was understanding labor so well and labor was understanding capital so well and everything was Jake.

Patrician. Votes for Women. Reformism. Anti-Trust Busting. Socialism. Uplift. Anti-Saloon League. Ethical Culture. Elbert Hubbard. Theodore Roosevelt. Woodrow Wilson. LaFollette. Henry Ford. Taylor System. Pan-Americanism. Brotherhood of Man. Social Service. Slumming. The Poor Working-Clawss.

Came the WAR.

And what of the dream of Randolph Bourne and his fellows? That too has been shot to pieces. With lavender socialism in one hand and the austere torch of learning in the other, these missionaries wanted to go forth and sow the seeds of a new beauty and culture. But they were content to sow them within the capitallst state, not realising that only a fake, exploited beauty and culture, the monopoly of a select few, could spring from such arid soil. The interest of these intellectuals in the working class was largely romantic and wistful. The smell of a strike would have sent them scurrying like rabbits into their particular intellectual holes. Van Wyck Brooks, who talked so blandly about "a coalition of the thinkers and the workers," never lifted a finger to bring about such a coalition.

Read the gooey, plush-lined prose of Waldo Frank and rub your eyes to make sure this is not a medieval monk.

And look what happened to Lewisohn. After the insurgent, lyrical protest of "Upstream," look at the complete collapse of "Israel," a Zionist blurb.

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THOSE of you who have something to lose through a hole in the pocket should purchase a package of fishhooks. Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the first discoverer of the North Pole, will be out of Leavenworth in a few days and as the Dr. is one of our foremost go-getters it is not likely that he will long permit others to gather the cash on which explorers as well as exploiters feed. A lawyer who admires Cook is appointed probation officer and under the Decoges into competition with the Standard Oil Company, Sinclair, Fall and Doheny, his days on earth outside the penitentiary may not be short-lived and he may yet be elected governor of Texas.

FREDERICK MOORE, special Times correspondent in Shanghai, should know a good piece of propaganda when he sees it. Mr. Moore declares it is hard to know what's what in China because of the cloud of propaganda that obstructs the journalistic vision. We are not sure gather the cash on which explorers as a scapegoat to excuse his lying. He has invented more fairy tales at the expense of the Nationalists than all other imperialist correspondents combined. The smoke-screen that clouds Moore's vision is not due to propaganda but to the dust that is being raised by the revolutionary armies as they sweep on to Shanghai.

COMING events sometimes cast their shadows before. Calvin Coolidge is not yet a lame duck but his right wrist is in a wooden bandage. The limb was not injured shaking hands with visitors on St. Patrick's day since the president did not even wear one of the green-tinted carnations sent to the White House from the greenhouse of the department of agriculture. The president has a better chance of holding the K. K. K. vote than he has of gaining the catholic vote despite the extreme consideration shown by Congressman Gallivan of Massachusetts for the defense of the president against radical attacks because of his Mexican and Nicaraguan policy.

GOVERNOR ALFRED SMITH wore green socks, green handkerchief, green-striped shirt and a green shamrock in his lapel on March 17. No doubt this news will be cabled to Ireland and the Free State officials will urge the Irish voters in America not to forget the democrats on election day. Eamonn DeValera, the fake advocate of Irish independence utters nonsense on St. Patrick's day about the loyalty of the Irish to Rome, while the pope's official organ praises the murderer Mussolini, who has robbed the Italian masses of whatever liberties they had gained through years of struggle. Between those bogus friends of Irish freedom the Irish masses are in a nice pickle. St. Patrick's day is utilized by the capitalist flunkeys to bind the Irish workers still closer to the capitalist hitching post. It is about time the radical movement paid more attention to agitation among the foreign elements in this country who

Italy Prepares For War on Jugoslavs

Rush Troops North; Fascist Press Prepares Ground

ROME, March 20.—The extensive movement of troops to northern Italy and widely-circulated rumors of war are creating a flurry in Rome.

The Italian press, which is carefully supervised by Mussolini, is preparing Italy for a Balkan war with scare headlines about military preparations in Jugoslavia and vicious denunciations of France. The Giornale d'Italia and the Tribuna of Rome, official Fascist organ, accused France and Jugoslavia yesterday of an anti-Italian policy and carried despatches from Belgrade describing extensive military preparations there.

Fascist Troops on Border.

That large bodies of Fascist troops are being rushed north was admitted by General Cavallero, Under Secretary of State for War, in a speech in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. General Cavalero said that fifty-two battalions of infantry, eighty-nine battalions of artillery, five of Alpine troops, twelve squadrons of cavalry and fifteen engineer companies had been, transferred from Southern to Northern Italy. He inscribed the movement of the troops to "purely technical reasons".

Manufacture Munitions.

Italian expansion in the Balkans makes war not unlikely. She has been manufacturing munitions and gases on a large scale, and has consistently refused to make public the extent of her military preparations. Her virtual annexation of Albania, her aggression in Dalmatia and her recent ratification of the Bessarabian treaty, by means of which she acquired the support of Roumania, has made her the object of Jugoslav suspicion.

Jugoslavs Deny Preparation.

BELGRADE, March 20.—Making a flat denial of Italian accusations that the Jugoslavs are making warlike preparations on the Albanian frontier, the Belgrade Government addressed a note to the British Foreign Office yesterday.

The note declares that "there are fewer troops on the Albanian frontier now than at any time in the last six years". The British Minister, who called at the Foreign Ministry yesterday, is reported to have supported certain of the Italian contentions, notably that aid has been given to Albanian political emigres.

England With Italy.

Great Britain has allied herself with the Italian government and is reported to have prompted the signing of the Bessarabian treaty by Italy

Spring Plotting.

VIENNA, March 20.—Intrigue in the Balkans is developing with the coming of spring. Under the guise of social calls and health cures the monarchs of Jugo Slavia and Roumania are making visits of major political importance. In their train as they travel about are practical politicians and skilled diplomats.

King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia has ended a visit to the Roumanian royal court and is on his way home. He expects to stay in Belgrade for a short time and then leave for Paris where he will endeavor to strengthen the bonds of Jugo Slavia to France, the later being Jugo Slavia's principal friend among the large powers. Alexander's visit will coincide with the visit of the French Mediterranean fleet in Constanza, Roumania, where it is due March 20.

Point Guns At Bucharest.

While the fleet is visiting Roumania as a warning that France still feels that Roumania owes something, King Ferdinand will depart for Italy.

Roumania's enthusiasm concerning Italy has increased daily since the Italians ratified the Bessarabian treaty. The Roumanian parliament has voted to erect a statue of Mussolini in Kisheneff, capital of Bessarabia.

According to the Belgrade newspaper, Politka, Italy will shortly sign a secret treaty with Bulgaria as part of her plans for decisive power in the Balkans.

FRANC STABILIZED AT EXPENSE OF FRENCH WORKERS

Revolutionary Unions For Struggle

PARIS.—When the Committee of experts appointed by Briand's government presented in June, 1926, a plan for the recovery of France's finances and the stabilisation of the franc, the General Unitary Confederation of Labour definitely and clearly stated in its appeal to the working class that the whole plan is to be carried out at the expense of the working class. The coming into power of Poincare, in July, 1926, insured the realisation of this plan precisely in this way.

From this time the franc has been rapidly rising in July, 1926, the English pound was quoted at 240 francs on the Paris Bourse, and in January, 1927, at 124. This revaluation immediately lowered the export capacity of that part of French industry which works for the foreign market. Prices on French goods began to approximate to those of the rest of the world prices, and the purchasing power of the population began at the same time to diminish. As a result of this, production began to be cut down in almost all branches of industry, unemployment began to grow all over the country, spreading from the Paris district to all other industrial centres.

As early as December, 1926, there was not a single branch of industry, except the coal industry, in which

Filipino Cigarmakers Demand Wage Increase

MANILA, March 20.—Demanding an increase in wages, more than a thousand cigar makers have gone out on strike.

The strike originated two days ago when the cigarmakers walked out in protest against the dismissal of 410 workers. The strike is spreading rapidly.

BANK ASKS COURT FOR ORDER TO END AFFAIRS OF BLOODY "BESCO"

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, March 20.—"Besco", the British Empire Steel Corporation, which with the aid of President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, brutally broke a strike of its coal and steel miners a short time ago, is going thru a stock jobbing transformation.

Moves To Liquidate.

In a motion before Justice Chisholm in the supreme court, the National Trust Company of Toronto, in its capacity as receiver and manager of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, asks for the winding up of the British Empire Steel Corporation and the Dominion Steel Corporation, largest constituent of the British Empire Steel Corporation and holding company of the Dominion Coal Company and the Dominion Iron and Steel Company.

The British Empire Steel Corporation involves practically all coal mining and steel making plants in Nova Scotia, located in Cape Breton mainly and the eastern mainland of Nova Scotia.

Squeezing Little Fellows.

Rumors of high finance, of mismanagement by some of the managers most responsible for bringing in the troops at the time of the strike, and of a "United States style" raid on the smaller stockholders, to crush them to the wall and take over their property, are not absent from the deal.

Ludvinka, Roy, Stole Legal Fund, Says Board Member

BELLAIRE, Ohio, March 20.—William Roy, vice president of the Ohio district organization of the United Mine Workers of America, and Frank Ledvinka, president of the Bellaire sub-district, resigned in the fall of 1925, under fire, charged with graft, and unable to answer the charges, stated James Kunick, former executive board member of Bellaire sub-district, in the sub-district convention here.

Kunick, who is related by marriage to Ledvinka, and was formerly quite friendly to him, told the delegates that while a board member for the sub-district, his suspicions were gradually aroused that Ledvinka and Roy were grafting on the legal department money.

Graft Kept Men In Jail.

He had at that time no tangible proof, but found his position uncomfortable, and wanted to resign. Vague promises of everything would be cleared up kept him in office until his term expired, after which he was appointed organizer in the Pinhandle field.

"I found conditions bad", said Kunick, "Many of our men were in jail, and it was in that manner that I learned, that within three months time, the officers in charge of that district besides paying the regular fee to the legal department of this organization had spent more than $12,000 for other lawyers.

Ruthenberg Memorial Meeting at Utica Is Credit to the Party

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

Utica, N. Y., March 20.—The Ruthenberg memorial meeting was held here last night at 131 Washington St. It was very well attended. Herbert Benjamin, District organizer of the Workers (Communist) Party spoke on the work of Comrade Ruthenberg in the Workers (Communist) Party and for the workers of this country. At the hall there was a banner in red and black over Ruthenberg's picture.

Benjamin appealed for new members for the Workers (Communist) Party, two new members joining.

Sapiro To Let Jewish Issue Alone Now

Will Change Tactics; Admits Getting Million Dollars

DETROIT, March 20.—The so-styled Jewish issue in the Ford-Sapiro million dollar libel suit will be abandoned for the present, it was disclosed here tonight. Robert S. Marx, associate counsel for Aaron Sapiro, announced the change of tactics after a conference with William Henry Gallagher, chief of Sapiro's legal staff.

Meanwhile, Sapiro has admitted that the fees collected by him from farmers' organizations, were, as Ford's attorney charged, about a million dollars in aggregate. This statement was made in an interview with newspapermen in his suite at the Book-Cadillac Hotel. Sapiro defended his price as not exorbitant.

Not Well Built.

That only thirty of the more than sixty cooperatives built by Sapiro still survive, was also admitted by one of his associates who was present at the interview.

The case will open this morning with the examination of William J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent, by W. H. Gallagher, attorney for Sapiro. Gallagher will attempt to trace the origin of the stories about the "Jewish ring," which appeared in the Independent in 1924 and 1926.

Simultaneous with the announcement by Marx, Clifford B. Longley, general counsel for the Ford Motor Company, revealed Ford's probable testimony and defined the position of the defense, as follows:

Ford Doesn't Read Paper.

"Mr. Ford, who is now in Sudbury, Mass., and who may not be on the witness stand for several days, probably will testify to the fact that he not only never read the articles in the Dearborn Independent that are alleged to have libelled Sapiro, but he never heard of Sapiro until after the suit was brought.

"The defense will seek to prove that a group of men, mostly Jews, did exist in connection with matters set forth in the Independent's articles and we will show that Sapiro had associated himself with a band, group, or however you might term this body, but we will prove that the construction placed by Sapiro on the statement that the articles set him forth in a libelous light was ridiculous."

"Ring of Jews."

It is Sapiro's claim that the Independent libeled him by charging that he was an instrument of a "ring of Jews who sought to exploit the American farmer" through the Sapiro plan of co-operative marketing of farm products by associations of which he served as organizer and attorney.

Smash Defense Of Shanghai; Cut Road

Northern Army Split; Many Units Go Over to People

SHANGHAI, March 20.—All defense forces of the northern militarists were reported smashed today, and nothing but bad weather was left to hinder the march of the Peoples' army into Shanghai and beyond.

By piercing the lines of the war lords at Sunsiking, about thirty miles southeast of Shanghai, the Nationalists cleared the path to Shanghai.

Smash Northern Line.

The collapse of the northern line followed by about 7,000 troops of General Chang Tsung-Chang, the Shantungese war lord, was brought about by an outflanking movement by the Nationalist forces. Without making any attempt to resistance, the troops of the war lords evacuated their position.

While one section of the Nationalist troops were storming Sungkiang, others were hammering away at Nanking and Soochow. Soochow, a key position on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway, is probably in the hands of the Nationalists, while the fortress commanding the southern entrance to Nanking is reported as having been captured.

Enter the Marines.

The troops of the foreign imperialists conferred here today. Municipal councillors regarding "precautionary measures" in view of the imminent capture of the city. Orders were issued for the entire United States marine corps to parade Monday in full kit, with naked bayonets.

To facilitate the entrance of the Nationalist troops thousands of workers are going out on strike. They have succeeded in tying up many key industries, and are even preparing to take over the government of the city as soon as it falls into Nationalist hands. Organizations of workers, students, teachers and merchants are continuing to elect delegates to the People's Assembly.

The victories of the Nationalist troops have been due in a large measure to the defection of large numbers of the troops of the war lords.

Sun Loots Towns.

General Sun Chun-Fang, so-called "defender of Shanghai," who was reported in the Nationalists and replaced by Chang Tsung-Chang, is reported to be looting towns in the Yishing-Chanrchow sector.

Dead Infants Found.

The bodies of two infants, one four months old and the other but a few days, were found by police yesterday in small suitcases in separated parts of the city.

The three-day old child, a boy, had died of exposure. The other child, found in a satchel checked a month ago at a stand near an uptown subway entrance, had been strangled to death with a ribbon tied around its throat.

Five More Ruthenberg Memorials Are Held

Five Ruthenberg memorial meetings were held during the week end. Thousands of workers gathered in Brooklyn, N. Y., Niagara Falls, N. Y. and Jamestown, N. Y. in Warren, Ohio, and Ithaca, N. Y. Tonight a meeting will be held in Washington, D. C. at the Typographical Temple.

The Brooklyn, N. Y. meeting, held at the Royal Palace was addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER and L. Paussika. Ray Ragozin presided. The Lithuanian Chorus sang. The Ruthenberg membership drive was started at the gathering which is the beginning of a move to enroll scores of new members in the Workers (Communist) Party in the Williamsburgh section of Brooklyn.

WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY MEMBERSHIP IN FULL RESPONSE TO THE RUTHENBERG ENROLLMENT CALL

THE districts of the Workers (Communist) Party thruout the country are showing countless signs of energetic activity in the Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive.

District One—the New England District, exclusive of Connecticut—has pledged itself to secure 500 new Party members by May first. The comrades of the Party in this district feel that this will only be a very small contribution on their part towards making up for the loss suffered by the working class in the death of Comrade Ruthenberg. Boston pledges itself to pay "a proud tribute to our dead leader."

Make Special Efforts.

All of the cities in this district are to make special efforts to win to party membership the subscribers of the various Communist papers in the country. Special committees are also being organized to win back the old members.

The workers in the shops are likewise responding to provide the finances with which to carry on. One worker writes:

"Enclosed find money order for $10.00 with which to carry on the work which was left unfinished by Comrade Ruthenberg. This is meant to make his memory dear, as he really was for the working class. Use as you see fit, making the place which he left less.

Regretfully—"

Rushes to New York for Special Meeting of Central Labor Union Tonight as Gold is Freed

WHAT'S BEHIND TONIGHT'S MEETING

1. "Ben Gold is in jail tonight, and we hope to keep him there forever."—Matthew Woll at a meeting of the seah Greek local at Bryant Hall last Friday night.

2. "We have the fullest co-operation of the New York police force in our work of cleaning up the Furriers' Union."—Edward F. McGrady, head of the "special reorganization committee" of the A. F. of L., at the same meeting.

3. In denying bail to Ben Gold and nine other fur workers last Friday, Judge Smith at the Mineola Court House declared that his action was prompted by "certain information" in his possession that they were "dangerous characters."

4. "Tonight's meeting is being called to clean out the Communists from the local labor movement."—John Coughlin, secretary of the N. Y. Central Trades and Labor Council, in commenting on Pres. Green's call for the meeting.

Evidently enraged by the letter from Ben Gold of the furriers' Joint Board, charging that the arrest and beating of fur workers was directly due to his "criminal provocations and incitement," President William Green of the American Federation of Labor has ordered a special meeting of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council tonight, at Beethoven Hall, to give further consideration to the job of throwing the "comoonists" out of the unions.

In the meantime, Ben Gold, who with the nine other fur workers, was released from the Mineola jail on Saturday afternoon, is beginning today an investigation to find out just who was responsible for the so-called "information" which lead Judge Smith to hold them over night, without bail, when they appeared on Friday at the Nassau County Court House to plead "not guilty" to charges of assault.

After these union men had been questioned Friday, and the district attorney had informed the lawyers that they would be released on bail, Judge Smith declared that because of "certain information" he had received he could not fix bail. The men were held prisoners for over 24 hours and then following a second hearing they were released on $10,000 bail each—which for certain of the cases was a reduction from the $25,000 amount fixed at the time of arrest.

Woll Caused Jailing.

Declaring that officials of the American Federation were directly responsible for the charges against the ten furriers, Gold said upon his release:

"The union smashing attemps of Matthew Woll, Edward F. McGrady and the other A. F. of L. bureaucrats have been clearly proved by the circumstances surrounding the action of Judge Smith in holding us without bail in the Mineola case.

Woll Boasted.

"While we were held in prison on obviously framed up charges, Matthew Woll declared at a meeting of Greek workers in Bryant Hall on Friday evening that he hoped we could be kept in jail forever. And Edward F. McGrady, appointed by the president of the A. F. of L. to

The Black Company: Labor Officials, Bosses, Detectives and Judges

"Gold is in prison tonight and we hope to keep him there forever."

Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and acting president of the Civic Federation.

The officials of the American Federation of Labor—Green, Woll and McGrady—the officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers' and Furriers' unions—Sigman and Schnechtman—are now acting openly in the dual role of police stoolpigeons and prosecutors.

The statements of Woll and McGrady at the meeting in Bryant Hall Friday night, the arrest of Ben Gold and other leaders of the Furriers Joint Board on Friday, the campaign of violence and intimidation in the fur and garment districts conducted jointly by detectives and gangsters, the meeting scheduled for Monday night under instructions from President Green (a facsimile of the call for which we publish today) all indicate that the united front between the bosses, the police and right wing officialdom is complete.

For open repudiation of the elementary code of the trade union movement nothing like this has been seen in the United States—not even during the war period.

Some of the things that are being done in the New York labor movement are almost unbelievable. They prove that the right wing officialdom will stop at nothing to disrupt and destroy sections of unions which have for years had a reputation for militancy and to jail trade union leaders and organizers whose only crime is that they have fought and won strikes.

Matthew Woll, vice president of the A. F. of L. and acting president of the Civic Federation speaking at a meeting Friday night said:

"Gold is in prison tonight and we hope to keep him there forever."

Edward McGrady, organizer for the A. F. of L. at the same meeting made the following statement:

"We have the full cooperation of the police department."

Woll and McGrady therefore admit that they are working with the police and manufacturers to jail trade unionists on charges made by manufacturers against whom the Furriers Union was on strike.

Woll and McGrady are working with the police and bosses to frame up Gold and other strike leaders. It will be remembered that the furriers union won their strike and that President Green

MORGAN BANKER SLATED TO TAKE KELLOGG'S JOB

'Nervous Nell' Blunders Too Often, They Say

WASHINGTON, March 20. — Dwight Morrow, partner in Morgan & Co., and college roommate of Calvin Coolidge, now president of the United States, may succeed Frank Kellogg as Secretary of State within a few weeks.

Morrow, for the first time since Henry P. Davison discovered him on a commuters' train in pre-war days and took him into Morgan & Co., has begun to court political limelight. He has tentatively agreed to make a speech of a political character in Washington, late in April. New York papers have printed a report that he is about to resign from Morgan & Co. His confidential talks with President Coolidge are more frequent now than for two years past.

Kellogg Fired?

Secretary Kellogg has been shown his hat. In spite of solemn assurances to the contrary, coming from Coolidge himself, Kellogg is to be dropped. He knows that he is not wanted. His friends are now confidentially urging press correspondents to "lay off" attacks on him, so that he may retire gracefully, and not under fire. They say he is willing and ready to resign.

It now seems fairly well established that Hughes, who quit the State Department two years ago to enrich himself as counsel for Standard Oil and half a dozen other huge interests, is in the good graces of Coolidge, and that he and Morrow are now consulting on changes in the cabinet.

Senate May Balk.

Warren will be placed in the cabinet if Coolidge can get the Senate to confirm him. Once the Senate twice rejected Warren when he was appointed Attorney General, and the new Senate will be even more hostile to his being placed in charge of foreign affairs. This brings up the possibility that Coolidge will shift more than one of his cabinet, to make a place for Warren. Hoover might be made Secretary of State, and Warren placed at the head of the Commerce Department. Very important financial interests, working through the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, are promoting Hoover's candidacy. If Morrow is not given the prize, Hoover is probably second choice.

Both have been counted as commercial imperialists, who look upon the government as an agency for extending American trade and American investments abroad.

Minister Finds High Rents of New York Prevent Marriages

Fear that high rents in New York City would materially decrease the number of marriages was expressed yesterday by Rev. Worth M. Tippy of the Federation Churches of Christ in America.

Tippy asserted that this conclusion is drawn from an elaborate study made by the Federation into the causes of fewer marriages in a number of large cities.

"This has shown," he asserted, "that 10 per cent more young women between the ages of 20 and 35 living in country districts marry than those living in cities, and, again taking into account the population, 5 per cent. fewer children of school age attend school in the cities than in the country."

Weiner Case To Jury.

The case of Robert Weiner, charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Warden Peter Mallon during the attempted escape of three gunmen from the Tombs last November, went to the jury in Judge Maneuso's court yesterday.

Japanese Protest to Ambassador Over Case Of Sacco and Vanzetti

TOKIO, March 20. — Twenty members of The Black League marched in orderly fashion to the American Embassy yesterday and demanded the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. The ambassador was absent, but the second secretary, Eugene H. Doorman, said he listen to their protest against the attempted railroading to death of the two Italian workers in Massachusetts. He assured that the communication should come thru the Japanese foreign office.

The Japanese government promptly showed its sympathy with the would-be executioners in America by arresting two of the delegation.

This is the second attempt of the delegation to see Ambassador McVeigh, who is always "out" when they come. The result of last Sunday's visit was to double the guard of police around the American embassy.

BILL UP TO STOP PRESENT RUNNING OF ROTTEN MILK

Claim Impure Fluid Is Smuggled to New York

ALBANY, March 20.—Every person in charge of a milk gathering or distributing plant would have to be licensed by the state of the Kirkland bill, passed by the assembly today is signed by Gov. Smith. The measure has already been approved by the senate.

Smuggle In Bad Milk.

The bill comes as a climax to months of agitation against the sale of "bootleg" milk in and around New York by members of the gang involved in the graft scandals for which Thomas J. Clougher, secretary to former Health Commissioner Frank J. Monaghan, is now serving a sentence in Sing Sing, was revealed by Health Commissioner Harris quite recently.

At that time Harris declared that the lives of thousands of New York workers are being endangered by bootleg shipments of milk and cream made by various concerns.

Hold The Evidence.

Lovell reported that [illegible] this check, as evidence. The lawyer he referred to, he afterwards learned, was W. J. Walker. The grafting of legal department money amounted to from twenty to thirty percent, Kinnick thought, and others might have got more. It was stolen from the defense funds of men who were on trial for their union activities.

Grafter Reactionary.

Upon leaving office, Lovell said that he maintained a personal machine in the miners' union, which they used effectively in fight progressive forces and to boost their own fortunes. They were instrumental in [illegible] campaign for John L. Lewis in the Ohio district, they succeeded on several occasions in denying halls to Workers Party speakers who wished to address the miners, and they fought for reactionary measures generally.

ARTICLE IX.—THE 1905 STRIKE—WHO BROKE IT?

By ROBERT MITCHELL

We have already seen by what steps the Interborough won over the international officers of the B. of L. E. and the Amalgamated and that when this company saw the road thus cleared before it the next step was to break the union.

First of all, it began openly to discriminate against certain of the men, and when no charges could be made against those particularly singled out, some trumped-up excuses were found for discharging them. In this way a number of motormen were fired. The union protested in vain.

Provoked Strike.

At the time there were no automatic signals on the line. For years the men had been agitating for these signals, but the company neglected its obligation even though it was daily endangering the lives of people and subjecting its motormen to an unnecessary strain. Naturally, accidents were more frequent and more unavoidable than at present.

Accordingly, it happened that a motorman crashed into another train at the Worth St. station. The accident was not serious and in ordinary times would have resulted in nothing more than a reprimand from the company for the motorman involved. Inasmuch as the Interborough, however, had decided upon a policy of provoking a strike, this incident was used as a further occasion to discharge the man.

I Violated Agreement.

On top of this and numerous such other incidents, the company introduced a new schedule which increased the number of trains and consequently the work of the men without increasing the pay. This step was in direct violation of the existing agreements.

Threaten Strike.

In addition the company was importing strike breakers. The men who saw the union-busting scheme unfolding more clearly before them every day at last carried their complaints to the point of threatening a strike. This was the end which the Interborough had been seeking.

Immediately August Belmont, president of the company, got in touch with the international officers of the union. The officers came down to New York to "discuss" the situation. In their meetings with Jencks, Pinney and Pepper, the leaders of the local union, the latter objected and explained to them, instead, however, of taking the side of the men, they listened to what the company offered and agreements were up.

Officials Didn't Help.

It became clear that no help would come from that quarter. It also became evident that irrespective of any action on the part of the union officials, the company would continue with its plans already well under way. Knowing this, on Monday, March 4th, three days before the actual walkout and when it was still believed that a strike would be averted, a "gunboat" of strike breakers came in from Chicago. The 1,000 men in this consignment were immediately augmented by an additional 200. The New York Times carried the following headline: "ARMY OF MEN ON HAND TO BREAK STRIKE." This army was ordered for safe keeping on a steam boat and escorted by a squad of thirty private detectives and gangsters.

Small Pox on The Trains.

Some of the strike breakers, it is reliably reported, came down with small pox. Complaint was made to the city. The captain of the police, sent to investigate, conveniently found the report "doubtful." He did not enter the boat to see for himself! The strikebreakers, however, ordered the Interborough small pox detectives and all!

Under the conditions which were rapidly developing to break their union, the men saw no other alternative but to declare a strike. The sentiment of the workers was clearly indicated from the fact that the walkout on Tuesday March 5th, was practically 100 per cent.

Stone, Strikebreaker.

Grand Chief Warren S. Stone, of the B. of L. E. had promised August Belmont that there would be no strike. This promise was not kept, although he and W. D. Mahon, President of the Amalgamated, did everything in their power to do so. Stone wired the local officers that he would not sanction the strike. Also he sent Vice Grand Master Hurley to New York to make a last effort to prevent the tie-up. Hurley threatened Jencks, the local president, with expulsion. But Jencks, like Ed. Lavin of more recent fame, was not to be bull-dozed. Then Hurley offered to take the responsibility of calling off the strike under his own order. Naturally, Jencks would not permit the men to be "sold out" in this fashion even though he could thus have saved his position in the union and, as he was beginning to see very clearly, his job and future.

Of such men as Jencks and Lavin will the future American Labor movement be built!

Many Weeks.

In the meantime the company made a feeble attempt to run trains with strikebreakers. Numerous wrecks followed each other in rapid succession. One of these resulted in 29 injuries and several deaths. But the city administration which at the time was no less completely sold out to the traction interests than at the present time did nothing to protect the people. In no respect are strikes more instructive than in showing up our governments and public officials as the agents of the capitalist class.

Newspapers Blunders.

The press was a unit in heaping abuse on the strikers. The big New York dailies carried the usual propaganda "improper stories"; every day in every way the trains are running better and better. Even "The Nation," a weekly Journal supposedly of "critical" opinion carried on the same sort of comment. "The Nation." It must be said is now more "favorable" to labor, except when it consistently forgets to take any side at all as has been the case during the whole period of attack on the militant needle trades workers; when finally forced to take a stand in the instance of the long sentences imposed on the picketing workers by Judge Rosalsky, the "Nation" likewise came out against the interests of the workers.

Read The DAILY WORKER.

Accordingly, the traction workers of New York, like the workers of other industries and of other cities will find ample justification for their position in distrusting the press of the country. Of the daily papers published in English there is but one at the present time that speaks for the true interests of the workers: The DAILY WORKER.

Treachery and Confusion.

It is clear that the strikers of 1905 were surrounded by a sea of enemy opposition, the city officials, confused and unsympathetic public, the kept, labor baiting capitalist press, and worse than all the rest, the open and unashamed opposition of their international officers.

Mahon worked regularly with a "mediation" committee organized by the National Civil Federation which did all in its power to break down the morale of the men and which secretly carried out the instructions of the Interborough. To what extent Mahon was informed of the secret activities of this committee is not known but of he was informed he was guilty of a sort of criminal indifference for which no responsible labor leader can be excused.

Stone Sent Scabs.

"Win Back to Work," was the repeated order of Warren Stone. In addition he sent other B. of L. E. men to take the jobs left open by the strikers.

The Interborough ogre Frank Hedley is to hit in the pinch. Frank was then the general manager of the company and E. P. Bryan was vice president. The latter was the active executive officer but Frank Hedley was being groomed to do the dirty work at the time just as at present, Vice President, Mr. Bevergen, is breaking in to carry on after Hedley leaves. Frank Hedley understands only one kind of tactics, industrial. Accordingly, he tried to buy up Pepper, the leader of the Amalgamated local to betray the motormen. Pepper like Jencks refused to be bought.

And Gompers Added a Blow.

The men however, were completely confused by the attacks of their international officers. They suddenly found themselves branded as "outlaws" and "criminals;" the parent bodies from which they had every reason to expect support only added to the viciousness of the accumulating attack. Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of The American Federation of Labor, who was later commended by the Civil Federation for "keeping his word" with August Belmont, likewise helped break the strike.

Then the true nature of the Interborough plan was revealed in all its naked brutality. An open shop notice signed by Frank Hedley was posted to inform the men that thereafter the company would no longer deal with the union. Many of the strikers were fired and Chicago scabs were substituted in their places. "Paddy" Connolly, the president of the Interborough company union is said to have been one of those imported products from the windy city.

Belmont Gloats.

August Belmont, "friend and associate of Labor," reporting to a meeting of the National Civic Federation at which many labor officials as usual were present, gave in detail the method of breaking the strike although naturally enough he used other terms: "The company merely entered into an agreement with individual employes whom it took into its service," and "when it became possible for the company to take back its old employes, it could take only as many as it had vacancies for."

In this manner was the Interborough plan of breaking the union carried out. When the open shop notice of the driver was revealed even to the laymen, a newspaper man asked Warren Stone what in his opinion would come thereafter. "Daily defeat can come," replied Stone.

Tractors Stick Together.

Did the labor officials become indignant at their associates in the National Civic Federation? Did they resign from this organization which under a mantel of labor friendship is the most dangerous agency undermining the workers' movement? No, they did not! Samuel Gompers died as its first Vice President. Stone was a life long member. Mahon is "with us still."

Wolf Leads Gang.

The acting executive officer of this organization is none other than Matthew Woll, vice president of the A. F. of L. Another prominent member is Hugh Frayne, associated closely with Brother Woll in the attacks on the militant trade unionists, at the rate of $10 per session for work with the city which it is reported he never needs to do.

But the leaders will be careful not to draw the wrong conclusion from these evidences of betrayal of their interests. The solution is not to abandon the organized labor movement, but on that account all the more determinedly to enter it. The traction workers will go into the A. F. of L. for the good and sufficient reason that there is where the workers are found and on that plane in co-operation with other workers, will the final battle be waged for true unionism and honest leadership.

hailed the establishment of the 40-hour week as a great achievement at the Detroit convention of the A. F. of L.

Woll, Green and McGrady, Sigman and Schachtman join with the police and bosses to make striking and winning strikes a crime.

In the fur garment district gangsters accompanied by two or more detectives are entering shops and restaurants and beating up officers and members of the Joint Board unions who are pointed out by stoolpigeons. This is what McGrady means by "having the full cooperation of the police department".

Will the trade union membership and those who sympathize with and support the labor movement against the bosses and the attacks of the various departments of government approve of this method of conducting a fault on militant workers and leaders?

We do not believe they will once they grasp the damning significance of the recent actions of right wing officialdom in the needle trades. These officials have become part of the suppressive machinery of American capitalism, they are shameless in their repudiation of abhorrence the American labor movement has always shown toward the use of courts, detectives and police against workers, they openly express their contempt for the integrity of the trade unions, they bring the black shadow of stoolpigeonism into the labor movement and ask support for a policy which aligns the labor movement with the most corrupt section of the capitalist parties and government agencies against workers and trade union leaders who repudiate the surrender of officialdom to the enemies of the workingclass.

The left wing is weak compared to the strength of forces aligned against it, but it is mighty in the fact that it represents the interests of the workingclass as against those of the American capitalist class whether they be the cock-roach capitalists in the garment industry or the lords of finance, steel, oil, coal and railways who look with approval upon the offensive against fighting trade unionism.

The situation in the New York labor movement is so serious, the menace to its integrity so great, the evidence of the conspiracy between the right wing leaders, the bosses and the government so clear, that every working man and women, every sympathizer with the cause of the working class will denounce the Greens, Wolls, Sigmans, etc., or will take upon himself the responsibility for silence in the face of the blackest conspiracy against a whole section of the labor movement which has ever been launched.

Revolutionary Unions For Struggle

the numbers of unemployed did not run into four figures.

Forced To Retreat.

The Government was soon forced to retreat from its ridiculous pretensions that the unemployment was merely an invention of malicious tongues. Poincare was soon told that he apparently had not taken the trouble to read the official bulletin of the Ministry of Labour.

However meagre and false may be the official statistics they nevertheless allow of forming an idea as to the rate of the growth of unemployment in the country.

In the middle of November, 1926, there were only 469 unemployed in receipt of doles; by the 31st of December, there were already 17,076; by the 15th of January of this year, there were 38,360, and by the 22nd of January, 46,222.

Not All Workless Registered.

The official figures of unemployed in receipt of doles, 45,222, bear but little relationship to the actual state of unemployment. As a matter of fact the unemployed are regularly registered only in 10 departments out of 90. The Municipal Unemployed Societies only function in 92 towns in France, although France contains about 30,000 Communes. What is going on in the remoter parts of France can only be guessed at from the fragmentary information accidentally cropping up in the daily press. Doubtless, the number of completely unemployed already exceeded 150,000 by the end of January, 1927. Besides these, there is an enormous army of partially unemployed, i. e., unemployed only a few days a week. The latter may at present be counted not in hundreds of thousands, but without any exaggeration in millions (there is no registration of partial unemployment in France).

Growing Unemployment.

The government and the capitalists are apparently beginning to understand that the more dangerous situation may be brought about by the growing unemployment. Fallieres, the Minister of Labour, is endeavouring through his agents, the labour inspectors, to get into the heads of the industrialists the undesirability of discharging workers when there is nothing to do, and the necessity for dividing up unemployment among all the workers. The working class has probably nothing to lose from this with regard to its revolutionary cohesion. The task of the Unitary Confederation in its serious struggle with unemployment will only be made easier. The C. G. T. U. broadcasting the slogan of unemployment carried on the tactics of the united front for all workers, both employed and unemployed. The idea of calling a General Labour Congress of factory representatives and unemployed representatives is becoming more popular every day.

Questions and slogans capable of holding the attention of the broad masses arise spontaneously. The C. G. T. U. has formulated the slogans clearly and definitely: the 8 hour day, the struggle against the lowering of real wages, workers' control over the engagement and discharging of workers in enterprises, State aid for unemployed—French and alien; immunity of unemployed from taxation and payment of rent; organisation of municipal work under control of trade unions. These are the principal demands, giving rise to series of others associated with them.

There Must Be Unity.

A severe and obstinate struggle is impending. The working class will have to make the fullest use of its economic and political organs in this struggle. All the hitherto dispersed forces of the working class must be drawn into the struggle and this can only be done through the creation of a united labour front.

The realisation of the united front for the struggle can and should be made by a true revival of the unity of the trade union movement in France, that unity which has been until lately kept back by the right elements in the trade union movement, the leaders of the reformist General Confederation of Labour.

Majority of Farms In Iowa Mortgaged

The Herald-Tribune man says that depression cut in Iowa may be largely psychological. Maybe so, but 66 per cent of all Iowa farms are mortgaged, the mortgages are for one half the value of the farm and the total mortgage debt is a mere psychological trifle of $623,000,000. Wisconsin, Minnesota and Nebraska are also big in the mortgage list.

BRITISH STRIKE IS VELVET FOR 'CZECH' OWNERS

Reformists Opposed Struggle to Help Miners

Due to the British miners' strike, the situation in the Czecho-Slovakian mining industry considerably improved. But this improvement, of course, expressed itself exclusively in the increasing profits of the coal barons. The Czecho-Slovakian mine owners utilized the situation to the fullest extent. This is clear from the following figures on the Ostrau coal district:

	Hundred weights
In October, 1926, output per man per day was	19.73
According to contract, output should have been	7.57
Excess output of	3.19
1 cwt. of coal costs 20 Cz-S. crowns x 3.16	Cz-S. 67.80
Additional wage received by miner for increased production Cz-S.	9.42
Overhead expenses on 3.18 cwts.	7.78 16.80
Each worker's shift of 24 hours leaves a net profit of Cz-S.	47

Therefore considering that in October 38,449 miners worked, the surplus value per day due this increased productivity amounted to 1,807,103 Cz-S.

With 22 shifts per month, this gives 39,76,266 Cz-S.

Such was the position when the British miners' strike was at its height. Nevertheless, the International General Trade Union and Communist Party of Czecho-Slovakia conducted a stubborn struggle against increasing productivity of labor in the mining industry, struggled against exporting itdeeing coal to England, demanded wage increases for the miners, etc. Claiming that the Czech miners had suffered long from unemployment and that they would now at least receive a breathing spell, the reformists intentionally disrupted this campaign.

Signal Fur Mine Owners.

In vain the Communists warned the workers that a victory of the British mine owners would be a signal for mine owners in other countries to attack the miners, and that this applied no less to Czecho-Slovakia.

When the British miners' strike ended, the situation changed. The insolence of the mine owners increased. Their incredible profits, coupled with a drive on the part of the miners to create a united front, forced the reformists at last to agree to a meeting of representatives of all miners' trade unions, which included also the Miners' Section of the Big Union."

Question of Increased Wages.

This meeting was held on the 5th of December, 1926. The reformists recommended that a demand be put before the government that they should take up the question with the mine owners of increasing wages. The reformists limited themselves just to this resolution. The Miners' Section of the Big Union did not agree with such a policy and insisted that a single fighting front of all workers' organizations should be set up, and that a 20 per cent wage increase should be demanded.

This suggestion was turned down by the reformists. They passed a resolution asking the government to appoint arbitration commission. The representatives of the "One Big Union" were firmly against any compromise and insisted that on no account whatever should the workers reject the demand for a 20 per cent wage increase. All the motions put forward by the One Big Union were rejected by the meeting. The O. B. U. agreed to submit to the decisions of the meeting in order to preserve unity among the miners in face of the onslaught of their class enemy.

All the fears of the Communists were realized. The participation of the government in the settlement of the dispute only encouraged the mine owners in their attack upon the workers. The negotiations were carried out at an official meeting of trade union representatives and mine owners held in the Ministry of Public Work on the 7th of January. The mine owners firmly rejected not only the idea of increasing wages by 20 per cent, but even to demand of the reformists for a single bonus to the workers to the amount of one week's wages. The representative of the Ostrau mine owners even threatened to discharge all miners who are dissatisfied with the existing conditions. This insolent and impudent attitude of the mine owners was due to the fact that they reckoned on a split inside the miners' organization.

Discussed Owners' Answer.

A new meeting was held on the 14th of January where representatives of all miners' trade unions were present. This meeting discussed the answer of the mine owners. The representatives of the reformist Miners' Federation reported on the meeting with the mine owners and recommended that this meeting should decide to put off the struggle for the demands of the miners.

The Crisis in the United Mine Workers of America

There will be no national strike of the coal miners on the expiration of the Jacksonville contract on April 31.

Instructions to this effect have been sent to all districts outside of the central competitive field and the membership is instructed by the Lewis administration to stay at work while negotiations for a new contract are in progress.

This is another step in the direction taken by the Lewis administration since the last convention—that of abandonment of the strike weapon and co-operation with the coal operators. It means that in spite of the slogan of "no backward step" with which the Indianapolis convention was beguiled, the Lewis machine is prepared to accept a wage cut for the membership rather than call a strike and organize and pull out decisive sections of the non-union fields. Even if no actual wage cut is made there will be instituted a series of changes in working conditions and payment for work that will amount to the same thing.

The negotiations in the central competitive field will drag on until summer is here and the demand for fuel is at its lowest point, the storage of coal will continue and when an agreement is made by Lewis agreeing to big concessions to the operators the union will have lost its most favorable period for a strike.

No preparations for an organization drive in West Virginia and Kentucky have been made and this indicates that Lewis has no serious intentions of waging a real struggle to save the union and extend its influence.

The Lewis policy is one of surrender and this is the way it has been characterized by the "Save the Union" bloc. The drive against the militant elements in the union, the failure to launch organization campaigns, the encouragement given to coal operators to violate the agreement, the continual loss of membership and finally the decision to stake everything on the outcome of the negotiations with operators in the central competitive field who are already running some of their mines on an open shop basis is a confession of bankruptcy on the part of the Lewis machine and an admission of the truth of the statements made for the past three years by us.

The United Mine Workers' Union is in grave danger. It faces a section of the capitalist class which is determined to destroy it and it is officered by individuals whose sole efforts to solve the crisis have been to make war on the rank and file and raise their own salaries.

The UMWA will come thru the present crisis without a disastrous defeat only by organizing the non-union fields, democratizing the union itself, accepting no wage cut or change for the worse in working conditions and bringing the whole strength of the American labor movement to its aid.

When Hasbeens Meet.

Two hasbeens whom history has passed by, telling one another how good they are and were is a pathetic sight providing these persons are not Bainbridge Colby, the gentlemanly vicious secretary of state under Wilson, and Alexander Kerensky, onetime premier of Russia whom the Russian masses have forgotten.

Colby in 1920 wrote a note to the Soviet government which said in part that—

"the government of the United States does express the hope that they (the Russian people) will soon find a way to set up a government representing their free will and purpose. . . ."

Seven years have passed and the government of the United States and all other imperialist governments know by this time that the "free will and purpose" of the Russian masses finds expression in the Soviet government.

Said Kerensky to Colby:

"Your note is an historical document of unsurpassed international value, and its meaning for the Russian people is so great that I consider it a privilege to be able to thank you personally in the name of those who struggle for and believe in the regeneration of Russia under democratic institutions."

Said Colby to Kerensky:

"You will be an enduring figure in history. You are one of the foremost actors in the great drama of Russian freedom and your rational and statesmanlike proposals will receive from history the credit which is its due. Russia's hopes of recovering the countenance and respect of civilized opinion lies in the adoption of the ideas which you represent and I regard your visit to this country as singularly well-timed and fortunate."

The Russian workers and peasants, led by the Russian Communist Party, sure of the friendship and support of the toiling masses of the world, seeing 300,000,000 of their class enlisting in the same struggle they are waging, as in China, ruling and developing a country from which they have driven all invaders, care little for the "civilized" opinion Colby mentions. They are building socialism in their country and aiding the struggle for it throughout the world. Kerensky's cowardice and Colby's notes have not been able to stop the progress of the Russian masses. They are making history with sickle and the hammer as they made it with the bayonet when necessary.

Ten years have passed since Kerensky heard the gun-butts of the Red Guard rattle on the floor of the Duma chamber. Events since that time have proved that history today is being written by the working class in such bold letters that the Colbys and Kerenskys cannot blot it out.

Vicious but futile they symbolize the position of their class-hangers-on of the imperialists who despise them but try to use them.

"Newer Defenses of Capitalism in America"—The League for Industrial Democracy

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE League For Industrial Democracy held a conference in June of last year at Camp Tamiment on "Newer Defenses of Capitalism in the United States."

Mina Welsenberg, secretary of the New York chapter, the largest in the league, writing in Current History for March, shows that the League For Industrial Democracy should have included itself in the list of organizations coming under the head of "newer defenses of capitalism in the United States". We assume of course that the lady, as she signs her article with her full title, is voicing the official viewpoint of the organization.

Under the caption of "Labor's Defense Against Employer's Welfare Tactics" Weisenberg attempts to show that worker-employer cooperation is a weapon of the labor movement. No proof is offered to sustain this contention other than the bare fact of its adoption by the trade union leadership and the establishment of this system of relations in various sections of industry.

WEISENBERG looks upon such brazen examples of surrender to the bosses as the B. and O. plan and calls them good.

Listen to this lyrical description of the worker-employer cooperation paradise:

"Numerous instances of these united efforts in behalf industry may be found. Joint councils of representatives of unions and of employers' associations have been organized. These joint councils work on the excellent general principles of the undesirability of strikes, the possibility of the consolidation or arbitration of all disputes, cooperation for better craftmanship, better local union leadership, better working conditions and enlarged production." Emphasis mine.

If all strike an impartial observer at once that the employers benefit from this scheme at the rate of about five to one and that euphemistic phrases fail to get rid of the hard truth that worker-employer cooperation, or "union-employer" cooperation as a bearing success only in getting more work out of "the boys."

It dangles before the eyes of the workers such will o the wisps as steadier employment, "advance to any grade in the industry," "elimination of seniority rights from their cooperation" as Weisenberg puts it, but to the last promise we not will anyone be able to convince that "strengthening the union movement of the working class as a whole."

A REPORT issued by the officers of the various employes departments of the latest extension of the American Federation of Labor tells concretely how the worker-employer cooperation policy works the worker.

Out of 1,057 cases handled by the "cooperative council" under the B. and O. plan 204 dealt with shortage of material or tools, 204 with repairs or improvement to equipment, 129 with new "seniority rights," 28 with new methods and devices, 27 better shop layout, 10 better tools or material, 30 with poor grade or wrong kind of materials and 297 with better working conditions.

Assuming that the 297 cases listed actually did deal with better working conditions (in this connection we should remember that the advocates of the plan are trying to convince workers that it is of service to them and would naturally be somewhat liberal in establishing the number of these cases) we still have the following proportion:

856 cases for the employers against 297 for the workers.

THE system which produces such grotesque contrasts is described by the secretary of the New York chapter of the League for Industrial Democracy as follows:

"As a final example of union-employer cooperation there is the splendid work of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad (note that Weisenberg, no advertently probably, correctly calls the plan the 'work of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad').

"Its general plan of united action recognizes that the trade union is the proper agent to organize employe welfare activities and that the union should have constructive as well as protective duties and responsibilities in the operation of the railroad. Cooperation on this basis was agreed to, to improve transportation, to eliminate waste, to increase productivity, to better morale and to try to develop greater regularity of employment." (Emphasis mine.)

Please note again that all except one item of agreement is for the benefit of the B. and O. and that this lone exception is stated in the well-known "pious wish" phraseology.

ACCORDING to the railway department officials' report mentioned above there was an increase of two weeks of employment in the year period. This sterling feat (which is put forward by officialdom as a gain only for the workers, is actually a gain for the company as well since Marx long ago proved that surplus value is created when workers are employed) was accomplished in an interesting manner i. e. by taking work from outside shops and having it done in railway shops at a higher cost.

The victory was secured therefore by inking jobs from one section of the working class and giving them to another. How this increased the total amount of employment we leave the brilliant secretary of the New York chapter of the League for Industrial Democracy to show.

But this article grows long and our space is limited. Let us see to what conclusion Weisenberg comes after the fulsome apology for the worker-employer cooperation theory (speaking in the last paragraph of her article of the regrettable conflicts which still mar the relations between capital and labor. Weisenberg says:

"Between the two fronts there is a peaceful valley where the conflicting interests have learned to work together for their mutual good. Small at present, it must grow more extensive as increasing numbers of capitalists realize the force and effectiveness behind cooperation and the necessity for the shifting of power so that there will no longer be the fear and hatred between those who direct and those who labor in industrial life." End of quotation.

Isn't it all just too wonderful?

And the least wonderful part of it is that the League For Industrial Democracy, the Intercollegiate Socialist Society child sired by the war and damned by Norman Thomas, appears to be trying to settle as the ultimate in class cooperation the philosophy which Green-Woll-Lewis worker-employer cooperation policy.

It will be quite interesting to see how the spokesmen for the League explain to a wondering working class how support of open reaction is in line with its program. As to whether the League for Industrial Democracy is against revolutionary changes and for evolutionary processes but it seems to have mistaken interpretation for evolution in this particular instance.

THE Weisenberg article, taken in its entirety, is another link in the chain of evidence proving that the remnants of the pre-war revolutionary movement have been picked up by trade union officialdom and are being used to cast a faint shadow of honesty over policies which are nothing more or less than the expression of that officialdom's complete surrender to American imperialism.

The New York chapter of the League For Industrial Democracy must either repudiate the article in Current History by its secretary or admit that it is supporting without reservation the right wing in the labor movement which is fighting the militant membership and capitulating to the bosses.

"Newer Defenses of Capitalism in the United States" now includes the League For Industrial Democracy.

A British naval officer was recently arraigned in a London court charged with illegal possession of naval secrets relating to two British submarines, one of them the largest on the seas. WHEN Arthur Ponsonby, Labor Party member moved in the house of commons to abolish the British air force on ethical grounds he was viciously attacked by James Sexton, Labor Party member and head of the National Union of Dock Laborers. Ponsonby charged that after straining every nerve for four years to beat Germany England has been busy ever since trying to restore the vanquished nation. Sexton said that it was lunacy for Britain to disarm as long as other countries did not do so and blamed peace propaganda on the Soviet Union. Which proves that there is no more dangerous enemy of the working class than the renegade who has sold out his heritage for the capitalist mess of pottage. Sexton is of proletarian origin. Ponsonby is not.

OF course this is an exception that does not prove the rule. While a few of the bourgeoisie will come over to the side of the working class through conviction, the emancipation of the workers must be their own task. After all, only the workers have a material interest in waging the class war. To them it means more bread, more clothing, more shelter and more of the good things of life. To those who come from the other side to help them, it means more psychological satisfaction. For every renegade like Sexton who goes over to the enemy one hundred thousand workers will go to the front against capitalism and for every Ponsonby one thousand of his class will fight on capitalism's side of the barricades.

Workers Respond to The Ruthenberg Enrollment Call

speakers and cover all expenses entailed.

The Italian, Russian and Ukrainian Fraction Bureaus are similarly at work on plans to mobilize this district's full forces in the recruiting drive. All trade union fractions in the district are being mobilized to bring into the party sympathetic workers from the unions.

New York Makes Three Preparations.

Perhaps the most thoro preparations for an intensive sucessful Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive has been made in New York. The Ruthenberg Enrollment was the first order of business in the Section Conference that began a few days ago. The Agitprop Department of the district has issued various bulletins dealing with the contributions of and achievements of Comrade Ruthenberg for the development of a victorious working class in the United States. A special bulletin for Ruthenberg Memorial speakers and the Ruthenberg Membership Drive has been prepared by the New York District.

At the New York Ruthenberg Memorial Meetings, the non-party workers responded in a most impressive way to the call of the Communist organizers for building the party. A large number of applicants were taken in for examination as to their qualifications to become members of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Entire Party Responded.

Similar steps above outlined are being taken by other districts in the different sections of the country. The National Office is filling orders for Ruthenberg Memorial buttons from sections of the country where the Workers (Communist) Party previously did not even have the slightest connections or contacts.

The entire party is responding to the slogans: "Every member get a member!" "Ruthenberg died building the workers cause Communism, Build the Workers (Communist) Party in America".

If any working man or women desires any information as to the Workers Party of the Communist, they can be secured by applying to the National Office of the party at 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Clark Pays Tribute to Ruthenberg

DENVER, Colo. A Ruthenberg memorial meeting was held here under the auspices of the Workers Party at Woman's Hall. A group of Russians sang the Russian funeral song.

Minnie Tuchmann, a Young Pioneer, read a paper in regard to the death and work of Ruthenberg.

Comrade William Dietrich, secretary, acted as chairman and gave a short historical sketch of Ruthenberg's work in the Socialist and Communist Party of the U. S.

Stanley Clark, veteran of the Socialist and Communist movement and a personal friend of Ruthenberg, paid his tribute of respect by telling of incidents in which Ruthenberg showed himself to be entitled to the leadership of the Communist movement in the United States.

He said: "Let us not mourn the death of Ruthenberg, but, let it be an inspiration for us to make ourselves active in the work that Comrade Ruthenberg had to lay down and for us he advised just before passing on and that is to 'Fight On'."

At the conclusion of the meeting the audience sang "The International."

Workmen's Circle of Buffalo to Help Carry On Ruthenberg's Work

BUFFALO, N. Y.—At a regular meeting of Branch 192, Workmen's Circle, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, death has taken from the midst of the working class movement, not only here in the United States, but also all over the world, in the person of Charles Emil Ruthenberg.

WHEREAS, Comrade Ruthenberg was the head and the heart of the Workers (Communist) Party, who has worked all his life with the utmost devotion and sacrifice for the good of the whole working class movement all over the world.

RESOLVED, That we express our grief and resolve to continue the good work for which Comrade Ruthenberg has sacrificed his life in the capitalist prisons, and with bowed heads we rise from our seats in honor of the great leader, always remembering that he did not sacrifice in vain. That the principles will be realized in the not very distant future.

(Signed) L. Stalkin, Secretary.

DRAMA

"DREAM PLAY" HOKUM

Acting of Joseph Bulov Redeeming Feature of Yiddish Art Theatre Production.

Reviewed by A. B. MAGIL.

The dream play is an ancient, well-worn device. Its long frock coat is shiny and rather frayed at the elbows. I suggest it's about time the dream play be thrown into the ash can. Under its fragile, delicately palpitating wings an author can shelter his most precious hokum. If a playwright wants to be shamelessly maudlin, all he has to do is to say, "Once upon a time", and the audience immediately surrenders up its brains.

I am moved to these dark thoughts by contemplation of a piece entitled "Yoshke Musikant" and tearfully gibbitled "The Singer of Sorrow", which the Yiddish Art Theatre is producing.

Osnyp Dymow, the author, has something of a reputation in Yiddish literature, based on a number of plays and short stories. "Yoshke Musikant" was written in 1912 and performed many times throughout Europe. Its first American production was by a cast which included Jacob Ben-Ami and Rudolph Schildkraut. Schildkraut revived it last year under the direction of the author. The present production, which is in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of Dymow's literary activity, was directed by Joseph Bulov, who also plays the leading role.

"Yoshke Musikant," has for its underlying theme an old Yiddish folk song and concerns a shy little village musician who loves a stalwart, handsome servant girl. She is indifferent to his affection, being involved in a liaison with the son of her mistress, who trifles with her and then forsakes her. Yoshke, being the village letter-writer as well, is impressed into service to write to her faithless lover and beg him to return. Yoshke's varying fortunes, the pathos of his love, his guilelessness and ultimate disaster form the substance of the play. All of him is meant to be embedded something of the poetry and the frail, imperishable wistfulness of humankind.

But it is all emasculated and sentimentalized. The writing is shop-hod and the author never seems to be certain of what he wants to say. At critical moments the play, like Stephen Leacock's young man, simply rides off madly in all directions.

Joseph Bulov, who creates the title role, is the only one of the actors who seems to understand something of the theme's inner harmony that the author nearly and fumblingly tried to convey. His acting is delicate and achieves a shy, forlorn beauty that is as intangible as it is profound.

In his direction too Bulov seems to know just what effects should be striven for. But he is handicapped by the fact that nearly all Jewish actors become lumbering tyros of the pie-throwing school when they are called upon to do anything in the spirit of fantasy. The Yiddish stage in the past has concerned itself too rigidly with naturalistic drama and naturalistic technique (frequently in debased, melodramatic form) that its actors have grown up in an inflexible tradition which would require many years of schooling to uproot. Put a Yiddish actor in realistic three or four-act drama and he is incomparably versatile. But in fantasy he is a burlesque comedian. Bulov did about all he could with the materials that he had. And in his own role he did much more.

East Siders will have an opportunity of seeing the late Jewish actor, Jacob P. Adler in the motion picture, "Michael Strogoff", by Jules Verne, next Saturday, March 26, in the auditorium of the Church of All Nations, First street and Second avenue. The picture is being revived for one day. There will be five consecutive performances, commencing at 1:30.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle is going back to pictures. He has been signed up for five years by Abe Carlos to star in films to be made in Germany.

He is due in Berlin October 1, with his wife, Doris Deane, who will appear in his pictures.

The Fifth Avenue Playhouse is reviving this week "Tolable David," with Richard Barthelmess. An additional attraction includes "The Lost Tribe," a camera record of an expedition into New Guinea, made by Captain Hurley. "The Epic of Mount Everest", is being shown each day at noon.

From London comes a report that Harry Lauder, who is now touring in America, has signed to appear in moving pictures. He will make his debut as a star in a picture entitled "Huntingtower".

Taylor Holmes, last starred here in "No, No, Nanette", has deserted musical comedy and vaudeville to enter the films. He has signed a contract to be featured in a series of two-reel comedies which will be produced by Gaty Pictures, Inc., a new organization recently formed.

CONN. GOVERNOR AND O. D. YOUNG CALL FOR "UNITY"

Urge "Group Action" In Power Schemes

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y., March 20.—Owen D. Young, vice-president of the General Electric Company, and repeatedly recommended to be chairman of the New York Power Authority was the principal speaker at the conference of Electrical Manufacturers being held here now.

Speaking at the banquet held for the delegates, Young, who was practically the author of the Dawes Plan, advised "group action in this electrical industry as the logical method of coping with the complexity of the industry efficiently."

Another speaker at the dinner was Governor Trumbell of Connecticut, who is also president of the Trumbell Electric Company. He gave a brief "analysis" of the differences between private and public operation of affairs as he has studied them from his seat in the capitol of Connecticut and as head of his electrical corporation.

Machinists Needed to Unionize Aluminum Co. Edgewater, N. J., Plant

(By Worker Correspondent.)

EDGEWATER, N. J., March 20.—The U. S. Aluminum Company of this city, which employs at least 5,000 workers when working at full capacity, has begun to take on additional help. This is a huge machine plant. Machinists are being paid from 72 cents per hour and upwards.

Laborers are paid 59 cents per hour to start. All kinds of machinist help is being hired. All footloose members of the machinists' union are urged to get hired in this plant as it is badly in need of unionization. The local union is conducting a drive to increase its membership and to establish shop control.

A young man who proudly described himself as "Prince Michel Otolensky, an aristocrat of old Russia," was arraigned in court yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct after he had been rescued from an infuriated mob by the police. The prisoner was charged with creating a disturbance by making a speech on the east side in which he attacked the Jewish race.

PHILLY COMMENTS

Philadelphia.—When the wily T. E. Mitten relinquished the reins of active management to his son, Dr. Mitten, he insured the sway of the Mitten dynasty over Philadelphia transportation.

"The wheels of justice" lacking the lubrication of funds will cease to revolve soon, unless four Federal Courts in Philadelphia can scrape up the necessary kale somewhere. The Senate filibuster is held directly responsible for the closing up of the shops of justice, because the usual appropriations were not forthcoming. Strikers of the Tapestry Carpet Workers Union will not shed tears of sorrow, having already tasted of the justice meted out to workers on strike.

Real estators and sub-division men are angling with Tex Rickard for the site of the sports arena he intends to build here. The boys are willing to go one better and give him city ground. The workers of Philly would do well to keep a weather eye peeled on shady deals that might be pulled off.

A Philadelphia medic, returned from China, consoles the American bourgeoisie by telling them that "Moscow's influence will fade out of the Chinese picture when the Nationalists have finished using the Soviet inflammatories as rats' paws to win over the working class." Whatever consolation the capitalists can derive from the present situation in China they are welcome to.

Darrow Urges Negroes To Fight for Freedom Of Speech; Education

WASHINGTON, March 20. (FP)—Clarence Darrow spoke to two audiences and an overflow meeting—8,000 persons in all—when he came to the capital on Mar. 14 to tell the Negroes to stand together for the rights of free people. He was given ovations by the crowds when he began and closed his appeal. It signalized the beginning of a drive to finance the defense activities of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

Education and property must be acquired by Negroes, Darrow told them, in order that they may move forward toward freedom. White courts and white mobs alike lynch them, he said, not because of racial hatred but because the whites want the Negroes to do the hard work and stay in a position of servitude.

"Education is a misfortune to everyone, especially a Negro," he remarked, "but it is a necessary misfortune in the process of racial development. If you don't know what's going on, like a fundamentalist, you're saved. If you know what's going on you're unfortunate. Education teaches that all there is to race and color is scientific selection and adjustment of people to climate. Black people survived in hot climates, and white people in cold climates. The morons who run the affairs of this part of the world never heard of that theory. They have been too busy parading in sheets and making fool laws."

Darrow gave a blistering indictment of Negro politicians, and appealed to the race to stand together for independent political action.

Minimum of $1,100 For Family of Five People A Montreal Suggestion

MONTREAL, March 20 (FP).—A minimum budget for a family of 5 is $1101.76 per year, according to the Montreal Council of Social Agencies. This it describes as the "Most conservative calculation possible. The plan was not to draw up an ideal budget but to arrive at the lowest possible figure at which a family of five might maintain health and activity."

A committee of the council recommends an old age pension plan in the form of insurance contributed to by employe, employer and the state. The pension plan of the Canadian government is criticized on the ground that pensions should begin at 65, instead of 70, and that the minimum monthly payment should be larger than the $20 proposed by the government.

SPLIT SEEN BY MANY MOVES ON DISARMAMENT

Morgan Uses Pressure; London Counteracts

GENEVA, March 20.—Twenty-one nations will participate in the disarmament preparatory conferences which resume here on Monday and continue far three weeks, under the auspices of the League of Nations.

The secretariat of the league today published a lengthy summary of the work already accomplished by the league in preparation for an international disarmament conference. The summary outlines the findings of the experts committees and upon these findings the preparatory conference meeting Monday is expected to base its work of drawing an agenda for a final disarmament conference.

France Hesitates.

PARIS, March 20.—The French cabinet, meeting today under the chairmanship of President Doumergue, postponed definite action regarding the invitation to send an observer to the proposed tri-party naval disarmament conference at Geneva.

The cabinet a week ago tentatively agreed to accept this invitation, while registering a protest against a three power conference. Since that time, however, there has been considerable debate within the cabinet and some pressure has been brought to bring a decision from France to participate in the parley.

The cabinet will consider the question again on Tuesday.

Action Not Likely.

The proposed limitation of armaments sponsored by Coolidge some time ago, is now taking various perspectives. While each nation praises the idea of cutting armaments to the lowest minimum, yet not one of them is willing to take active steps to accomplish this fact.

There are now two moves on foot to arrange a parley of the nine in the three power conference between the United States, England and Japan. France and Italy, who were originally invited to participate, refused to do so under the pretense that they could not afford to cut their armaments as they need them still present force for their protection. England, which at first declined active participation and is even today opposed to any reduction of its navy, nevertheless agreed to be present, but is maneuvering in the meantime to take the force out of the conference by instituting a disarmament conference within the League of Nations.

Geneva To Sabotage.

A memorandum on disarmament is to be introduced today in the League of Nations by the British delegates, the text of which is very similar to that submitted by America, and just as negative to all that has been proposed up to date. In the meantime, however, American finance capital has brought pressure on France and Italy to reconsider their negative action on Coolidge's invitation for a Washington disarmament conference and it is possible that, due to the strong influence which the house of Morgan has in these countries, that they will be virtually compelled to participate, under the form of sending "observers."

Atheists Ask Child Preacher Obey Labor Laws; Is Exploited

Protesting against the tentative religious revival this summer by Uldine Utley, 14-year-old evangelist the American Association For the Advancement of Atheism, has written a letter to the Evangelistic Committee of N. Y. under whose auspices she is scheduled to speak, giving their objections.

Develops Paranoia.

Their letter signed by Freeman Hopwood, general secretary, in part is as follows.

"It cannot be denied that from a psychological viewpoint the youngster is in danger. Interviewers who have rume to see us after visiting the girl are agreed that she is highly emotionalized and on the verge of paranoia. At one time she left a motion picture theatre where a harmless dog story was being shown on the screen under the delusion that "devils were jumping all around her." She is not living a life which is the birthright of normal childhood.

An Exploited Girl.

"Not only is this child being exploited, mentally and physically, but her emotional exhortations to her audiences can have only a detrimental effect.

"We hope you will not be a party to the selfish utilization of this young girl in the name of religion. However, if you insist on sponsoring her, we insist that you comply with the law. If you do not, we shall have our attorneys take the necessary steps to compel you to cease illegal activities.

Second Issue of Paper Of Boston Pioneers Is Endured by Principal

BOSTON, March 20.—About four weeks ago, the Boston Pioneer nuclei in the Phillips Brooks and Pliver Wendell Holmes Schools issued the first number of their school papers. The papers were distributed without much ado. In about two weeks all Boston press rooms went out with glaring front page headlines: "REDS SPREADING PROPAGANDA IN SCHOOLS," "NEW RED PROPAGANDA IN HUB SCHOOLS PLANNED," "SCHOOL COMMITTEE CALLS A SPECIAL SESSION TO ADOPT MEANS TO STOP SCHOOL PROPAGANDA," "CITY COUNCIL APPOINTS A COMMITTEE TO FIND WAYS AND MEANS OF STOPPING SCHOOL PROPAGANDA," etc.

This continued for about three days. Reporters besieged the home of the pioneer leader, detectives were sent to find the meeting places. On Sunday, three days after the publicity began, police Superintendent Crowley sorrowfully admitted that "the bulletins were not unlawful and nothing could be done to stop them."

The boy scouts, stirred up by the bulletins which told the truth about them, began to combat the pioneers. They issued a statement as follows (in the words of the Boston Traveler):

"Why, we never heard of any boy scouts receiving money from militaires, etc."

At this same time the boy scouts announced the publication of a paper, in opposition to the Pioneer school papers rallied: "The Torch" which would be "financed by . . . . The Cambridge Business Man's Association," which of course contradicted the first part of their statement.

The various children radio clubs began propaganda against The Pioneers.

And yet, in the words of the Boston American, "a mother took her child out of the boy scouts because of the publicity they receive in the press."

Many boy scouts joined the pioneers. The nuclei to the schools which printed the papers gained 11 and 6 members respectively. At least half of whom were boy scouts.

Yesterday, the second number of the "Spark," the organ of the Oliver Wendell Holmes school, was issued. It was enthusiastically received by the students of the school. All the Pioneers aided actively in the work of publication and distribution. So far the only reaction in the press is as follows: "Second Copy of Red Sheet Will be Ignored, Declares School Principal." This statement was issued before the principal saw the papers.

Radio Czars Propose "Ether Police" Force To Guard Wave Length

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Radio broadcasting stations which fail to adhere closely to the wave length designated by the Federal Radio Commission will face the danger of losing their licenses, it was learned today.

Requirement for "constant frequencies" would improve reception fifty per cent without the elimination of a single station, experts said.

While no steps will be taken against stations covering an unnecessarily wide frequency band until the new licenses are granted, technical experts declared that subsequent deviation from wave lengths will signal drastic action by the government.

Mobilization of an "ether police force," which will scientifically patrol all broadcasting bands, checking with delicate instruments to detect any wave length jumping, is anticipated soon.

Britain Not to Enter War Debt Controversy Of Mellon and Hibben

LONDON, March 20.—The British government will not be drawn into the controversy over war debts, now in progress between Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and President Hibben of Princeton. No official comment was forthcoming on Secretary Mellon's letter.

In Whitehall, however, there was no lack of private comment and there was a general denial of Secretary Mellon's statement that Great Britain will receive enough from Germany to pay her debt to the United States. It was declared that while Great Britain pays the United States £33,000,000 this year she can't hope to receive more than £12,000,000 from Germany, and France and Italy are not expected to contribute more than £6,000,000 each on their debts to Great Britain.

Boston Courts Broke.

BOSTON, March 20.—Jurors, witnesses and attaches of the federal courts in this city may go without fees and salaries during the coming months it was disclosed this afternoon.

Following receipt of a communication from Attorney General Sargent advising that needed funds included in the deficiency bill are not available because of failure of to act on the bill, U. S. Marshall Keville made a checkup of funds on hand.

ARBITRATION OF CONDUCTORS AND TRAINMEN WAGES

Watson-Parker Court Controlled by Boss

CHICAGO, March 20. — Ending three weeks of negotiations for a wage increase, officials of the Brotherhoods of Railway Conductors and Railway Trainmen have signed an agreement with representatives of western railroads to submit their dispute to arbitration under the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

The unions seek a 7½ per cent increase, about a dollar a day.

Withdraw Demands.

It was agreed that both interests would withdraw their demands for changes in rules and working conditions and submit the dispute to the arbitration board.

The board must take up the question within a month under the law.

This arbitration machinery is set up by the Waston-Parker railway law, and is practically rumpulsory. It has in the cases already tried by it, invariably given the railroad men a few minor demands, as a sop, but denied them the bulk of what they wanted.

Draft Women for Next War, Is Jingoist Plan

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Women as well as men will be drafted in the next war, if the American Legion and the war department have their way.

The general staff of the war department is making a study of the ways in which women can be used for war. When this study is completed it is possible that the United States jingoists will follow the example of France and pass a law making women over 21 liable to conscription.

The department's plan contemplates the registration of all women over 21, with the possible exception of a home woman with several children.

It will be three weeks, however, before he can be released, it was said.

SNAP JUDGMENTS.

Two scientists recently mistook an elephant's knee bone for the skull of a primitive human being and made the sensational announcement that they had found a second and perfect skull of the Java man, according to Dr. A. Hrdlicka of the National Museum at Washington. Such exaggerations are mild in comparison with the usual run of so-called "news" in the capitalist press. One excellent example lies before me, "Mexican Spirit of Revolt Grows; Millions Alienated by Clerical and Red Laws," proclaims the New York Times in heavy black letters across its front page. This is characteristic of capitalist news reports whether it be a strike, or a story from Nicaragua, China or Soviet Russia.

When the policy of sensationalism is used merely to arouse curiosity it may not be so harmful socially. But when this policy is used to wilfully misrepresent facts, and distort the truth in a situation involving the lives of thousands and sometimes millions of workers, then it becomes a menace of the most insidious character.

It is for the purpose of building up and expanding The DAILY WORKER which is fighting against insidious propaganda of this sort, that the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund has been established. Comrade Ruthenberg was a foremost consistent fighter against the dangerous propaganda spewed by the capitalist class. During the World War he was imprisoned for his part in fighting this poison. Why not enlist in the struggle which Comrade Ruthenberg so nobly led, to establish our paper on a broader and firmer basis, by enrolling and contributing toward the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund.—BERT MILLER.

JERSEY TRANSIT CORPORATION PLEADS POVERTY IN WAGE ACCORD; MAKES $15,000,000 PROFITS

(By Worker Correspondent.)

NEWARK, N. J., March 20.—The Public Service Corporation, one of the most powerful industrial companies in the state, announced recently a profit of over $15,000,000 with a surplus profit of $1,500,000 over its profits for the previous year. This corporation employs lobbyists to protect its interests and profits in Trenton. Politically it controls the state and can accomplish almost anything with the state legislature.

At present it has introduced a bill into the state legislature to eliminate paying costs. This would save the corporation at least $2,000,000 yearly. The company has conducted a systematic rampaign of sabotage and not kept the repairs up to date for years in spite of protests of municipalities. But in vain. The Public Service has a monopoly on street car and electric, gas and bus service throughout the state. When the street car men and bus drivers' agreement expired they made a plea of poverty. Subsequently, the men renewed their agreement for three years at the old rate of pay.

Poor and down and out Public Service Corporation. Poverty was the plea to introduce one-man operation of street cars. Poverty was the cry in an attempt to cut their employes' wages and poverty is the cry to force $2,000,000 on the backs of the people of New Jersey. Poverty must be the answer to the report of $15,000,000 profits.

Paris Commune Meet In Chicago Listens To Young Workers

CHICAGO, March 20. (FP).—The significance of the Paris Commune, the French proletarian uprising of 1871, was emphasized at a memorial meeting in Temple hall, March 13, under auspices of International Labor Defense. Ralph Chaplin, John Williamson, Pat Toohey and others characterized it as the pioneer armed revolt of labor against political oppression by modern capitalism. They showed why it failed and why the Russian worker revolution in 10 years later had succeeded and why the Chinese revolution is proceeding to victory.

Roll up your sleeves and prepare to put every ounce of strength into every blow you strike for the Daily Worker. Remember that every reader you get is another BLOW against the rule of the capitalist class, another worker enlisted in the army of economic and social freedom. Remember that every subscription you obtain is a BLOW in the interests of Labor.

Comrade Ruthenberg showed us how. He was hated and feared by the ruling class and loved by the workers because he struck BLOW after BLOW at the present system of exploitation. Now it is your turn to STRIKE A BLOW. You must strike hard and often WITH SUBS.

New York Daily Beating the Tom Toms for Coolidge Can't Drown Farmers' Woes

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TWO publications arrive with conflicting viewpoints of the problems on the land. The New York Herald-Tribune is self-satisfied with conditions as they are and works energetically for the re-election of Cal Coolidge as "the best president big business ever had." But The Progressive Farmer, "Printed in the Interest of the Greatest Farm Organization of All Times, the Progressive Farmers of America," breathes the discontent of the farming masses and gives the lie to the smug organ of the moneyed interests in the eastern metropolis.

The Herald-Tribune is one of the nation's powerful capitalist dailies, and it has a thousand allies, some greater and some smaller than itself. The Progressive Farmer is small, only four pages of six short columns each. It is published in far off Glendale, Arizona. But it is born to fight and speaks for an organization that has grown out of the farmers' struggle and it will continue to win influence. The United States government itself tells why the victory rests ultimately on its side in literature just issued by its department of agriculture.

After writing five different articles about farming conditions in the middle west, Edwin S. McIntosh, the staff correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune wanders into Fort Dodge, Iowa, and turns loose his sixth barrage of printers' ink.

The eastern journalist, following out instructions from his editor, found that capital, both local and foreign, is investing in Iowa. He says, "Take public utilities for example":

"The Central Iowa Power and Light Company, I am informed, has spent $2,000,000 in improvements in the last 18 month.

"The Iowa Power and Light Company, thru the Des Moines Electric Company, has spent $8,000,000 on improvements in Des Moines in the last 18 months.

"The Sioux City Gas and Electric Company has spent $4,000,000 in improvements recently.

The writer's conclusion is that, "Business men here argue that such figures as these indicate capital has confidence in Iowa."

But the interests of the mortgaged and tenant farmers and of the farm workers clash with the interests of capital. If big business is happy over the conditions in Iowa, that means an unhappy condition for labor. Capital invades districts where it is possible to take high profits, where the plundering is good and the haul rich. Capital does not go where the return is small, if it can possibly help it. The investment therefore of more capital in Iowa indicates that profiteering on a good scale is rampant. This means that somebody is being robbed. The victim is to be found both on the land and in the industries of the cities.

The Iowa farm made that Iowa leads the state of the union in agricultural products with an annual total of $1,500,000,000.

But the finest wealth is being produced by an increasing number of landless farmers, the percentage in 1920 being 10.6 percent, and in 1925, 44.7 percent, an increase of three percent for the five-year period. This condition, of progressive misery, is peculiar to the Mississippi Valley. The following table prepared by the United States government shows the percentage of farms operated by tenants in 1920 and 1925 in 15 states in which tenantry has been rapidly increasing:

Percentage of farms operated by tenants	1925	1920
Arkansas	56.7%	51.3%
Colorado	30.9	23.0
Idaho	24.4	15.9
Iowa	44.7	41.7
Kansas	42.2	39.4
Louisiana	60.1	57.1
Minnesota	32.6	28.8
Montana	27.1	24.7
Nebraska	31.9	31.3
New Mexico	16.1	12.9
North Dakota	34.4	25.6
Oklahoma	58.6	51.0
South Dakota	41.5	34.9
Texas	60.4	53.3
Wyoming	17.9	12.5

Thus the black plague of peasantry lays waste the hopes of building farmers thruout the richest section of the land. Thruout vast areas of Montana, the Dakotas, Arkansas and Texas the five-year increase, 1920-25, in the proportion of tenant farmers to owner farmers is more than 10 per cent. In other great areas the increase has been more than ten per cent.

Leland Olds, of the Federated Press, in reviewing the government's statistics, points out that, "The increase in tenant farming is very large in some of these states, particularly those where, prior to 1920 there was relatively little tenant farming. In Montana the proportion of tenants to all farmers increased 94 per cent between 1920 and 1925, in Idaho the increase was 53.5 per cent, in Colorado 34.5 per cent, in North Dakota 34.2 per cent and in South Dakota 30 per cent. In all these states (enumerated above) except Kansas, Louisiana and Minnesota, the increase was over 10 per cent.

Even so, the figures are bolstered up, on the side of the profit system by the fact that large numbers of wage workers have been forced into the suburbs of the great cities to become small farmers, to work during their spare time and thus supplement their meager earnings as industry. In the mine areas especially, an increasing number of coal miners are being forced to take up farming as a side line in the struggle for existence.

The New York Herald-Tribune writer contradicts himself when in the closing sentence of his article, he confesses:

"There is considerable third party talk among politicians, but no popular response has appeared."

The New York journalist, of course, came west too late to attend the gathering at Minneapolis, Minnesota in December that organized the Progressive Farmers of America in response to the popular demand of large numbers of non-political farmers. This gathering received

"That this convention of the Progressive Farmers of America go on record recommending the building of a Farmers' Political Party, a national, which stands for independent political action of the farmers and workers, who now have to fight the oppressors not only outside but also inside their own ranks.

"That we urge the continued co-operation of farmers and workers of Minnesota politically."

It may be taken for granted that the harder the capitalist daily organs of the East yell for Coolidge, the more they feel the growing strength of the drive of labor for independent political action. On that basis the screams of the New York Herald-Tribune should be sweet music indeed to the victims of greed in the Mississippi Valley. The third party must be the Labor Party.

The Role of Women in the British Miners' Strike

By CATHERINE B. H. CANT.

THE most important event, for the whole labor movement, of the year that has passed since last women's day has been the seven months' lockout of the British miners. But when we are marshalling the lessons of the past year to teach us what must be our tasks in the future we should consider how women have entered not only into the recent strike, but into the coal industry everywhere.

In its early days the industry employed thousands of women underground. In some pits it was necessary for them to work almost naked—crawling in 24-inch passages, drawing the heavy trucks of coal by chains fastened to a belt round their waists.

Work Underground in Bengal.

These conditions have been abolished by the struggles of the workers from British pits. Nowadays, the only women actually employed in the industry are the 10,000 or so "pit head girls" who sort and "trim" the coal. Women must never forget, and international women's day is the day for remembering, that tho the efforts of the organized workers have abolished such work in the mines of Great Britain, women and little children are still slavish under, even work for the same capitalists, in the pits of India and China. For instance, of over 250,000 miners of Bengal who tried to organize a strike in aid of the British miners, over 60,000 were women working underground in the pits.

The mine owners make them work sometimes 30 hours a stretch to save the cost of bringing them up and sending them down the shaft. These women out of their wages of something like 10 cents a day contributed more than $3,750 to the relief of the miners in the strike.

In 1921 a long strike resulted in the bringing down of the standard of the miners to a bare subsistence level. Since then the conditions under which the miners and their wives live have been such as to be a disgrace to civilization. Their average wage in the best districts was $12.15 per week—in the worst which were the largest, $7.27. Out of this the wife had to do everything—feed, clothe, and house her family. The houses generally belong to the colliery company so are left unrepaired, often nearly ruinous. In most cases they were overcrowded and very often condemned as unfit for human habitation but still inhabited because of the lack of others. The rent was usually $2.43 to $3.65 per week.

Infant Mortality High.

In such conditions, living on such food as can be bought for such wages, after all deductions for rent, coal, hospital, etc., are made, it is no wonder that the infant mortality and the mortality of women in childbed was higher by far in the coal fields than in any other area, that the rate of deaths from tuberculosis in these areas was so great. Such were the conditions in the coal fields before the strike of 1926. When it came, the women of the mining areas threw themselves into it with the energy of despair. They were threatened with the loss of from 20 to 30 per cent of those starvation wages on which they were just existing and that simply could not face this prospect.

The role which they played in the conduct of the strike could hardly be overestimated as important. Last year women's day was remarkable for the holding in the centre of the Midland coal field at Mansfield of a big delegate meeting—one of the most important recent developments of Communist work among women.

Three hundred women delegates from various organizations attended and after the position was discussed were given the task of preparing for the strike. When the strike actually began in this and in all the other districts the women of the labor party and the Communist Party, women took charge of certain defined and important tasks.

Not only money tho the chief activity in the non-mining areas, was not of such importance in the coal fields. The feeding of the striking men and children in kitchens and centres—while for the most part were supported by the money sent by the Russian workers—was one of the great women's activities.

Holding the men together by means of concerts and amusements was another. The most important activities, however, were the demonstrations and propaganda connected with all questions of relief.

In this matter the women of the Communist Party worked without pause to get all that was possible out of the authorities as relief. Cases were known in Fife and Nottinghamshire where women with tiny children walked as much as 20 miles over the hills to protest against the pitiful sums given out as relief. Such demonstrations were general in all districts. The organization of mass picketa were these were necessary was another important task of women. For this many women and girls, arrested including about 10 Communist of whom one, Mrs. Cartwright, was forced to go to prison with her baby of a few months old in her arms.

Meetings For Women Held.

Meetings for women—for wives of strikers, were held regularly throughout the coal areas. In some cases those regular meetings held to explain the situation of the strike and to see that all the difficulties concerning relief, feeding, etc., were cleared up as far as possible, have crystallized into permanent forms, of Guilds of the miners' wives, to bring them into closer contact with the affairs of the trade union. All these activities grew out of and were sustained by the indomitable spirit of the great mass of the miners' wives It was admitted by capitalist newspapers that with all this spirit and determination which animated the women that the solidarity of the men would have been broke long before it finally defeated.

The miners' wives of Great Britain in spite of their heroic fight are now suffering more intensely than ever before. The lowered wages of their men in many cases do not furnish enough for food alone. Their men in working the extra hour have to have food and bath prepared for them at hours which mean a 16 or 17 hour day for a woman who has one or more miners in her home and has also children to feed. Bronchitis among miners is prevalent in every coal area. Yet the women are not showing that discouragement which has left world-wide strikes. They have not forgotten their despair and at this Women's Day the Communist Party which at the 8th of March, 1926, numbered barely 1,000 women is now numbered by its female members—at least 80 per cent of whom are miners' wives.

Must Develop Solidarity.

Tho in the strike as over, the women of every country in the world should remember the wives of the British miners with messages of sympathy and encouragement in their fight to defeat. They have come through this great struggle with almost incredible courage and spirit. They have not defeated but only for a time—and they will fight again. The women of all lands must write not only to send messages of solidarity but also to organize efforts to act in solidarity with their suffering sisters everywhere—not only in Britain, but in the mines of India, in the textile factories of China, in every land where the workers are ground down under capitalist imperialist oppression.

N. Y. TIMES—ORGAN OF BIG BUSINESS

Editor, Daily Worker:—May we ask you to settle a friendly controversy about the merits of the New York Times?

What is your opinion of the New York Times as a source of information for the general public? What also—is its capitalistic and imperialistic trend if any?—Matthew R. Rothberger, Los Angeles.

The New York Times is the best capitalist newspaper in the country. It carries good varied news, which it presents from a capitalist point of view. Its bias, tho often veiled in sober and dispassionate-looking phrases, is implicit in each story.

Anti-Russian Slanders

There are innumerable illustrations of the Times's capitalist-imperialist bias. News from Russia, until the last two or three years ago when business men became interested in Russian trade and concessions, came as a rule from Riga, and expressed the most vile and ridiculous slanders against the Soviet Republic.

Chinese Sympathizer Fired

A more timely illustration, perhaps, is the appointment of Frederick Moore, a rabid anti-Nationalist as China correspondent. T. F. Millard, who formerly held the job, and who was fairly sympathetic to a united bourgeois China was dropped for some mysterious reason as soon as the Nationalist movement assumed impressive proportions.

In the fight between the militant workers and the labor fakers in the New York needle trades, the New York Times has consistently received its information from the reactionary labor fakers who are out to wreck the cloakmakers' and furriers' unions.

News Biased

These illustrations could be multiplied ad infinitum. The New York Times relentlessly injects its bias into every piece of news which goes into the paper—sometimes consciously, more often unconsciously. It does so because it is the organ of big business and intentionally or unintentionally expresses the big business point of view.

Check Up With Labor Paper

It is valuable, however, because of its wide-spread sources and its facilities for news-gathering. The reader who wants to know what's going on in the world should be careful to check up Times statements with the reports that appear in a working-class paper like the DAILY WORKER.—H. F.)

Robi, Weiner Must Die.

For his part in the Tombs escape plot last fall, in which a fatal battle was staged in the jail and between convicts and guards, Robert Weiner, 25, must die in the electric chair.

After deliberating six hours a jury in Judge Mancuso's part of General Sessions yesterday found Weiner guilty of murder in the first degree. He will be sentenced next Thursday.

Wall Street's Confession Of Faith.

IT was to be expected that Bruce Barton's discovery of Jesus as the first member of Brotherhood would be followed by an extensive advertising campaign to sell the idea. And, as ever, the Wall Street wolves who adopt the garb of the gentle lamb of god have had no difficulty in gathering within their fold a group of ecclesiastic press agents—as manly as amasculated Augustan priests, as honest as Judas and as Christ-like as Mary Magdalene's pimp.

Thru the church advertising department of the International Advertising Association comes an expression of the substance of religious faith held in common by 100 reverend gentlemen, representing all of the 57 or more garden varieties of christian doctrine so notably travestied thruout the world—an expression that will please their masters because of the bland assurance with which it attempts to salve human suffering and questioning. An excerpt follows:

"Religion breaks down the wall or partition between class and people and fosters good will, because it lifts one hand to god and reaches the other across to man. It makes the spirit of human brotherhood man's dominant social passion. It gives men a true standard of values. It shows that 'a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth'."

Religious Humility.

Take a glance at the controversy between the very Reverend Monsignor Father Belford, of Brooklyn, and the gentleman from Alabama, Senator Heflin, duly recorded in the Brooklyn Tablet.

Said Heflin, from the Senate floor: "I could squeeze his brains out between my thumb and forefinger."

Part of the reverend father's answer included this: "Why, we have bigger hogs right here on Long Island."

Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here!

Even Josephine Josephus Daniels, ex-secretary of the navy, has joined the foes of imperialism with limitations. In his Raleigh News and Observer, Daniels says:

"The purchase of an oil well in Mexico does not carry the right to a warship from Uncle Sam to control the government of that country. They (the imperialists) are determined that American investors in Latin-American countries shall dictate the policies of the United States with reference to those governments. They put their dollars above the lives of young Americans."

And the Detroit News asks and answers a pertinent question:

"Why complain if the canal our marines are guarding in Nicaragua is not yet built? The blue-prints must be protected."

While the San Diego Union joins our merry party with this sage observance:

"Secretary Kellogg asks the colleges to do all they can to promote Latin-American friendship for America. But so few of the colleges are equipped with marines."

Labor Hath Its Rewards.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has joined the ranks of the working class. He is now employed as a feature writer by the Hearst papers. The doubts we had concerning the authenticity of his authorship were dispelled when we recently invested in a Daily Mirror. Not even a tabloid reporter could do worse. The hard-working author receives $700 a week for his column called "Now," vaguely similar to Arthur Brisbane's "Today."

Denounce the tabloids as you will, yet this observation bears the weight of an axiom—none of them can hold a scandal to theatrical gossip sheets.

THE QUESTION.

Should the American people demand the withdrawal of our troops from China?

THE PLACE.

Mott and Pell streets, Chinatown.

THE ANSWERS.

Richard Hong, 1506 Broadway, restaurant employe: "Yes. American interests are well protected by the Nationalists. There is no reason why Americans should interfere in Chinese affairs. I have faith in the Kuomintang movement and believe that the Chinese people can take care of their country themselves."

Anthony Isoldi, 104 Bayard street, printer: "No. Why should we? We have Americans living there and they should be protected."

A Chinese student (who refused to reveal his name): "Yes. America should withdraw its troops. The people of China are in sympathy with the Nationalist movement. The only ones opposing it are the foreign business interests."

Mrs. Chu, 12 Cathhani Square, storekeeper: "The United States should leave China alone. Let the Chinese fight it out themselves. It is a civil war and should not concern other countries."

L. Chong, 51 Mott street, laundry worker: "Yes. The presence of American troops might provoke trouble. Nothing has occurred in China yet to warrant America's interference."

Times Change.

Editor, Daily Worker:—Times have certainly changed, it seems only like yesterday when speakers for the socialist party were jeered and booed on the street corners where meetings were held—espeeially in some of the western cities and towns, where the large corporations control the municipal government entirely.

In those days spies, police, gangsters, etc., were employed by those in power in breaking up meetings, arresting the speakers and persecuting radicals in general, but lo and behold the work done by these lackeys of the capitalists is now efficiently performed by adherents of the Second International, who have turned their backs against the class struggle and the co-operative commonwealth its final goal, and are showing their true colors by joining hands with the reactionary officials of the A. F. of L. and Wall Street in attempting to retard the work of the only true party of emancipation, the Workers (Communist) Party.—J. J. M., Brooklyn.

COAL AND COTTON WEAK PROPS FOR PROSPERITY BLAH

Iron, Steel and Autos Still Below Normal

The business prophets are kidding either themselves or the public. In view of the apparent chronic nature of professional American optimism, they may be doing both.

Right now they're pointing to the index of business activity as a sure sign that things are humming in America. They fail however to analyze the factors making for the rise of business activity. Otherwise they would pipe down a bit on some of those super-blatant blah. Let's take a look at the figgers ourselves. The average of activity since 1919 is 100. Here's the table:

	Dec.	Jan.	Feb.
	1926.	1927.	1927.
Pig iron prod.	96.4	94.6	96.5
Steel ingot prod.	96.9	94.0	99.2
Freight car loads	102.1	97.9	101.1
Elec. power prod.	103.7	102.8
Bitum. coal prod.	123.3	*114.4	*125.0
Automobile prod.	68.9	†92.9	†95.0
Cotton consumption	117.8	110.3	115.8
Wool consumption	94.0	88.1
Boot and shoe prod.	100.0	95.7
Zinc production	108.0	101.3	97.9
Combined index	103.0	‡100.2	*103.9

The first thing that's proved by this index is that business is picking up after the bad slump of December and January. The combined index shows 103.9, or 3.9 per cent better than the average for the post-war years.

But look at coal production. 25 per cent above normal. Look at cotton consumption, nearly 16 per cent above normal, representing in effect the misery of over-production which is pauperizing the southern cotton growers. And look at freight car loadings, slightly above normal because of the enormous coal tonnage being carried in anticipation of the strike.

Coal Production To Drop.

Does anybody imagine that either coal production or car loadings will be above normal after April 1, strike or no strike? Wallprol has pointed out in previous articles that there is a strike or not in April, the coal industry will be in a bad way with surplus stocks estimated at 80,000,000 tons flooding the market. In fact so far as coal production is concerned, things will be a good bit worse if there is no strike.

Look again at the chart. Notice pig iron, steel ingots, automobile production. In addition, steel trust bookings are still only 65 per cent of capacity, compared with 90 per cent last fall and shipments 85 per cent.

Wallprol is not predicting any decided slump in industrial activity this year. What there are plenty of factors which make a decline seem very probable, production may hold up, what with the stimulus of billions of dollars in surplus values crying for investment and thus stimulating activity. On the other hand, predictions of a continuance of 1926 conditions are plain bosh. The only thing's that certain is that sooner or later, and probably just many moons away, we're due for a frightful crash.

BULK OF PROFITS IMPERILLING BOSS ECONOMY IN U. S.

Don't Know What to Do With Surplus Billions

Wallprol has been pointing out without cease or letup that the burden of surplus values is lying heavily upon American economic life. Workers have been producing billions in recent years, and getting only a part of it in return. The owners of industry have found it impossible to consume their profits made by exploiting labor. What to do with the huge surplus, how to invest it, where to invest it? That's been the problem. Part of the surplus has been invested in Latin America and Asia.

Automobiles and building, it has been pointed out in this department, have taken up a good part of the slack since 1925. Repeated predictions of a saturation point in both industries have so far been disproved in fact and Annalist, the New York Times' sage financial weekly, says that there will be even more expansion in building.

Why? Because of these surplus values pressing for investment, in any thing at all, whether needed or not, just so there's some hope of a return on the investment. Continuing on the general theme of "easy money", i. e. the billions of uninvested funds, Annalist says:

"There appears to be no present sign of any early and forced balancing of the accounts which have been created in the last three or four years by the phenomenal abundance and cheapness of money—otherwise bank credit. It is possible to do much to patch up specific unsound situations. Yet there is perhaps some not easily specified foundation for thinking it probable that a considerable readjustment of this immense credit situation will be forced upon us in the not distant future."

Declining Prices Giving Cat Fits to Economic Wizards

Low prices, you would think, would be a boon to the country. But not under capitalism.

The portent that is making economists' tongues wag nowadays is the continuing decline in the price level, coupled with firmness in the volume of industrial activity. Last week for example, the index of commodity prices sank again. Cotton, textiles, foods, metals and building materials contributed to the reduction.

For non-economists, the continued drop means over-production. It means that competition is depressing prices, that industrialists are undercutting each other. It is a warning signal, like puffy bronchos that run before the summer storm.

Normally it is considered that industrial activity is accompanied by an increase in the price level. The manufacturer estimates his goods will cost him so much to produce, but by the time they're ready for the market, prices have gone up, representing a clear margin of profit to him. He keeps on expanding, in the hope that the increasing prices will agreeably put more in his pocket than he had planned. And then when the whole machine is finally going top speed, there comes the crash. But the process in the last two years has been upside down and the wise guys at Columbia and Harvard have not quit scratching their heads about it yet.

Small Farm Banks Forced to Wall by Continued Slump

This darned prosperity of ours has some funny quirks to it. Just glance if you want at the annual report of the Federal Reserve Board, which you can get by addressing the board at Washington, D. C. You will find that bank failures last year involved depositors of $245,000,000, or an increase of $110,000,000 over 1925. 956 banks went bust, against 612 the year previous.

The farm belt accounts for most of them. The board says that 12 states, all of them in the middle west and south, accounted for 80 per cent of the failures. Nearly two thirds of the failures were of banks with a capital of $25,000 or less. More than half of them were located in towns of less than 1,000 population. The average bank that failed had a capital of 35,000 and deposits of $300,000 against the average for all banks of $116,000 and $1,900,000 respectively.

Two obvious morals can be drawn. It's the farmer who's getting it in the neck and it's the small bank that's being squeezed out by the big ones.

Nearly 50,000 Auto Workers Are Jobless

The slump in Detroit can be seen at a glance here. In February, there were 223,000 reported on the payroll against 270,000 in February, 1926. Some 45,000 more workers looking for jobs in one city alone! A majority of the decline is in the Ford plants.

Nationalists Take Shanghai

CURRENT EVENTS

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IT is rather tough on the league of nations. On the eve of the meeting of its disarmament conference Italy hurls a monkey wrench into the political machinery by what amounts to an ultimatum to Jugoslavia to cease interference in Albania. With armies mobilizing on the continent of Europe and the fear of another world war creeping up and down the spines of capitalist governments, it will be difficult for the fako peace mongers to even pretend that permanent peace can be attained under capitalism.

THE real battle in the Balkans is between Italy and France. When Mussolini dispatches a note to Belgrade he is actually sniping at Paris. According to a letter from an Italian refugee living in Nice recently published in The DAILY WORKER, French and Italian armies are getting ready for hostilities and the naval forces of both countries are maneuvering for action. England is backing up Italy against her historical enemy France, and Germany is watching a chance to get back some of what she lost in the late war. It looks as if a nice little slaughter is being cooked up.

THE Nationalist forces have entered Shanghai and the prize city of the Orient is lost to the militarists. The fall of this city is a decisive defeat for the imperialists and it can now be considered a certainty that all China will soon be under Nationalist control. The strategy of the imperialists will now be directed towards splitting the ranks of the Koumintang Party and catering to the Right Wing, which would willingly come to terms with the robber powers but for the opposition of the Left Wing.

THE effect of the latest Nationalist victory in China should have a detrimental effect on the fortunes of the imperialists thruout Asia. Already our own imperialists are afraid that China shall become the leader of the oppressed peoples of the Philippines. The teeming millions of India will be encouraged to break the British connection. Imperialism is not sitting pretty just now tho it will take some time for its victims to develop enough muscle to deal it the final blow.

Yet those liars have the audacity to preach against "Soviet propaganda" in China.

GERMAN BOSSES' SOCIAL BUDGET HITS WORKERS

Gives to Wealthy and Takes From the Poor

BERLIN.—The German press is publishing fragmentary statistics from the German budget for 1927. These statistics, although incomplete, show very clearly the correlation of class power and the aggressive intentions of the German capitalists. The so-called "social budget", i. e. that section of the budget composed to reflect the minimum social obligations, undertaken by the capitalist state in respect to the toiling masses is worthy of special attention. Sapiro Attacked During Ford's Raid on Jews

"Don't Snicker," Says Editor, Starting Campaign

DETROIT, March 21.—Aaron Sapiro, drew blood today in his milliondollar libel suit against Henry Ford.

The wheat king scored impressively when he placed in evidence documentary evidence showing that the Ford crusade against the Sapiro "cooperatives" originated as a campaign against the Jews. This was the chief contention of Sapiro in his libel suit.

Although Sapiro had announced that he would temporarily abandon the Jewish issue, the argument was early in the day brot around to it again, as the central driving force of Ford's campaign against the plaintiff.

Letter Starting Jew Hunt.

The evidence consisted of a letter written by H. W. Roland, an executive on Ford's Dearborn Independent, to Harry H. Dunn, who investigated the co-operative movement for the auto king and later wrote most of the articles attacking Sapiro. The letter showed that Dunn was originally ordered to investigate "the Jewish boys who are putting the works on the farmers."

It showed that the activities of Bernard M. Baruch, New York capitalist among the farmers had actually brought about the investigation which led to the articles.

Ford's attorneys sought to block all testimony on the letter, which came into the trial while William J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent, was on the witness stand.

Dunn Was Ford's Writer.

Cameron testified that Dunn gathered the data on which the Sapiro attacks were based. He also said Dunn had written the anti-Sapiro articles under the "pen name" of Robert Morgan.

"Don't Snicker".

The letter follows:

August 6, 1923.

Mr. Harry H. Dunn, 27722 Prince Street, Berkeley, Calif

"My dear Mr. Dunn:

"Don't snicker when I tell you the Jewish boys are putting the works on the farmer. It began when Barney Baruch first became interested in Kansas. After Wilson left the White House. Since then there has been a great deal of the Jewish interested plight of the farmer, especially as to mortgaging their souls and bodies through government agencies, plus the various cooperative movements.

Money In It.

"We have been thinking of getting something tangible and here seems to be the opportunity to clean up the west coast situation. I don't imagine that you will have much difficulty in rounding the facts up on this, although all of it will take considerable time. If you can get it, will protect you of course, and it will be as fully remunerative, if not more so than the Abrams material.

"Let me know from time to time how the work is progressing and if there is any trip you must take to gather the facts, go ahead and send in the expense account to us. I believe that you have an opportunity to do considerable 'chronicling of the neglected truth' in this case.

"I don't remember much about the convict story now. If you want to

70 Percent Russian Deputies, Communist; Huge Vote in Moscow

MOSCOW, March 21.—More than 70 per cent of the deputies elected by the Moscow Soviet to the All-Union Soviet Congress which opens next month are Communists.

This and the huge percentage of the electorate voting (estimates vary from 90 to 95 per cent) featured the elections. Interest in the elections is far greater than that evinced in capitalist countries.

CHICAGO PARTY DEMANDS IMPROVED TRANSIT, SCHOOLS IN CAMPAIGN

By Workers (Communist) Party, District Eight, Chicago.

On January 25th the Workers (Communist) Party organization of Chicago selected C. E. Ruthenberg, the general secretary of the party, as its standard bearer in the Chicago elections and nominated him for candidate for mayor. The party membership and sympathetic workers engaged in the task of gathering signatures to petitions to have him regularly entered as a candidate. Thousands of workers signed their names to these petitions. The sudden death of Comrade Ruthenberg, however, has brought an end to these particular activities. It will not be possible to make new nominations and enter a new candidate in the field. Nevertheless, our party will continue to participate in the elections.

The Workers (Communist) Party fights for the realization of a workers' and farmers' government. While we recognize that the aims contained in this slogan cannot be attained through the machinery of the capitalist parliamentary elections, such elections form a very important basis for Communist activities and afford a means of reaching the American working masses. Despite the corruption of American capitalist politics and existing capitalist parties, the workers participate in elections even though not yet on a class basis. To give those elections class character by raising working class issues, to mobilize the workers for independent political action to fight for the present needs, is our immediate object.

In these elections, we will continue to expose the corruption of the old parties and their distinct anti-working class character. We will raise the vital issues effecting the working class which are involved in these elections. Such as, solution of the traction problem. Not on the basis of profit for the owners, but on the basis of municipal ownership with participation in management of the workers employed in the transportation system.

We will raise the issue of public ownership of public utilities, services to be provided at cost and participation in management by the workers employed in them.

We will raise the issues of labor representation on the Chicago school board. Re-establishment of teachers' councils. Against the platoon system and the junior high schools. For abolition of military training in public schools, for re-establishment of vocational training in the schools under union control. For greater appropriations for school buildings and equipments. For enforcement of the present city law prohibiting child labor up until the age of 16 and for city support of working class children whenever necessary.

We will raise the issues of stopping tax dodging by large corporations and revision of assessment of taxable properties so as to shift the tax burden from the workers to the rich corporations.

We will raise the issues of unionization of all employees and workers on city jobs, with wage increases to insure a decent standard of living. We will raise the issue of prohibition of anti-labor injunctions of improvement of health and safety conditions in the factories of the city and of no more race seggregation, but complete economic and social equality of all races.

We will fight for these vital needs of the workers, but continue to emphasize the fact that there is no final relief for the misery and exploitation imposed upon the workers by the capitalist system except to do away with capitalism and establish a workers' government.

A. F. of L. Chief Knows Nothing of Anti-Left Confab Called by Him

In spite of the fact that the special meeting of the New York Trades and Labor Council was called at his behest, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, at the Cadillac Hotel, where he is staying, expressed complete ignorance of the purposes for which the meeting was being held.

Just a short time before the meeting was scheduled Green and Frayne, general representative of the A. F. of L., and right hand man of Green, said that the purpose of the present Frayne conflab was to clean out the Communists from the New York labor movement, and especially the fur industry."

Among the cards expected at the meeting at Beethoven Hall were President Green, Matthew Woll, who has led the violent attacks against the militant workers in New York, and Edward McGrady, members of the special committee appointed by the executive council of the A. F. of L. to fight "the Communists."

This edition of The DAILY WORKER goes to press too early to make possible a complete report of the meeting.

A policeman's careless handling of his revolver following an all-night party causing an accidental shot, was today believed to have been responsible for the death of his brother, Joseph Perkins, 29, also a policeman.

Roy Perkins, who claims his revolver went off accidently, is twenty-four years old and a policeman of thirty days standing.

Polish Strike Goes To Arbitration; Guns Drive Workers to It

WARSAW, March 21.—Textile and other workers who have been on strike in Poland have agreed to accept government arbitration on their demand for an eight hour day. Severe repression by the military finally forced the strikers to yield thos far.

We will raise the issues of stopping tax dodging by large corporations and revision of assessment of taxable properties so as to shift the tax burden from the workers to the rich corporations

We will raise the issue of prohibition of anti-labor injunctions of improvement of health and safety conditions in the factories of the city and of no more race seggregation, but complete economic and social equality of all races.

Italy Secretly Lands Troops In Albania

Balkan State Italy's Price For Opposing U.S.S.R.

ROME, March 21.—An even more disturbing element has crept into the Balkan tenseness created by the Italian ultimatum to Jugo-Slavia, and the following circular note to the powers. A veil of silence is thrown over events. The chancellories of Europe have "shut up."

Intelligence move forward. It is reported that 1000 Italian staff officers have landed in Albanian civilian clothes and that within the last week four large ship loads of munitions have been unloaded at Albanian ports from Italy.

The Albanian army led by Italians, is also mobilized, and everything is ready for declaration of war and a lightening thrust thru Albania at the heart of Jugo-Slavia.

Paris Against U. S. S. R.

BERLIN, March 21.—German official and unofficial opinion is united on this interpretation of Italy's sudden challenge to the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes. They see it as part of English intrigue, directed in the first place against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Without England's certain backing, to keep France intervening, say all German diplomats there would never have been any "strong stand" against Serbia by Mussolini.

Buys England's Support.

Mussolini does not want a long drawn out war. It would lead to his inevitable ruin, if Italian peasants and workers had arms in their hands, and faced even one winter of trench fighting. He hopes to accomplish his ends by blitz of war, a sudden foray into Albania, without serious fighting — France meanwhile being controlled by England.

England's price was Italy's participation in the anti-Soviet bloc, her ratification of the Bessarabian treaty. For this the lives of millions of the workers of France, England, Italy, Serbia and various Balkan nations were jeopardized in the latest coup of British diplomacy.

"Playing With Fire."

Georg Bernhard, one of the leading German publicists, in today's "Vossich Zeitung" accused Downing Street of "playing with fire," and contrasted the British demand for a careful examination of Austria-Hungary's accusations against Serbia in 1914 with the speedier tendency of the British press to jump to the conclusion that Jugoslavia is guilty in the present case of the charges preferred against her by Rome.

The "Morgenpost" asserts that the people of London appear "to have short memories, for otherwise they would remember the sum endeavors in 1914 to localize the war between Austria-Hungary and Serbia and avoid at any cost, but this dangerous playing with fire."

Victory Breaks Backbone of Militarist Resistance; Intervention Threatened

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN CHINA

1. Shanghai, the prize city of China and one of the largest ports in the world, fell into the hands of the Nationalist troops without the exchange of a hostile shot, when Pi Shu-chen, commander of the northern forces that were supposed to defend the city from the revolutionists, folded his tent and walked quietly away.

2. Marines from the warships of all imperialist powers lying in the harbor have been landed. The United States contingent was rushed to the industrial district of Yangtsepoo because of their excellence as strikebreakers.

3. The General Labor Union of Shanghai called a general strike in honor of the Nationalist victory. Revolutionary flags have appeared all over the city. The strike is one hundred per cent effective.

4. The fall of Shanghai to the Nationalists has broken the backbone of northern resistance and places the forces of Chang-Tso-Lin that are marching southward against the Nationalists in a precarious position.

SHANGHAI, March 21.—The native city of Shanghai is now in the possession of the Nationalist government with the militarist generals and troops fleeing in all directions.

Order is being maintained by the labor unions and workmen wearing red armlets are patrolling the city. The people are quiet and there is a complete absence of hysteria or panic.

There is considerable excitement in the international settlement where the sudden fall of the city was received with consternation. The British propagandists had the people fed on optimistic predictions of militarist successes and conflict inside the ranks of the Kuomintang.

Labor Demonstration

Streets in the native city are deserted except for groups of fleeing northern soldiers. In the International Settlement there were numbers of demonstrations by Chinese students and laborers.

The whereabouts of the leaders of the Sun Chuan Fang forces are unknown but Sun was last reported fleeing to Nanking.

General Pi Shou Chen is reported to have fled to Woosung where he will board a warship for Tsingtao, accompanied by his staff.

U. S. Troops Land

United States marines were landed today and given the extreme eastern section of the International Settlement to guard.

The Shangtung troops are retreating toward Woosung, twenty miles down the Yangtse River, from Shanglai.

The most terrible scenes were enacted at the railroad stations today as a result of the evacuation of the defeated troops. The Shangtungites are forcing their way at the point of pistols, and one responsible white man reported, One officer ruthlessly beaten in Credit with his sword when he coolie was slow in moving the officers baggage."

Report Arsenal Captured

Announcement is made today that the Kuh Sien arsenal has been captured.

While Chang Tso Lin's preparations for the drive against the Nationalists at Hankow proceeds it is believed here that the Shensi troops and the forces of General Feng, the "Christian General," may sweep down on the Fengtien troops and check their advance.

General Chang Hsueh Liang has returned to Honan after conferences with his father, Chang Tso Lin, here.

The tenaity in Shanghai was increased tonight when there was a sudden strike of the workers in the electric power plant. The city went into semi-darkness and immediately the searchlights of naval vessels lying at anchor in the harbor began sweeping over the city.

Wants $25,000 for Slander.

NEWARK, N. J., March 21.—Suit on $25,000 for alleged slander was filed in supreme court here today by Miss Agnes C. Jones, assemblywoman from South Orange against Assemblyman Ernest P. Bro, of Irvington. Both are members of the Essex county republican delegation

The suit was filed following an investigation that crept in the legislature of rumors that Colonel Orison M. Hurd, assemblyman from Leonia, had been offered $5,000 for his vote on the Sunday blue law bill introduced by Bro.

Must Prove Alibi.

To perfect his alibi, Henry Judd Gray, corset salesman, accused of the murder of Albert Synder, art editor of a sports' magazine, who was found murdered in his bed Sunday, must establish his whereabouts between midnight Saturday night and noon of the next day.

COURT BATTLE NEXT TO STOP CRAFT PROBERS

Powerful Opposition In Pennsylvania Case

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Armed with the mandate of the Reed Campaign Fund Investigating Committee, Jerry C. South, the committee's counsel and special deputy, prepared today for a new invasion of Pennsylvania to seize election paraphernalia in four counties for the scrutiny in connection with the Vare-Wilson senatorial contest.

His arrival in the Keystone state, probably Wednesday, is expected to set off a legal battle which will be fought to the supreme court. Involved questions of constitutional law are involved, for South's attempt to impound the ballot boxes and voting lists of Delaware, Lackawanna, Schuylkill and Luzerne counties will be fought in the federal courts.

Hote To Be Investigated.

Challenged at every turn since the adjournment of the sixty-ninth congress on March 4, the committee pressed on. Stripped for the time being of the services of the senate sergeant-at-arms, it has deputized its own attorney as process server in the ballot-seizing chore.

Denied access to the senate coffers for expenses, it has provided its own funds.

Characterized by its opponents as dead, powerless and impotent, it aroused orders to carry on, and thereby has passed the way for one of the most spectacular court battles in American history—the spectacle of the judicial branch of the government called upon to curb the activities of a committee claiming to represent the legislative branch.

Reed Accuses Senator.

"The adjournment of congress has in no way impaired the authority of the committee," Chairman Reed said. "We are proceeding in those four counties because the committee was asked by Mr. Wilson, (defeated) democratic candidate against William S. Vare) to impound the ballots there.

"The filibuster was undertaken in order to prevent a full investigation of the elections in Pennsylvania. Pilfers and possibly in one other state. The public will have to judge the motives of the senator who took that course."

A SWITCH BOY ON THE B. M. T.

(This interesting story of the B. M. T. switch boy was turned in at the labor journalism class at the Workers' School. Read it and see why the traction workers need a real union.—Ed.)

By JACK GLASS.
(Worker Correspondent).

Out of work. Impossible to get a job, and riding in the subway there signs are displayed advertising "Conductors and Motormen Wanted, Steady Position, Healthy Work, etc., apply at B. M. T."

Nothing like taking a chance. I applied. Went up a flight of stairs and was given a piece of paper, with information as regard pay for learners.

"All students will be paid at the rate of 40c an hour for time spent receiving instructions on cars. Students will not be paid for time spent in class room.

"Only half (40c hour) will be paid per day. The other half will be paid only when qualified. Students will not be paid the other half if the company discharges them while taught."

On the wall a sign said that regular employes get between 62 and 62c an hour.

Training in Patience.

I came rather early and had to wait over 3 hours before they started to call me. A private room for examination. Several hours passed before my "Next" Under 21 the only job I could get was "Switch Boy." I was asked to come back next day and bring $5.50 for suit and badge, also cloth outfit cute, and start to work immediately (8 a. m.).

Next day I waited till 8.30 before me called me in. Several questions were asked; a paper with many more was given to me. I was told to go into the next room for doctor's examination.

Examined and Photographed.

Eyes O. K. I was told to go into the next room and undress. I was examined thoroughly. Again dressed, I was tested as to whether I could distinguish one color from another.

In another room my picture was taken in two positions, front and sideways, the way it is done in prison to a man held for murder. A picture of my birth certificate was also taken.

A room, something like a class room full of chairs and desks, was where I was sent next. Here I spent several hours. I gave them the paper with questions answered, and received another, four pages of additional questions. I never dreamed I'd ever be faced with such a list of questions. I had to give my life history for the last five years, telling where I worked, when and why. I was laid off or fired. If I hadn't worked at any particular period in the five years what had I been doing?

Yellow Dog Contract.

I had to agree to join the Brotherhood (company union) and to promise that I SHALL NOT join any other union (among the B.R.T. unions) and on leave to act. "Brotherhood, national" (real union men).

After I agreed (maybe I'm wrong, thing I was weighed and measured and then told to go into another room to get my "badge," which I did, giving me $1.00 deposit. I was also given a "Rules and Regulations" book for which fee was to be charged, if lost.

At 2 I was outside in the open air again, with the badge and rules in my pocket, and two notes, one for Browning & King (who was to give me a physical) for $1.50. The other note to the inspector to put me at his post.

Free Ride.

I felt proud riding on the car wearing the hat with the sparkling badge and (as) paying my carfare. I went over to the inspector and introduced myself. He told me to go to Park Row, that's where I'll work. I got there about 1 p. m. and was received by the open arms. Two switch boys were there instead of four. Two quit several days ago and there was had to do double work. Running from one switch to another, on foot as their legs could carry them.

One of the fellows had his lunch. The other stood out to get his so soon as he showed me what to do.

"Don't forget to be back on time," the fellow who was left shouted to the other. "It is now 1.15, be back by 2.15."

"O. K." was the faint answer from the fellow who was several yards away, running for his lunch.

I buttoned my coat tightly and started to work. I had no gloves and nearly froze my hands. My feet were cold and began to freeze. (It was November).

Every once in a while we had a few seconds to ourselves. We made use of it. I began asking questions.

"Say, how is it that the other fellow has two hours for lunch?"

7 to 7 on the B.-M. T.

"Don't you know," he asked, "that we work from 7 to 7 and two hours for lunch in between?"

"No, I thought that I'll have to work 8 hours, 9 at most."

"Go on, we work from 7 to 7, sometimes from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. and vice versa."

"What! Do you have to work at night, too?"

"You bet."

"How many days a week."

"Every other week we get a day off, if they can get a substitute."

"If not?"

"Then you keep on working."

Another time, a few minutes later, "How much do they pay you?" I asked.

"Twenty-seven cents an hour," he groaned back.

"What!" I shouted, at the same time swallowing a mouthful of dust from a passing auto, "you're joking."

He gave me a look and I knew he meant it alright.

I Decide to Quit

An hour passed. I made up my mind to quit. It's impossible for me to work so many hours, and at night into the bargain. Seventy hours a week no matter whether day or night work. To hell with such a job. I have to go to school, Workers' School, attend meetings, etc. In other words either drop the job or school.

As soon as the other fellow returned I told them that I quit. They argued with me trying to convince me to stay, but didn't succeed.

When I got to the inspector, three other fellows were there. They were also switch boys from other stations. One of them worked a week. The other two about two days. I, two hours.

The inspector took my badge and rules. He gave me a 75c to collect $1.00 for the badge and two hours work.

"How about the $1.50" I asked.

He told me that I can't return the hat. Maybe they will return the money if I'll go down to the place where I got it.

"We refund no money," was the answer I got. After arguing for some time I was told that I can exchange it for something else. I took it as an insult and refused to work. Not even for the two hours I worked.

I felt faint and dizzy from hunger. I was about five o'clock and I had no supper as usual. I also felt ashamed to think that I had to go through all the "red tape" for such a damn rotten job. Tomorrow I'll have to look for work, I think.

TELLEZ RETURN KNOCKS KELLOGG INTO CONFUSION

Queer Mixture of Fear, Hope, in Utterances

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The state department is all worked up today over the return to this city of Manuel C. Telles, ambassador from Mexico, fresh from a conference with his superiors at home and demanding an interview with Kellogg tomorrow.

In the first place, Telles should not have returned, if rumors carefully undenied by the state department had any foundation. He was supposed to be recalled, when he left Washington hurriedly a couple of weeks ago. Many explanations were given, the most official being that he was caught in "anti-American propaganda." However, he is back, and Washington is again laughing at Kellogg, as a poor prophet.

Talked Too Much Already.

To inquiries yesterday Secretary Kellogg replied:

"I am not going to say anything about Mexico."

The course of the department in the Mexican controversy has been puzzling to observers since Kellogg's return from his vacation, on Wednesday. Kellogg expressed himself to newspaper inquirers as somewhat "optimistic" concerning the state of affairs. Recent developments, he said, had been (a reassuring nature. On Thursday, Kellogg told newspaper inquirers that his remarks of the preceding day had been "misinterpreted" and indicated matters were still very serious. Friday came the White House optimism, which found no echo on the part of Kellogg.

Secrecy Continues.

Meanwhile, the most recent exchange of correspondence between Washington and Mexico City is withheld.

Secretary Kellogg and Assistant Secretary Robert E. Olds had a long conference with President Coolidge yesterday.

Poor Palm Beachers Nearly Bankless Now

Palm beach in its palmiest days boasted a dozen or more banks with swell Greek pillared fronts and nifty marble work in the interior. Today only one bank is still hanging on for dear life. In Palm Beach proper there's not a bank left while in West Palm Beach the two aforesaid banks are the lone remainders. Six banks failed within the past 10 days in the country. Twelve have failed in Florida in two months while 60 have succumbed since the collapse of the real estate boom last year.

Wallgrid mentions the Palm Beach situation as prophetic. Florida represents in a rather isolated example of what is true financially and economically the country over. Florida today with vast hotels deserted, real estate developments drifting idle into the primeval wild and mud, hundreds of millions lost, is just a forerunner of days not too far distant when the United States as a whole must come to a reckoning.

MEXICO SENDS NEW "MYSTERY SERIES" NOTE

N. Y. Consul General Denies Charges

MEXICO CITY, March 21. — The Mexican government has sent a new note to the United States, which it is understood will be delivered today. The contents of the note are said to be conciliatory and deals with matters raised in the recent American "mystery note."

A Washington dispatch received here today forecasts an agreement between the United States and Mexico on all oil matters before the end of the week.

"El Universal" stresses importance to a meeting between the Mexican ambassador at Washington and Kellogg where the proposals of President Calles are said to have been discussed.

Elias Denies Charge.

Arturo M. Elias, consul-general of Mexico in New York, today issued a vigorous denial against the charges made in congress by Representative James A. Gallivan, who stated that the "Mexican embassy at Washington and the consul general at New York have been conducting an intensive propaganda in behalf of the policies of their government."

The state note continues by saying: "I deny categorically that any of the publications issued by this consul general contains one single word which may be construed as an attack, or veiled attack, against any American public official."

Did Not Write Pamphlet.

In regard to the pamphlet "Hands Off Mexico," it is sufficient to quote the statement made to the press by its author:

"The Mexican consulate did not issue the publication of 'Hands Off Mexico' until we sent them a copy. They have had nothing to do with distribution."

"I also deny that this consulate general has expended the exorbitant amount mentioned by Mr. Gallivan in his statement, as this office has not spent but an insignificant sum necessary for the printing of its publication."

ASK PARDON FOR THE CENTRALIA I. W. W. PRISONERS

Five Jurors Testify They Were Terrorized

(By the Federated Press.)

Writes to Governor Roland H. Hartley of Washington state urging that he pardon the eight Centralia prisoners, director Forrest Bailey asks friends of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The workers were members of the Industrial Workers of the World and received sentences of 25 to 40 years in 1919 when they defended their hall against an American Legion attack on Armistice Day. Four legionnaires were killed when their parade marched on the I. W. W. hall.

Jury Was Terrorized.

Five of the jurors have sworn affidavits since the trial saying that the men were convicted because the jury was terrorized. These jurors say that they do not believe the men guilty of second degree murder. The trial was surrounded by a red hysteria campaign.

The defense pointed out that the Industrial Workers of the World had been terrorized, that its hall had been wrecked before and that the American Legion attack was deliberately plotted.

The defense found later that the details of 50 uniformed legion men who sat daily in court to intimidate the jury were paid $4 apiece per day and expenses. An anti-labor judge ruled out much of the evidence favorable to the defense, particularly that about the legion plot.

Centralia is a small town in the state of Washington's western lumber district where the head of reactionary and financially powerful lumber interests control.

DIAZ "ACCEPTS" LOAN FROM HIS WALL ST. BOSSES

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, March 21. —The final act to place Nicaragua under the hegemony of American finance capital will be reached next Wednesday, when the Nicaraguan congress is expected to vote approval to the $1,000,000 loan "granted" to Nicaragua by the New York bank firms, the Guaranty Trust Co. and J. & W. Seligman.

Negotiations for this loan have been in progress for the past few weeks and have been made since the depletion of the Nicaraguan treasury thru the military campaigns of the puppet, President Diaz, against the illiberal forces led by Sacasa.

$300,000 of this loan will be used immediately to repay the National City Bank for financing the war. $100,000 to repay other banks, while the rest of the money will be used to bring the revolution to an end, which means the strangling of the Nicaraguan economic, composed of the minister of finance, Louis Rosenthal, representing the New York banks and the American high commissioner, Gill supervise the expenditure of the funds. This seems to be in complete harmony with Diaz and presupposes that the latter will be liberally rewarded.

As a guaranty for the loan the Diaz government put up its bank and railroad stock and a mortgage on public property.

THE officials of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York are not permitting the grass to grow under their feet in their campaign to drive Communists out of the trade unions. If the avowed as much concern for the organization of the workers into trade unions as they do for the disorganization of those already organized, the trade union movement would not be the weak institution it is.

THIS is not the first attempt to drive radicals out of the trade unions. It will not be the last. And when they do it not minimize its possibilities it can be safely predicted that it will fail like its predecessors. The radicals are the backbone of the trade union movement. They are the aggressive elements. Without them the labor movement would be so much puny. As a matter of fact when they do it New York wherever the radicals are weak.

U. S. Denies Canadian Suggested Reciprocity

WASHINGTON, March 21. The Canadian government has officially approached the United States concerning any reciprocity treaties between the two countries, it was said at the state department today, named the speech of Premier MacKenzie King at Ottawa yesterday.

King told the Canadian house of commons that reciprocity was a policy of the liberal government of the dominion, and intimated that there was "some trade matters" with Washington pending. The commitment, however, does not appear of any importance.

Rush to Photograph Lou Tellegen Knocks Woman Into Amnesia

PANA, Ill., March 21.—Her memory suddenly restored to her after an attack of amnesia while she sat in the Commodore Hotel in New York, Mrs. Helen Hanker Brenner of Pana, Ill., returned to her home today after ten years of strange wanderings. She found her son, Billy, now four years old, back with her.

On March 15, 1926, she said, she was in the Grand Central station in New York, waiting to board a train. Photographers in a rush to snap pictures of Lou Tellegen, moving picture star, knocked her down in the stampede.

PROGRESSIVE TEXTILE ORGAN STARTS THIS MONTH; FIGHTS WAGE CUTS, LONG HOURS AND WAR

By CLARENCE MILLER.

"The Progressive Textile Worker," the monthly organ of the National Textile Workers' Progressive Committee made its first appearance with the March issue. The program of the paper is stated as follows: To Fight for the Organization of the Unorganized, the Amalgamation of the Textile Unions, Industrial Unionism, Militant Leadership, International Trade Union Unity and for a Labor Party. The paper also promises to fight against Wage Slavery, Imperialist Wars, All Capitalist Parties, Wage Cuts, Long Hours, Speed Up, Company Unions, Unemployment.

Workers' Mouthpiece.

This paper will be the expression of all the workers in the industry whether they are organized or unorganized. The paper is written not only by editors but also by the workers in the shops. It is a real organ of the workers. Articles by silk, woolen, cotton, dye and knit goods workers bring the life and problems of these workers to every one of the eight pages.

Attention to Youth.

Another interesting feature of the paper is the page devoted to the problems of the young textile workers and the children of the textile workers.

The articles on the lessons of the Passaic strike by the children of the strikers is one of the most interesting features of the paper. These articles should encourage the textile workers to make their children write for the future issues of the paper.

The issue this month is a real call to action. On the front page is printed the call that the progressive committee has issued for the New England Conference against the introduction of the 54-hour in the New England textile mills.

The articles by the editor John J. Sullivan on the 1st of March called "Leaders" of the U. T. W. and the other unions in the industry as well as the analyses of the conditions in the industry make the paper important for every textile worker in the country.

This paper is of interest not only to the textile workers but to every progressive worker in the country, for it gives an insight into one of the largest industries employing about one million workers. The paper can be obtained for five cents for a single copy or fifty cents for one year by writing to the N. T. P. W. C., 80 East 11th Street, N. Y. C.

Indecent Manufacturer

ORANGE, Mass., March 21.—J. B. Reynolds, 75, wealthy, retired shoe manufacturer today went to Greenfield jail for 200 days rather than pay a fine of $100 for displaying indecent literature.

After he had an argument over parking his automobile without lights in front of his business block here, Reynolds received an unsigned letter. He posted it in the window of the block and had copies printed and mailed to almost every home in town. Fifty left on his arrest.

Bohemian Newspapers Expose Fascist Plot For Siege of Vienna

PRAGUE, March 21.—Czecho-Slovakian newspapers report that Tyrolean and Hungarian fascists, with the support of Italian fascists encouraged by Mussolini, are preparing to "march on Vienna" for the purpose of wiping out the socialists who now control the capital. The papers declare arms and munitions are arriving in Hungary from Italy.

Election Campaign May End Lame Duck Session

Following the recent success of the G. O. P. machine in the House of Representatives, in filibustering so that they killed all pending legislation, including the Norris resolution proposing to do away with lame duck sessions of Congress, the Democrats are planning to come to the voters with this problem at the next election.

In a statement issued by Representative Ayers (democrat) of Kansas, it is seen the beginning of a new campaign for a constitutional amendment which would bring the newly elected House and Senate into session in January following their election. At present the old Congress sits for a few weeks—the lame duck session—beginning in December; and since many of its members have not been re-elected the previous November, they know they are politically dead, and they make no pretense of caring what they do or do not accomplish.

Advocates of the Norris resolution, or similar measure, believe it is "an imperative correction of our legislative procedure" needed to prevent any further such "disgusting performances" as the recent administration filibuster in the lame duck session.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 21.—Use of alcohol by women in New York State has been increasing in the last four years, the state hospital commission reported today.

Sinclair Lewis' Old Baptist Teacher in Pain at Elmer Gantry

"Sinclair Lewis wrote 'Elmer Gantry' when he was in a rage. There never was a minister like that character. The author was literally foaming at the mouth, and a great work of art is never created that way."

Thus spake Prof. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, at Town Hall yesterday. The genial essayist and popular women's club lecturer said he had a right to speak on the subject with authority, "because I know something about Baptist ministers. All my living brothers are Baptist ministers, and there has been a constant string of Baptist ministers walking through my house for years, and I have never known one like 'Elmer Gantry.'"

Prof. Phelps also has the distinction of having been one of Sinclair Lewis's college teachers.

SAXONY METAL WORKERS DEFEAT BOSSES IN STRIKE

Labor Turning Against Law Socialists Favor

By BILL ROSS, Federated Press.

BERLIN.—(FP)—The strike of the metal workers in Saxony for the 8-hour day and against the arbitration award, which for a time threatened to involve the whole German labor movement, ended in victory for the workers. 6,000 metal workers in Leipsic struck against the employers' demand for a 52-hour week. The employers locked out 160,000 metal workers in Saxony and called in a government arbitrator who awarded a 48-hour week. When the powerful Metal Workers union and labor throughout the country showed fight, the employers backed down and yielded the 8-hour day.

Against Arbitration.

Aside from that question, the arbitration of labor disputes came in for review again in conformity with the spirit of social peace accented by the Social-Democrats since the war, a law was passed in 1922 with their approval, providing for arbitration which could be made compulsory under certain conditions. Poorly organized workers in small scale industries benefited by the arbitration which secured basic higher wages. But recent experience of the larger organizations, notably the Metal Workers' union, has formed German labor against arbitration.

Bosses Sue Unions.

Many of the awards have been declared conspiracies. Often the workers must sue either and their representative state fined thousands of dollars, which had to be paid by the unions. Employers are now trying to get every important strike to suing the national unions.

Particularly disastrous was the experience of the metal workers in last year's socialistic dispute. The arbitration award cut the hours from 8 to 9, and the decision was declared binding. The Metal Workers union did not feel strong enough to carry on an illegal strike at the time and gave in.

When the employers association demanded that the minister of labor declare the arbitration award in the Leipsic case as binding, he refused. Labor leaders said that its very existence was endangered and it was rejected that the minister of labor was in the case of the shipyard workers.

Speech by Manuel Gomez

TO THE BRUSSELS ANTI-IMPERIALIST CONGRESS

Manuel Gomez represented the United States Section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League at the Brussels Congress of Oppressed Colonial Peoples and Anti-Imperialists. His speech is an analysis of the present financial imperialisms of Wall Street, and shows its roots in the exploitation of American and foreign workers.

PART III.

ANTI-IMPERIALISM IN AMERICA

Considering the difficulties of the present situation, our accomplishments in America are far from negligible. We have established close working contact with the most active nationalist and national revolutionary elements throughout Latin America. The United States Section of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League is linked up with national sections established in eleven Latin-American countries. In the United States itself we have systematically raised the question of imperialism in the trade unions and labor bodies.

On a continental scale we have participated in a rather long series of activities, ranging from successful demonstrations against sugar trust persecutions in Cuba to distribution of leaflets among the U. S. soldiers invading the city of Panama.

Yet we are only at the beginning of our work. Our program for the future is synthesized to the resolutions which the United States delegation, jointly with the delegations from the various Latin American countries, will lay before this congress. It is a program not merely of organization, nor even of organization and propaganda, but of concrete actions against imperialism.

The most powerful movements which American imperialism has thus far raised against itself are in the nations which it oppresses and menaces with new oppressions. Cooperation with these movements is the supreme test of anti-anti-imperialist movement in the United States.

I am sorry that the Philippine delegate, who I learn is on the way here, has not yet arrived. In the Philippine Islands where there is a mighty, particularly unanimous movement for independence from the United States, the leaders have a tendency to base their policy on the assumption that the U. S. government will grant them independence if they show by such assumption. The dollar empire is not going and anything away at this stage of its career.

Instead of looking to Washington for emancipation the Philippine movement would do well to cast its eyes toward Revolutionary Canton, only 620 miles away. And in the United States trustworthy allies can be found only by trying to make contact with the dynamic factors of the American class struggle. It may be more pleasant for Philippine leaders to associate with "influentional" politicians and college professors whose influence, when it is a reality, is usually against independence. A Filipino cannot than with radicals, left wing trade unionists and Communists. It certainly allows one to keep on being respectable. But respectability for the representatives of a colonial country, means submission to the standards, conditions, conventions and legality of imperialism. It can be purchased only at the price of effective acceptance of imperialism. If any of the nationalist movements represented here should become respectable by the home country of imperialism it will be dead.

I think I voice the spirit of this congress when I say that our friends are not to be sought among the friends of imperialist capitalism. The fundamental basis of our strategy must be, in the words of the present point on our agenda, cooperation between the national liberation movement in oppressed countries and the labor and anti-imperialist movements in the imperialist countries. This is true for the struggle against American imperialism and imperialism everywhere.

Italy Will Arm. *

GENEVA, March 21.—The League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference struck a snag today.

Italy interposed what appeared to be a barrier.

"Because of her geographical position Italy's armaments can not be inferior to those of any other continental nation," declared General De Marina, Italian delegate, who apparently referred to Europe.

Duce Ready to Rob.

It is universally believed here that Mussolini is determined to conquer Albania, and that the present crisis may be passed, another will soon arise. Italy would have a shadow of right to invade the country if the government of Albania requested it, under the treaty of Tirana.

Italy's obedient vassal, President Ahmed Zogu, of Albania, will request such intervention whenever Mussolini decides for him to do so. But if Jugo-Slavia meekly permitting the establishment of an Italian outpost on Albania, she would be practically giving up her independence, and therein lies the danger of war. Jugo-Slavia has never consented to the treaty of Tirana.

"The Dearborn Publishing Company.

Ford's Men Object.

With the letter in evidence and read to the fifteen-city jury of men and women, William H. Gallagher, Sapiro's chief counsel, sought to question Cameron. Instantly the Ford attorneys loosened a flood of objections and Federal Judge Fred S. Raymond excluded the jury to hear their arguments.

"I will prove that these articles were inspired by malice in the heart of Henry Ford against Aaron Sapiro," said Gallagher. "I will fix responsibility on him in that way. I will prove malice against William J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent, by the very articles themselves.

"I will show there was a conspiracy between Ford and his publication, and when there is a conspiracy, every defendant is liable for all damage done by the conspiracy."

Discuss Damages.

Hanley contended that to obtain punitive damages, malice must be proved against the Ford publication.

"You can't prove that malice by the state of mind shown in publications previous to the libels," Hanley added, "punitive damages cannot be assessed against a defendant where no malice is shown."

Gallagher declared that wealth had some influence in the libel case. He said the jury would have to consider Ford's wealth in rendering a verdict.

Henry's Mouthpiece

The Ford publication was simply the mouthpiece of Henry Ford and the instrument of his private will," Gallagher declared. "Everything he is guilty of he is guilty of. We have a right to prove he was actuated by malice.

Sinclair Jeers at Attempt to Jail Him

WASHINGTON (FP).—Confident that as long as he controls $100,000,000 of oil properties he cannot be jailed, Harry Sinclair has laughed in public at least, at his own conviction by a jury on charges of contempt of the Senate. He is liable to a sentence of from one to twelve months in jail. He is spending a fortune on lawyers who will appeal the case to the Federal Supreme Court. They are confident of long delay.

Sinclair's appeal rests on his lawyers' claim that the Senate committee investigating the oil lease frauds in 1924 had no right to question him as to his dealings in the Teapot Dome affair. The Federal Supreme Court recently decided that, in the Mal Daugherty case, the Senate must be presumed to be within its legal rights in making any investigation into the handling of federal business.

"Recall Marines" Is Demand of College Students to Coolidge

A demand for the immediate removal of United States marines from Nicaragua is contained in a petition, signed by 1,200 Columbia University students, which is to be forwarded to President Coolidge today.

The petition, which was circulated by J. Romaine Bradley, one of the students, says in part:

"Since the presence of American troops and warships in Nicaragua is the attempt of a strong nation to interfere in the internal affairs of a weaker, and has aroused the resentment of all Latin-America and in our country, we, the undersigned students of Columbia University, protest against this infringement of the sovereign rights and liberties of Nicaragua by the United States. We urge the withdrawal of American marines from Nicaraguan territory and the fair and amicable settlement of all differences existing between the two countries."

Organize New Branch Of Anti-Imperialists In Boston Conference

(By Worker Correspondent.)

A "Hands Off China, Mexico and Nicaragua Committee" was organized in Boston at a conference of workers from many nations, and will become a branch of the "All American Anti-Imperialist League."

The meeting was called to order by Jacinto F. de Lemos of Spain, Organizing Secretary, who sent out the invitations and F. T. Douglas, member of the Komintang party, outlined the history and aggressions of United States imperialism. Comrade de Lemos who recently addressed a large gathering at the new International Hall on the Sacco-Vanzetti case spoke on "Growth and Spread of American Imperialism."

An executive committee was elected at the conference and the next meeting set for March 19, at 32 Boylston street, Boston.

Those present at the conference were Y. W. Ying, T. D. Hoae, T. Z. Lee, T. Lee and I. C. King of China, Manuel Lemang of the Philippine Islands, Theodore G. Fett of England, A. Ordinary Mechanic Proves He Invented Victor Enclosed Horn

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21. — The claims of John Bailey Browning, a former mechanic, that he is the true inventor of the modern enclosed horn victrola cabinet, were upheld today by the Supreme Court.

A lower court also held Browning the true inventor, and the Victor Talking Machine Company appealed. It was the denial of this appeal by the court today that establishes Browning as the inventor.

The Victor Co., like most big corporations, fails to pay for many of the inventions it makes use of.

GERMAN BOSSES' SOCIAL BUDGET HITS LABOR

shall be as to what extent the bourgeois parties fulfill those old promises in the coming year. For financial reasons the [illegible] of unemployed [illegible] the budget assigned for [illegible] million marks:

1926	[illegible]
1927	[illegible]

The same tendency to diminish social obligations is shown in regard to unemployed aides. While in 1926 [illegible],000,000 marks were assigned for this purpose, in the current budget the sum is cut down to 900 million marks. "The government evidently counts on diminution by stating that "The new unemployment insurance law will be ready by April." This explanation shows that the future social insurance law will reduce the amount of unemployed aides.

An interesting comparison may be made between the increase in unemployment and the sum assigned for the unemployed:

	Number of Unemployed
Assigned 1925	[illegible]
Practical Help to unemployed
100 mill. January	1,053,000
In Unemployment doles 120 mill. July	2,000,000
Total 220 mill. September	2,000,000
[illegible]	1,677,000
[illegible]
1926
Practical help to unemployed
250 mill. January	1,484,931
In unemployment doles 500 mill. March	2,000,807
Total 750 mill. November	1,300,748
December	1,467,000
1927
Practical help to unemployed
250 mill. January	1,700,000
200 mill.
Total 450 mill.

Thus we see that, in spite of the fact that unemployment this year has already reached the highest figure for last year and is twice as high as unemployment for 1925, the sum set aside for unemployment relief in the current year is 100 million less than that spent last year and 30 millions more than the sums assigned for unemployment in 1925.

Pensions For Workers.

For government subsidies for the incapacitated, widows, and orphans will be preserved at last year's low level of rates set aside for this section of the population, living as they do in complete beggary. The government supplementary pensions for the incapacitated and widows was established at 26 marks and for orphans at 16 marks a year. At the same time the pensions of higher government officials and retired generals ranges from 1,000 to 2,000 marks a month.

Some idea of the social character of the budget for 1927 as a whole may be gained by comparing expenditure on the army and police with the social expenditure of the state. The state whole expending 4,400,000,000 marks on 2,000,000 unemployed and 3,500,000 unspecialized workers, while [illegible] orphans, intends to spend about 900,000,000 marks in 1927 on a few hundred thousand soldiers and police.

Bosses Feel Strong

The German capitalists feel themselves strong enough to proceed to the cutting down even of these minimum social expenditures which they were forced to make in the name of "the preservation of peace and quiet in the country." The capitalists have made a united front for the carrying out of their programs in the bourgeois-formed government. Thanks to the reformists the workers are not yet in a position to oppose the capitalists with their own united front but the increased influence of the opposition in the trade unions shows that the united front of the workers is not far distant.

In the Building Industry

The employers in the building industry, desirous of inserting unimpeded "rationalised" exploitation of the building workers, addressed the central executive of the building trades union with a proposal to open up negotiations on the establishment of "civil peace" in the building industry for 1927. As might have been expected the reformist leaders of the unions who are ardent supporters of "business co-operation" with the employers immediately agreed to this proposal of the employers. The executive of the building workers' union began to negotiate secretly with the employers. Not only the building masses knew very little of the course of these negotiations, but even the majority of basic sections of the union [illegible] nothing of them. Only quite recently fragmentary information has begun to leak out in the press. On the 17th and 18th of January the so-called "small commission for concluding civil peace for the building season of 1927" met in Berlin. The commission discussed questions of wages, hours, contract work, and apprenticeship. The employers demanded the creation of a "central arbitration court" to deal with all questions of wages. If such a court is set up, open conflicts, strikes and lockouts) ought not to occur. The reformists, no doubt, will agree to accept this proposal.

Profit By Overtime

As regards the legislative measures the employers agreed to take the Washington Agreement as a basis, which as we have already pointed out, the employers with full liberty to push overtime to an unlimited extent.

The reformists go still further to meet the employers' demands on the question of contract work. The employers have recently been waging a campaign for the issuing of the so-called "open contracts." The German builders, they claim, cannot be compared with their American colleagues, and work hasn't and negligently. The chairman of the central executive, Peplow, was allowed to confirm the employers' opinion at a meeting of the active union workers [illegible] Berlin, saying that on this question also the reformists are making complete concessions to the employers' demands.

Important Question

The question of apprenticeship is one of great importance for the builders. According to the data of the [illegible] department more than [illegible] persons are employed in the building industry. In spite of the resolution of the building workers' congress to struggle for the latter's working conditions for adolescents, Peplow at the meeting in Hamburg already referred to speaks in favor of four years' apprenticeship, i. e., the prolongation of the period of unpaid exploitation of adolescents.

The [illegible] opposition is carrying on a [illegible] struggle with these methods of "class collaboration," the results of which are only beneficient to the employers. The reformists respond to this struggle by numerous repressive measures against the exponents of the opposition and continue their negotiations with the capitalists.

Taken together this is a characteristic example of reformist practice.

Green and B. & O. Prexy Hit It Up Big; Swap Kind Words at Dinner

"One thing stands in the way of co-operation between capital and labor" said Daniel F. Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, in an address at the annual banquet of railroad labor editors in Washington, D. C., last Friday. "That is the militant attitude of some labor leaders and organizations."

Turning with a smile of satisfaction in the direction of William Green, who was sipping a demitasse at the speakers' table, Mr. Willard continued. "And I am pleased to say that the present leader of the American Federation of Labor is not of that type."

Willard's remarks touched on the new area of good feeling between managements and workers." He declared that there must be unions of employees, but not of the militant type.

In reply to Mr. Willard, speaking for the labor editors, Mr. Arthur Keep of the Railway Telegraphers Journal, praised "the magnificent speech of Mr. Willard." Mr. Edward Keating of "Labor" also praised Mr. Willard's inspirational address."

Next Step in China

The entry of the People's Army into Shanghai, almost exactly ten years after the fall of Czar Nicholas marked the beginning of the revolutionary epoch which, developing with lightning speed, saw the establishment of the working class dictatorship eight months later, is another milestone on the road along which the social revolution is surging.

Important as the Chinese national liberation movement is, as damaging as are the powerful blows it has dealt to world imperialism, the rise of the labor and peasant movement within the framework of the nationalist movement, the leading position taken by the labor movement in all the industrial, political and military actions, the tremendous influence of the representatives of the trade unions in determining policies of the Central Committee of the Kuomintang, are unmistakable indications that the mass movement is of a depth and width which cannot much longer be confined within the relatively narrow boundaries of the nationalist revolution.

The Chinese liberation movement has proven that it is part of the world revolutionary movement—the ally of the working class in the imperialist countries.

The Chinese revolution is following the path pointed out by Lenin. It is already bursting the bonds of the capitalist-democratic movement. The latest developments in China—the aggressive role of the left wing, the organization of a People's Assembly in Shanghai, the collapse of the northern militarist forces under the joint impact of the revolutionary workers, student and peasants supporting the People's government and the superior morale of the People's armies, the huge strike and the rapid spread of trade union organization—all testify to the correctness of the estimate of the role of the national revolutionary movements and the forces involved therein contained in the theses drafted by Lenin for the Second Congress of the Communist International. Lenin wrote:

"Foreign domination has obstructed the free development of the social forces, therefore, its overthrow is the first step towards a revolution in the colonies. So to help overthrow the foreign rule in the colonies is not to endorse the nationalist aspirations of the native bourgeoisie, but to open the way in the smothered proletariat there. There are to be found in the dependent countries two distinct movements which every day grow farther apart from each other. One is the bourgeois democratic nationalist movement, with a program of political independence under the bourgeois order, and the other is the mass action of the poor and ignorant peasants and workers for their liberation from all sorts of exploitation. The former endeavor to control the latter, and often succeed to a certain extent, but the Communist International did the parties affected must struggle against such control, and help to develop class consciousness in the working masses of the colonies. For the overthrow of the foreign capitalism, which is the first step toward revolution in the colonies, the co-operation of the bourgeois nationalist revolutionary elements is useful . . . The real strength of the liberation movements in the colonies is no longer centred to the narrow circle of bourgeois democratic nationalists. In most of the colonies there already exist organized revolutionary parties which strive to be in close connection with the working masses . . . The Communist parties of the different imperialistic countries must work in connection with these proletarian parties of the colonies, and through them, give all moral and material support to the revolutionary movement in general . . . the proletarian parties must carry on vigorous and systematic propaganda of the Soviet idea, and organize the peasants' and workers' Soviets as soon as possible."

The differentiation in the Chinese liberation movement expresses itself in the workers', students', soldiers' and peasants' assemblies formed in Hankow, Wuchang and Shanghai—the industrially developed centers of China, and in the alignment of right and left forces within the Kuomingtang ("People's Party"). The imperialist press estimates this process of differentiation as internal division weakening the nationalist liberation movement but it is nothing of the sort. It is proof positive that the Chinese independence movement is vital with the unconquerable power of the millions of workers and peasants who will not stop with nominal freedom from imperialist control and who are driving the movement forward toward the goal of a workers' and peasants' state.

The fall of Shanghai to the People's Armies is a decisive victory for the national liberation movement, it gives it undisputed control of all of southern and central China and at the same time it puts on the order of business of the Chinese Communist Party, the trade unions, the left wing of the People's Party and the peasant organizations, the establishment of the Chinese Soviet Republic.

WORKERS OF LOS ANGELES MEET TO DO HONOR TO RUTHENBERG AS COURAGEOUS, ABLE LEADER

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 23. Six hundred workers of Los Angeles attended the Ruthenberg memorial meeting and sang the International and the Revolutionary Funeral March in honor of the dead leader of the Communist movement in America.

Comrade Globeman, sub-district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, acted as chairman and in a short address, called attention to the fact that the workers of America had lost a militant comrade and a pioneer of the revolutionary cause.

Comrade Tom Lewis made a strong appeal to the workers to follow in the footsteps of Ruthenberg, a hundred per cent Communist.

Bruce gave a brief sketch of the life of Ruthenberg, laying [illegible] upon his anti-war record, which was not pacifism, but a determination to fight only in one war, the workers' revolution against capitalism. The imperialist war he fought against when it was dangerous to do so, at the very time the hysteria was greatest.

Comrade Frank Specter expressed the grief of the International Labor Defense, of which Comrade Ruthenberg was an energetic member.

Comrade Jessie Schulen spoke for the Pioneers, and Comrade Edith Berkman for the Young Workers League, both of which organizations feel the loss. The Freiheit chorus led in the singing.

The Disintegration of the Socialist Party

By DAVID KVITKO.

Article 1.

THE Socialist Party is rapidly fading from the political horizon. Even those who hitherto turned a blind eye to this staring fact, are beginning to realize this deplorable state of affairs. The self-deceiving, boastful tale that "we are growing," at a time when thousands of members were leaving the party and the workers ceasing to vote the Socialist Party ticket, is hoard no more.

The profuse exodus from the Socialist Party has been so disastrous, the loyal members remaining so few, that to induce the remainder to stay, and as a bait for new ones to join, the insurance policy plan is offered by some leaders, and there are prospects that some real estate dealer, a socialist old-timer, may volunteer to plan to offer cheap cemetery for "the good of the cause." Meanwhile, the party is gasping for political air, is struggling for dear life.

To disappear from the political arena, without attempting to retain at least a small part of its former prestige, is too painful, and the Socialist Party decided to speak openly of its critical state, to summon whomever it can in order to be saved from disaster. That this sounding alarm may work havoc, there is no danger, for the simple reason that the Socialist Party has nothing to lose. Those who read the "New Leader" are quite aware of the fact that of the Socialist Party only its shadow remains.

The first on the program is Mr. Ghent, sometime ago a star of the Socialist Party's brilliant constellation. When the gigantic hurricane swept over our land, these gentlemen were carried away from its folds and blown into the top of the Social Democratic League—"a free lance, perhaps paid premium of the Wilsonian democracy." They chose then the noble mission of "enlightening" the American people and the "intelligence department" about the Bolshevist land of prey and its American fledgeling, whose hour they advised to clip before it is too late.

With these renegades the Socialist Party, which is morally and physically in the lower level of degradation, the first "Let bygones be bygones." So says Mr. Feigenbaum, but not so Mr. Ghent. His reminder of the past sins of the Socialist Party is not merely an idle turning over leaves of war history. It is a lesson.

Now, what is the lesson the Socialist Party is supposed to be taught? "Unfortunately," says Mr. Ghent in the issue of Nov. 9th and Dec. 4, (1926), "so long as Mr. Berger can be elected to office, largely on his war record, in the predominately alien ballwick of Milwaukee, there is small hope of a change for the better. Yet the effort will have to be made. A socialism too narrow to include a sense of membership in the national community and a decent respect for the institutions, history, traditions and folk-ways of the land of one's adoption is too sickly a plant to thrive in this soil."

It follows that if the Socialist Party's leadership wishes to save the party it would have to recall Berger for his anti-war stand and tell the alien hillwick of Milwaukee to become Americanized. It would have to learn to respect American institutions, observe traditions, in a word become a respectable hundred-percenter.

Mr. Ghent warns the Socialist Party to eliminate the subject of war from its propaganda. "To boast of the party's seditious attitude during the recent war is but to strengthen the popular conviction of its intractable alien-mindedness and to push it into further isolation. . . The only way of which we can be certain that it will be opposed by every pacifist, is a war in behalf of the people and government of the United States. But for other wars, your true pacifist picks and chooses . . . There was hardly a professed pacifist in the United States who did not work himself into a frenzy of exaltation over the Soviet invasion of Poland in the summer of 1920."

Sure, Mr. Ghent is no pacifist. Not in vain was he on Wilson's band wagon, where he rubbed shoulders with the Bucksons and Palmers, and the "socialist" Pilsudsky is still dear to his heart for did he not lead war with Russia in "behalf of his people and government"?

Another lesson the old "socialist reformer" is ready to impart to the Socialist Party, is very interesting from in itself but as a characteristic of the Socialist Party which lends such an attentive ear to it. For it is a new brand of socialism not an alien one, namely "trade-unionism, social legislation, welfare work, diffusion of stock ownership, the federal reserve system, the International Labor Office, industrial Congress, the League of Nations." To "respect tradition" is to support the candidates of the capitalist party which favors the A. F. of L.

Mr. Ghent maintains that the Socialist Party is further away from the trade union movement than ever before and that this is due (besides its alien and pacifist policies) to its favorable attitude in the past to the Soviet Republic.

He says: "The tactics of the party leaders had reached an extreme stage of dishonesty and dishonor. For the tragedy in Moscow there was one kind of argument and profession, for the people of the United States a kind directly the opposite. . . The result of this shameless duplicity was exactly what any intelligent person could have forseen. . . With the advent of the Bolshevik terror the party found a new field for the exercise of its wrongheadedness and folly, and in its servility to that regime it renounced its support of democracy, civil liberty, legal processes and whatever vestiges of Social democracy it had till then retained."

What is the conclusion Mr. Ghent reaches? "What still persists of the insane and inhuman revolutionism to which it became addicted in the worst days of its servility to Moscow must be extirpated and the whole mad delusion repudiated."

Mr. Ghent is right when he accuses the Socialist Party of hypocrisy. Of course, his own stand in relation to the Soviet was that of a Wall Street flunkey. If he were an "intelligent person" he would realize that the "insane and inhuman revolutionism" has been "extirpated," long since and the Socialist Party is now at present a corpse. At present he may join hands with the leaders on the basis of a common cause—a deadly fight against the progressive forces in the labor movement.

That the Socialist Party offers its columns to such traitors as Ghent, is very symptomatic. Its leaders are ready to liquidate the remnants of socialism. They are recanting their past sympathetic attitude to the Soviet government; they are ready to join forces with reactionaries as Ghent. For this purpose they are ready to pay the price and to turn their cheeks in the slaps of the Ghents. And perhaps, another reason induced the Socialist Party to expose itself. Pitying its readers and members who languish from inactivity and larsions, the "New Leader" may have decided, in a Christian like manner, to offer its meagre body to be publicly flogged in order to stir the blood of the phlegmatic membership and move it to action.

There Survives the Political Party of Labor

By ENEA SORMENTI

THE political party of the working class in the United States has lost one of its greatest leaders, C. E. Ruthenberg.

Hastily we are jotting down these lines. Later we will say more and better of the work of this admirable fighter of the communist international. Today we limit ourselves to sketch briefly, from an historical and Marxist point of view, the figure and the talks of C. E. Ruthenberg in the revolutionary movement of the working class in the greatest capitalist and imperialist state on the face of the earth. Such an analysis can only be made by observing the facts with a large vision of ensemble, without coming down to particulars of analytical or journalistic character.

No problems of the revolutionary movement of this nation have been discussed or solved within the last fifteen years without the theoretical and practical contribution of this leader. And there has been no struggle in the Marxian left wing of the socialist movement that has not seen C. E. Ruthenberg as a strenuous fighter against the falsification of the revolutionary Marxian doctrine, as magnificently expressed in all its parts by the two teachers of scientific socialism, of which the Communist Manifesto of 1847 is the classic synthesis.

Furthermore, he was a leader of the Marxians left in the incessant struggle against the deviations and degeneerations of the reformers and in this fight he gave notable contributions. He always hated equivocations, deceit, opportunism and deviations. Of the opportunist American social-democracy he always was an implacable enemy.

We find this precise, straight, massive, Leninist character impressed on the theses and on the decisions of the conventions, in the programs and in the proclamations of the Party, which he directed with ardor until death, thru all storms, with abiding faith in the future. We find it in his concise speeches, formidable for profound theory and enviable experience. He never deviated. He was, we believe, the most genuine interpreter of Leninism in America.

To him we owe the building of the Communist party of which he was an incomparable pilot. To this party he gave all his care in order to perfect it as a class political party, capable of accomplishing its tasks, and in the process of clarification he reproached the opportunists of all kinds, holding that the politics of the revolutionary class could not be based on low collaborating speculation, but on strategy, mobilization, fight without quarters and without sparing blows against capitalism.

The theoretical work of C. E. Ruthenberg cannot be detached from the political, because both form an inseparable whole. During the world war, he was the leader of the Marxian left. Grounded in the Marxian education and possessing historical intuition, fortified by the perfect knowledge of the economic development of this nation, he fought against the various opportunistic tendencies and groups. While not well known yet by the great crowds, like the traditional chiefs of the social democracy, he, at the head of the socialist delegation from Ohio, introduced at the St. Louis convention a motion against war. The motion was shunted by several officials.

He had seen also the shameful end of the Second International on August 4th, 1914, and had been present in spirit at the conference of the Marxian left groups in Kienthal and Zimmerwald. He had accepted with both enthusiasm the words of Lenin: "Let us turn the Imperialistic war into a class war." For these conventions of his, he risked jail and the most infamous persecution.

After the shameful end of the Second International, it had become necessary to found a new International and this necessity became a shrieking reality in 1919, when in the capital of the First Worker's State, was constituted the Third International, upon the solid foundations of the Marxian doctrine.

C. E. Ruthenberg was at his place. He greeted the event with a heart full of joy. He too had struggled to re-establish the revolutionary conception and program in the Socialist movement of America and finished this work of his by founding the Communist Party of America, of which he became the leader. Facing jail anew as well as other persecution, he actuated in the practical class struggle the principles which he defended in the field of doctrinal criticism.

The struggle for complete clarification still continues. Like Lenin, he affirmed that the Party cannot lead the proletariat to victory if it does not succeed in liberating itself of traitors, hesitant members and opportunists. It is necessary to resort to a cut of the diseased parts of the body. He asserted that when he was called a sectarian and disruptive, being sure of himself and of his work. His dream was expressed in his last words on his death bed: "Give the Party the theoretical and practical weapons, the perfected structure, a body of disciplined members to face the revolutionary events, as instruments of action and of battle.

Our chief has left his work. Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg departs from us at a time when his work and his counsel were so precious against black reaction. The Communists lose their best leader, the American Proletarian loses a fighter, the colonial people one of the hardiest fighters for their rights, the Communist International one of its bravest militants. What does all this mean to us? What will be the consequence of the disappearance of this man, who has permeated our movement with his knowledge and with his sacrifice?

C. E. Ruthenberg is dead, but there survives his handiwork: the Communist Party of America, the political party of the working class of this nation.

Shoe Workers Pledge To Keep Up Struggle To Emancipate Labor

Shoe Workers Protective Union, Local No. 53, New York, have adopted the following resolution on the death of C. E. Ruthenberg:

"Whereas, the working class of America has lost a great leader from its ranks by the sudden death of C. E. Ruthenberg.

Therefore, be it resolved, that local No. 53, Shoe Workers Protective Union, goes on record to commemorate him and keep up the struggle to emancipate the working class.

"And be it further resolved, that this resolution be forwarded to all of the labor press."

Max Hein, Secretary,
Local No. 53, S. W. P. U.

"Navy Mir" Weekly, N. Y.—"Grief stricken by the dreadful news of the untimely death of our beloved comrade, Charles E. Ruthenberg, we feel, however, confident that this heavy blow of the blind forces of nature, while depriving us of our most tried fighter, who led the Communist movement in the United States from its very inception, shall only the more consolidate the fighting ranks of the Communist Party by imparting on the whole membership the consciousness of double responsibility, by penetrating it with the spirit of the most self sacrificing devotion to the cause of the working class revolution, which distinguished the whole life and work of our unforgettable comrade and leader, C. E. Ruthenberg."

West Philadelphia Workers' Club, Philadelphia, Pa.—"Words fail to express the loss to the American working class by the untimely death of our leader, C. E. Ruthenberg. Our consolation will be that we will continue to carry on as he had tirelessly taught us to work for freeing the working class."

RUTHENBERG RECRUITING DRIVE STARTS; TWO CHICAGO MEETINGS

The Ruthenberg recruiting drive is in full swing. Reports are beginning to arrive of the first meetings arranged to secure new members for The Workers (Communist) Party as part of the drive.

Chicago has already arranged two meetings for this week. The first one will be held Thursday, March 24, at Northwestern Hall, North and Western avenues under the auspices of Section 6 of The Workers (Communist) Party. Jay Lovestone, Acting General Secretary of the party will lecture on the work of Ruthenberg in relation to the Communist movement and the lessons to be learned from it. All workers are invited to the meeting. Admission free.

Friday, March 25, a membership drive meeting will be held at the South Side Community House, 3201 South Wabash Ave. It will be addressed by Max Bedacht, member of the Central Committee of The Workers (Communist) Party and editor of The Communist. All friends and sympathizers are welcome.

The tenor of these meetings as well as all of the recruiting work is based on the slogan "Ruthenberg died building the workers' cause—Communism; Build The Workers (Communist) Party in America!"

Close the Ranks.

Nucleus 2, Workers Party, Cleveland, O. "The death of Comrade Ruthenberg, the leader of our Party, has done irreparable harm to the Party. Comrade Ruthenberg's devotion to the Party, his keen mind and unquestioned leadership have been the guide for our Party in the difficult position in which it has had to perform its task.

"The death of Comrade Ruthenberg demands that our ranks be closed, that every comrade put his shoulder to the wheel, and with redoubled energy do everything in his power to build up the Party, as the best testimonial that we can erect to the memory of our departed leader.

"Let's Fight On" will be the slogan of our nucleus."

REACTIONARY MAKES TREACHEROUS ATTACK ON CHICAGO NEEDLE TRADES

Speech in Federation of Labor Meeting Is Part Of General Increase of Struggle

CHICAGO, March 21.—Taking advantage of the fact that all left wing and progressive delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor were paying their last tribute to C. E. Ruthenberg, Mollie Fried-Dalrymple poured out the most vicious attack ever heard before the central body against the left wing in the needle trades.

She, of course, directed her attack especially against the Communists whom she accused of every crime under the sun. The story of how the vicious Communists have bribed the "innocent Irish cops" under the "reformed" Tammany Hall administration was told in such a pathetic way, that all the business agents in Chicago had to wipe tears in between scenes.

Shielded Peristein.

She forgot to tell about the role played by Peristein in Chicago and how the left wing had to rebuild the union after he had nearly ruined it, also how he forgot to account for the money spent to expel the left wing under the guise of an organization campaign.

The Chicago Joint Board came in for its share of the attack and evidently the Sigman machine is preparing to follow up their union smashing campaign in New York and invade Chicago.

She is of course being backed by the Fitzpatrick and Sockets' machine and expects their support to help her fleece the trade unions for money in the campaign.

Sigman's Sluggers Come?

According to reliable news, she is not going to perform the job of "cleaning out" in Chicago but "other and better able people will be here." The Sigman outfit will no doubt need more physical arguments.

In the Furriers, the right wing continues its old policy of breaking up meetings either by the aid of Green, Atkins and Co. from the United Hebrew Trades (Forward Advertising Agency) or by the Chicago police. The Hebrew Trades council have selected a committee to again "investigate" or rather break up the furriers. In spite of the fact that 200 members were present and followed the left wing a handful of the Forward gang under leadership of Milstein and Lately joined by Israelson, erstwhile progressive, the meeting was broken up. Israelson, however, always runs when there is trouble in sight and, as usual, took the "air." The membership is determined to carry on the struggle until the union has been cleaned of gangsterism.

The struggle against the class collaboration policy in the machinists has also culminated in an attempt to railroad the left wing on the outside. Charges for "conduct unbecoming a member of the union" have been preferred against one of the leaders of the left wing, A. Overgaard.

According to rumors he is supposed to have said and written too much attacking some of the officials for their policy of surrender.

In politics, according to the Federation News, "trade unionists are evidently divided as to the merits of the three candidates, Dever, Thompson, and John Dill (Pickle) Robertson."

Yes, the movement is divided as to whom of the candidates can throw most crumbs to the labor fakers after election. The wage earners' league, the creation of the late Wm. Quesse nf the flat janitors is behind Thompson and the Illinois State Federation officials, the street car men and the Printing Trades council, behind Dever. The street car men hold Thompson responsible for their wage cut in 1922. It is well to remember also that during the railroad strike in 1922 John Fitzpatrick stated on the floor of the Federation, that he "would not ask any favors from a seals." At that time Thompson was on the unfair list of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Dever, the puppet major of big business, supported by the Tribune and the Daily News can boast of a mixed list of signatures including such labor "leaders" as Agnes Nestor, Mary McGarrey, Victor Olander, etc., together with Julius Rosenwald, Jacob Loeb and scores of other well known sweat shop owners and open shoppers.

Ask 27 Questions for 41 Cents an Hour Job In a N. Y. Factory

By JAMES J. BOUGAN.
(Worker Correspondent.)

UTICA, N. Y., March 21. — In Utica are many workers out of work and it is very hard to get a job, but I got one only for two days.

I went to Bassett Corporation one morning. At the employment office I told the agent I was looking for work. he said: "I have no report in yet but will you come in the afternoon at 1:30."

Asks Questions.

I came back at 1:30 and the employment agent asked me the following questions:

"What is your name?"
"Where do you live?"
"How long you live there?"
"What is your nationality?"
"What year were you born in?"
"What date of the month?"
"When did you come to this country?"
"Have you got your citizen papers, first and second?"
"Did you attend night school?"
"How long have you been in this city?"
"The year, date of the month?"
"What is your occupation?"
"Are you married?"
"Have you any children?"
"How many children have you?"
"Where did you work last?"
"Did you quit or did they lay you off, and why did they lay you off?"
"How long have you been out of work?"
"Are you a member of a union?"
"What union?"
"What is the number of the union?"
"Are you paying membership dues?"
"Is your eyesight all right?"
"Is your hearing all right?"
"Have you a rupture?"
"Do you drink?"
"Color of your eyes?"
"Color of your hair?"
"Have you any marks?"

41 Cents an Hour.

After filling out the application card he told me to wait a few minutes, the other man will be in and he will take care of me. The other man come in and he gave me two slips of papers and he told me to come to work the next morning at 7 A. M. I saw in the application card that my pay was 41 cents an hour, work from 7 to 5:30 with 45 minutes noon for lunch.

I worked one day and the second day the superintendent came to me at stopping time when I was getting ready to go, he said "I'm laying off some of the new help," and he gave me $8.01. I asked him what is wrong, he said again, "I'm laying off some of the new help," and he asked me for the check. I got the check to his office and I sign a card that I was paid.

The Bassett Corporation makes parts for automobiles and washing machines and during the war they made ammunition.

BAY STATE WORKERS RETAIN WOMEN'S EIGHT-HOUR LAW, FIGHT NINE-HOUR DAY FOR MEN

BOSTON, (FP)—While organized labor of Massachusetts seems to have beaten textile manufacturers' efforts in the current legislature to break down the 48-hour law for women, the textile situation remains acute throughout New England.

Labor's attempts to get a 48-hour law for women workers in New Hampshire were set back when the legislature's lower house defeated the measure. New York's senate has passed the much-modified 54-hour bill which would permit 40% of 54-hour work under some conditions.

Strike Goes On.

Two hundred die house workers of Parole Mills, Lawrence, Mass., are keeping out their strike begun the first of the month against a new efficiency system. The strikers are organized in the American Federation of Textile Operatives.

No Rhode Island legislation investigation of the Nonquit dyeworks textile locked out strikers will be proposed by Gov. Aram J. Pothier. Several thousand workers are striking from the three Manx Rodier mills in Woonsocket, R. I.

Usual Threat.

The mill management made the usual threat of removal to the south in an endeavor to force the 54-hour week and lower pay. Upon the organized workers' refusal to end strike at the Lee Social mill the company shut up two other Woonsocket mills.

Another Strike Soon

Walk-out of the 2,000 workers at the Manville mill of the company is pending. A favorable vote for a sympathetic strike has been taken by T. W. organizer Horace Pinnoe is in charge of the strike tactics. Strikers plan to parade around the state house in Providence to demand the legislature's action.

Closing of several of the American Woolen Co.'s woolen mills in New Hampshire and Massachusetts has led to a rumor that 11 of its plants in Maine and one in New York would be hit. Indications are that some sort of financial reorganization of the company is about to come.

Boston Capmakers Hold Guns in 7-Week Strike

(By Worker Correspondent)

BOSTON, March 21.—This is the seventh week of strike, but the Boston Capmakers are standing out splendidly, and continue to hold enthusiastic mass meetings. Mass picketing still goes on day and night, which makes the importing of scabs into the capmakers' district an utter impossibility.

Sabrino of the Amalgamated Cloth. & Workers, in addressing the Mass Meeting the morning, praised the fighting spirit of the Capmakers, and said the labor movement of this city has reason to be proud of the fortitude displayed by this spunk of militant workers. He urged that trade unions of Boston once the Capmakers not only moral support, but financial assistance, of the strike continues long enough to need it.

J. Miller of the General Strike committee also spoke. He explained the strikers the meaning and nature of the injunction issued against them, which is still being argued before a Master.

The employers are pressing very hard to prosecute the framed-up workers, whose cases have been postponed by the court.

SIXTY POUNDS PER CAPITA.

The pulp and paper industry established a new record in 1926, according to Norman W. Wilson, President of the American Paper and Pulp Association. He said further, "This puts our business in the billion-dollars-a-year class. We now rank seventh in the country's important industries. . . . Annual consumption of newsprint now runs nearly sixty pounds per capita."

The question is not only how much paper is being produced, and how much the total business amounts to. The question is, "What are the workers getting out of it?" "What is being done for the workers with the sixty pounds per capita?" There is no doubt that the very human desire for news, the healthy curiosity which the workers show in their search for the reports of the latest events of the day, are being exploited for the sake of deriving millions of dollars of profits for the pulp manufacturers, publishers and advertisers of the paper. Any trash is crammed into the paper that the worker is willing to buy, so that he may render his tribute in the form of profits to these vultures of the newspaper field.

The DAILY WORKER does not sell this sort of stuff. The DAILY WORKER is the workers' own organ and weapon in their effort to organize themselves and fight for better conditions for themselves and their families. For this reason the movement for the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund should be supported by every intelligent worker. The DAILY WORKER with the aid of the Sustaining Fund will develop and grow. It will be the only guarantee that the workers will receive their share of the "sixty pounds per capita." It is the only organ which is fighting for the right of the workers to ultimately claim the full "sixty pounds per capita" for themselves. Support the Ruthenberg Sustaining Fund and help to build the newspaper of the Ruthenberg against the newspaper of the paper manufacturers, the publishers, and the exploiting class.—BERT MILLER.

Union Fights Printers' Schools; Will Be Used For Breaking Strikes

INDIANAPOLIS (FP).—War on the anti-union printer schools is declared by the International Typographical union in an editorial in the March Journal.

The desire of the master printer associations maintaining these schools, in which machine operators are alleged to be trained after 6 months, is, says the journal, "to train an over-supply of operators at any cost in order to flood the labor market, provide for strike emergencies and wreck organized labor. It is quite apparent that there exists a real menace to our welfare if we continue to permit and in some instances actually encourage these institutions to demoralize the industry, encourage unemployment and otherwise foster a rule-or-ruin policy in the printing industry."

Barber Shop License.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 21.—The senate committee on public health today reported the Hickey bill providing for state licensing of barbers but amended so as to eliminate all reference to hairdressing establishments and beauty parlors. Women at a hearing on the bill protested against including their art of hairdressing and beauty culture under the barber license regulations and won their fight.

Strikebreakers Join Strikers and Tie Up Large Foundry Corp.

CENTRALIA, Ill. (FP) March 21. —What's the use of importing scabs and fighting the union when the union lifts right back at you and organizes your own strikebreakers? This is what the St. Clair Foundry Co. of Centralia wants to know. After 10 years under union agreement in Bellerille, Ill., the concern was lured into the non-union camp by the Centralia chamber of commerce. It immediately locked out its union molders and tried to operate as an open shop. It managed with the help of the chamber and of the police to turn out 600 furnaces in a year and chalked up a large operating deficit.

But the union pickets, returning to their lines after arrest and acquittal, worked so well that the men brought in by the company to break the union joined it instead. They have gone on strike in turn and since Feb. 22 the plant has been tied up. Union recognition is demanded and union conditions.

Baltimore and Ohio Leaves Old Slavery On Western Maryland

BALTIMORE, (FP) — President Byers' hardboiled policy on the Western Maryland Railroad secured a new lease of life when the Baltimore & Ohio failed to vote its stock at the annual meeting on March 16. All the old board of directors was re-elected, and two more men were added. The B. & O., recent purchaser of a majority of the stock in the Western Maryland, was expected to take charge at this time.

Absence of the new owners was explained as being possible due to delay in completing registration of ownership before the books were closed for the annual meeting. A better reason is thought to be the intention of the B. & O. to trade the Western Maryland to the New York Central within a few months.

A. F. T. O. Sends Fake Union Members to Lead Lawrence Dyers Strike

(By Worker Correspondent).

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 21.—The dye house workers of the Pacific mills here have been on strike since February 28th against the installation of a new card system which of put into effect would mean another indirect wage cut.

The strike is being run under the auspices of the American Federation of Textile Operatives. William E. Batty the secretary of this organization has been in Lawrence the past week and in charge. Thomsby Sheehan and Alfred Coulton are apparently the local leaders and both are members of the Pacific mill company union. At one time the dyers who are now on strike were rill members of the Lawrence United Front Committee, including Sheehan and Coulton. The Passaic strike was then at its height. Coulton and Sheehan did everything in their power to prevent the Lawrence workers from getting the correct news from Passaic. Keeping Mother Bloor, strikers and others from speaking on the street corners and trying to prevent the issuing of the Passaic Strike Bulletin at the mill gates. It was found necessary to expel both Sheehan and Coulton for belonging to the company union. They have now found lodging in the A. F. of T. O.

Tho' they both have now professed publically that they have no use for the company union they are still members. The United Front Committee is glad that the dye house workers of the Pacific mill are now in a union but they cannot understand how the A. F. of T. O.—which claims to be progressive can house representatives of a company union. What about it Brother Batty?

New Haven Generous With Workers' Money

The New Haven has offered a share to its workers to lure them away from the railroad unions. The "share" is nothing but a pension scheme under which a worker over 65 who has worked over 10 years for the outfit will get one percent of his annual wages for every year he has worked.

Now just figure that out. If the faithful old track worker had averaged $100 a month in the last 10 years and had been employed 20 years by the company (and mighty few of them have been) then he'll get $240 a year after he reached 65 if he ever did.

Ain't that just grand?

NEW YORK FACTORY EMPLOYMENT FIGURES RISE A LITTLE BUT STILL UNDER NORMAL

Factory employment in New York state increased about 1% in February, according to the state department of labor. But this small gain was far from sufficient to make good the losses of previous months and employment remained 5% under February 1926.

In only 3 Februaries since the state began is records in 1914 has New York factory employment been so low, and in the worst February on record the figure was only 3% under February of this year. The falling off which has gone on, with fluctuations, since 1923 has meant loss of jobs to at least 150,000 workers compared with February of that year.

New York factory wages, on the other hand, have been steadily rising. The last figure of the department is for January when the weekly average was $29.52. This is the highest level ever attained by factory wages in New York state, comparing favorably with $28.95 at the highest point of the 1920 boom. In January 1926 the weekly average was $28.50, in 1925 $28.30, in 1924 $27.81 and 1923 $26.21 showing a steady upward trend. For men the January 1927 average was $33.22 and for women $18.50.

Chinese Womanhood in Appeal to the Workers and Farmers of America

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE cabled reports girdled the globe in the early hours of Monday, March 21, that, "The Chinese Nationalists have entered the native City of Shanghai."

This inspiring event marks an important milestone in the forward march of the Chinese revolution. To the extent that the workers of other nations, where capitalism still rules, understand the significance of this tremendous event, to that extent will they become valuable allies of the Chinese workers and peasants in pursuing their present successes to greater triumphs, driving all of the foreign imperialists into the Pacific and establishing labor as the ruling power in their land.

The ultimate goal of the Chinese revolution may still be considered to be a long way off. Great obstacles must yet be overcome. The military force in the Shanghai settlement of the imperialist invaders numbers about 20,000 trained soldiers, intended to obey the commands of the profit takers. These are the Hessians of a dozen nations including the United States.

"Dollar Diplomacy," in defending the interests of the American profiteers, has rushed 1,300 marines and 2,000 bluejackets to Shanghai. The warships of a dozen nations, with those of the United States as numerous as the battleships of other countries, stand off shore with guns ready for action.

When the Nationalists took Hankow, the invaders were not ready for drastic action against the revolution. The imperialist diplomats have tried, by every trick of their dubious trade, to postpone the taking of Shanghai. They lied to the world by sending forth the impression that troops and warships were not being sent to Shanghai, "that they would be divarted." Yet the American transport, Chaunont, under full steam rushed with 1,800 marines direct from San Diego, Calif., to the important Chinese seaport of Shanghai, one of three most vulnerable spots of American imperialism at the present moment, Mexico and Nicaragua being the other two. Tricky negotiations were opened with the Nationalist leaders in an effort to halt the victorious march of the Kuomintchun forces down the valley of the Yangtze Kiang. If the Nationalist forces could only be held at bay long enough, then the spring waters would swell the banks of the Yangtze Kiang and make it possible for foreign warships to steam inland and take up more strategic positions to threaten the power of the people.

American labor, in common with the workers of other countries, must anticipate the next step of the imperialists by voicing in a determined manner their solidarity with the Chinese masses.

It has been repeatedly urged that the Chinese in this country, many of them organized into the Kuomintang (the Chinese Nationalist Party), become more active in educating the workers and farmers of this country, their natural allies, as to the conditions in China and the nature of the support that American labor can and must give to the struggle.

It is therefore encouraging to receive a letter from Alice Sum, of the Women's Section of the Kuomintang, 524 Seventh Street, Oakland, Calif., indicating that progress is being made in this direction. The letter is accompanied by a resolution. Both these documents are herewith published in full as they not only contain an urge for action on the part of American labor, but represent in themselves a new and historic development in the creation of a closer unity between the exploited masses of the United States and China. The letter is dated Feb. 28, 1927, and reads:

THE LETTER.

"Dear Friend:—Many prominent Americans have expressed their conviction that in the near future the Chinese people will free themselves from all foreign control, that the present Government which enjoys the entire confidence of the people, will unify the whole country and that the Chinese nation will gain its independence and become a full-fledged sovereign state in the family of nations.

"There is one great danger at this time, and that is the presence of foreign troops and foreign warships in China. The enclosed resolution calls for the withdrawal of foreign troops and warships from China.

"We sincerely hope that your organization will take action favorable to this liberation movement of the Chinese people. May we ask that you will be so kind as to notify us of the action that you have already taken or will take in this matter. Sincerely yours, Alice Sum.

THE RESOLUTION.

The resolution offered is as follows:

"WHEREAS: The Chinese nation, thru the Nationalist Movement is now engaged in a final struggle to free the four hundred million of its people and the Chinese government from the domination and control of foreign nations, and

"WHEREAS, The present Nationalist Movement has the support of the overwhelming majority of the people of China, and

"WHEREAS: The Nationalist government supports and helps the organized labor movement of China, and

"WHEREAS: The Nationalist army has proven able to restore and maintain order in all the territory under its influence, and

"RESOLVED: That we, ——— are in full sympathy with the national aspirations of the Chinese to become a nation free from foreign control, and be it further

"RESOLVED: That we are opposed to the sending of American troops and warships to Chinese territory and waters, and be it finally

"RESOLVED: That copies of this resolution be sent to the state department of the United States."

There isn't an organization of any kind, of the workers in the cities or on the land, that should not pass that resolution and carry out its simple request. Every reader of The DAILY WORKER ought to make himself responsible for bringing up that resolution and having it adopted in at least one organization of workers or farmers.

It should be an additional inspiration that this urge to action comes from Chinese women. On the day that the Nationalist troops were entering Shanghai, International Woman's Day was being celebrated at Kiukiang and Nanking, as it had been celebrated previously in many other cities, with giant demonstrations attended by thousands of women. Among the slogans at these mass meetings were equality of the sexes, down with polygamy, down with infant marriage, freedom of marriage and divorce, women remarrying should not be despised and women should join in the revolution.

The victory of Russia's workers and farmers, that got underway with the overthrow of the Czar ten years ago this month, released the womanhood of that country from the burden of centuries. This emancipation of the world's womanhood is being continued in China today, as a part of the greater Chinese liberation movement that aims toward the freeing of the Chinese masses from the imperialist yoke, thus weakening imperialism in all the home countries, a fact that should be welcome to all oppressed wage workers and exploited farmers. This should especially be true of the United States. Chinese womanhood appeals to American labor today to enlist more energetically in this growing struggle.

What Is a Proletarian Play?

EDITORS NOTE—The DAILY WORKER does not take any responsibility for the views set forth below. We think that the writer has covered a tremendous range of speculation in some 1100 words and that the questions he raises might well make even bolder comrades quail. We feel about his article much as Bukharin did about Trient's speech on the international situation at the last session of the enlarged executive of the Communist International Bukharin said:

"On the whole, however, my impression of the speech was not unfavorable. Comrade Trotsky ponders deeply about these questions, he is not always right, but in these days even to ponder is a virtue."

By HARBOR ALLEN.

I SAID in a review of Em Jo Basshe's fervent Negro play, "Earth," (now at the 52nd Street Theatre): "What is a proletarian play? Is it Karl Marx' manifesto recited by a chorus in overalls, with two intermissions, on a Russian setting?" I have had replies, some of them hot. In due time these will be printed as symposium in this column on the question.

So far as I know there has been no proletarian play yet written in English. Some plays have elements, hints of what a proletarian play will contain.

The five playwrights in the New Playwrights Theatre are teased by this question. They are willing to discuss it, argue it. In some of their work they come close to writing working class drama. But two or three of them, the older ones, shy away from it. They are terrified by "propaganda." "Propaganda isn't art."

John Howard Lawson believes there is altogether too much "sloppy talk" about proletarian art. Maybe he is right. More than one fine movement has been talked to death. He says further that there is no working class audience for the English theatre. And maybe there too, for the time being, he is right. As soon as there is a working class audience, as soon as it makes its wants felt, there will be working class plays. It is an old revolutionary maxim that the artist trails social upheavals; he can only reflect them, give them some eloquence; he cannot create them.

The Jewish population of New York has made the biggest steps toward proletarian drama, mainly because among them the left-wing is most articulate, probably most intelligent and organized. Yet "Her Crime," by Comrade Olgin, remains an idea rather than a play; and except for one or two scenes, a few characters, and an atmosphere, "Shop" is a stale melodrama. What else has America to offer?

Still, the workers' drama is coming. What it will sound like, nobody can say for sure. But I suspect it will have many of the virtues of Mr. Basshe's "Earth." 'Earth' is a fierce, hot study of religious frenzy. Its people are peasants. They talk with the singing simplicity of peasants. Their emotions run untrammeled, a burning torrent. Deborah, the Negro mother, never reasons things out. She feels.

Without building up a honeycomb of rationalization around her, she goes straight to the crux of the religious fraud. If God is the God he is supposed to be, she says, he will be square, he won't cheat, he won't steal, he won't go back on his bargains. When he does, she is through with him. "Go yourself a God," she tells him, "so he can judge you for all the sins you've done."

If it were not for its preoccupation with religion, and if it dealt with workers or peasants less primitive, "Earth" could qualify as a close approach to proletarian drama. At least it has the quality of the form of a workers' play. Like it, a workers' play will be simple, fervent, passionate. Like it, a workers' play will show simple, sentimental love scenes, picayunish reality; it will fly straight for the big, the essential things. Like it, a workers' play will go out in the fields, the huts, the mountains, the hamlets and homes and working places of the poor. And like it, too, in the workers' play there will be always the people in the background, the community: singing, yearning, fighting, sharing joys and sorrows.

And as we move toward this new kind of drama, many of the older forms of plays are doomed. The Ibsen problem play is doomed. The Shaw satire is doomed. Already there seems hardly any room for the pettiness of "Craig's Wife" or a thousand other teapot tempests in which little people pound their little sex troubles against little drawing room walls. Why all this meanness, this insignificance, when there are mobs on the street, and swarms in the subways? When there are circuses and parades and battles and strikes? The individual doesn't count. He's too small, too powerless. It's the people, the mass, the current of life that matters. Why, when there is this organ to play on, this monster orchestra, why do so many dramatists prefer a tin whistle?

The tin whistle is doomed. Next we will have romantic plays, sweeping epics, glamor and turmoil on the stage. Maybe they will be such revolutionary plays at Schiller's "Robbers." Mike Gold's "Fiesta" (to be produced early in April at the 52nd Street Theatre) has captured in a comedy vein something of this sweep and color. Then, when Communism has triumphed, will come pedantic plays, like the old morality plays, nor now, propagandistic. Who is to say, they will lack art value? It will be a different sort of value, that's all. A folk art, the art of the ballads, of early paintings, of the songs of the people. And still later there will be a renaissance. A Communist Shakespeare will arise, an individual, yet one of the people. In a secure, blooming Communist country, he will pour out symphonies of action on the stage, drums beating, violins humming, basses rumbling, bugles blowing. That will be Communism's Golden Age.

After that? Well, even Communism must some day wither up, its blood grow cold. There will be satires, problem plays, intellectual discussions. New Shawa, new Ibsens will thumb their noses and sulk and sneer. And still later? New revolution, new romance? The cycle goes on. Or is it a spiral; round and round, but higher and higher?

Meanwhile, don't let them kid you. The drama has its roots in life. When life is thin and sickly, the drama grows pale and tired. When life runs red and juicy, the drama stirs into dance and song and movement. Already the sick child shows signs of health. Already she waves an arm and skips a step. If you don't believe it, see "Pinwheel" and "Earth." In another 15 or 20 years, the stage will be roaring all over the theatre, a lusty child of a swaggering new society.

Worse than that, the master's atonal and polytonal departures anticipated the advent of our ultra-moderns.

Los Angeles Breaks Its Building Law

The city of Los Angeles, fearing earthquakes, and desiring to enrich real estate owners in the suburbs, has a law strictly limiting the height of buildings. When the city wanted to erect a skyscraper for a city hall, a special election was necessary to get a permit. The building costs six million dollars.

Service Pins for Workers

By ROBERT DUNN (Federated Press).

Rewards are the most favored tactics of personal experts in big American corporations. How to make the worker happy has back a little more without any addition to the pay envelope has been developed into a science. Prizes, cash rewards, a share or two of company stock, a badge or a picture among the devices used to get more production with a minimum outlay by the company.

First there is the "service pin" for long service with the company. At Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. the recipients of these gimcracks have been organized into a Service Pin Association, its purpose being announced by the company to "further loyalty, efficiency, co-operation and general welfare and happiness."

After 3 Years' Toil.

A worker receives one of the pins when he has been with the company 5 years or when he has become a graduate of the Flying Squadron Course. A member of the association may even subscribe to one share of stock, but if he "leaves, or is discharged, or goes on strike" the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. to go on strike" he is compelled to surrender his stock—and presumably his pin. When he returns to work, after the strike has been crushed by the Corporations Auxiliaries, or some other spy company, "he will be considered as a new employee."

The Lorraine Mfg. Co., with cotton mills in Rhode Island has no association but it hands out "honor" pins to faithful workers. After 10 years the worker gets one star in his pin, after 10 years, two stars. After 25 years he receives a medal "studded with real jewels" and after 30 years, if he is still "loyal" and has not gone on strike, he receives a badge covered with "eight real sapphires." What the hockable value of these glittering baubles is not set forth in the company's literature.

"The Order of Service."

Standard Oil Co. of California has established among its workers "The Order of Service," which bestows a pin on those who have served long and faithfully. Diamonds appear in the pins awarded for the longer periods of slavery. On the worker who toils 30 years very special honors are showered. The ritual is explained in a company booklet called the "Standard Oil Spirit." It tells that in the case of a 30-year man "the presentation of the pin is by the president of the company. No matter where the employee may be stationed he and his wife, if he has one, are invited to San Francisco at company expense for the presentation."

Champion Coal Heaver.

But the most common rewards are given for big production, and for several years of workmanship. A worker in a Bethlehem Steel Corporation mine in West Virginia pulls a gold medal for being the champion coal heaver in his mine. A similar reward is given to another miner who handles 638 tons of coal in 12 working days, "a prodigious record, experts declare."

Wall Street financial papers boast of these production stimulants. One of them recently predicted that the day is coming when as much interest will be aroused in contests with champion players in golf, football, swimming and tennis.

Make $100,000.

Other prizes are given to workers for "suggestions." The workers are urged to drop these suggestions relating to production, efficiency, shop methods, etc. in a box. Every few months the company gives prizes ranging from $5 to $50 for these suggestions. The company may clean up $100,000 on a $10 suggestion, but as the official organ of the Utah Associated Industries says, "It makes the workers feel they are an integral part of the institution." This open shop paper adds: "Outside agencies (labor unions) that would interfere with the pleasant relations between management and men find no foothold in such an institution because the employes are sold to the boss and to the whole institution."

WHITE COLLAR SLAVES.

Clerical Salaries in the United States (National Industrial Conference Board, 1926).

This study is by an organization that has always been hostile to labor. Nevertheless it is of value because there are few existing statistics on the wages of the white collar worker.

The figures of the Conference Board destroy any remaining illusions that these workers are better off economically than the factory workers. The bulk of the clerical workers draw such salaries as: $15-16.50 for typists (an experienced typist may get as high as $22); $15-19 for file clerks; $18-20 for general clerks; $20-22 for stenographers.

Women form the majority of the white collar slavas and they are more exploited than the men. Very few women are in the "upper strata" of comparatively well-paid workers. For routine clerical jobs women average from $6 to $10 less a week than men doing the same work. Not that the men get such high wages, for in six general clerical jobs in which man predominate the average given by the Conference Board is somewhat less than $25 a week. This is more than two dollars less per week than the average which the Conference Board has figured for factory workers.

The Conference Board always gives the "cheerful" side of labor statistics but even so we can get an idea from these figures of the extent of exploitation of American white-collar workers. There are over three million office workers in the United States—about 8% of all gainfully employed workers. A negligible percentage of them are organized. One of the great tasks before the American labor movement is the organization of these exploited, underpaid workers.

MAKING LABOR HISTORY SAFE FOR LIBERALS

A Short History of the American Labor Movement, by Mary Beard. Vol. 8 of the Workers' Bookshelf. George H. Doran. $.50

The American Federation of Labor has never been so eager to preserve the stolid and peaceful nature of its organization. Radical changes of any kind are notoriously foreign to the temperaments of its officials and their henchmen. The most recent offensive of the Green-Woll machine against the militant members of the labor movement has taken on really heroic proportions.

Mary Beard, wife and collaborator of Charles A. Beard, with the unconscious humor and penetration which is often characteristic of research scholars who make a virtue of being on the sidelines, provides the lowdown for the conservative nature of the American Federation of Labor. Talking about that caricature of the American labor movement, the A. F. of L., at the time of the passing of Sam Gompers, she says

"It was a giant machine which Gompers and his counsellors bequeathed to the next directorate—a machine with a mind operating, American fashion, in such fields as BANKING, CREDIT, INSURANCE, INVESTMENTS, and economic research. Its notion of its manifest destiny was running close to that of the nation."

This is amazingly true, of course. That's probably the reason why the A. F. of L. hasn't time to organize the millions of organizeable workers in the United States. It is also the cause, no doubt, for its decision to "postpone" action on the organization of the automobile workers, after it had decided at its last convention in Detroit to do that job last once.

Steel, packing, metal, mine, lumber, textile, boot and shoe, telegraph and telephone, electric light and power workers totalling over 25,000,000 could be organized if the A. F. of L. officials weren't so busy operating "American fashion, in such fields as banking, credit, insurance, and investments."

Mrs. Beard's little book, published by the Workers' Educational Bureau, which has on many occasions received the official blessings of the A. F. of L. (also $25,000 from the Carnegie Foundation), is in the same class as Selig Perlman's "History of Trade Unionism in the United States," and other lots of "research" aimed to prove that American workers are, have been, and probably will be "conservative" for many years to come. In fact, Perlman's job was so scholarly that he devoted the last chapter to a sneering attempt to prove that there can never be a joint movement on the part of the workers and farmers of the United States to free themselves from capitalism.

The purpose of this book is to prove to those who "sympathize" with the labor movement that its history isn't as bloody and violent as many good folks have come to believe. The author's attitude toward the A. F. of L. is a fairly accurate reflection of her attitude toward the whole history of labor in the United States.

So eager is Mrs. Beard to impress upon the minds of her liberal readers that the American workers are fundamentally pure of heart and sweet of spirit that she even recites with evident approval the many instances where the official labor movement has avoided "entangling political alliances." She relates that "the A. F. of L. naturally sought to win from the public and employers sympathy for its policy of upholding labor standards. It therefore welcomed, in 1900, the formation of the National Civic Federation, an association of prominent business men, financiers and professional people. Labor leaders joined the organization with great enthusiasm."

Thus Matthew Woll, one of the vice presidents and acting president of the National Civic Federation, now has the opportunity of bathing for the interests of the American workers in joyous conversation with John D. Rockefeller, etc.

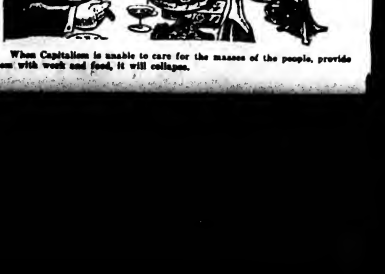
The part of the A. F. L. machine in supporting the late war is praised enthusiastically in this book intended for workers. "The loyal stand of Mr. Gompers and the American Federation of Labor was immediately appreciated." How proud she is of the fact that "labor was a real factor in the shaping of policies of the nation." And what is more thrilling than "the rise of the Secretary of Labor W. B. Wilson, a former miner, to a positive influence in the cabinet."



In another portion of the book Mrs. Beard doesn't fail to mention that Wilson was a former miner, had the honor, through his subordinate, the Commissioner of Immigration, "to enforce the anti-red laws" (existing undesirable aliens from the United States. "And in the autumn of 1919," she relates with matronly pride, the officers of the A. F. of L. made an attack on the Communists and other radicals in the labor movement, discussing on the part of organized labor any sympathy with revolutionary theories or activities."

Mrs. Beard has performed a genuine service for the FRIENDS of the labor movement.

THE SPECTRE HE WANT

When Capitalism is unable to care for the masses of the people, provide them with work and food, it will collapse.

WORKERS WILL EASILY SEE THRU THIS CONTRADICTION IN THE STATEMENTS OF AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR OFFICIALS

American Federation of Labor officials are trying to ride two horses when they claim the full co-operation of the New York police department and at the same time charge that the police have been subsidized by the left wing for protection purposes. President Green flatly contradicts his New York agent, McGrady, as follows:

Edward F. Grady, representative of the American Federation of Labor in New York City, said: "Commissioner of Police McLaughlin has promised us the fullest co-operation. We are getting it. McLaughlin has promised to end picketing."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, charged that $100,000 has been spent by the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, that has now been outlawed, to buy police protection.

The open collaboration of the police with the Green-Woll-McGrady outfit proves which of these two statements is correct. Lies will not fool thinking trade unionists.

Pittsburg Coal Company Leads Lock Out

Lewis Now Admits Drive on Living Wage Starts April 1

PITTSBURGH, March 22. — A strongly financed fight on the United Mine Workers of America will begin April 1st in western Pennsylvania, according to statements made today both by union officials and mine operators. The outcome of the struggle will have tremendous effect on the soft coal industry.

Until 1925, western Pennsylvania, District No. 5, was preponderantly union. In August of that year, the Pittsburgh Coal Company, rated as the world's largest soft coal producer, broke with the union, lowered wages, and since has maintained a non-union policy. Several smaller companies followed the Pittsburgh Coal Company's example.

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the company has issued a statement to the miners, which says, in part:

"We will never sign a scale with any union again. We will always have open shop mines. We will never run any mine any way but open shop."

Mellon and Rockefeller.

Already it has been a costly fight for the Pittsburgh Coal Company, which last year reported a loss of $2,114,676. Despite this, the company, in which the Mellon and other great financial interests have heavy holdings, is prepared to pour in millions more to operate non-union.

"We are ready to spend large sums of money to continue our open shop policy," said C. E. Lesher, executive vice president.

Unionizers charge openly that the Mellon and Rockefeller interests and the Pennsylvania Railroad are behind the plan to crush the union. In support of this statement they say the Pennsylvania Railroad is the greatest single factor in destroying the Jacksonville agreement. The railroad is hauling coal 700 miles from Kentucky non-union fields, paying heavy freight to other railroads, to avoid buying union mined coal.

Cut Wages One-fourth.

Pittsburgh Coal Company officials declare that after April 1st they will be joined by several other large companies now operating with the union, including Jones and Laughlin and the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation. They further report that while production per man has been cut down about 11 per cent this has been more than offset by a 25 per cent saving in wages.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company is bringing armed guards to create a reign of terror in the district after April 1st. They are on duty at the company's mines and camps and flood lights are being installed.

Strike Will Hit Hard.

The union believes it can seriously cripple all the open shop operations. At any rate, existing union mines are going to succeed.

If the Pittsburgh Coal Company group wins it likely will force a wage cut in other fields and undermine the union's hold. If the union is victorious it will come out of the battle stronger than it has been at any time in the last ten years.

President John L. Lewis of the U. M. W. A. has had already to recognize that his confident assumption

Large Scale Intervention of Powers Feared; United States Marines Strikebreaking

All Workers Out.

SHANGHAI, March 22.—The entire laboring population of Shanghai is on strike and all services are at a standstill as the Nationalist government is proceeding with the organization of the city.

Under the direction of the General Labor Union workers are patrolling the city, arresting White Russian mercenaries and maintaining order.

British marines opened fire on Chinese soldiers and wounded several. The soldiers are said to be siraggiers from the ranks of the defeated northerners.

Japanese marines are reported to be sniping at the Nationalists but this report is taken with reserve since it comes from British sources.

The number of workers on strike is estimated to be 150,000. All cotton mills and transport services are idle.

1,500 American marines were landed yesterday and are patrolling the docks of the Standard Oil Company and Dollar Steamship Line. Men from two American destroyers are strikebreaking in the Standard Oil power plant.

Deserters Join Nationalists.

General Ho Ying-Yin, commander of the Nationalist army in Chekiang province is still encamped on the outskirts of Shanghai. Ten thousand deserters from the northern armies have joined the Nationalist forces. A Nationalist troop train passed a British patrol this afternoon. The Nationalists laughed and waved but displayed no hostility. The rank and file of the Nationalist army know that the orders of the imperialist powers are not responsible for their presence on Chinese soil.

Fall of Nanking Near.

The fall of Nanking is expected hourly. The militarist occupation is not expected to offer strenuous resistance.

Bank clerks in Hankow, the Nationalist government capital, went out on strike today, demanding among other concessions the resignation of imperialist bank officials.

Stool Pigeons Aid Industrial Squad in Brutal Attack on Hundreds of Men and Women

Police brutality exceeding the activities of the police during the recent Passaic strike was displayed yesterday noon when the announcement of Edward McGrady, special organizer of the A. McGrady's statement was supported and backed by Vice President Matthew Woll, President Wm. Green, and Hugh Frayne.

Sixth Avenue, between 29th and 30th Streets, in the heart of the fur district was the scene of the terroristic campaign on the part of the police sluggers who are working hand in hand with the right wing officials of the International union of the furriers.

Not content with beating fur workers unmercifully, and without the faintest provocation, the members of the Industrial Squad invaded restaurants in the neighborhood warning the workers in advance that they "would get a real trimming" when they come out.

ALBANIA CRISIS GROWS EASIER; TOO EXPENSIVE

LONDON, March 22.—The practical certainty that all Europe would burst into a flame of war, and the agonized appeals of the treasury officials in half a dozen countries, calmed the excitement over the crisis in Albania today.

Jugo-Slavia Quiet.

The Jugo-Slavian government is using its efforts to calm the public ardor that has arisen over the Albanian situation.

Newspapers which have been publishing anti-Italian articles have been ordered to cease these attacks. Efforts have been made to quell inflammatory speakers in the parliament and government spokesmen have reiterated their statements that Jugo-Slavia stands for peace.

Britain Cools.

The British government, seeing that France stood close to Jugo-Slavia in this quarrel and that Germany was disposed to "fish in troubled waters" has adopted a conciliatory tone, at least for the moment.

The British government has not yet taken any joint action regarding this situation, or as regards the future of Albania, it was stated. However, British diplomatic representatives at Rome and Belgrade have been instructed to use their good offices in counselling Italy and Jugo-Slavia to proceed with all caution.

Two weeks ago these workers were arrested in a raid on a socialist headquarters. At the demand of Ivan Hegya, a Bethlan agent, they were brought before a court martial and if found guilty will face the firing squad.

Protests similar to those arranged several years ago to save the life of Rakosi are being prepared by the International Labor Defense.

Ford's Manager Admits Lying, Says Lawyer

Judge Rules Out Evidence of Anti-Semitic Policy

FEDERAL BUILDING, DETROIT, March 22.—The alleged falsity of Henry Ford's attacks upon Aaron Sapiro in the Dearborn Independent was admitted on one occasion by Free L. Black, business manager of the publication, William H. Gallagher, Sapiro's attorney, charged this afternoon at the million-dollar libel suit in federal court here.

Gallagher declared Black had "admitted" in a conversation with Walter Peteet, a farm leader, that falsehoods were published against Sapiro. The statement was a shock to the Ford defense.

A chain of circumstantial evidence, tending to show that Henry Ford's attacks on Aaron Sapiro, so-called "wheat king," were inspired by his hatred for the Jewish race, was slowly being forged today in the million dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit.

Kellogg Breaks Mexican Arms Treaty

Clericals Can Now Run Guns Across Border

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The American government has decided to terminate the anti-smuggling treaty with Mexico.

Formal notice to this effect has been served on the Mexican government, it was announced at the State Department today.

The general effect of this action will be that after thirty days, and perhaps before, American patrols and customs authorities will work hard when they see large consignments of arms and ammunition heading for the huge mountainous border between Mexico and the United States.

Abrogation of the treaty is construed by every filibuster in the pay of the Catholic Church of Mexico, or its American friends as permission to bend for the Rio Grande with the materials for widespread revolution, as soon as the requisite number of cutthroats can be hired for his "army."

The abrogation of the treaty is considered by all concerned to be a slap at Mexico for her insistence on taxing American oil companies draining the soil of petroleum, if it is not the first step towards setting up a puppet government, like that of Diaz in Nicaragua.

The abrogation of the treaty was accompanied by reports that this action presages the eventual lifting of the embargo on arms, but State De-

CURRENT EVENTS By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THERE are many crimes in the catalogue of the American Federation of Labor but apparently none more damning than winning a strike. President Green does not lose his poise when prominent labor leaders are caught embezzling union funds or exposed as stoolpigeons on the payroll of private detective agencies. But when the reactionaries in the Furriers' Union were defeated by the progressives and a successful strike waged by the new leadership, Mr. Green got busy, essayed the role of detective and had progressive leaders of the furriers' union put in jail. He is now busy lining up the city police against the progressives after having organized a dual union over the protest of the rank and file.

PRESIDENT Green and Matthew Woll, have accused the furriers of spending $100,000 on police protection. Tammany policemen are charged with having received the money. The entire reactionary officialdom of the A. F. of L. in New York pretend to be very indignant but it is safe to predict that the Tammany labor leaders will not embarrass the city administration. The whole thing is a frame-up against the progressives in the Furriers' Union. The labor fakers with the aid of the socialists are carrying on the anti-radical campaign under the cloak of trade union purity. If they succeed in crushing the progressives, the police end of the business will be conveniently forgotten.

HOLD PARADE IN PHILADELPHIA TO CELEBRATE THE FALL OF SHANGHAI

PHILADELPHIA, March 22. — Workers of many races will march shoulder to shoulder down the streets of Philadelphia Sunday to celebrate the capture of Shanghai by the Nationalist armies. The celebration of the victories of the peoples' armies will be held in conjunction with a Sun Yat Sen memorial meeting.

Carrying placards and banners, the workers will gather at Broad and Race streets and march down Broad to Locust street to the Labor Institute, where the mass meeting will be held.

Albert Weisbord, Passaic strike organizer; P. S. Ho, local Kuomintang leader, P. T. Lau, who has recently returned from Canton, and William Pickens, Field Secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peoples, will be among the speakers.

Chinese, white, Negro and Hindu workers will be in the long lines that will march down Philadelphia streets to voice their sympathy for the movement to liberate China.

Mourning the loss of Sun Yat Sen, their great revolutionary leader, and determined to carry on the fight to which he gave his life, the local Kuomintang, in conjunction with the Workers (Communist) Party and Young Workers League, has arranged the meeting and parade. The fall of Shanghai signalizes the complete victory of the peoples' armies, local Kuomintang leaders said.

RIGHT WING IN POGROM AGAINST N.Y. FUR WORKERS

being clubbed and dragged from the sidewalk by hair by the paid thugs of the city, brought out large numbers of workers employed in the neighborhood.

Men and women were buried from the sidewalks by the police and more than 20 fur workers were arrested and taken to the 30th Street Police Station after being severely beaten. Fannie Warshafsky, member of the Joint Board of the Furriers was brutally attacked by one of the members of the industrial Squad, and then dragged by the hair to the gutter.

When Ben Gold, I. Shapiro and Aaron Gross of the Furriers' Joint Board arrived at 29th Street, the hundreds of workers at the scene joined in a demonstration. This furnished the excuse for calling the "Riot Squad," with a conspicuous array of machine guns.

The present campaign of brutal intimidation is the climax to the tactics of the corrupt officialdom of the International working with the bosses and the New York police department.

Stool Pigeons Point.

When the Industrial Squad had sent in its riot call and been reinforced by dozens of uniformed men and armored motor cycles, they began a systematic round-up in the hallways of those workers near at hand who were pointed out by the right wingers.

Those picked in this way and arrested were Abe Borlinar, Clara Maltzer, Sam Gold (Ben Gold's brother) Willia Shiffrin, Leon Litvin, Herman Tafit, Fanny Warshofsky, Anna Bazan, Karla Gaidushek, Nutty Mendel and Ray Epstein.

All Clubbed.

All these workers were beaten with clubs, some of them were threatened with guns, and the women were dragged by the hair to force them into the police wagons. Otto Lenhard and Sam Yaker, altho not placed under arrest, were beaten by the officers after they had been forced out of a restaurant at the corner of 30th street and 6th Avenue. The proprietor of this restaurant, as well as the workers are making affidavits which will be presented in court today.

The workers after being taken to 30th street police station were transferred to Jefferson Market Court where Judge Brodsky released them on their own recognizance for further hearing this morning.

Brutalities Horrify Outsiders.

These brutalities of the Industrial Squad, which made Jacob Mintz exclaim, "This is the most outrageous performance I ever saw. The idea of beating peaceful people like this, etc." -follows President Green's statements before the Central Trades and Labor Council Monday night claiming that the American Federation of Labor in its war on the Communists "will succeed in winning by the openly manifested power of the workers and public opinion"—as if this is the way the Forwards quote him.

Breaks Promise.

"The Federation will not hire guerillas to fight its cause. The Federation will not give a cent for graft or a cent for guerillas. We will go on with our work and win in a straight, and respectable and honest way. Our power is the power of the workers themselves. The whole world will stand with us."

From all indications yesterday's performance by the Industrial Squad —who of course are not guerillas— has scarcely gained the right wing any support either from the public or the workers.

The workers, whose usual lunch hour was turned into a battle ground, shouted in wrath at the police in spite of clubs which swung indiscriminately right and left. The public was not much better pleased even tho the clubs did not come their way.

Joint Board Takes Action.

The Joint Board held a meeting last night at which it was decided to formally inform the police authorities of what is going on and of the brutal treatment of the fur workers yesterday. They will let the officials know that the union does not intend to remain silent on this matter.

(By a Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Ind., March 22.—When automatic catching machines will replace the catchers at each of the 24 hot rolls of the Tin Mill here the company will be a big winner. The fired workers and their families will be the losers.

There are two catchers at each roll. They work in three shifts. Some 140 men will lose their jobs. Two catchers make approximately $260.00 per month. The company will save over $18,000 per month.

Some workers will blame the machines for their trouble. The machines are innocent, they serve those who own them. When the workers finally will take possession of the machines the machine will serve them by making the work easier and the work day shorter. The machines will not deprive them of their bread.

ARTICLE X. THE 1916 STRIKE; THE FIRST REVOLT

By ROBERT MITCHELL

The 1905 strike had been an object lesson of underhand methods and double dealing on the part of the Interborough officials. There is hardly any doubt that to some extent the officers of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Amalgamated Association were deceived by these tactics. Yet no complete justification can be given them for their desertion of the strikers and deliberate breaking of the strike. Their association with the open shoppers and labor haters in the National Civic Federation is no less inexcusable.

Open Shop Notices.

The true designs of the Interborough must have become apparent to them when as a final blow this company posted its open shop notices and broke the union. The conclusion is inescapable that these union officers ultimately realized the character of the Interborough methods. That they failed to take account of these methods as capable leadership is expected to, is the red thread which runs through the days leading to the 1916 strike.

Bitter Years Follow.

The years which followed the 1905 struggle were indeed years of bitter defeat for the men. The miserable wages which they received and the fearfully trying conditions under which they labored have already been pictured.

Intimidation, suppression, flagrant and unwarranted dismissal, unduly long suspensions color these years. The cost of living in this period was steadily rising, yet until the year 1910 their wages remained fixed at the same starvation level.

These were the years when the workers of other trades thru the heroic struggles of their organized forces were beginning to exact a measure of their created value from the exploiting class. Yet the unorganized traction workers were, like Alice in Wonderland, finding it necessary to run ever faster to remain in the same place.

Welfare Dope.

In place of granting a living wage, the company adopted the newly created system of "doping" workers with "welfare" injections. The company union with its paralyzing hold on the life of the labor movement had not yet been born, but "welfare" devices were all the rage.

Benefits At Minimum Cost.

The Interborough instituted sick and death benefits, old age pensions, and, as one of its bulletins later boasted, it granted passes "to the female head of the household." Just how many of these "female heads" took advantage of these passes to ride the railroad is not known. Not only this, but "it encouraged out-door sports in summer and balls and entertainments in winter; it maintained at minimum cost places where the men could read or play games and bathe."

A Little Sap.

On February 1st, 1910, the men received an increase of a few cents per hour. The company was then "manufacturing" sentiment for better contracts with the city.

Besides there was beginning to be seen too unmistakable evidence of a growing revolt among the workers. Thereafter, there followed another period of barren waiting in which the cost of living continued steadily to rise.

An Organization Wave.

The sentiment for organization accumulates slowly; workers wait painfully long years before revolting against even the most inhuman conditions, but the result of such a growing tide of rebellion is the complete overthrow of the old system of relations. A monstrous wave of this sort swept over the city of New York in the summer of 1916 and in a few days brought the hitherto unbending Interborough officials to their knees.

The strike began with Divisions No. 490 and No. 498, locals of the Amalgamated of Yonkers and Mt. Vernon. Unable to secure their demands for better pay they went out on strike on July 22, 1916. In a few days the sparks of this local fire had lighted a conflagration in the whole of New York.

Caught Napping.

For the first time the Interborough had been caught unprepared. Frank Hedley several months afterwards boasted that "For thirty years, I have been a believer in preparedness", but this boast was revealed in all its hollowness in the latter part of July 1916.

Struck For Union.

The men struck in one great army for "A Living Wage" and "A Union of Our Own". Caught unprepared, without its usual army of strike breakers and gunmen, the Interborough was compelled to submit.

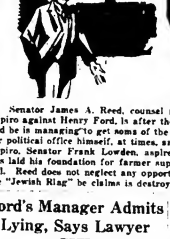
The men through their own efforts had won their battles! Knowing the Interborough and its tactics, the workers had not heeded the hypocritical pleas of the company to postpone the walkout. They acted immediately, definitely and without letting quarter to an enemy which on so many occasions had shown its utter disregard of any fair dealing.

Company Yields.

The strike was settled on August 7th. The Amalgamated was called in to complete organization and take charge. The Interborough conceded practically all points, the right to organize, increases in pay, no discrimination and a provision calling for arbitration of the points left unsettled.

What kind of agreement was this of which we are speaking?. A written agreement as is invariably the case under such conditions? No, it was merely an understanding entered into between Wm. B. Fitzgerald, vice president of the Amalgamated and Frank Hedley in the presence of Mayor Mitchell and chairman Straus of the Public Service Commission.

How was it possible for the officials of the Amalgamated to accept such an arrangement with the company whose underhand dealings had been so clearly revealed in 1905 and many times thereafter? This is a question beyond all reasonable understanding? That the situation left the workers exposed to attack was apparent to everyone.



Sense Counter Attack.

The "New York Call", in those days an organ which still represented the interests of workers, in the present offspring "The New Leader" no longer does, issued the following warning: "A counter attack is coming and unless the men consolidate, they are likely to lose all they have gained and perhaps more."

And this warning was no idle one!

FORD-SAPIRO SUIT HAS POLITICAL TINGE

Senator James A. Reed, counsel for the defense in the suit of Aaron Sapiro against Henry Ford, is after the democratic nomination for president, and he is managing to get some of the right kind of publicity. Ford has run and might do it again. An associate of Sapiro, Senator Frank Lowden, aspires to the Republican nomination, and has laid his foundation for farmer support by boosting the McNary-Haugen bill. Reed does not neglect any opportunity to emphasize Lowden's name in the "Jewish Rag" he claims is destroying the farmers.

Ford's Manager Admits Lying, Says Lawyer

later revealed Dunn as investigating Sapiro for the first time. In this document, Dunn told the Ford publication that "you have been starting for a long time for this story about cooperatives and the Sapiros."

A third link, it was said, will be forged in the chain by introduction of a "surprise" letter revealing how the information about Sapiro was gathered in field by the Ford investigators.

Role Out Ford Fanaticism.

Judge Raymond's rulings today were distinctly useful to the Ford defense. He ordered Sapiro's side to go then a se bsical process of amending their complaint, and likewise caused great rejoicing in the Jim Crow camp by declaring that evidence of Ford's fanatical hatred of the Jewish race in general did not apply in this case.

Wm. Gallagher, attorney for Sapiro, was able to get before the public if not into the records, considerable information bearing on this ruling session of the automobile manufacturer.

"The International Jew."

"Ford sought to picture Sapiro as a conscious enemy of all the Anglo-Saxons means by civilization," Sapiro's attorney said. This charge was made during the argument on admitting to evidence Ford's racial views. The "conscious enemy," clause was read by Gallagher from a Dearborn Independent publication, "the International Jew." That book, Gallagher added, is a compilation of articles appearing in the Independent dealing with Jews.

"The International Jew" booklet, Gallagher went on, contained Ford's anti-Jew prejudices, concurring in spirit with the alleged Sapiro libels.

Romantic Yarns.

Gallagher added: "So this book in calling Jews the conscious enemies of all the Anglo-Saxon race by civilization, prepares all readers of the Independent to understand that Aaron Sapiro was such an enemy. This book defines and illustrates the sting and the venom of their publications."

The International Jew booklet articles appeared during 1920, 1921 and 1922, before the alleged libels on Sapiro.

They are still being sold, Gallagher asserted, and paved the way for a wide public to view Sapiro through the frowns of Henry Ford.

He added: "This book shows that for two years the Independent was filling the minds of the public with claims that there was a ring of International Jewry with a throne set up in London. It clearly shows that Ford is claiming he alone is denouncing not only the farms but the manufacturers, the theatre, culture, education and everything."

RELIGIOUS MOB ENRAGED OVER HERETIC SPEECH

Assaults ILD Members Advertising Brown

ST. PAUL, March 22.—Three members of the International Labor Defense were attacked distributing leaflets advertising the lecture which Bishop William Montgomery Brown is to give at the Labor Temple on Saturday evening, March 26th.

Distribution at one of the masses at the St. Agnes Church had been completed, when the distributors were told to discontinue and not to return. One of the priests had come out and was excitedly gathering up the leaflets that had been given out, crying: "Don't read it, you will go to hell if you do!"

Priestly Mob.

The distributors then left for the St. Vincent Church to carry on the same work. It was here that a similar distribution had been made, that the distributors were attacked, and forced to run for many blocks, followed by a mob. Returning for their car, they wee again attacked. The affair resulted in a near riot.

At another church, the distributor had his leaflets destroyed and ordered not to return, under threats of bodily injury.

The local committee is at a loss to know why this opposition should take place as there was nothing in the leaflet that was provocative. It merely contained a short history of the life of Bishop Brown and an invitation for all to attend at his lecture, at 8 p. m., March 26th, at the Labor Temple, 410 N. Franklin Street.

KULOK SHOP IS STILL STRUCK; HUNTING SCABS

The Kulok shop, 38 Eldridge street, New York, is still struck. It is attempting to run with scabs, and the small quantity of goods produced is taken down to the floor below where it is put on sale in the company's own retail store. It is said that even class conscious workers, not realizing that the company is struck and these goods are scab, have bought articles there.

The strike started several weeks ago, because workers were fined by Beckerman for attending a left wing meeting. The force revolted, and went out on strike; the strike has been vigorously maintained ever since, in spite of attempts by right wing gangsters to break it up.

WYOMING COAL MINERS' CONTRACT PUTS UNION IN POWER OF BOSSES

Sample of Temporary Partial Agreements Made By Lewis' Orders in Outlying Districts

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, March 22.—From this outlying district further evidence develops that President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America is determined to make any strike in the central competitive coal fields certain of failure.

A contract with the coal operators' associations of this state has just been arranged, which centers around the following surprising points.

1) No time limit is provided—men are to work on the basis of the Jacksonville agreement, until some decision is made for the central competitive field, after which a new agreement for Wyoming will be made, embodying whatever changes are made by the new situation in the east.

2) There is no stipulation as to how the agreement in the central competitive field shall be arrived at, whether by strike or otherwise. The Wyoming contract is virtually an agreement by the miners to scab during a coal strike, and then when it shall have been broken, to take the low wages assigned to the bestan miners.

3) No penalties for breach of contract operate upon the employers.

4) It is clearly stated in the preamble to the contract, which is signed by the district officials of the coal miners' union, that the whole deal is made under the authority, and according to the general directions of the international officials, President John L. Lewis, and his executive board, and policy committee. It quotes from a form letter sent by international officers to all outlying districts.

Same as Others.

It is generally understood that similar agreements are being signed in parts of Pennsylvania, in the southwest, and are contemplated for District 12, Illinois. The result, miners striking against the New York Herald-Tribune, one of the most reactionary papers in the United States, had advance information when it quoted Lewis as saying: "There will be no strike this year."

Blame Lewis Gang.

The operators, and Lewis henchmen, are proceeding, say progressive miners, on the assumption that if the union is not absolutely helpless, it can be made so by its officials in short order, and any kind of conditions or wages forced upon it that it has been made desire to have. Progressives call for organization of the unorganized fields, and for united nation wide action, to stave off the low wages and union wrecking that the bosses contemplate.

The Wyoming contract and covering letter by District 22 officials is as follows:

Partial Contracts.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 7th, 1927.—To the officers and members of Local Unions of Dist. 22, U. M. W. of A.

Brothers:

You are acquainted with the fact that the joint conference held at Miami, Florida, adjourned without reaching an agreement for the central competitive field, the wage basing districts.

Upon the adjournment of the joint conference, the International Policy Committee was convened by Pres. Lewis, this policy committee being composed of representatives of every district under the jurisdiction of the U. M. W. of A.

The following policy was unanimously adopted by the above committee at its meeting February 25, 1927.

"That the officers of each outlying bituminous district, whose contracts are expiring as of March 31st, 1927, authoritatively advise the operators in their respective districts that their mines may continue at work after April 1st, 1927, upon the payment of the existing wage rates and the maintenance of present conditions pending the negotiation of a basis agreement in the Central Competitive field."

A Sample Sell-Out.

The officers of Dist. 22, acting under the above policy and instructions from the International Policy Committee, upon their return from the conference arranged to meet with the Operators comprising the Northern and Southern Wyoming Coal Operators Association. This meeting was held in Cheyenne, Wyoming, March 7th, 1927, and the following agreement reached putting into the National Policy in Dist. 22:

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 7th, 1927.

It is hereby mutually agreed to between Dist. 22, of the U. M. W. of A. acting under instructions issued by the International Policy Committee of the U. M. W. of A. at Miami, Florida, February 23rd, 1927, and the Northern Wyoming Coal Operators Association and the Southern Wyoming Coal Operators Association, respectively, that the agreement in effect as of this date and which expires by limitation March 31st, 1927, shall be extended and remain in full force and effect until a new basic wage agreement is arrived at and made effective, and that the mines located in Wyoming, members of the two above mentioned Coal Operators Association, will continue in operation under what will be termed an extension of the existing wage agreement commonly referred to as the Jacksonville Agreement.

Ends After The Strike.

It is further agreed, that after such "new basic agreement" is arrived at, representatives of Dist. 22, U. M. W. of A. and the two Coal Operators Association will as soon as possible thereafter, meet in Cheyenne, Wyo., to establish a wage scale predicated on the said "new basic wage agreement," the mines to continue at work in the interim."

The above agreement for continuation of work after April 1st, 1927, should not agreement be reached prior to that date, was signed by Edward Bottomley, and Frank Anderson, for the Northern Coal Operators Association and P. J. Quesly and Eugene McAuliffe, for the Southern Coal Operators Association and by Martin Gahill and James Morgan, in behalf of Dist. 22, U. M. W. of A. the officers signing being the presidents and secretaries of the various organizations a party to the agreement.

Work Even Thru Strike.

This agreement consummated with the authority of the International Policy Committee, assures the continuance of the present wage scale as it effects both day and contract men, members of the U. M. W. of A. in Wyoming, it provides further that when a basic agreement is reached in the eastern field, that this agreement will be the basis for the agreement in Dist. 22. Copies of the agreement have been forwarded to our International Officers at Indianapolis.

It is not possible under present conditions to set a date for a scale convention. The district constitutional convention has been called to meet in Cheyenne, Wyoming, on March 15th, 1927, to handle constitutional matters and dispose of routine work of the organization and thus clear up all work of the district, so that all attention can be given later on to that important matter of the agreement.

Your officers have been notified that they are to attend the next meeting of the International Policy Committee and a meeting of this committee will be held some time before March 31st. It is important that every member of our union cooperate and carry out instructions of the Policy Committee. Every member is therefore instructed that the mines are to continue in operation after April 1st, and report for work as usual under the agreement continuing the present contract. A scale convention will be called at as early date as is possible after a basing agreement is made in the east and each local will be notified in ample time of the date this scale convention for District 22, will be held, when the officers find it possible to set this date. Instructions are therefore given that every member shall report as usual for work after April 1st, and do his part to keep agreement of March 7th, carrying into force and effect the International Policy as it relates to the outlying districts.

Fraternally yours,
Martin Cahill, President.
George Young, Vice-President.
James Morgan, Secretary-Treasurer.
Tony Radoji, International Board Member.

Pittsburg Coal Co. Leads in Lockout

that there would be no strike is self delusion, or worse, and has appointed International Vice-president Phil Murray to organize resistance to the open shop drive in the Pittsburgh region.

Lewis Poor Leader.

Defense here, and against other attacks on the miners' wage scale, which are now expected thruout the central competitive district, is made difficult by lack of preparations, and by the fact that temporary agreements, terminable at the will of the operators, have been made, as a matter of policy, by Lewis with all possible outlying districts. The union miners of Wyoming, Kansas and the southwest are compelled to work thru the strike of the central competitive field. But the spirit of the union men in Western Pennsylvania is high, and in spite of handicaps, the rank and file of the miners are determined to win this struggle. The Pittsburgh Coal Co.'s scab mines are too low to live on.

The district affected by the strike now threatened on April 1 has been in the past the scene of desperate conflict between coal companies and miners under progressive leadership. If the fight develops along the expected lines, progressive leaders will be needed again to secure a victory.

METAL WORKERS OF SOVIET UNION HOLD CONFERENCE

Raised Much Money for British Miners' Strike

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, (by mail).—The 6th conference confirms that the members of the U. S. S. R. metal workers' union have completely fulfilled their obligations with regard to the British miners and by their active political support and financial contributions have realized the international solidarity of the proletariat in deeds. At the same time the Conference notes that the Berne International of metal workers has taken no steps for the organization of assistance to the British miners among the metal workers of all countries, the International made no financial contributions to the fund for the starving British miners and their families.

The letter sent by the Plenum of the CC of the Soviet Metal Workers' Union to the International, in the summer of this year, with a proposal to open a fund among the unions belonging to the International, remained without reply or any practical results.

Criticize Berne International.

The 6th Conference of the Soviet Metal Workers' Union wishes to emphasize that the Berne Metal Workers' International did not fulfil its elementary obligations to the workers of Great Britain. The Conference once more appeals in the name of 800,000 organized Soviet metal workers, to the metal workers' unions of all countries to afford support to those miners who still continue the struggle in the districts, and to those who have suffered and are suffering from the failure, thanks to the treachery of the General Council and the Amsterdam International, of the lockout.

The MWU contributes 10,000 roubles from its funds to the fund for assisting the sufferers and calls upon the metal workers' unions of all countries to follow its example.

For Real Units.

The MWU has always occupied and will continue to occupy the position of the fighting unity of the International trade union movement. In the great struggle of the British miners, the members of the MWU realized, as did the whole organized proletariat of the USSR, the achievement of unity in deeds.

The Metal Workers' International has always been and still remains the enemy of international unity. It showed this by its bargaining with the reactionary leaders of the American trade union movement, who joined the International on that basis, and by this affiliation did not bind the American unions to submit to the statutes of the International or to any demonstrations of solidarity in support of the workers of other countries.

For many years the leaders of the Berne International have demanded that the MWU should acknowledge the statutes of the International and justified themselves before the metal workers of all countries by pleading their own lack of confidence in the MWU's real intentions to abide by the International's statutes.

The leaders of the International in America have completely exposed themselves. They have demonstrated before the whole world that the statutes are of importance to them only inasmuch as they may be used against the revolutionary workers.

The 6th Conference of the MWU in establishing this fact, appeals to the metal workers of all countries to the incessant struggle for One International of Iron and Steel, for a world congress of metal workers, for the united fighting front against capitalized capital.

Australian Delegation Investigating Company Unions, Propagandized

CHICAGO, March 22. The Australian delegation of workers and employers is hearing therapy with a headache after a week's stay. Surrounded by luxury in the Blackstone Hotel where flunkeys politely insisted on licking the stamps on love letters, dined and wined by the big corporation officials, suavely and deferentially conducted through the strongholds of company unionism like the packing plants and the harvester works, cornered by corporation politicians and publicity men with the wonders of industrial co-operation in America.

Toward the end of the week they were permitted to have one evening with Pres. H. M. Dewolf of the U. P. railway employees department and the officials of the Illinois and Chicago Federation of Labor. Two of these went inexpensively to The Federated Press for labor's statistics. There they also took names of key labor men in Washington and New York, titles of books and a file of Leland Olds' industrial and economic articles. The mission was sent by the Australian government to inquire into the scope of American prosperity.

WAR THREATS IN EUROPE AGAIN

Map of countries where war threats again have disturbed Europe. The Italian and British ministers to Jugoslavia have warned Foreign Minister Yeftich that complications would be likely in case if Albanian anti-government forces would proceed from Jugoslavian territory into Albania against the Albanian government. The foreign minister replied that Jugoslavia would do nothing to trouble the peace of the Balkans. France, which received an identic note from Italy protesting the alleged Jugoslavian preparations for supporting the anti-government parties in Albania, urges calmness. There has been open comment in Paris, however, that the Italian protest is looked upon there as one more move in preparation for Italian occupation of Albania. An Italian treaty with Albania gives the Fascist nation virtual economic and military control of the small country. Ahmed Zogu, Albanian president, who was placed into power by Jugoslavia, is alleged to be "playing both sides" with Italy now.

MOSCOW HAILS SHANGHAI'S FALL; RADEK SEES WORLD REVOLUTION

MOSCOW, March 22.—Kick the imperialists out of China!, declares a proclamation sent to the Chinese Nationalist government by M. Ivanov-Rykh, head of the Red Trade Union International.

While a single foreign soldier remains in Chinese territory, the proclamation reads, "While a single foreign naval ship remains in Chinese waters let there be no bread and no peace. Down with external and interior counter-revolution!"

Predicting the triumph of the Chinese revolution, Karl Radek in a speech declared: "The imperialists of Shanghai must fail. No ammunition is strong enough to insure domination of 500,000 foreigners over 400,000,000 Chinese. The Chinese can submit longer without foreign goods than the foreigners without Chinese products. The fall of Shanghai foreshadows the greatest world upheaval."

Ad day yesterday and last night there were wild demonstrations of joy in Moscow over the fall of Shanghai to the Cantonese. Masses seething with crowds, drove with the news of the victory of the rebels armies of workers flooded the streets of Moscow carrying placards and banners, some of which read: "Down with the imperialists!" "China for the Chinese!" "Workers of the World Unite!" etc.

Hundreds of orchestras were gathered outside of the Sun Yat Sen University, and gave the soldiers a rousing ovation. Mass meetings to celebrate the Nationalists' victory will be held tonight.

SAFEGUARD SHANGHAI VICTORY BY DEMANDING HANDS OFF CHINA, SAY LINSON, GOMEZ AND WING

The necessity of safeguarding the Chinese victory at Shanghai demands the withdrawal of American troops from China are pointed out in statements given to The DAILY WORKER by Manuel Gomez Secretary of the United States section of the Anti-Imperialist League, and Linson, editor of the Chinese National Daily and by P. Wing members of the executive committee of the New York Kuomintang. The statements follow:

MANUEL GOMEZ, Secretary United States Section, Anti-Imperialist League: "With the capture of Shanghai, the Chinese revolution has reached a new stage. It is already consolidated sentiment in Shanghai province and its armies have forced their way to the Yangtze.

"The movement now has to cancel date its forces in the newly-conquered territory and face the imperialist powers, who have been every effort to smash the Chinese revolution.

"The foreign imperialists have not only sent troops to China and supplied the Chinese war lords, but they have attempted to win over the merchant class, as well as to split China by destroying the Hankow and Peking governments. The Nationalists are not fooled by fake offers of good will. They will continue the struggle until they have liberated China from exploitation by foreign imperialists."

PAUL WING, Member Executive committee, Kuomintang, New York:

"The fall of Shanghai signifies the victory of the Nationalist revolution. The revolution is really a people's revolution as shown by the solid support which the masses in Shanghai have given to the people's armies led by Chiang Kai Shek.

"The victory of the revolution, however, is not yet assured. The war lords backed by the gunboats of the foreign imperialists, Parading outside of the foreign settlements, wiring from China, stand the troops of the foreign imperialists.

"If the revolution is to be successful, American sympathizers must help us. They must demand the withdrawal of American troops and gunboats; they must insist upon the right of the Chinese people to [illegible] themselves from the domination of [illegible] war lords and foreign [illegible]

PALESTINE LABOR HAS CONFERENCE FOR UNION UNITY

Hebrew, Arab Workers Meet in Harmony

MOSCOW (By Mail).—The Central Secretariat of "Trade Union Unity in Palestine" "PTU" sent the Executive Bureau of the Profintern (R. I. L. U.) the following letter.

To the Executive Committee of Labor Unions, Moscow.

Dear Comrades:

The first conference on "Trade Union Unity in Palestine" held on the 5th to December in Tel-Aviv united the Central secretariat to [illegible] as follows:

"The first conference of "Trade Union Unity in Palestine" acknowledges in spirit of your telegram of greetings. We believe that the present 1st Conference [illegible] time will mark the first stage in setting up a strong international trade unions movement."

This Conference, whose letter we have received, marks a big step forward on the road to uniting the Palestine trade union movement, which up to the present time has been weakened by nations hatred, which was supported by the reformist leaders and Zionists.

Hundreds of Arabians.

The fact that the Conference was convened is in itself a great victory in the work of unity. For the first time in the history of the Palestine trade union movement representatives of the Hebrew and Arabian workers have worked together. Out of 81 delegates, 20 were Arabs. Among the large number of guests more than 2,000, present at the meetings of the conference [illegible] were Arabian workers.

The conference adopted many decisions which insist being about the uniting and strengthening of the Palestine trade union movement. The most important resolutions adopted are the following: (1) The decision to struggle for reorganization of Amsterdam Federation of Labor and Trade Unions affiliated to the Amsterdam Internationals, also at the present time is an organization controlling only Hebrew workers, and an International Federation of Trade Unions which would admit all workers independent of their nationalities or religious and political views. (2) The decision demanding that all those excluded from "Histadrut" for their political views should be accepted back again.

The N. I. L. U. for whom the question of world trade union unity is one of permanent importance, will of course assist in the struggle for the further strengthening and widening of the union of workers of different nationalities, as now observed in Palestine.

Kellogg Breaks Arms Treaty With Mexico

partment officials declined to make any comment on this phase of it.

The treaty provided for an exchange of information on all smuggling activities originating on either side of the border. Mexican border authorities have been able to make numerous big hauls, and to effectually stop almost all arms and ammunition sent from the United States to the clerical rebels attempting to set up a theocracy over the Mexican people.

This exchange of information will no cease, and it is probable that forces of American agents along the border will there after the treaty was signed, will now be withdrawn.

The abrogation of the treaty with Mexico is undoubtedly part of the plan for a revolt of the reactionary elements, such as those in the clerical bandit gangs and in the interests of American oil and land companies, said Manuel Gomez, secretary of the All American Anti-Imperialist League, American section, when interviewed by The DAILY WORKER, after his return to New York from the Brussels Anti-Imperialist congress.

"You can say that the reactionary revolt will fail", Gomez stated, "although Kellogg's action is undoubtedly a blow struck at the unity of Latin American. Mexico has in its desire for independence of foreign capital taste control, drawn closer than ever to the rest of Latin America, similarly menaced, and that this alignment is populous is proved by the participation of many Latin American delegations in the Brussels congress, and their unity there.

"When the rebellion actually breaks out, it may be led by some of the general like Arnulfo Gomez, of Veratan, who now support the government in a kind of stand-offish manner."

Rationalization by Standard Oil Causes Great Unemployment

ELIZABETH, N. J. A reduction in its working forces from 5,000 to 3,000 within the last five months is charged by the introduction of a new process in cracking oils discovered by the chemical engineers employed by the Standard Oil Co. in Bayway, N. J. Rumors are also afloat that the plant will shut down totally for a period of three months.

This new process will enable to reduce the cost of manufacturing oil from 14 cents to six cents per gallon. The workers instead of receiving some benefit therefrom will receive lay offs and find themselves on the slave market looking for employment. The introduction of this labor saving machinery will net millions of dollars for the corporation but not a penny for the workers.

$10,000,000 To "Y" Program for Piety, Pep and Publicity

The New York Y. M. C. A. will soon begin a drive among sympathetic business men for nearly $10,000,000. This was announced yesterday by W. T. Dinck, general secretary of the organization.

Fifteen branches of the association will be covered in this campaign, it is announced, and money will be obtained by means of professional solicitors, and through "special gifts."

More than $5,000,000 has already been received from "less than five contributors whose names we will make known at a later date," according to the program.

Most of the money will be used for new buildings, refurnishing some of the present branches, and advertising and publicity for the campaign. It is also announced that $750,000 will be spent for "a new type of personal guidance program, and $125,000 for "contingencies."

British Troops Fire On Chinese Soldiers

Shanghai talks will cash in on the truth after the present war is over with another "Now It Can Be Told," but in the meantime the capitalist press of Seattle lies about the Chinese situation.

As a sample of pro-Nous anti-Chinese propaganda we publish the following from the Federated Service today. This is a liberal agency. Note the use of the term "guerillas" applied to the Nationalists.

"Shanghai, March 22.—In the Settlement district, called Shanghai's "No Man's Land," trained a British armored car, wounding the crew, who opened fire on the car.

"Police and military are planning to attempt to rescue the car, and, simultaneously, to wipe out the guerilla force, where fifty guerilla, equipped with machine guns, are picking off foreign passers-by and military patrols.

"The attack is planned for daybreak."

Rushing More Marines.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Three thousand marines have been mobilized at Quantico, Va. for duty in China, it was learned at the navy department today.

These marines have been quietly called to Quantico from outlying posts and are ready to embark at a moment's notice. Transports are available to carry them from the Atlantic coast, or they may go by rail to San Diego to embark to save time in an emergency.

The three cruisers Marblehead, Cincinnati and Richmond, the most modern in the American navy, are under steam at Honolulu and expected to sail for Shanghai.

Great Naval Flotilla.

With the 35 warships either in Chinese waters or at the American base at Manila, this would bring the total to 38. Most of the 35 are believed to be already anchored in the Yangtze River at Shanghai, or steaming up and down the Yangtze River above Shanghai. The ships are principally destroyers.

Admiral Williams reported the landing of the 1,500 marines when the Cantonese invaded Shanghai. He is holding in readiness to reinforce them as many more thousand from the ships anchored in the harbor. As the remainder of the destroyers and the three cruisers reach the danger zone they will be able to land upwards of 5,000 men.

May Knock Out Gift Tax Law for Wealthy

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The supreme court today decided to review the constitutionality of the gift tax provision of the revenue laws of 1924.

The action was taken in granting the appeal of George McNeir, who made gifts totalling $806,400 in 1924 and was taxed $47,284 by the New York internal revenue collector. He sued for return of the tax and was unsuccessful in lower courts.

foreign imperialists reactionary elements were necessarily given prominence in the Kuomintang Party. Those elements are willing to make peace with the foreign capitalists. If they gain the upper hand the Chinese masses would only have exchanged masters. They would be aliens in their own country as the working classes of all capitalist countries are.

THE workers and peasants of China have done the fighting that crushed the militarists and scattered their mercenary armies like chaff before the wind. The workers and peasants of all countries have always done the fighting but only in Russia did they also reap the reward. In the struggle that will inevitably ensue in China, between the oppressed masses and those who would wield the lash designed by Chiang Kai Shek's comrades, the capitalists of the world will make a choice. They will support the nationalist bourgeoisie, the Kerenskys of China, with whom they will dicker for concessions and under whose rule they hope to build up a new imperialistic republic where the exploitation of the workers will be conducted in approved style.

SHOULD the revolutionary workers and peasants of China win, a tremendous stretch of territory containing almost one third of the world's population will be under the direction of the workers and shut off from unlimited exploitation by and for the benefit of world imperialism. This is no pipe dream but a very real possibility, and a nightmare to capitalism. Whether the workers and peasants will win now or whether the imperialists will be able to establish, temporarily, a new set of tools in China, time only will tell. That the masses will triumph in the end is as sure as anything can be.

THE battle of the millionaires is on in earnest. Andrew Mellon may get six cents of Ford's alleged billion and he may get nothing but publicity. The lawyers on both sides will get theirs. They are having a glorious time. Ford has been amusing himself lambasting the Jews for several years to the profit of several wise writers whose pens are always at the disposal of a fat check. The average Jew the fellow who works for a living does not seem to be very excited over Ford's rantings, but the Hebrews have their dignity to look after.

FORD employs scores of thousands of workers in his shops. In all probability a large proportion of them are of the Hebrew race. I doubt very much if Ford would discharge a worker out of whose labor he could make a profit because of his racial origin. The Jews that have the greatest agency Ford are not the cash exploiters and speculators like Sapiro, Rosenwald and Barney Baruch, but the Jewish workers who have helped to make Ford the richest man in the world. The organization of Ford's workers into trades unions would do more to put a crimp in his anti-Semitism than all the Red Cross that were ever thrashed out in court.

WHILE the horizon is aflame with the glare of cannon and rumors of impending war are buzzing thru the chancelleries of Europe, the inquiring nations seriously goes about the task of framing a disarmament program. Of course, the lads are not serious except in so far as they are removing the need of deceiving the masses. All the important countries affiliated to the league of nations have war vessels in China. Only the most naive believe that the interested powers will disarm. To do so would be the end of them. Like the old fashioned presbyterian they are doomed to damnation anyway but perhaps they don't know it.

The Beethoven Hall Meeting—A Sign of Reaction's Weakness

The rank and file of the labor movement and even certain sections of the lower official elements are giving little if any financial support to the drive against the left wing in the needle trades.

This is the conclusion to be drawn from the meeting called under instructions from President Green in Beethoven Hall Monday night and attended for the most part by leaders of the Forward's "socialist" trade union machine.

Appeals for money with which to carry on the fight on militant trade unionism were the feature of the meeting. It is evident that the black forces behind the drive are not satisfied with the present state of affairs and that the stubborn resistance of the rank and file of the cloakmakers and furriers has astonished them.

Assurances of complete co-operation of the police department with Green-Woll-Sigman-Schachtman forces were given the audience and this seems to be the biggest card in the right wing hand. It is sufficient proof of the degeneration of the right wing "socialist" leaders that they now find themselves at the mercy of the Tammany Hall machine. They are Tammanyizing the sections of the cloakmakers they control and they have a still harder job in the furriers' union.

It is our opinion that the offensive of the left wing has passed its peak nnd that with the consolidation of all the fighting forces of the rank and file behind the unity committee of the Furriers and Cloakmakers' Joint Boards there will appear a strong movement against turning these unions officially into adjuncts of Tammany Hall's police department.

The strength of the left wing lies in its program for amalgamation of the unions and in the hatred of the rank and file for the stoolpigeon methods employed by the right wing.

The weakness of the left wing so far, and this is in striking contrast to the intensive and vicious propaganda spread thruout the trade unions by the right wing, is that it has had too localized an outlook. Together with the strengthening of the left wing organization in New York there should be carried on a continual publicity campaign in the labor movement which, by concentrating on the elementary issues of trade union integrity involved will effectively answer the slanders of the right wing.

The meeting in Beethoven Hall was a sign of the weakness of reaction in the needle trades and not of its strength.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company Fires the First Shot Against the Miners

The first open challenge to the United Mine Workers of America—and to the whole American labor movement—has been thrown by a section of the most powerful group of capitalists in the United States—the Pittsburgh Coal Company which is allied closely with the Pennsylvania Railroad and the steel interests.

This company has declared its intention to smash the union in the territory in which it operates and the tone of the public statement of its spokesman leaves no doubt as to the determination of this labor-hating concern to use the full power of the armed forces of the state—the Pennsylvania cossacks, for instance—to force the open shop on the miners.

According to dispatches the company forces are already on a military basis, searchlights are ready to light the midnight forays of company gunmen upon the homes of miners and their families and all the machinery and trappings that in America give industrial disputes a warlike character are in readiness for the use of the private armies and mercenaries paid from the public treasury.

This is the answer of the coal barons to the miners' union which President Lewis has led to this struggle unprepared. The way for the miners to answer the coal barons, and this will be the answer given if the "Save the Union" program is followed, is to launch at once an organizing campaign in the West Virginia coal fields controlled by the Pittsburgh company while the same time conducting the Pennsylvania strike and carrying on organization work in the fields adjacent to the mines of this concern.

This new development is additional proof that the left wing was correct when it told the miners that the coming struggle is a fight for the life of the union.

The left wing will lead the struggle against the Pittsburgh Coal Company just as it led the struggles of the unorganized miners in the coking coal regions of Pennsylvania in 1922.

Stop the New Plot Against Mexico

The Coolidge-Kellogg-Wall Street offensive against Mexico has taken a new form and altho somewhat overshadowed by the recent stirring events in China, the question of relations with Mexico is now acute.

A number of events force the conclusion that American interests, with the knowledge of the state department are organising a counter-revolution in Mexico. These events are:

1. The note sent by Kellogg to the Mexican government notifying it that the anti-smuggling treaty will no longer be enforced. This amounts for practical purposes to the lifting of the embargo on arms and munitions and means that there are certain elements in Mexico that the state department wants armed.

2. The dispatch from the Mexican Correspondent of the New York Times, Ybarra, in which the open prediction of counter-revolution is made. The dispatch itself reads like a declaration of war on the part of The Times.

3. The report from authentic sources that the Hearst press in New York City is holding two correspondents in reserve for duty in Mexico and that Hearst expects a strong counter-revolutionary movement within a month which will be financed in part by Doheny.

The state department is evidently working strenuously to create another Nicaraguan situation during the congressional recess so that an accomplished fact of the need for intervention or actual intervention can be presented to congress.

The Mexican situation is more critical today than it was when it was getting more publicity in the imperialist press and there is the greatest need for the widest possible public agitation with the stern purpose of preventing war against Mexico under whatever guise it may assume.

Suppression in England and the Right Wing Leaders of Labor

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE British ruling class is junking the remnants of the famous democracy celebrated in song and story faster than most of us realize. We have been regaled for years with tales of the traditional love of Britain's rulers for peaceful democratic procedure at home.

In the colonies of course democratic procedure would have hampered the work of civilizing the black, brown and yellow-skinned races for the glory of king, god and country.

The experience gained in a thousand colonial punitive expeditions is now being drawn upon to keep the British working class in its proper place, that of hewers of wood and drawers of water for god's anointed.

BRITISH justice since the general strike has taken on an open class character. Workers who come before British magistrates now are made to feel that the courts are indeed bulwarks of the empire.

Not long ago, according to the bulletin sent out by the International Class War Prisoners' Association, a West London magistrate told a young taxicab driver who said that his union did not allow him to take his cab out during the strike:

"If I were a young man like you I would have taken out my taxi with a couple of revolvers in my pocket and shot right and left. They would soon have left you alone."

No less a person than Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, has given the lead for such judicial utterances by his public statement:

"A good dose of Mussolini would do the workers of this country good."

SIR William Thompson, the post-master-general, does not lag behind Joynson-Hicks or the learned judges. Speaking publicly about statements to the effect that in the event of war on China efforts would be made to prevent troops being sent, he said:

If they do that they will end up, and very properly too, with their backs against a wall with a firing party in front of them. It is just as well that they should know right from the start."

In the face of such open expressions of hatred and threats of organized violence from authorized spokesmen of the British imperialist government, the right wing leaders like Ramsay MacDonald prattle about "peaceful progress" and join with the government in its campaign against China and the Soviet Union.

In Great Britain there are today 51 workers serving sentences ranging from 3 months to 5 years as a result of strike activities and there are over 300 prosecutions still pending under the Emergency Powers Act.

BRITISH democracy was characterized by the ease with which, in the present period of decay the whole machinery of the capitalist state is marshalled against the working class.

Nothing furnishes more conclusive proof of the decline of the British empire than its assault on the traditional liberties of the British masses.

The British Communist Party and the National Minority movement are bringing home to the working class the meaning of the violent act and utterances of their rulers. It is to be noted that the arrests and imprisonment of Communist and other militant workers is coincident with the attack on the labor movement as a whole, the attempts to lower the living standard of the working class and the conspiracy to paralyze the trade unions, the "Trade Union Raform" bill.

MACDONALD and Thomas both have stated that they have no objection in principle to the government proposals for trade union reform but they continue to denounce the Communists as enamies of the labor movement.

The hypocritical attitude of these right wing leaders is quite clear when the question is asked: Who is jailing British workers, pleasing violent suppression of the labor movement and attacking the trade unions?

It certainly is not the Communist Party of Great Britain which, in proportion to its membership, has and had more members in jail during and after the general strike and coal strike than any other working class organization, sent to jail by the government with which the MacDonalds and Thomases conduct a sham battle.

Capitalist Nations Plan Offensive Against Soviet Union---Workers Must Prepare Defense

By JOHN WILLIAMSON.

IN recent days the differences between the capitalist powers and Soviet Russia have become more acute than ever before. The capitalist press speaks openly about preparations for war against the Soviet Union.

Many indications of the preparations being conducted by the capitalist world are to be seen. Amongst them, the most outstanding is the diplomatic maneuverings of Great Britain between the surrounding Baltic and Balkan border states. Such events as the building of railroads in the Baltic countries direct to the Russian frontier, attempts initiated by England to reconcile the age-long differences of Lithuania and Poland over Vilna; similar attempts at reconciliation between Poland and Germany; the Fascist coup in Lithuania, the attempted coup recently in Latvia; the territorial aspirations of Pilsudski; the recent letter of Great Britain to Moscow and the most recent, the recognition by Great Britain by Italy of Roumania's right to annexation of Bessarabia, all have one connecting thread that of weaving in a ring around the Soviet Union.

Altho the entire capitalist world would glory in a weakening of the power of the workers and peasants at present, the ring leader of the new attack is Great Britain, as she, more than the others, feels the result of the consolidation of the U. S. S. R. The general policy of British diplomacy is three-fold:

a) Political isolation of the U. S. S. R. and its encirclement by anti-Soviet blocs,

b) Control and guidance of Poland, Roumania and the Baltic border states, of their military preparations in order to use them as a weapon in the struggle.

c) Moral isolation of the U. S. S. R. in the public opinion of the world.

Of interest are some of the comments in the European press of today. In the Danish Gazette, we find the Danish naval expert, Reiss expressing himself as follows: "Immediately after the conclusion of the world war Great Britain and France particularly adopted a Baltic Sea policy. * * * Great Britain thought that these states will form a barrier between Russia and Germany, facilitating thereby the capture of the Russian market by Great Britain. * * * At present Great Britain is endenvoring to save the situation by organizing a Baltic Federation directed against Russia. In 1925, the British fleet was in the Baltic Sea paying visits to the new states in order to give them more moral support and to show that Great Britain is interested in reserving these states for the struggle against the Soviet Union."

The aspirations of Poland are expressed in the "Polskaya Zbroinia", the official organ of the war ministry as follows: "The great slogans 'For the Bug' and 'For the Neman' which forsee the widest possible Polish expansion and which demand the reconstruction of the Polish state within its historical and not within narrow ethnographical frontiers today alarm a great many people. However, when the Polish state came into being, slogans of Polish expansion to the East, became a matter of course. * * * We must be strong in the East, and again, in the paper, 'Mysl Panstwowa', organ of Pilsudski's personality, 'We must teach our public opinion that the direction for this expansion of Poland as a big power is the East.' * * *

Parallel with its diplomatic maneuvers goes a steady increase of the military and naval forces of the entire capitalist world. Such figures as the following show graphically the trend of events:

Expenditures on Air Fleets

Country	1924	1925	1926 (Currency)
France	669 23	823	783 5 Million francs
Great Britain	18 605	13 392	21 319 Thousand pounds
Italy	399	149	829 Million lire
Poland	24 233	15 708	36 026 Thousand zloty
Roumania	227 216	360	405 536 Thousand lei

In addition to extension of the regular armed forces, there has been energetic establishment of semi-official military organizations for the youth in all countries.

These maneuvers and military preparations are only the inevitable expression of differences which must clash between working class Russia and the rest of the capitalist world. The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union have grappled successfully with all enemies to date, whether they be from the inside or the outside. More than ever before must the workers of the world be awakened to the imminence of war against U. S. S. R. Such an event must be the signal for wide mobilization of all workers of America and Europe to demand and work for, "Hands Off Workers Russia".

Military Expenditures of States Adjoining The U. S. S. R.

Country	Year	In Mill. Dollars

"Whereas, the working class of America has lost a great leader from its ranks by the sudden death of C. E. Ruthenberg,

"Therefore, be it resolved, that Local No. 34, Shoe Workers' Protective Union, at a meeting held on Thursday evening, March 17th, 1927, goes on record to commemorate him and keep up the struggle for the emancipation of the working class.

Newark Workers Pay Tribute to Ruthenberg

NEWARK N. J.—On Friday evening workers of Newark gathered in the New Montgomery Hall and paid their respects to their gone but not forgotten Comrade Ruthenberg. About 200 workers attended. The speakers were Comrades Markoff, Gardos and Gebert. They briefly outlined the life's activities of Ruthenberg and urged those present to complete the work which our comrade had left unfinished. There was enthusiastic response. Eight new applications were received for the party and the workers of Newark pledged themselves to carry on greater work in the city of Newark in the future.

The performance Friday night is given for the benefit of the "Young Pioneer Camp," and it is certain that the theater will be well attended by workers who are interested to build this workers' children's camp. "It is a great play for a great purpose."

GREEN, WOLL AND McGRADY BEG FUNDS TO CARRY ON DESTRUCTIVE WAR

Boast of Aid Given Them By New York Police; Demand More Cash To Fight Left Wing

Boasting of their relationship to the police force in New York, howling for money, money, more money, to "carry on a fight that may last for months yet," a fight "for the government of the United States against Communists," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and his local organizer, Edward McGrady, Monday turned the special meeting of Central Trades and Labor Council of New York and Vicinity into a begging campaign.

The enemies of the militant needle trades workers admit they are broke, in fact they howl to high heaven about it. They want money—the police are their friends, they say, and they fear no left wing pickets—but if they don't get money, no one knows what will happen. It was inferred that without money even the police might leave them.

McGrady Praises Police.

Edward McGrady, special organizer for the A. F. of L., and secretary of the committee appointed by the executive board of the A. F. of L. to "investigate the fur strike" told of expelling the fur unionists and opening new headquarters where the rank and file were invited to register.

In describing the fighting which the Schachtman guerrillas had started in the fur market he called these criminals with long records, "kid time members of the union." McGrady shamelessly boasted of his relations with the police.

Police to Cooperate.

"The police department has agreed to cooperate with us in every respect," said McGrady. "Police Commissioner McLaughlin has given us assurances that the picket lines will be broken up. He says that where there is no strike there will be no picket line. He has also promised me to have sufficient police on hand to see that it is put into effect.

"The notorious Ben Gold is sticking his thumb up to his nose and says 'that you mean nothing' He says that in spite of the police department!

Need the Money.

"Today it rained and there were not many of them roving around. However, tomorrow morning I will obtain a report on what took place today. Tomorrow I once again go in to see Police Commissioner McLaughlin.

"It's a fight of Communism against the United States government!

"It is bitter warfare and we need funds, need them badly. At the present we have enough for only a few more weeks. That is why we are here tonight.

The Bails Is Here!

"Mark no mistake, those Communists are very well financed. The terrorism will stop, the police department will see to that. But our workers are frightened.

"They have moved their English daily newspaper here from Chicago. You must have your organization contribute as soon as possible. Send me money to the Central Trades and Labor Council!

"We have to issue propaganda and publish leaflets to give to the workers.

"The struggle will not end soon, will last many weeks, if not months."

Green Grows Modest.

Green's speech, following that of his local henchmen, sounded rather tame. He has evidently decided to disavow his share in the summoning of the meeting last night, and in spite of the fact that The DAILY WORKER yesterday published a facsimile of the call, in which it is clearly stated over the signatures of Ryan and Coughlin that Green requested the meeting, the A. F. of L. president began by an invasion. "I was invited to be present," he said, to speak as the chosen representative of millions." Earlier in the day, he had stated to a DAILY WORKER reporter, over the telephone that he did not know what the meeting was for or would do.

Green told a rambling story of the fur workers' strike in New York, trying to recall that Ben Gold invited an investigation during the strike, but that the president of the A. F. of L. and its executive board would not do this while the strike was on. When the struggle was ended, he thot they should investigate, and knew they would find startling facts, which however were even more startling than could be expected.

"I wish I could tell you what all these facts were," said Green, and thus neatly skipped past another point.

Fat Boys Were There.

The platform at the special meeting was crowded with trade union bureaucrats. They included, Matthew Woll, Edward McGrady, Hugh Frayne, and John Sullivan. Joseph P. Ryan, president of the council, presided.

The composition of the meeting was different from that of any ordinary Trades Council meeting. Fifty per cent of the audience were Jewish readers of the Forward, while a regular meeting of the council would be conspicuous by their absence.

"Bribery".

Green read off a bewildering list of names, of figures, of police supposed to have been bribed and of unionists supposed to have bribed them, but gave no proof, and again sucked aside from any definite statement as to whether Tammany Hall's latest cops had been bought out by Moscow, or not. Apparently the often reiterated fact that the police were with the right wing must have struck even Green as a little contradictory to this part of his charges.

May Expel International.

The charge of dual unionism was not neglected. Ben Gold, according to Green, is leading a "dual union." That whole union has been officially expelled by its superiors, with the blessing of Green, and therefore it is dual to any new one that may be started under Green's auspices.

Not only that, said Green, "if the whole International Ladies' Union surrenders to the Communists, if it follows Gold, then the whole union must be expelled, and will be a dual organization."

Admires the Injunction.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was congratulated; "the A. F. of L. looks with admiring interest and sympathy on how the I. L. G. W. U. has cleared the union of men sympathetic to Communists, if not Communists, and established the dominance of the A. F. of L.", referring presumably to the Italian local injunctions. "Be assured the A. F. of L. will stay with them in their fight, to the bitter end; may God speed their work!"

Gold's Statement.

"It looks as tho the Special Reorganization Committee of the A. F. of L., and the officials of the International Fur Workers' Union had had to issue a call for help," said Ben Gold, manager of the Furriers' Joint Board, when asked what he thot about this special conference.

"Evidently not even the collaboration of the police force, about which McGrady brags, has been sufficient to dissolve and expel the fur workers.

Workers Threatened Daily.

"Four detectives are accompanying vice-president Winnick thru the fur market each day now, and the officers join in threatening the workers with beatings if they do not proceed to register with the International at once. The workers are not being terrorized, but these reactionary forces are making every attempt to persecute them."

Others commenting on this conference that possibly the American Federation of Labor was seeking a little publicity on its red-baiting work so that it could make an appeal for funds. It is rumored that cash has not been rolling in very fast for this good cause.

BEAT OFF BLACK SHIRT ATTACK ON ENEA SORMENTI

Fifty Injured; Many Jailed After Meeting

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

PORTCHESTER, N. Y., March 22.—Fifty fascists, leaders of the New York organization of the fascist league of America, today nursing bruises and wounds that they received here yesterday when attempting to break up a mass meeting called by the Anti-Fascist League of North America.

The fascists came here in automobiles and by trains from New York with the intention of beating up the speakers, Ena Sormenti and Carlo Tresca, and stopping the meeting. A month ago when the fascists held a meeting here and their speakers were asked questions, they answered that "if the anti-fascists held a meeting they would break it up." Yesterday they attempted to fulfill their promise, but failed miserably.

Sormenti Speaks.

The meeting was called for 3.30 p. m. at Avigilione Hall. When Sormenti and Tresca arrived there they were met at the door by the local police and the New York fascists.

The meeting was opened by Nicola Napoli, chairman, who introduced Sormenti as the first speaker. Sormenti in his speech exposed the fascists' plots both in Italy and in the United States.

The fascists tried to interrupt Sormenti when he was speaking, but when they saw that their tactics angered the assembled workers, they ceased.

Search Workers.

Police stopped Sormenti on the middle of his speech and all the workers present were searched for weapons by order of the chief of police. One of the fascists was arrested at that period, at the demand of one of Mussolini's henchmen.

The next move by the fascists was to try and throw a bomb into the hall. Again they were foiled, one of the spectators discovering the weapon in time.

When the meeting ended the fascists assembled outside of the hall and waited for Sormenti and Tresca, their plan being to assault them. Sormenti and Tresca got into an automobile to go to Yonkers where another anti-fascist meeting was in session.

Attacked With Clubs.

Not being able to reach the automobile, the enraged fascists started to attack the Italian workers who were then leaving the hall. They struck the workers with blackjacks, canes and clubs, also using knives. Nine fascists and two anti-fascists were arrested. Two were stabbed, one anti-fascist being stabbed by the blackshirts and one policeman being stabbed by a fascist.

The local branch of the Anti-Fascist Alliance was organized two months ago by Ena Sormenti.

ITALIAN WORKERS DENOUNCE USE OF NEW INJUNCTION

Left Wing Speakers Tell of Treachery

The policy of collaboration between the right wing reactionary leaders and the bosses, which has resulted in the officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union employing the capitalists' weapon, the injunction, was repeatedly despoused by speakers at a mass meeting held last night under the auspices of the Italian Progressive Center in Manhattan Lyceum.

"What difference is there between employers who yell 'Communists' and run to the courts for help in waging war on the workers, and traitors like Sigman and Antonini," asked Anthony Ramuglia, who served as chairman.

"The fight of the progressive workers in the New York needle trades is a fight between class-conscious workers and the tools of the bosses."

Speakers Cheered.

Cheers and applause greeted Enea Sormenti who was the first speaker, and the same enthusiasm was shown when Joseph Di Mola, the shop chairman who was nearly killed by right wing gangsters two months ago, added his comments on the treachery of the International officials who not only attacked workers physically but attacked them with the bosses' legal weapon, the injunction.

Louis Hyman, general manager of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Joint Board, Rebecca Grecht, and Frances Coen also spoke on the injunction taken out by Luigi Antonini against union members, and at the close of the meeting the workers unanimously adopted a resolution on this important matter. A police captain and 6 officers also attended this meeting, but it remained orderly and quiet.

Anti-Injunction Resolution.

Whereas an injunction has been applied for and obtained by Luigi Antonini, henchman of Sigman, and manager of Local 89 of the I. L. G. W. U., and

Whereas this injunction is directed against the legally elected officers of the Joint Board and against members of Local 89 itself, and

Whereas the corrupt International misleaders have had recourse to an injunction obtained for the purpose of fighting the membership although all of the labor movement, both conservative and progressive, has condemned the use of the injunction in labor disputes as an unjustifiable judicial abuse, and

Whereas, labor as at present engaged in a fight to eliminate the injunction in all labor disputes, and at this present moment the New York labor movement is engaged in a bigoted effort of Albert Sabato to eliminate its use in which effort Local 89 has cooperated, and

Whereas, Luigi Antonini has himself declared in his signed article in the Farnati paper "Il Progresso Italo-Americano", that part of the purpose of the injunction is to force members who dissent from his mandate to form another organization outside of the union, therefore it is resolved

That the trade unionists assembled at Manhattan Lyceum on Monday, March 21, declare this to be another of Sigman's and Antonini's alliance with the bosses and with the injunction-issuing judges and all the dark forces of reaction and corruption, and we further declare that the injunction is proof of their union-splitting policies, just as Antonini has intimated in the organ of Fascism for which he writes articles, and we further Resolve that we call upon the labor movement to disown this infamous action and drive such men, who will avail themselves of an injunction against the membership out of the labor movement.

Awning Hangers Fight Company Union Trying To Misuse Their Label

CHICAGO.—Under the camouflage of an alleged union, the small owners of 30 small awning shops in Chicago are attempting to pass off their insanitary sweatshop awnings on the public as though they were made under decent union conditions. The bona fide Awnings Hangers union, local 9 of the Upholsterers Intl. union has beaten the fake union out of using the genuine union label and is vigorously campaigning now to put it out of business altogether.

The 28 firms formed an "independent union." They got out a label reading, "this label issued by Upholsterers Independent Union of America, Local 18, Chicago, Ill. This awning is union sold—union made—and union hung—by union workers.

"The label is a pure fake," says business agent J. J. Horn of Local 9. "The 30 big awning shops in Chicago are organized by the regular union and use the authorized union label of Local 9. The public health is properly protected in them, as is the health of the employes.

The union is fighting the fake independents who are really owners, is waging a campaign to prevent the reappearance of sweatshop conditions in the awning section of the upholstery trade in Chicago.

Gary Labor-Baiter Dead Workers Shed No Tears

(By Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Ind., March 22.—Mr. Graff, the superintendent of the Tin Mill plant here is dead as a door nail. It was just recently that the name of Mr. Graff was in the limelight on the pages of The DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER reported how the late superintendent fired one of the workers employed in the mills, Albert Salarno, just because Albert Salarno was distributing a circular calling upon the workers of Gary to protest against armed intervention in Nicaragua, Mexico and China.

The DAILY WORKER can report now that Mr. Graff himself is fired off the job.

We could not see any of the workers in the plant crying over the loss of their superintendent. But the foreman got busy and over $500.00 was collected from the workers of the plant to buy flowers and to tell a lie to the world that they grieved to lose Mr. Graff.

Someone else will take Mr. Graff's place and will be getting $500.00, not $500 a month, while the men in the mills will strain their last energy to earn enough to meet the expense of the rent and the grocery bills.

The Manager's Corner

MCGRADY AND THE DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER is being bitterly denounced by McGrady, special organizer of the A. F. of L., and Green's right-hand man in the union splitting, anti-Communist campaign which is being launched in New York. There is good reason for this. There is good reason why this "labor lieutenant of the capitalist class," who openly appeals to the police and the capitalist government for help against the rank and file, is furious in his attacks upon The DAILY WORKER. He realizes that while he and his ilk have the ear of the capitalist class, the co-operation of the capitalist press and the police, the left wing commands the support of the rank and file, through its trusted organ, The DAILY WORKER.

It is essential that more workers throughout the country be informed as to the inside story of the despicable attempts of Green, Woll and Co. to split the labor movement and deprive it of its most active and militant elements. It is essential they know how great is the treachery of these men and how completely they have sold themselves to the employers. It is important most of all that the English-speaking workers know the facts. It is necessary that the left wing lay its case openly and frankly before the American labor movement through its organ, The DAILY WORKER.

Anyone who realizes the importance of the struggle now being waged inside of the American labor movement against class collaboration, a struggle which will determine the entire future course of the development of our trade unions, must realize at the same time the necessity of building up the militant organ of that struggle, The DAILY WORKER. The denunciation of The DAILY WORKER, by Green, McGrady and the rest will not help these gentlemen a bit. On the contrary it will stimulate the workers to renewed efforts to build up on a bigger and broader scale the workers' national organ, America's labor daily, The DAILY WORKER.

Green Will Not Hold the Support of Labor in His Alliance With the Bosses

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THREE interesting statements were made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in the anti-left wing meeting held at Beethoven Hall, Monday night, under the guise of a special gathering of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

They were in effect as follows:

First:—"This is a struggle of Communism versus Americanism, of the philosophy of Moscow against the high ideals of the United States government."

Second:—"We are wondering whether or not, there is a civil government in New York City?"

Third:—"If the Communists win out in the trade union movement, there will be a new president of the American Federation of Labor."

There is no contradiction in these statements. They all grow of the same position, an acceptance of American capitalism and its government, interpreting any disagreement with the philosophy of the present social system of profit and private property as the worst treason.

Being satisfied with things as they are, fighting every effort to achieve progress, the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor wars on the left wing as bitterly as the United States government attacks the Communist movement, as tenaciously as world imperialism struggles against the Union of Soviet Republics.

It is not difficult to parallel the speech made by President Green at Beethoven Hall, Monday night, with the vindictive and malicious propaganda being spread at that very moment by a hostile world imperialist press against the triumph of the People's Armies in successfully taking over Shanghai, China's greatest seaport.

The greatest clash of social forces takes place when a new society challenges an old and is close to victory. Under those conditions the old order, utilizing every weapon to save itself, stoop to every possible lie and stops short of no misrepresentation in the propaganda that it spreads to protect its waning power.

The best example of this has been the decade-long attack on the successful revolution of Russia's workers and peasants, now ten years old. The big fact was that the old social order had fallen in the struggle with the new. The truth was kicked into the gutter by the world reaction in an effort to misrepresent and hide this triumph.

Identically the same process is being repeated in the attitude toward the victories of the Chinese masses over their age-long oppressors. Thus the New York Herald-Tribune, citing one example, carries the headline, "Shanghai Mobs Repelled by British; Looting Rife; U. S. Marines Join Guard." This is an effort to smudge the achievements of the Chinese revolutionists. It seeks to fan prejudice in this country against the revolution, thus building a basis for a possible intervention on the side of the old order. If any looting has been done in Shanghai, if there have been any disorders, they have all been committed by the allies of the imperialists, the Shantung forces with which the invaders hoped to hold Shanghai against the People's Armies. It is significant that the imperialist allies included counter-revolutionary Russians, deposed dukes, admirals, generals and princes who had been defeated and driven out of the Workers' Republic by the Soviet Power.

All this may seem to be a far cry from President Green speaking at a gathering controlled by the reaction in New York City.

But once Green is accepted as the defender of capitalism, and he admits this himself and is proud of it, then the alliances that he makes and the flood of billingsgate and falsehood that he turns loose against the left wing can be easily understood.

Green waxes hysterical in his efforts to charge that the left wing in the needle trades has subsidized the police force to combat it. This of course sounds fantastic to an audience that has just heard Edward F. McGrady, Green's personal red baiter in New York City, state that A. F. of L. officials were receiving the fullest support of Police Commissioner McLaughlin and Mayor Walker. Such a contradiction, however, does not trouble Green, nor does it bother any of his fellow officials who trouble little about the facts. The old story of huge sums of money from Moscow is trotted out, by Green, by Matthew Woll, by McGrady, in their efforts to open the treasuries of the local unions in New York and thus insane their work of destruction in the trade unions and mould every worker's mind to an acceptance of their reactionary position.

The fact that the "welcome" sign for A. F. of L. officials appears on the doormat before Police Commissioner McLaughlin's office, while at the same time rank and file workers in the left wing of the needle trades, or merely sympathizers of the left wing, are in jail or prison for having acted as strike pickets in the battles of the union, is proof enough to convince the masses of workers where their interests lie and who is getting the support of the police.

Green's confession of failure is contained in his wail that, "Civil government is on trial." Green isn't satisfied with the "satisfactory" co-operation he is getting from the police force. He wants more. He wants the city government to use all of its power to club labor in the fur industry into accepting the program of the A. F. of L. reaction.

Many of the workers in the needle trades came here from foreign shores. Many others are descended from these immigrants. Green, in the spirit of czarism, tries to accomplish what the czar failed to do, to straightjacket the thinking of great masses of people.

In his day the czar saw new ideas being accepted by the workers and peasants in Russia on an increasing scale.

Czarism fought every sign of discontent among the Russian people with the same viciousness that Green employs in warring on the left wing. In Russia the czar had his own jails, his own army and his own government. In the United States, Green applauds when workers are put into the jails of the master class, he applauds the military training camps of the capitalists, he boasts of the assistance given by the police force in the metropolis, he claims as his right every protection of the capitalist government because he is a part of that government.

But Green does not feel safe. Otherwise he would not hold out even the possibility of the left wing, which to him means the Communists, winning the leadership of the American trade union movement. Green says, "If the Communists win over the trade unions to their position, then there will be another president of the American Federation of Labor." That is one of the few truthful utterances that Green has made, in addition to his open confession that he upholds, unwaveringly, the government that has been guilty of the most brutal warfare against the coal miners of this country on scores of industrial battlefields. Green belongs to the coal miners' union. But in this union, as well in all others, the membership moves toward a class position. Thus Green will be isolated with his fellow officials in tha company of his allies, the capitalists. That is wbare they belong.

GORLOVKA

By MARGARET GRAHAM.

GORLOVKA, a mining town in the Ukraine—part of the famous Donetz Basin. We arrived at two in the afternoon, expecting to have some one meet us at the station, show us thru the mine and put us on board the night train for Kislovodsk. Things should have gone through in true American style—but this was Russia. We misunderstood our instructions and our trade union guide presented himself after many telephone messages, about four o'clock. He laughed when we told him our plans, but agreed to put them through to the best of his ability.

A Russian Mining Town.

Gorlovka, a mining town, but not the mining town we know in America, with its streets flanked by shanties, one family to a room, and its grimy, sordid, hopeless air. Not the mining town of families turned out of the company-owned shacks for daring to strike.

As we turned down the main street to have dinner at the restaurant, (there was a fine new one being built, but this one was clean and warm, and served a good meal for 25 cents) we heard a band playing and presently there came around the corner of the street a little procession. Just workers, headed by a workers' band, hatchet-eded. Very quiet they marched. They were burying a fellow-worker. A plain pine coffin on the shoulders of two sturdy workers. The coffin was open and in it, with hands crossed upon her bosom and a white kerchief neatly tied about her thin gray hairs, an old woman, a mining woman, sleeping.

The Old Abuses.

She had seen the impossible happen, and now she was dead. She had lived through the days when men, naked to the waist, dragged heavy carts of coal on hands and knees from the pit to the mouth and back again, to the pit for more coal. She had seen pregnant women, who had always pregnant women, half naked, dragging with the damp of the mine dragging their nine months through the mine. She had seen children working to help their fathers to add their few kopeks to the family income. She had lived in the mine barracks, two to the room—and had carried water in a can all the way from the pump, during heavy rains.

The New Conditions.

These things were not to be seen, perhaps they had never been. It was 8 hours' work in the mine now, and a hot bath with soap and towels for every worker before going home. There were nine hundred new houses with three and four rooms each, with a garden and trees and electricity and coal free. Women who were going to have babies had four months' holiday with full pay—two months before and two months after the baby came and then a nursery series where working mothers could leave their older babies and know that they were cared for by trained nurses, fed and put to sleep and watched by a doctor.

Labor Goes to School.

Up on the hill, facing the new town, was the new building of Labor's Home—a new school, an auditorium, a gymnasium. The home of the former mine manager was now the club. The boys and girls spent their evenings and studied and played and learned to do their part in "Building Socialism." (There are 376 such clubs with 41,000 members run by the Miners' Union.)

All these things had come in two years—many of them within six months. The Safety Station for instance, from which mine rescue squads could reach any of the five mines in fifteen minutes—the station which was helping to make mining safe for husbands, fathers and brothers (The last explosion had been during the revolution in 1917).

Three young giants showed us their handiwork. One, the leader of the club, one an engineer in the mine,

FORD CALLED TO TESTIFY IN LIBEL SUIT

The chief importance of the million dollar Sapiro suit against Ford lies in the fact that during the course of the quarrel, various little known facts about the business dealings of each of these wealthy men will be made public. Reed, Ford's attorney, has already stated that he can prove Sapiro looted farmer co-operatives by the wholesale. He claims that Frank Lowden, "friend of the farmers," was associate in this business. Lowden's name is important, for he is the logical next candidate for republican nomination to the presidenry, as Reed is for the Democratic. On the other hand, the basis of Sapiro's charge against Ford is that the latter accused the millionaire Sapiro of being a radical, of aiding the Communists and the I. W. W., besides which, according to Ford, Sapiro was part of a Jewish conspiracy to dominate agriculture. The absurdity of these charges, and Henry Ford's "Jewish complex," are being brought out by Sapiro.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

AFTER March 28, the oil companies and the Knights of Columbus can smuggle arms to Mexican counter-revolutionists without interference from the United States government. The anti-smuggling convention between the two countries will be cancelled on that date by action of the state department. This is equal to telling the reactionary imperialists and their clerical agents that they have the unofficial sanction of Coolidge and Kellogg for hostile acts against the Calles administration.

WITH the relations between Mexico and the United States growing in seriousness, and with imminent danger of a united front of imperialism in China and with United States intervention in Nicaragua the "democratic ideals" of George Washington have a fair chance of becoming as popular as small pox among the industrially undeveloped sections of the world. A little over eight years after the "war to end war" was rallied off there are forests of bayonets flashing over the globe. Even the almost incurable pacifists find their optimism failing them.

WHILE a war cloud hangs over the people of the United States, while any day may bring a mobilization of the manpower of the country for campaigns against weaker peoples, the reactionary leaders of the trade unions and the socialists are making war on the progressive trade unionists. When the next war breaks out the Greens, Woll, Stigmans and Lewis will no doubt urge government pay-roll or on the dollar-a-year committees as the Gompers, White, Russells and Wallings were in the last world war.

THE Prince of Wales has again toppled off his steed and all is well with the world. Should the British monarchy see the other common fate of monarchies within the lifetime of the writer, the columnists of the world will not be honorable receptions and shake their salaries with him and also buy him a tripping steed. But a prince without a prospect of sitting on a throne could fall and break his neck without exciting the interest of a city editor.

'Radical' Charge Gets Before Ford Jury

Judge Rules Out Most of Sapiro's Best Evidence

DETROIT, March 23.—With Aaron Sapiro himself pleading his own case during the slight illness of his chief attorney, Wm. Gallagher, the plaintiff in the million dollar suit against Henry Ford got one of the alleged libelous magazine articles into the record.

Ford's battery of attorneys objected, but in vain. The article said "radicals, Communists and I. W. W.'s" assisted Sapiro in his formation of co-operatives in the northwest. This is one of the things over which the wheat king feels most grieved—and which is also denied by the accused "radicals, Communists and I. W. W.'s."

Little Evidence Gets In.

Aside from this, it was Ford's day. The rulings of Judge Raymond were generally favorable to the great open shop auto king, and his equally open shop counsel, Jim Reed of Missouri.

The court refused to admit as evidence a letter from a farmers' organization, expressly warning Henry Ford that some of his papers' statements about Sapiro were false.

Cherry Notified Ford.

The warning was written America's first billionaire by A. C. Cherry, general counsel of the Northwest Hay Association. The letter was discussed during debate over its admission as evidence, along with another warning letter sent the Dearborn Independent by Cherry.

This encouragement came after Sapiro had participated for the first time

Jim Reed, Attorney for Henry Ford, Is Noisy Advocate for Scabbing

KANSAS CITY (FP). — Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri, Ford attorney, an announced candidate for the democratic nomination for president of the United States, is an uncompromising advocate of scabbing and of the open shop. He is on record with the following statement:

"I deny the doctrine that any set of men, whether they number 2 or 2,000,000 men, have the right to say to any other set of men that they cannot work at any time or at any place where they can find employment and at any wage satisfactory to them."

His statrment has been prominently displayed by the Natl Assn. of Manufacturers in its anti-union propaganda.

Negro Must Join World Labor Struggle, Says Lovett Fort Whiteman

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 23.—The solution of the Negro problem is the participation of the Negro worker in the struggles of the working class, according to Lovett Fort Whiteman, national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress, who has been touring New England.

Must Support Chinese.

"The American Negro must realize his role in the world wide struggle of labor and must give his full support to the struggle of the Chinese masses against world imperialism," Whiteman said in his address before the Harvard Liberal Club. More than fifty Harvard students turned out to hear his address.

COURT MAKES BOSTON MILKMEN PAY $60,000 FOR FIGHTING THE OPEN SHOP

BOSTON, March 23.—Because it tried to enforce the closed shop in three labor-smashing milk companies, Local 280, Milk Drivers and Creamery Workers Union must pay $61,971. This amount in damages was awarded to Alden Brothers, Childs Brothers Company and W. E. Nobis and Sons Company yesterday by Judge Morton of the superior court.

The $62,000 will "reimburse" the company for smashing the strike and for the "business that it lost" when workers "followed teams and induced customers by threats and solicitation not to trade with the petitioners." The only claim of the companies that were denied was the expense involved in hiring thugs and special policemen.

This decision is reminiscent of the Danbury hatters' case several years ago, when several members of the union were made penniless by a decision of the supreme court which compelled them to pay D. E. Loewe and Company for losses suffered through a boycott.

These decisions make it dangerous for unions to employ the boycott or the customary tactics of unions in strike.

DAILY WORKER WILL HAVE SPECIAL ARTICLES FROM MOSCOW ON HOMELESS CHILDREN PROBLEM

At the bright of a new campaign of lies about conditions within the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, The DAILY WORKER considers itself fortunate in being able to nail down at least one of the favorite legends started by "Russian experts" who have not qualified for the job, outside of proving that they possess imaginations of a prolific sort.

Nothing is so useful to the reactionary propagandist in America as the fiction that the U. S. S. R., alone of modern countries, "has hordes of homeless children, the result of blasted industry and ruined homes."

This canard is answered in a series of articles by The DAILY WORKER special correspondent in Moscow, WM. F. KRUSE. The articles will begin in an early issue, and will tell just what the problem of homeless children is, in the Soviet Union and outside of it, its actual extent, and what is being done to liquidate it. Watch for the first article!

Union Committee Meets to Plan Big Battle

Events Prove Correctness of Militants' Warnings

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Government officials were advised today that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, has called the Miners' Policy Committee to meet in Indianapolis on March 28, four days before the expiration of the present wage contract in the bituminous fields.

It will be an extraordinary session to map out the union's campaign of attack during the suspension of mining operations in the central competitive field of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

The call indicates that Lewis has practically given up hope for another joint wage conference with operators to negotiate a working agreement.

Admit Seriousness.

Lewis today refused to answer questions concerning the prospects for conferences with the operators and concerning his call for a meeting of the Miners' policy Committee here on March 28.

Unofficially at the union headquarters it was admitted that the union faced the toughest fight of its history in the impending shutdown of April 1.

Long Strike.

One mine official pointed out that there would be approximately ten million tons more of coal on the surface when the mines shut down than on any provious similar occasion in the history of the union. This huge supply of coal would prevent the punch of the strike from being felt for 90 days or longer, it was pointed out.

Illinois Foresees Suspension.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (FP)—The Illinois Miner, official organ of the Illinois Mine Workers' Dist. 12 of the U. M. W. A., declares:

"Rumors that a new wage conference of the central competitive field will be called in the near future persist. It will be almost impossible however to prevent a suspension of work now, as less than two weeks remain before the contract expires."

The Ohio operators, according to the Miner, have agreed to shut down their mines April 1.

Lewis Changes View.

Lewis has previously stated that his policy is based on a theory that there will be no strike this year, and

SECOND MOONEY CASE LOOMS IN SAN FRANCISCO

Moulder War Killing Framed on Organizer

By HOWARD HARLAN

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23. — The San Francisco Labor Council last night adopted a resolution approving an assessment of fifty cents on each member of a union affiliated with the council, for the purpose of defending Robert Burton, who is charged with murder in the moulders' strike.

Burton, it is claimed by the Industrial Association, was responsible for the death of John Goynton, an open shop moulder, killed some weeks ago.

During the past few days charges have also been made concerning Burton's record while an official of the district attorney's office. It is claimed that when Burton resignad his position a shortage of more than $3,000 was discovered by the auditors.

Council Defends.

The Labor Counril has gone on record declaring that these charges against Burton were engineered by the Industrial Association for the purpose of prejudicing his muder case when it comes to trial.

When Burton resigned his civic position, he became an organizer for the moulders' union and so incurred the wrath of the industrial bosses and who are now trying to cinch his conviction on the murder charge. The Labor Council is determined to stand by Burton and is now preparing a large defense fund for this purpose.

Railroad Enginemen Protest Rank Fraud By Arbitrator Board

BOSTON (FP)—Boston & Maine Railroad firemen and engineers are accepting the arbitration board ruling against them under protest. The workers submitted their grievance over the extension of passenger runs to a board of arbitration as provided by the federal rail act when direct negotiation and mediation fail to bring settlement.

The arbitrators, exrept S. H. Huff, assistant grand chief of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, decided with the company that the Boston to Troy, N. Y. run of 192 miles was not excessive for a single crew. The run had previously been split between two crews.

Judge Frees 11 Furriers Beat By Police

No Cause for Their Arrest Says Magistrate Brodsky

Declaring that there was "absolutely no evidence warranting their being arrested," Judge Brodsky, in Jefferson Market Court yesterday released the 11 fur workers who were jailed after they had been beaten with clubs and dragged through the streets of the fur market by members of the Industrial Squad of the police department who staged a brutal program on Tuesday.

Without directly reprimanding the members of the police department, who are co-operating with the right wing of the International in their efforts to terrorize the workers, Brodsky stated that he was amazed at the arrest of these men and women. "Workers have a right to congregate in the fur market," he said, "because that is where they seek their employment."

Those released by Judge Brodsky were Abe Berlinrr, Clara McIuser, Sam Gold, Willie Shifrin, Leon Litman, Herman Taffi, Fanny Warhofsky, Anna Baras, Karla Gajdushek, Natty Mrndrl and Ray Epstein.

Heat Up Every body.

Their arrests followed a brutal and unprovoked attark upon hundreds of fur workers by the industrial squad when they left their shops for lunch at noon Tuesday; workers in restaurants eating their lunrh were taken out by thr official thugs and beatrn, and told to "get out of this arrtion and never come back."

A general reign of terror was instituted by the squad, who went thru the fur market with men from the International Fur Workers' Union office and as Joint Board sympathizers were pointed out to them, they felled them with their blackjacks.

Green Started It.

The attark on the fur workers rame on the heels of the challenge against the left wing delivered by President William Green of the Amerirran Federation of Labor on Monday night, at the meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council, and the boast of Special Organizer Edward F. McGrady that he had been promised the "full co-operation of the police department" in his work of smashing the Furriers' Union.

Workers and Soldiers Keep Peace in Shanghai

White Guard Russians Executed by Nationalist Troops for Murder of Chinese Train Crew

The latest outstanding reports from the civil war in China to reach us before going to press are as follows:

1. The number of workers now on strike in Shanghai is estimated at 200,000.

2. The Nationalist government troops in co-operation with the General Labor Union of Shanghai has succeeded in restoring order. The provocative activities of the imperialist troops have failed to incite the masses to disorganized action.

3. Forty-two White Guard Russians, former members of the defeated Shantung army, were executed by the Nationalist government for having blown up a train and killing the Chinese crew after the train had been surrendered by the Shantungites.

4. The imperialist propagandists under the leadership of Reuters, the British agency, are circulating reports of a split in the Kuomintang forces in Shanghai. Those rumors are laughed to scorn by the Nationalist chiefs.

5. Brigadier General Smedley in command of the United States marines is expected to arrive in Shanghai on March 25 and the American imperialist flunkeys look forward to "plenty of action" when Smedley reaches his destination. Smedley commanded the marines that originally established Diaz in power in Nicaragua.

6. The inevitable American "hero" was manufactured during the last two world-shaking days in Shanghai. He is a bartender. He "saved" a convent full of nuns.

7. General Pai Chung-Hsi, commander of the Nationalist forces in Shanghai, issued a statement to the effect that the revolution which is sweeping China is not directed against foreigners but against imperialism. Foreigners would not be insulted, he declared, or their property destroyed.

8. Secretary of State Kellogg declared that it would not be necessary for foreigners to evacuate Shanghai as danger to foreign lives and property has passed.

Shanghai Changing Officials.

SHANGHAI, March 23.—Order is being rapidly restored as Nationalist troops continue to pour into the city and the old administration is being substituted by trained officials of the Kuomintang Party.

The general strike under the leadership of the General Labor Union is still in force. Pickets under trade union discipline and wearing red armlets can be seen in every part of the city. They have powers of arrest and are not slow to exercise them against looters, and others bent on disturbing the peace establishrd by the Nationalist government.

Almost endless procrssions march thru the city, with banners denouncing foreign imperialism and asking the foreign soldiers not to help the capitalists of their respective countries to crush the Chinese liberation movement.

Foreigners Are Safe.

General Pai Tsung-Hsi, Nationalist commander in Shinghai issurd a manifrsto denouncing foreign imperialism but insisting that there existed no intention on the part of the revolutionists to injure foreigners or their property.

Amrrican marines are holding positions on the northern boundary of the international settlement. Thier American soldirrs were arrestrd and disarmed by the Nationalists while passing thru the Chinese city on their way to their strikebreaking duties on the Dollar Line docks. They were afterwards released.

White Guard Russians who have been the bitterest enemies of the Nationalist revolution are not being leniently treated by the Chinrse when they fall into the hands of the victorious troops. Forty-two rzarists were found guilty of dynamiting a train after its shantung crew had surrendered it to the Nationalists.

BRITAIN RULING INDIA WITH AID OF NATIVE RICH

Peasant, Labor Movements Hitherto Isolated

BOMBAY, (By Mail) After the war the British Government in India experienced great difficulties in connection with an intensified worker-peasant and nationalist movement. Difficulties arose of a national-political character rising of north-west border tribes and religion-political character (sikh rising). But the British government managed to deal with all three difficulties.

Comparisons with China and Indonesia involuntarily suggest themselves, why was England able to deal with the nationalist revolutionary movement in India, and unable to

PITTSBURGH AND CHICAGO FALL IN LINE TO DO THEIR SHARE IN RUTHENBERG RECRUITING DRIVE

The Pittsburgh and Chicago districts are falling in line to do their share in building the Party thru the Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive. In the official declaration of the Pittsburgh district Committee (Communist) Party regarding the Ruthenberg enrollment, we find this significant remark, showing the basis of the intense interest in the drive:

"The courage and devotion of Comrade Ruthenberg must serve as an example to every one of us, especially in this district, where we live and work under a czarist rule of the steel and coal barons. We must redouble our efforts in order to continue the work for which Comrade Ruthenberg spent years and years in jail, and for which he gave his life. Redouble the efforts to get our members to join the unions and thus increase our influence in the labor movement of this country."

It is especially in the trade unions of this district, in which more than in any other section of the country are to be found the basic industries, that the greatest appeal of the Communists in the Ruthenberg Enrollment is being made.

Before his death, Comrade Ruthenberg was the Communist candidate for mayor in the present Chicago municipal elections. The death of Comrade Ruthenberg is therefore an especially severe blow to the Workers (Communist) Party in that district, but the Party members of Chicago are on the job to try to make up for the great loss.

The Party organization is preparing to utilize the present elections, tho it is now too late to have another Communist candidate for the objectives for which Comrade Ruthenberg would have fought if he had lived to participate in the campaign.

All plans have been worked out for a vigorous Ruthenberg Recruiting Drive in Chicago District.

INDICTED UNION BANK OFFICIALS ATTACK "REDS"

Accused of Looting the Venture; Try Diversion

PITTSBURG, Pa., Mar. 23.—"Put the bank wreckers in jail," was the cry of an angry crowd of delegates to the Central Labor Council here at their last meeting. The bank officials answered by saying nay attempt to put them in jail was Bolshevism.

A report had just been made to the council that the cases against the officers of the Brotherhood bank, wrecked by a swindle, might be nolle prossed by District Attorney Gardner, and no punishment given the officials.

Depositors To Lose

They were also told that all depositors in the union bank might in the course of several months get back as much as three quarters of their money, and that the stockholders, union men and unions, would probably get nothing at all.

The conservative wing of the Labor Council seemed satisfied with this, and disposed to protect its friends, the bank officials. The hot headed radicals, however, favored the hiring of a lawyer to push the cases against all those accused of complicity in the swindle by which the bank lost $32,000 and had to close its doors. A compromise was effected by which the executive board of the council was to see Gardner and get him to agree to prosecute.

Knapp Confesses

The men indicted on conspiracy charges in connection with the crash of the Brotherhood Savings and Trust Company, which followed the $302,000 bond swindle with Charles E. Knapp as the central figure, are Edmund A. McGrady, president of the defunct bank; Frank E. Rodman, alleged broker in the bond deal; J. L. Nelson and William Kelly, officers of the bank, and Knapp. District Attorney Gardner has twice, in the past few days, refused to say whether these cases are to be nolle prossed.

Knapp pleaded no defense to a charge of embezzlement in the bond swindle case and was sentenced to prison, but still faces the other charges. Edward A. Goodfellow, at whose home part of the stolen bonds were recovered, pleaded no defense to a charge of receiving stolen goods.

Great Reactionaries

All of the indicted officials are noted "red hunters." They have come out in full-page time during which they are accused of making use with the bank funds, led a campaign against progressive and militant members.

Nor have they ceased this campaign. On receipt of the indictment in the council's last meeting, McGrady issued a statement in which he was being persecuted by "Reds," saying, "The very labor men who are howling that no bank wreckers be jailed, are the very ones who helped to rob the bank before the smash took place," which explanation may have been based on the fact that progressive elements are now convinced of the reason of such "Labor" banking as the Brotherhood venture signifies.

Aided By Headquarters Staff

David J. Davis, secretary of the Amalgamated Sheet, Tin and Metal Workers, hurried to the defense of the indicted bank officials with the remark that he always had trouble controlling the members who are too agitated over having their names in the swindle sheet. Knapp and his confederates, and Kelley, also under indictment, added his words:

"The agents were stirred up by friends of Knapp at the meeting, who must have something to throw stones at."

KANSAS TOWN QUIETS FOLLOWING MOB SCENES

Coffeyville, Kas., has quieted down following mob scenes when attempts were made to get at a negro held in jail and thought to have been an attacker of two girls. Two other negroes had been released previously. Other suspects were arrested later elsewhere. I. L. D. ASKS HELP IN FIGHT FOR WORKERS; $500 FOR CLOAKMAKERS

The International Labor Defense once more proved its usefulness in the great work of helping class war prisoners.

Latest information from the New York office shows that a donation of $500 has been made to the Cloakmakers' Defense. By this act, the I. L. D. shows itself to be a real "Shield of the Working Class."

The real internationalism of the organization is brought to the front by the fact, that along with the $500 given to the cloakmakers, $218 have been sent to help the oppressed workers of Lithuania, who are courageously fighting the white terror.

Money from the bazaar is coming in slowly. In the meantime, lawyers' bills are being paid. The Sormenti case, for which Clarence Darrow has been engaged, will cost thousands and thousands of dollars. Fines outstanding on many arrested workers have also been paid.

Organizations and individuals with money outstanding on bazaar are urged to settle up immediately.

The I. L. D. appeals to all workers for support, so that it will be able to render greater assistance in the near future than it has done in the past.

ENGLAND MAKING ITALY WAIT TILL ARMY IS REBUILT

British to Mechanize Even Cavalry

LONDON, March 23.—Despatches exchanges between Great Britain, France and Germany have made it practically certain that Britain will not take active measures against Italy in her own initiative, it was stated today.

Great Britain favors the opinion that military experts now in Italian charges that Jugo-Slavia has made warlike preparations on the Italian and Albanian borders, and since the Jugo-Slavian charges that Italy is made preparations on the other side of her sphere of influence in Albania.

Mechanizing Artillery

While Great Britain makes preparations for naval disarmament, the report of the secretary of war in presenting estimates for the coming year shows that great strides are being made to improve the efficiency of the land forces.

Among the innovations noted in the reports of the secretary of war are these:

Mechanical Cavalry.

All regular mechanized artillery is to be mechanized;

Six regiments of cavalry are being provided with cross-country mechanical vehicles for normal first line transport;

A reliable cross-country armored car is being experimented with;

The number of machine guns allowed in war to cavalry regiments and infantry battalions is increased from eight to twelve;

Experiments are being made with a self-loading rifle and light automatic rifles are being tried to replace the heavier guns;

Improved gas masks are being issued to all troops.

Civil Liberties Asks Share in Debate With Legion Over Criticism

The American Civil Liberties Union with headquarters in New York City, offered today to send one of its lawyers to West Chester, Pa., to aid the Liberal Club of the West Chester State Normal School in debating the local post of the American Legion on whether students may criticize the President of the United States and his foreign policies. Forrest Bailey, a director of the Union, intimated in a letter that he may ask Arthur Garfield Hays of New York to be a team-mate to Roy H. Abrams, minister of the Olivet Baptist Church and member of the Normal School Liberal Club, providing the legion's names will accept the challenge.

The challenge resulted from an attack by the Legion on the Liberal Club for placing President Coolidge's Nicaraguan policy under fire.

UNION COMMITTEE, MEETING TO PLAN GIGANTIC BATTLE

Events Prove Warning Of Militants Correct

he has made temporary agreements in all possible outlying districts for coal to be mined there "until an agreement is reached in the central competitive district"; the agreement carries no reference to any strike coming before such an agreement is reached.

The United Mine Workers Journal, official organ of the International, and the Illinois Miner, official organ of the largest district in the union, all three last summer reaped invective and ridicule on progressives who warned that the union would fight for its life on April 1 and succeeding months. The Illinois Miner ran a pseudo-scientific series of articles, quoting statistics to show the improbability of a strike or lockout.

Ohio Lock Out.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 23.—Ohio bituminous operators said today they will close down their union mines April 1st to await the outcome of the fight in Pennsylvania between non-union coal operators and the United Mine Workers.

Problems of Ohio and Pennsylvania are almost identical so far as competition is concerned, but there is no general disposition among Ohio operators to run non-union if they can obtain a wage reduction from the union.

Willing To Fight.

Ohio, therefore, is willing to suspend for many months to see if the union can be forced, or persuaded to grant a competitive wage scale based upon the non-union pay. Ohio is a cradle for unionism and it would require almost superhuman efforts to smash the mine workers' union there.

If the Pittsburg Coal Co. succeeds in driving the union from Western Pennsylvania, Ohio operators believe they will be in a position to dictate terms of a new wage agreement. On the other hand, if the union wins, Ohio operators will be no worse off than at present because the union is demanding only a renewal of the existing wage contract.

A danger, however, to Ohio is that it may lose permanently to West Virginia and Kentucky its rich market. The suspension this year is a long one. Ohio production has fallen off between 25 and 50 percent since 1925.

"We must close down our mines or get a wage readjustment," said W. H. Haskins, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio operators' association. Since Haskins said production has increased as follows:

Kentucky, 1929 (est.); Indiana, 365 percent; Illinois, 272 percent; West Virginia, 748 percent; Kentucky, 1930 (est.).

Non-union Field Grows.

In this period, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois have been solidly union while in large years, West Virginia and Kentucky have been open shop; in other words, development in union fields has lagged far.

Behind growth in non-union fields, Haskins said two-thirds of the coal being mined in the United States now is non-union.

"Radical" Charge Gets Before Ford Jury

in presenting his own case to the jury.

There was no evidence that the letter to Ford was ever read by the auto king, but the warning to the editor of the Dearborn Independent was read, and Ford made the subject of an investigation by the publication.

A magazine article purporting to show that Henry Ford had admitted his crusade against Aaron Sapiro was "imported," was barred from the million-dollar libel suit this afternoon.

Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond ruled that William J. Cameron, Ford editor and his "copy reader" could not be questioned about the magazine article, which was published in "Farm and Fireside." Sapiro's counsel said the article had been approved by Cameron at Ford's request and included an admission by the auto king that the attacks on the so-called wheat ring were improper.

Judge Appeals to Newspapers.

William H. Gallagher, chief of the plaintiff's counsel, sought to get the magazine article before the jury. He failed.

The judge appealed to all newspapermen not to publish any of the matter ruled out of evidence. None of them agreed to make any promises.

The judge also told the jury not to listen to the questions of counsel for what should be admitted to evidence.

Want To Poison Booze.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 23.—A wet and dry fight was on tap in the lower house of the legislature today.

Assemblyman Jenks, republican, and leaders of the dry forces, announced he would press for passage his poison liquor bill. Foes of the measure were not sure they could muster sufficient votes to defeat it.

Brophy and Hapgood, Progressive Miners, To Speak at Dinner

John Brophy, former president of Dist. 2 of the United Mine Workers of America, and Powers Hapgood, the delegate to the recent convention at Indianapolis who was twice beaten up because of his opposition to the policies of the official machine, headed by President John L. Lewis, will be the speakers at a dinner arranged by the "Democracy in Trade Unions" committee, at the Cafe Boulevard, 41st St. and Broadway, tomorrow evening.

These two members of the United Mine Workers, who have been among those most active in trying to overthrow the powerful bureaucratic machine which rules the union, will tell some of their personal experiences, the conditions existing in the union, and general conditions in the coal industry.

This is the second dinner arranged by the "Democracy in Trade Unions" committee, the first being a meeting at which Louis Hyman, and other representatives who are left wing members of the cloak and dressmakers union spoke.

The committee, which is made up of writers, artists and others interested in the problems of progressive trade unionism, includes Art Young, Boardman Robinson, Paxton Hibben, Col. C. E. S. Wood, Mike Gold, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Robert W. Dunn, Ann Washington Craton, Floyd Dell, and many others.

without equity in either wife or child in consideration of a sum said to approximate $300,000, but perhaps his lawyer is having trouble with his commission.

THE Washington Post, owned by McLean, the multimillionaire publisher and bosom friend of the late Warren G. Harding and the "Ohio gang" that made the "little green house on K. street famous in modern history, is insistently demanding that the United States step in and crush the Liberal movement of Nicaragua presided over by President Sacasa. McLean demands that the United States government dispatch enough troops to Nicaragua to run the Liberals into the ocean.

DURING the oil scandal quiz held in Washington, McLean's name often cropped up in cipher telegrams that were exchanged between A. B. Fall and the department of finance. This interlocking outfit worked hand in hand with the oil companies and it is not surprising to see McLean again demanding that stern measures be taken against the Latin-American peoples and putting out anti-Mexican propaganda. McLean absolves the Wall Street bankers from all blame for the Nicaraguan civil war but attributes it to a "war of aggression by Mexico against American interests in Nicaragua." It is believed that the Post propaganda is not frowned on by the state department.

INFORMATION supplied by state department officials to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee show that American marines and bluejackets now in Nicaragua or on American warships in Nicaraguan waters outnumber the forces of Sacasa and Diaz about two to one. Stokeley W. Morgan, chief of the Latin-American division under Kellogg testified before the senate committee that no American had been killed during the present civil war in Mexico and that no American property had been destroyed.

THE interference of the United States in Nicaragua is as brazen a piece of imperialistic bulldozing as history records. The futile effort of Kellogg to conjure up a fairy tale weaved out of an alleged conspiracy on the part of the Calles administration to "Bolshevize" Latin-America in order to justify his threats of war against Mexico fell flat originally, but even some of the capitalist papers are now publishing evidence of American corruption in Nicaragua since 1909, when Diaz, the $1,000 a year employe of an American corporation came into power after "loaning" $600,000 to the reactionaries who assured Washington they "would be friendly to American interests." The "white man's burden" alibi that went in England was never popular here. Where is our boasted originality?

Bill Against Charity Frauds Likely to Pass

ALBANY, March 23.—There is every indication that the bill now before the legislature aimed to protect the public against fraudulent charities will pass. The bill, drafted by Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, prominent New York social worker calls for periodic reports to the State Board of Charities in which are listed the annual collections and disbursements of those engaged in any form of public charity work.

Commenting on the bill Mrs. Moskowitz said: "It is certain that any organization opposing this bill is laying itself open to serious criticism, if not to suspicion. No charitable institution using the money that it solicits for legitimate purposes can object to the public's rerusing its finances."

GERMAN WORKERS DEMONSTRATE FOR COMMUNIST PARTY

Thirty Thousand March In Heavy Hail Storm

ESSEN, Germany. (By Mail), March 6.—A great mass demonstration took place today in Essen in honor of the XI Party Congress of the German Communist Party. 30,000 Ruhr working men and women marched for hours through the streets in stormes of rain and hail to the meeting place which was crowded with demonstrators. In the working class quarters every house, almost every window was decked with red bunting.

In the hall demonstrators, representatives of the foreign Parties, social democratic workers, communist peasant delegates and finally comrade Thaelmann spoke. The demonstration then marched in close ranks to the Saalhau where after a speech by comrade Eberlein, it dissolved.

For Thorn Discussion.

ESSEN, March 7th.—The 12th and final session of the Congress was opened on Monday morning the 7th March. At the commencement of the session the chairman allowed the Congress that having regard to the lack of time, the trade union discussion could not be carried out with the thoroughness originally intended. It was nevertheless the intention of the Central Committee to open up a thorough discussion on this point in the near future.

After the closing speech of comrade Heckert the political resolution was adopted with all votes against 8. That section of the resolution prohibiting the formation of groups outside the Party was accepted unanimously. The following text then adopted: The Congress declares its unconditional endorsement of the organisational resolution unanimously, two votes being withheld; the resolution upon the work of the Party in the factory organisations, unanimously; the resolution on the struggle against reaction in the schools, and finally the resolution referring to the Young Communist League, unanimously; one paragraph in which the Wedding opposition declared that the decision of the fourth Enlarged Executive against Wedding politics, the organisational resolution unanimously, the organisational resolution unanimously, the resolution upon the work amongst the women unanimously over the Central Committee. A resolution which the entire Party and Young Communist League will be called upon to carry out in the future.

A proposal of comrades Fischer, Gerhart and Schlo by from all three votes, the space of one year and to maintain from them that they had shown by conditions no account to central organisation of the Party. The Congress declared that the Party was entirely with it, was against."

Hope for Koumintang Split.

The flood of propaganda sent out by the imperialist propagandists is on the increase tho there is a tendency on the part of the governments to build on a possible split in the Koumintang Party rather than on a huge scale interventionist policy. The imperialists would not hesitate to make war on the left wing but the latter have the support of the Chinese masses and have too strong a grip on the political and military apparatus of the Kousmintang to make the imperialist bones any more than a dream.

The Heroic Bartender.

A story that is creating a lot of merriment in the international settlement is the yarn of the exploit of a bartender named Raymond O'Brien who is said to have rescued the inmates of a besieged consulate. Saving women from prostitution is considered here a novel role for an American bartender.

With the consul general of Colonial Sweetser Bowen here on March 24th, swaggering American residents all giddy of "action." But China is no Nicaragua and the "peril" which found it over the little Latin States was republic in Pudo will have a touchier nut to crack in the shape of over 100,000,000 Chinese workers and peasants.

LONDON March 23. The Chinese people are to a unanimously forgiving Pan Chung-Hsi for reminder of the Cantonese forces occupying Shanghai, declared in a manifesto to the Chinese people today as calling to a news dispatch from there.

50 COMRADES IN HUNGARY FACING DEATH SENTENCE

According to the Hungarian law this court knows only one sentence: death.

Must Raise Protest.

The international working class has already once stopped the hands of the hangman by powerful mobilization of its ranks. Today the international situation is less favorable for an action of relief for persecuted workers than it was at the time of the Rakosi trial.

This means that we must carry thru our campaign with increased power, that we must raise our voices more loudly than formerly so that the power of the proletariat is not only felt by the hangmen of the Danube but also by their masters on the Thames.

Assassins at Work.

Concerning the murder of Comrade Loszy by the police, while being transported by train, the following information has been given. Comrade Loszy sat in a department in a third class between two gendarmes with fixed bayonets. He was already in a bad state. His left eye was swollen. The gendarmes insulted him during the whole journey in the lowest manner. It was at the station Balaton where Loszy's condition became to the worst. The gendarme shouted "Keep your mouth, dog". The gendarme then took him from his seat and dragged him out side. It was early in the morning and nobody could see what happened on the platform. Excited voices were heard. Then sound of fall and a shot was heard and the falling of a body. Somebody exclaimed. The murder is and the train began to move.

Britain Ruling India With Aid of Native Rich

cops with the nationalist ... ers movement in India.

The ... of the ... have ...

The ... ruling ... Bourgeoisie ... Rights for India. ... The British government is a series of ... unscrupulous ... concessions ... the influence of the Swarajist Party, which ... represented ... the parasitic ... Bombay Government ... the Government ... a better ... fenance to their ... exactions, among whom ... are many big land-holders, exploiting the peasantry. The ... bankers of recent ... have helped on the ... direction ... peasant risings in Punjab, in the Malabar ... and other places ... outbreaks.

Labor Organizations.

The first years of ... growth of the labour organisations ... place ... a period of ... (1917-1923), after which a fresh and ... regular increase in the labour ... movement was observable.

India knows nothing of the profound ... depression experienced by other countries. Industrial dividends for 1926 were higher than those for 1925, and the slight depression in the Bombay and Ahmedabad cotton industry was ... taken advantage of by the employers to make an offensive against the working class. But this only led to the numerical growth of the textile workers' union, and to an increase of strike activity.

At the present time there are about 300,000 organized workers in India, ... belonging to 200 unions, which means that only 10 per cent of the workers are organized.

The first place is occupied by the postal workers. Fifty per cent of them are organized, and next to them come the railway workers.

The industrial unions are considerably weaker, the miners are scarcely ... organized at all, only about 8.2 per cent ... the textile workers ... better ... but even these are ... organized than the others (up to 10 per cent).

The British Labour Party.

The Amsterdamites and representatives of the British Labour Party have recently not without success endeavored to ... upon workers in India. During the last two years (1925-26) India has been visited by a number of representatives of the British Labour Party, officials on the part of ... affiliating themselves with the position of workers in India, but actually in order to endeavour to get the Indian labour movement under their influence.

The influence of the Labour Party is already beginning to be felt. In 1926 the Federation of Railway Workers joined the reformist Transport Workers' International, their example being quickly followed by two seamen's unions.

But this is not all. The Amsterdam leaders are exerting all their energies to get the All India Trade Union Congress on their side. The question of the expediency of the Congress's affiliation to the Amsterdam International was brought forward last not decided at the Sixth Congress (1926).

Britain Ruling India ... Out.

Trade Union Movement Split.

Quite recently ... split occurred in the Indian Trade Union movement. ... the leadership of the trade union movement has been split into two groups, the first ... under two subgroupings, Joshi, General Secretary of the Congress, and his followers, at present in power, and the group around Sirkar, one of the Secretaries of the Congress striving for power.

The second—numerically and significant group—is composed of workers' representatives and a group of radical intellectuals supporting them.

A violent struggle over the time and place of the Congress is taking place on the very eve of the Trade Union Congress. This on the surface might appear to be insignificant, but in reality it is a very vital problem; the time and place of the Congress determines the composition of the Congress. The impoverished unions cannot afford to send their representatives too far. The farther from the trade union centres, the Congress is held, the smaller will be the attendance of representatives of petty unions, the surer Joshi's victory.

National Labour Party.

The Indian working class is beginning to feel more and more strongly the necessity of a political organization of its own. In Seventies, 1925, under the strong influence of the British Labour Party, the National Labour Party of India was organized, showing very moderate tendencies.

In connection a few words regarding Indian organizations in Britain.

Great activities are shown by the following Indian organizations in Britain: 1) Advisory Committee attached to the IUP at the head of which stands Ramsay Mac Donald; 2) The League for the Improvement of the Welfare of Indian Workers" with Saklatvala at its head.

The aim of the League is to spread true information in England on the position of the Indian workers.

The delegates of Trade Unions has entrusted the League with the representation of its interests in England. The League maintains connections with the Minority Movement, but so far has not shown much activity.

Imperialism Had an Open Road Into Shanghai—How About Getting Out?

The People's Armies hold Shanghai, the People's Assembly has been set up and the city, outside of the foreign settlement, is now part of the territory, totaling about three-fifths of China, ruled by the People's Government.

The imperialist powers hold the foreign settlement but what are they going to do with it?

Hold on to it in the face of the demand that it be handed over to the victorious People's Government, declare war and have their precious property destroyed in the ensuing struggle?

Or will the powers try to retain their grip on the foreign settlement with its native population of 700,000 in the face of a boycott?

These are not merely rhetorical questions. They are practical problems of immense importance and they have been placed first on the order of business of the imperialist powers by the Kuomintang victory and by the rapid rise of a militant and powerful movement of the Chinese workers.

In other words will the imperialists walk out peaceably and leave the great industrial center and the biggest port of China in complete control of the People's Government or will they be driven out.

In other words, is it peace—or war?

The correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune cables that "the powers have agreed to hold Shanghai even if they must resort to war."

He probably expresses correctly the general policy of the imperialists but in the China of today the disposition to be made of the international settlement will not be decided by purely military methods.

Quoting the Herald Tribune correspondent:

"Eugene Chen (foreign minister for the Kuomintang government) . . . . said that it was not the purpose of the Canton government to take the Shanghai international settlement by force, but he insisted that the Cantonese will not be satisfied until the territory now occupied by foreigners is restored to China. Chen implied that the only weapons the Cantonese will use will be BOYCOTTS AND STRIKES." (Emphasis ours.)

This method has the double virtue of being deadly in its effectiveness and almost impossible to combat. Even a capitalist press correspondent who knows anything of China is unable to conceal the cold shivers which run down the imperialist spine (particularly the British and Japanese spines whose owners have seen and felt a Chinese popular boycott in action) at the mere thot of the thing. So the Herald-Tribune's man is impelled to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth:

"The importance of Eugene Chen's threat cannot be overestimated, because if the Chinese maintain a boycott along the Yangtze river Shanghai will be economically ruined. WITHOUT FIRING A SHOT THE CANTONESE ARE NOW IN A POSITION TO DRIVE OUT THE FOREIGNERS BY THE SIMPLE PROCESS OF REFUSING TO TRADE WITH THEM." (Emphasis ours.)

The workers and peasants will play a mighty role in enforcing the boycott and organizing strikes if this is the method employed. This again shows the real base of the liberation movement is in the working masses and these struggles (like the general strike in Shanghai) at one and the same time puts the leadership in the hands of the workers and trains them for it.

The middle class right wing of the Kuomingtang may vacillate and try to compromise with imperialism but the trade unions drive ever forward.

The hangers-on of imperialism in China now are mere chips in a sea of surging mass power which will swallow up its enemies as certainly as a stone sinks in quicksand.

Only treachery from within can even halt the sweep of the Chinese revolution toward a workers' and peasants' government.

The New Leader and the Drive Against the Soviet Union.

The New Leader, official organ of the socialist party, says editorially in its last issue:

We have in this verbal and press duel between Russia and Britain the possibilities of war, and it WILL BE INTERESTING TO WATCH IT FOR THE NEXT FEW WEEKS. If any of the Powers contemplate war against Russia we may expect it in the warm months and they are approaching. Such a struggle MAY EASILY INVOLVE MANY OF THE POWERS, and the outcome is one that no human being can predict. (Emphasis ours.)

Please note the phraseology we have emphasized. To the editor of the New Leader the prospect of war upon the workers and peasants of Russia is merely "interesting." It "may easily involve many of the Powers." What of the millions of workers and peasants ruled by "the Powers?"

Another "interesting" question: Who will the New Leader and the socialist party support in the event of such a war—the Soviet Union or "the Powers?"

The New Leader editor gives no answer to this all-important question and thus puts himself far to the right of such liberal journals as The Nation.

Making War On the Left Wing As An Attempt to Conceal Corruption

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

NEW YORK CITY witnessed the spectacle Monday night of the two outstanding officials of the American Federation of Labor, President Green and Vice President Woll, accompanied by a galaxy of minor satellites, panhandling a public meeting in Beethoven Hall for money with which to smash a section of the labor movement—the New York unions of the furriers and clothmakers.

The meeting was called, according to President Joseph P. Ryan of the Central Trades and Labor Council under instructions from President Green. The one and only order of business was denunciation of the Communists and the left wing leaders like Ben Gold, and urgent demands for finance.

Observers report that the audience was principally composed of Forward "socialists"- officials of unions dominated by the Forward's machine. This collection of right wingers was assured time and time again by Edward McGrady, special A. F. of L. organizer, that the police department was lined up with the A. F. of L. committee and against the left wing. These statements effectively dispose of the other statements by the same elements that the Communists and left wing had bribed the police.

IT is quite evident that the right wing offensive is getting no substantial financial support from the labor movement as a whole but that it is financed from such sources as the Forward, the bosses and other enemies of fighting trade unionism. The meeting Friday night shows further that the secret supporters of the drive against the left are dissatisfied with the lack of progress. In the Furriers' Union for instance the right wing has to base among the membership on which to build and must depend solely upon stooligonists and the police department.

We are also of the opinion that the speeches of Green and Woll indicate a difference on policy. Green, the clubbehearer, calls for a campaign and the war is being conducted. In addition to this Woll is using the drive against the left to carry favor with the employers' associations in the C. I. E. and to appear as the most militant champion of low wages and trade union reaction.

Woll is carrying out the policy of the Roman curia. It declared in the Manuila case that it was "a matter of internal discipline." He hopes to rally to his support a solid front of reaction that will put him in the saddle and give him a free hand.

If Green were not a weakling and compromised by a number of shady associations he could easily rally every foreign element in the labor movement to his support on a program of freedom for political expression and trade unionism free from reformism and capitalistic party control.

Failing this, with the continued rise of energetic reaction in official labor circles, Green is doomed to defeat.

IT would be the greatest mistake to regard the struggle in the New York needle trades as something separate and apart from the struggle which is going on in the labor movement. The intensity of the struggle here is due to the higher political level of the needle workers' union which makes a clash between socialists supporting the A. F. of L. officialdom and Communists possible. In other sections of the labor movement the issues appear more clearly as a struggle of the rank and file with left wing leadership against official corruption, worker exploitation, company unions and for a militant practical program as in the United Mine Workers of America.

The struggle in New York and elsewhere is not only an effort on the part of the right wing to subjugate the rank and file, to exterminate all left wing leadership and militancy but it is becoming clearer that it is also in the nature of a smoke-screen.

Reaction in the trade unions has become so brazen, the connection between officialdom, the capitalists and capitalist government is becoming so apparent, that the drive against the left wing has been planned and undoubtedly serves to distract attention from officialdom's corruption and its amours with the enemies of the labor movement.

THE joint drive of the social-democratic officialdom and capitalists of Germany upon the militant section of the working class was followed by the notorious Barmat scandal and there are important indications that there are developing in the American labor movement the conditions for a similar scandal of major proportions.

Frank Farrington, president of District 12 (Illinois) United Mine Workers of America, was exposed last fall as a $25,000 per year agent of the Peabody Coal Company in the miners' union after he had been unsuccessfully persecuting militant members of the union and posing as a defender of "Americanism" against the "reds" for a number of years.

The DAILY WORKER published on Monday, March 21, an exposure of Frank Ledvinka, former president of the Bellaire subdistrict of the UMWA found to be the largest subdistrict of the union in connection with his receipt of large sums of money from lawyers ostensibly defending members of the union arrested in connection with the 1922 strike. Ledvinka, the charges state, received a percentage of the attorney's fees.

This thrifty official was an active supporter of John L. Lewis (as was Farrington) and led the fight on the progressive amendments in northeastern Ohio.

IN the recent convictions of Jim Walker and Alvin Dunder, president and secretary respectively of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, supported Frank L. Smith, the Insull traction lawyer candidate for the United States senate. Insull admitted in the court in originating commission that he was financing the Smith campaign to the extent of $125,000 and that the Walker scandal was of such proportions that on the subsequent convention the Federation of Labor did not dare to consider endorsing Smith although Walker and Dunder continued to support him.

Walker and Dunder are always favorable to and against "reds".

Thus permitted in the face of the facts to court the undiluted altruism of these Illinois labor leaders and support a politician that help too thereof corruption.

It is common knowledge that the Lewis machine gets its money corrupted practically all of the union officialdom in Pennsylvania with the exception of James Maurer, president of the State Federation of Labor and with this to support the few that did not sell out to Vare were on the payroll either of Pinchot or Pepper.

The handling of the Pittsburgh Brotherhood Bank (a union labor institution) by an inside ring of officials is another recent instance of corruption.

Following the lead given by Green, Woll and others the local officials of the Central Labor Council raised the cry of "red" when rank and file delegates demanded a thoro investigation and punishment of the guilty parties. $720,000 was the modest sum involved in this strictly union affair.

THE New York City labor movement furnishes glaring recent instances of corruption.

The case of Zausner of the Painters' Union—a steady if not a brilliant campaigner against the "reds"—who managed to steal from the union, by a combination of bad bookkeeping and forgery, approximately $73,000.

The second case is that of Local Union Number 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, one of the largest locals of the union, whose officials have been shown to have been on the payroll of the contractors and to have systematically blackmailed and robbed members and prospective members of the union for years.

NOT of major importance when taken one by one but of a sinister consistency by reason of their cumulative effect when taken together these recent instances of corruption spring from a common and poisoned source. The individuals involved, with some minor exceptions, are fervid exponents of 100 per cent American trade unionism and vie with one another in denouncing, persecuting and expelling Communist and left wing workers.

THERE is the further fact that Vice President Matthew Woll of the American Federation of Labor is now acting president of the Civic Federation of Labor and that he is also active in the caucus which the Knights of Columbus maintains inside of the trade unions. His fanatical energy in organizing gangsters, police and the right wing officials against the Jewish workers in the needle trades lends color to the belief that here is a joint agent of the employing class and feudal reaction represented by the Roman catholic hierarchy.

Woll personally symbolizes the rampant corruption and reaction in the upper levels of the American labor movement.

IN a period like this when the right wing officials are maintaining the closest relations with the various agencies of the government and the press thus, when American imperialism is willing to pay a high price for political support of or even neutrality towards its financial and military adventures in Latin America and the Far East, when it is only too willing to encourage and finance persecution and expulsion campaigns against that section of the labor movement from which the opposition to its plans comes, it is inevitable that there should be slum trade leaders from the offices of trade unions to the counting houses and post offices of the American capitalist class.

Corruption of the utter rightwingness of capitalism does not account for such open betrayals of the working class as the present enslavement of Chinese Militant Training Leaders. Faith in a holy cause does not explain the ardor with which Woll and others enlist detectives and gangsters to break up labor meetings.

There is something in all this that smacks of the industrious manner in which the industrial squad of the New York police department goes forth to beat up and jail workers after they have collected their daily "tax" from bosses against whom there is a strike on.

WE are convinced that there is a gigantic labor scandal looming up. The materials are there for it. Just who it will break deposed in a large measure upon the pressure which the rank and file under left wing leadership brings upon trade union officialdom.

As this pressure increases and it will increase as the trade union membership is alienated more and more by the stooligeon tactics of the official(dom) there will be rifts and rents in what appears now to be a solid bloc of inaction.

Some one of these days a disgruntled pal, an insufficiently bribed underling, a revengeful public official or some publicity-seeking politician is going to spill the beans.

In the meantime we are doing a little investigating ourselves in the interest of the labor movement and hope to have something of interest to report in the not distant future.

The World Pays Homage to Beethoven

One hundred years ago this Saturday, Ludwig von Beethoven died in Vienna, leaving behind him nine of the most glorious symphonies, innumerable sonatas, concerts and quartets. He lived in a period when democracy was just breaking through the cloud of reaction and much of his music—especially his symphonies—express this spirit of the times. Through the world, his music is being played to commemorate the centennial of his death. Beethoven, like most genius died in poverty.

This week is being devoted to the music of the great master. The Philharmonic orchester is giving an all-Beethoven program this Thursday night and repeated on Friday afternoon. Katherine Haren is giving a program of five Beethoven sonatas Saturday afternoon in Town Hall, including the Mondnight, Appassionata and the Funeral March.

This Friday afternoon at Town Hall, a civic celebration and concert will be given in honor of the composer under the auspices of the Beethoven Week Advisory Body. The Musical Art Quartet and Elsa Alsen, soprano of the Chicago Opera will take part.

"Mother" Bloor Pays Tribute to Ruthenberg

AS one of the oldest soldiers in our army I wish to add my tribute to Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg. Altho he was a young man seemingly in the prime of life, he was no contemporary in the Socialist movement, when I was serving that Party, as its State Organizer in 1911-1912. He was a member of the State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, lively campaigns, a state vote of 90,000 and 15 Socialist mayors were elected. Ruthenberg was on the ticket for Governor and I was running for municipal judge of Columbus. It was during that time, I believe, that Ruthenberg's strong belief in a political party of Labor established. There were many controversies at that time inside the Socialist Party, as to political action vs. pure industrial action or syndicalism.

I was compelled to leave Ohio at that time to go to Germany and did not see Ruthenberg again until the memorable 4th of July, (1917) celebration by the comrades of Cleveland. I was on my way to Kansas City to help Jim Cannon with the "Workers World." Earl Browder and his brother were going to the Federal Penitentiary of Leavenworth that month with "Bob" Sullivan and others. The war mania was still in force against any kind of radical organization. The espionage act; the lever act, raids, etc., still played havoc with our meetings and our press. Just before the 4th of July affair in Cleveland, the 1st of May celebration was brutally broken up by police, the headquarters smashed, and Ruthenberg arrested as he was, with his usual courage, standing by the workers who were being literally crushed by the police. One Local Hungarian comrade was killed outright.

ON the occasion mentioned, July 4th, Ruthenberg asked me to be the speaker for the day. The police and police threatened to break up any thing the comrades would arrange for that day. So they went out in the country way beyond the city limits. As we left the cars all the men were searched and as we entered the picnic grounds seventy newly sworn in county deputies swept into the grounds in fine autos to intimidate us with their big shining badges and red faces. It was a terribly hot day and Ruthenberg in his jolly way turned to me and said, "We will not begin our speaking at 2 o'clock, we will keep them waiting until 4, then they will buy all our ice cream and cold drinks." This the deputies were compelled to do in sheer self defense, suffering from the extreme heat. Then when Ruthenberg got up to open the meeting and introduced me, the government secret service men began to take down every word on paper. The 70 deputies gathered close around us, armed of course. Our husky comrades, hundreds of them, rallied by our side and the deputies and secret service men seeing their numbers and above all marking Ruthenberg's fearless smile and his calm courage, seemed to melt like wax and we all went home unharmed.

Again I witnessed our fallen comrade's courage at Michigan. Just before I left the grounds at one o'clock in the morning I went to him and said: "If you won't leave now for your own sake, won't you please go for the sake of our movement we need you so." He smiled, and said "It is my responsibility, I cannot go."

AS I look back over the years of his great service, and his unfailing courage, I know that the memory that will remain with us always will be that of his unfaltering loyalty to his highest conviction as to what would be best for the movement. Even if we had to differ with his dearest friend4 and comrades, he would stand true to the principles and policies he was ready to go to prison for, or if necessary give his life.

Away out here, away from you all, I cannot realize his death. I feel just as Comrade Lovestone expressed it—"It is one of nature's terrible crimes." All of us, those who started with him in the great war and those who are just getting into step as young soldiers, will have to fight harder because he has gone, but we must keep on fighting until the revolution dawns. Ella Reeve ("Mother") Bloor, Oakland, Calif.

SOUTH SLAV WORKERS PLEDGE SELVES TO WORK ENERGETICALLY TO BUILD THE PARTY

The statement of the South Slav Bureau of the Workers (Communist) Party calls for the building of the party as follows:

"The death of Comrade Ruthenberg is not only a blow at the Workers (Communist) Party of America and the Communist International but also a blow at the whole working class. It is a great loss to the South Slav workingmen and workingwomen in this country and also the workers of other nationalities. Comrade Ruthenberg was an internationalist. To him the workers and peasants of all nationalities were one unity.

"Comrade Ruthenberg was well known and had the confidence of the South Slav class conscious organized workers and with this the unorganized workers. Leading the Socialist Party Comrade Ruthenberg had already won the confidence and respect of the South Slav worker.

"The delegates of the anti-war meeting held demonstration and all kindred workers of the Party, Comrade Ruthenberg had with him the South Slav workers. As an International and revolutionist he always understood it, gave us his advice he lived and struggled with us.

"The entire South Slav faction from the time of the Socialist Party until his death recognizes in him our loyal leader, fighter and teacher.

"The bureau expresses its deepest sorrow over the death of our leader. But the bureau and the entire fraternal South Slav workers will carry on the work of Comrade Ruthenberg.

"Long live the Workers (Communist) Party!

"Long live Communism for which Comrade Ruthenberg struggled, lived and died!"

GENEVA, March 23.—Germany already disarmed insists upon immediate and actual disarmament in Europe, Count Bernstorff declared before the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference today in setting forth the German threats on disarmament.

"Germany awaits impatiently the disappearance of the present inequality of European armaments. That is the league's chief task.

"Germany won't approve fictitious solutions."

HIDDEN CITY FOUND IN WEST

Donald J. Crabtree, of Rapid City, S. D., has discovered the ruins of what is believed to be a walled city of the ancients in the famous bad lands of South Dakota. Already he has unearthed a doorway, an arch, and a wall of splendid masonry extending for more than 230 feet. The discovery may lead to a knowledge of prehistoric people as far advanced as the Mayan civilization of Yucatan who, Mr. Crabtree believes, inhabited the Black Hills of the Dakotas. Mr. Crabtree is seen in the photo with one of the stones taken from the wall. A section of the wall is also shown.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN ILLINOIS EMPLOYMENT DISCOURAGING TO STATE LABOR DEPARTMENT

CHICAGO, Ill.—An increase of 6.10 of 1% in Illinois factory employment from January to February is no foundation for optimism, according to the Illinois department of labor. However, it marks the end of a 4-month decline, which left 5.1% fewer workers on factory payrolls in January than there were in September. The department says:

Increase Unsatisfactory.

"A rise in Illinois factory employment from January to February is a regular seasonal movement according to the 6-year record of the department of labor. The current increase is the least of the 5 increases that have been registered in the last 6 years. With the exception of January of this year the index number of employment is still the lowest it has been since September, 1922."

The employment index shows that factories in the state are employing 3% fewer workers than in February, 1926 and 10.2% less than in February, 1925. This means a reduction of about 70,000 in the number of jobs offered by Illinois factories compared with February, 1926.

The Illinois free employment offices report 204 applications for every 100 jobs open. This compares with 215 for every 100 jobs in January and 170 for each 100 jobs in February, 1926. The department says: "Except for January of this year the ratio of men to jobs has not been so high since February, 1922, and we have again in that fact a warning against over-optimism as to present or prospective employment conditions."

Bad in Chicago.

Unemployment was particularly serious in Chicago and vicinity. The Chicago office reported 264 applicants for each 100 jobs and the Cicero office 213. Other offices reporting more than 200 applicants per 100 jobs were Joliet 213, Peoria 212 and Aurora 204.

Industries contributing to the slight improvement over January include the automobile, iron and steel, building material and clothing industries. Considerable gains in the clothing industry were seasonal. Establishments producing railroad equipment, electrical and other machinery reported fewer employees.

Warren Progressives Elect 6 Delegates to Steel Workers' Confab

(By Worker Correspondent.)

WARREN, Ohio, March 23.—Despite the strongest efforts made by the followers of Mike Tighe to get delegates from the Trumbull Lodge of this city, the candidates of this wing of the union failed miserably. The Progressives elected their six delegates to the Amalgamated Steel Workers' Convention. They are W. Williams, A. Mondo, E. Curtis, E. Evans, T. Marshall and E. Bullock.

The progressives of Warren are carrying on a campaign to organize the unorganized, and with their limited resources are getting the workers into the steelworkers' union. The situation requires action of the union but Mike Tighe seems indifferent as to whether workers join the union or not. If this attitude continues, there is no doubt that the Amalgamated Association will gradually disintegrate. Today it contains only about 11,000 workers out of the more than 600,000 engaged in the industry.

Divorce Rent Unpaid.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 23.—The judgments of $25 in district court against Edith M. Day, musical comedy star now appearing in London, today was ordered vacated by the court because of improper service of papers. The judgment was filed in connection with alleged unpaid rent on a Minneapolis apartment. The suit was for a lease taken out by Miss Day to establish her legal domicile here pending divorce proceedings against her husband, Pat Somerset, well-known British actor.

PHILLY COMMENTS

Apparently the rah-rah boys at the U. of P." feel the need for an occasional bracer to stand the stiff pace of higher education. A saloon de luxe was discovered in close proximity to the University of Pennsylvania.

Another drastic shake-up of the Philadelphia prohibition snoopers is threatened. We take the news with a grain of salt. Time was when we knew of a prohibition enforcement agent who in spite of every shake-up managed to shake down enuf shekels to buy a row of workers' houses every other month or so.

Section Three, Workers (Communist) Party will begin a Ruthenberg recruitment drive March 26th, at 4035 W. Girard Ave. (Progressive Library).

The drive will start with a banquet, graced by an appropriate musical program. Comrade Albert Welsbord will speak on the subject: Why Every Worker Should Join the Workers (Communist) Party.

Need we assure the Philly comrades and sympathizers that this affair will be interesting? Guess not. Then don't forget to bring your friends along.

Minister, Police Chief And Judge Tried for Selling Moonshine

WHITE RIVER JUNTION, Vt., March 23.—Gates Opera House, turned into an improvised courtroom, was jammed to the doors today when Chief of Police Charles W. Smith went on trial accused of peddling liquor.

A bomb was set off at the unusual "show" by State's Attorney Robert R. Twitchell when he moved to amend the complaint against the Chief to include liquor dispensing not only to Charles L. Leburreau, local banker, but to Rev. George H. Locke, Judge A. G. Whitman, Selectman George W. Coyle, of Hartford, and two summer visitors from New Jersey. Names of the latter were withheld but one was said to be an Elizabeth, N. J., police officer and the other a new Jersey Deputy Sheriff.

First Weepah Slaying.

WEEPAH, Nev., March 23.—The first slaying in the Weepah gold field was recorded here today when August Corenke, veteran prospector, was found shot to death on his claim.

From the position of the body, authorities judged the aged mining man had made an attempt to pull his own gun when he was shot down.

Authorities of Esmeralda and Nye counties are investigating the murder on the assumption that it resulted from a feud between holders of Lode and Placer claims.

The Manager's Corner

KLING—THE IRREPRESSIBLE.

Some of our comrades are so Daily-Workerized that no day passes without their turning in some results or other for the paper. One of these comrades is Leo Kling. He is some go-getter as you will admit when you hear the following story.

Factory Nucleus Number Four, Section One, Subsection C had a meeting last night. After a rousing speech on The DAILY WORKER by Comrade Kling, the twenty-two comrades present voted to contribute $1.00 each immediately to the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund. They pledged five dollars more in the next five weeks. And in order to guarantee the sincerity of the pledge, two comrades advanced $78.00 to make up $100.00 which was immediately dispatched to the office of The DAILY WORKER and which I have now in my hands. The other comrades promised to pay back this sum on the basis of the pledges made.

This is excellent work both on the part of Comrade Kling and the Party unit. We are waiting to hear similar reports from other parts of the country to show that the comrades, especially the Party members are buckling down to the question of making the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund a success.

By the way Nucleus Four's contribution to the Sustaining Fund came in at the same time that we received another one hundred-dollar check from the Ukrainian Section of the Workers Party. This is the first of the foreign language groups to respond to the call for the Sustaining Fund. We are waiting for the others to follow.—BERT MILLER.

WISCONSIN JOBS ARE HARD TO FIND, EVIDENCE OF STATE LABOR COMMISSION

By LELAND OLDS.

Much underemployment as well as extensive unemployment is the striking record of the Wisconsin labor market for January, says the state industrial commission. The Wisconsin public employment offices report an increase of 25.7% in applications for work with a decrease of 3.2% in the number of jobs offered. There were 166 applications for every 100 jobs and only half of those who applied got work.

Start With Less.

Wisconsin factories started 1927 with 6.1% fewer workers than in January 1926. The total distributed each week in wages was down 8.3% compared with the previous year. Percapita wages were 2.1% smaller.

The average weekly pay of factory workers in Wisconsin in January was $24.58. This compares with $25.10 in January 1926 and $19.58 in January 1922, when the postwar depression was greatest. For leading industries the January 1927 wages were:

Wisconsin Weekly Wages	Jan. 1927
Automobile industry	$19.28
Baking & confectionary	29.09
Clothing	21.24
Electric railways	30.58
Boots & shoes	21.05
Flour mills	15.78
Furniture	21.00
Foundries & machine shops	29.57
Hosiery & knit goods	18.14
Iron & steel	30.58
Light & power	27.96
Machinery	29.89
Meat packing	24.80
Milk products	23.64
Paper & pulp mills	24.29
Printing & publishing	34.95
Railroad repair shops	29.52
Sawmills & planing mills	21.03

The commission has reports covering labor turnover from 326 concerns employing 66,364 workers. These reported a January turnover of 5.3% of the persons on the pay rolls. This is the lowest turnover of any month since the commission began keeping a record in April 1926. At that rate, however, reporting employers would have to replace at least 43,435 employes in order to maintain their force of 66,364 throughout the year.

Dollar Diplomacy in New Sinister Move Against the People of Mexico

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

WHILE American labor's enthusiasm mounts over the successful march of the Chinese People's Armies, from Hankow to the Sea, in this case the Pacific Ocean, working class vigilance regarding the situation in Mexico must not be relaxed.

Sinister motives are attributed to the United States government in the announcement of Secretary of State Kellogg that the so-called smuggling treaty with Mexico has been terminated.

Senator Norris (rep., Neb.) flatly declares his interpretation of this hostile act against Mexico to mean:

"It seems to me that it simply means we are going to permit the shipping of arms and ammunition into Mexico without any restriction.

"It is notice to all who want to overthrow the government of Mexico that the United States will put nothing in their way.

"THE BARS HAVE BEEN TAKEN DOWN TO DESTROY THAT GOVERNMENT. IT MEANS REVOLUTION IN MEXICO."

That is plain speaking for a republican senator. American workers and farmers may well take warning.

This is merely new testimony showing the relentless manner in which the United States proceeds to carry out its imperialist policies. It is part of the attack on Mexico's 1917 constitution that seeks to preserve the nation's natural resources, especially of oil, land and minerals for the people. There is no doubt about the state department's intentions. It does not even try to hide its motives in the usual diplomatic subterfuges.

Mark Sullivan, veteran of the capitalist press Brass Checkers, in his special dispatch to the New York Herald-Tribune, openly states that:

"As soon as the state department announced it would terminate the smuggling treaty with Mexico the prevailing interpretation in Washington was that this meant a step toward the raising of the embargo on shipments of arms from the United States into Mexico. Since this was the immediate and prevailing interpretation in Washington circles distant from the government itself, and since this is the most sensational of the possible interpretations, one may infer it is the interpretation that will appear generally in the headlines thruout the country."

This is certainly the interpretation that the dollar diplomats and their masters would like the press to put on this new move that is directed not only against Mexico, but against all Latin-America. The move against Nicaragua developed the fact that the American masses were in no mood for war. The imperialists feel, however, that if the tom toms of slaughter are beaten loud enough and long enough, the people may answer to the call of wholesale murder in the interests of profit.

There is no question that every new effort to stir up counter-revolution in Mexico has been smiled on by the Wall Street money crowd. The possibilities of new uprisings against the present Mexican government have been thoroly reviewed and the possibilities glowingly painted in the bankers' press.

It is taken for granted that the slightest uprising, or even an imaginary uprising, may prove sufficient as a basis for new interventions in Mexico "for the protection of American lives and property."

That is the "easiest way," the path that "dollar diplomacy pursued and is still pursuing in Nicaragua and in China."

The conflict in the road ahead is clear. It does not need the conference of the various organizations working with the Committee on Peace with Latin-America to declare that "the termination of the treaty at the instance of the United States would be an unfriendly act toward the government of Mexico, would constitute an unjustified use of pressure in forcing concessions from the Calles government in the dispute over the oil and land laws, and WOULD LEAD TO ENLARGED ACTIVITIES BY THE REVOLUTIONISTS (which means counter-revolutionists) IN MEXICO.

An Associated Press dispatch from Mexico City even recalls that President Calles himself, in receiving Hubert C. Herring and a "Good Will Mission" of Americans early this year, declared that lifting of the arms embargo immediately would precipitate revolution against his government by making it possible for rebels to obtain arms from the United States.

There may be some significance in the fact that R. B. Creager, republican national committeeman from Texas, is expected to urge President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg to withhold pressure pending a decision of the Mexican supreme court on the land laws.

No doubt, fully knowing that the right kind of pressure dictates the decisions of the United States supreme court, the Wall Street imperialists and their agents feel that there is some way to get the "correct decision" from a Mexican supreme court.

The threat of inspired uprisings, financed and furnished with arms, by agencies this side of the Rio Grande, is no doubt looked upon, in Wall Street, and in Washington as well, as a powerful weapon to make the Calles government and its courts bend to the imperialist will.

Labor in the United States, therefore, has the double task: (1) Of keeping the grip of Wall Street's military machine off the throats of the Mexican people, and (2) demanding that the Mexican government, typified by the rule of Calles today, do not surrender to the exploiters of the United States.

There are indications that the Calles government may seek an opportune moment to make peace with the United States.

Such a peace can only be at the expense of the Mexican people, whose interests parallel those of the workers and farmers of this country.

The Chinese people fight valiantly against both native and foreign oppressors. The Mexican people must do the same. In this they require the fullest aid and co-operation of the workers in the homeland of the oppressors—the United States of America.

The termination of the smuggling treaty with Mexico, which is the phophecy of new interventions against the Mexican masses, should be the signal to all American workers for new struggles.

Love And Marriage In Moronia.

Moronia's "movie" magazines, "art student's" monthlies, the movies, the stage, the newspapers, all bear witness to the esteem in which bourgeois and high-hat love and marriage are held.

Indeed, one is almost forced to believe that it is a wise Moronian child who knows its own father.

As for the movies—a "dranimer" will flicker into still-born being unless it is impregnated with at least one suggestion of illicit love.

On the vaudeville or musical comedy stage, the bare mention of the apocalyptic word "ice-man" will bring down the laughter of the house, including that of every Moronian husband and his paramour, neither of whom would condone the use of the word "bastard" in their homes.

The honeymoon tales told before and after a wedding would bring a blush to the face of the young bride were it not for the fact that she had heard the same gems several years before.

And the modern, go-getting ecclesiastic is not above bestowing a modest grin to greet the marriage-bed wit of every wedding party's humorist.

The Rent Strike on the Clyde

(Donald McKillop, a student at the Labor Journalism Class of the Workers School tells of the great rent strike of the British Isles that began in Glasgow in 1923 and spread rapidly to other cities in Scotland and England.

Rent strikes like these are more powerful blows at the landlord than mere rent laws. Ed.)

By DONALD McKILLOP

The trouble all arose over a technical blunder of the factors (landlords' agents). They issued the usual notices, damanding an increase of rent, without, apparently, conforming to the letter of the law.

A certain individual in Glasgow named McBride, refused to pay the demands, pointing out that the claim was illegal. He seemed to know what he was talking about, and the news spread like wildfire that the factors had blundered. McBride versus the factors was made a test case before the Sheriff's Court. The sheriff decided in favor of the tenants. The fat was in the fire now.

Demand Increase.

When the workers went to pay the usual rent, the factors would not take it without the increase, so nothing loathe, the workers decided to sit rent free, pending developments. But the factors were not beaten yet. They took the matter to the high court and lost again. There was still the House of Lords, and there they went. But alas! Days have changed since the lords were absolutely dependable. The fight might have been won had the proper lords been chosen to sit on the case, but, unfortunately, Lord Haldane, a member of the Labor Party, and two others sympathetic to labor voted against the two for the factors' association.

The workers were jubilant, but they reckoned without their masters. They forgot that the rat when cornered will fight, and not be particular how.

House of Commons To Rescue.

At this point, the House of Commons came to the rescue, and then, and only then, did still believed in the delusion that the right could be won by constitutional methods, had the veil lifted from their eyes. For that body of gentlemen set at naught the decision of the highest tribunal of the land by passing a bill legalizing the illegal action of the factors. It was decided the tenants had to get their pound of flesh. Man proposes but circumstance disposes. By this time, the workers had fallen behind in rent; about a year or more, and some of them, far from being able to pay back rent or increase, couldn't pay any at all.

Here is where the tragedy and the fun comes in. The housewives decided among themselves that anybody who came to put poor people out of house and home because they couldn't pay rent would get a run for their money. The women decided that on the appearance of the sheriff's officer with his men, a bell should be rung to summon the district to the scene of action. The children were not going to be left out of the fun, and always seemed to have plenty of mud or stones handy for the occasion. The ejectors found that it is better to face the devils in hell than a crowd of working women raised to a pitch of fury.

Scalding The Ejectors.

If the sheriff's officer and his men managed to survive the barrage of stones set up by the kids, and reach the entrance to the building, they there got scalded with buckets of boiling water from the windows above. Even if they achieved their object, it turned out to be a case of love's labor lost, for as soon as they departed amid the jeers of the children, who followed them far enough, the neighbors simply forced the door of the house, put back the few scraps of furniture, and reinstalled the poor worker and his family.

Things reached an awful pitch, labor representatives raised hell in town and parish council, refusing to be business proceed until the powers-that-be would decide to pay the rents of the most poverty-stricken workers, which they eventually did.

Tenants Organize.

The factors' association won a partial victory through the unconstitutional action of the government, but at what a price. It cost them thousands of pounds, and they will be a little more careful in future about trying monkey tricks with workmen who know the rent act as well as they.

The tenants' association received an influx of members nothing else could have brought, and now almost every worker's wife has a card.

Textile Union Breaks Passaic Employers' Association

By ROBERT DUNN (Federated Press).

The open-shop Industrial Council of Passaic Wool Manufacturers, the local employers' association—has disbanded. The death of this union-fighting organization is of such significance to the labor movement that the Federated Press asked Robert Dunn to write the post-mortem. Dunn studied the spy and blacklist system in Passaic while preparing material for "The Labor Spy."—Ed.)

THE dissolution of the Industrial Council of Passaic Wool Manufacturers and the closing of its employment and blacklisting bureau may be called one of the important achievements of the Passaic textile strike just ended.

No local employers' association in the textile industry has a blacker record of anti-union activity. It was not only a centralized blacklisting bureau but its secretary J. Frank Andres, ex-N. Y. newspaper man, was for many years the leading lobbyist in Jersey against bills introduced by organized labor and the National Consumers League to abolish night work for women. Andres always succeeded in killing the measure, until two years ago when it was passed. (Court action instituted by the Wool Council forbid enforcement of the law.) Several Andres' favorite tactic when fighting the bills was to hire several mill women to appear before legislative committees in Trenton to testify against the law. They would all swear they loved to work nights and considered it highly beneficial.

WHEN Alice Barrows, specialist on adult education for the U. S. Bureau of Education, investigated that subject in Passaic in 1920, she called at the office of the then existing local of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America. She spoke with Andrew Pinhar, head of the union, and the writer, and inquired into the educational classes than being conducted by the union. This innocent visit of Miss Barrows' was reported to the Wool Council by an undercover man, Sam Basevitch, a Russian Jew, who happened to be in the office when Miss Barrows called. Basevitch pretended to be a radical, a member of the Bund in his home country. He frequently assisted union organizers to distribute circulars. However, he was not a textile worker and was suspected by some of the union leaders. Last year the writer happened to find his name on a long list of local spies furnished by a certain detective agency. Opposite his name were the initials P. W. C., meaning Passaic Wool Council. A dozen others were similarly marked.

USING Basevitch's exaggerated report Andres attempted to discredit Miss Barrows with the local school authorities, who, however, refused to be frightened. Miss Barrows subsequently turned on the Wool Council and exposed its underpaying system in the Passaic papers. Andres in turn tried to get her ousted from her federal post. Powerful influence was brought to bear through Washington politicians but P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner Education, stood by his expert.

Andres also spied on Agnes Leahy of the National Consumers League who reported on Night Working Mothers in Passaic in 1921. He directed his chief fire, however, against the Amalgamated. In the connection he issued mimeographed sheets of lies and half-truths concerning the union and its officials including A. J. Muste, now Dean of Brookwood and Cedric Long, then secretary of the Co-operative League of America. The bulletins, distributed at the mill gates, appeared in 4 languages and were signed "Workers' Intelligence Committee," a sort of paper dual union operated from the office of the Council.

COPIES of instructions to spies fell into the hands of the union. They revealed how workers were turned into stool-pigeons by threats of discharge or by special rewards. The instructions told undercover men to watch closely what each mill worker said, what meetings he attended, and all his affiliations.

DURING the strike last year a complete story of the card catalogue and blacklist system was made public by one John Sherman of Garfield, who had served as clerk and interpreter for 7 years in the office of the Council. Sherman, under oath, described the employment card system used in the mills. No worker who was even suspected of "agitation" or who had received the "can him" code-number on his card could secure a job in any of the Passaic mills.

Mr. Sherman was among the Council agents who helped Andres spy on Justine Wise, daughter of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, when she took a job in one of the Passaic mills in 1924.

During the recent strike the Wool Council acted as scab importer.

Worker Can Easily Starve.

Today I am sending in to you a clipping from our estimable San Francisco "Examiner," telling very tersely about how a worker can very easily starve. (He encloses a newspaper story of the starvation of a 25-year old Mexican laborer who died in Oakland hospital.)

For general information, I wish to state here that altho a strong union city, San Francisco has now today over 35,000 unemployed and no relief in sight. The same facts are for all of the whole Pacific Coast.

"Louse" Angeles is open shop and the worst. Your correspondents there can give you the facts. Since it is my firm belief that education is the medicine the worker needs why not give us some about money-licking churches and their blue laws, evolution-banning, etc. Tell the workers, your readers, just what these mean to him. Give fact publicity and keep up your broadside every day. Meet lies with facts.

Take up censors, churches, and stop yelling about red this, that, and red Russia. Talk, write, shout, yell—United States. Use ink and powerful words, photos of strike locations, conditions, living quarters of workers, where they work, how, number of hours, pay received, etc., and yell your editorial head off that the worker—you, me, everybody, must organize and stick together to get results. And keep at it!—E. J. A., San Francisco.

UNITED STATES MOVES TOWARD WAR ON CHINA

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

A MAN who tumbled down Niagara Falls in a barrel and got away with it had nothing on Edward Payson Weston, transcontinental pedestrian, in the way of running into cheap accidents. The conqueror of Niagara shipped on a banana peel in an Australian city, broke a limb and died from his injuries. Weston, the hiking marvel, while on his way to church last Sunday stepped in front of a speeding Ford and was knocked unconscious. If the veteran had eaten a sausage for breakfast, Bernarr MacFadden would have an editorial in the Graphic on the hazards of meat-eating. MacFadden attributes Weston's longevity to his abstention from indigestible foods. We suggest that he add Fords to his verboten lists.

THE New York Times of last Thursday devotes a whole column to a story of graft in the Soviet Union state film industry. Some of the officials of the film organization appear to have forgotten they were living under a Workers' and Peasants' regime and not back in the "easy" days of Czardom, Lazy for grafters and corruptionists. There is a strong possibility, according to the Times correspondent in Moscow—a rather reliable person by the name of Duranty—that a few of the crooked kino directors will be brought face to face with a firing squad in the near future. Betraying the confidence placed in them by the government established by the sacrifices of the Russian workers and peasants is a serious business.

GRAFTING in Russia under Czardom was as institutionalized a form of acquiring wealth as bootlegging is under prohibition. Artist officials regretted that they had only a small part of the country to sell, in order to afford their favorite luxuries. And their luxuries were neither few nor far between. They worshipped art in the flesh and not at a distance. One of the directors of a Soviet film corporation inflated with ego and perhaps exhilarated by champagne stepped on the first rung of the ladder that led many a pre-war Russian into the good graces of the Czarina's waiting maids. The Soviet director's next step was to a cell.

U. S. Sold Arms To Diaz Long Time Ago

Protest Slaughter Of Non-Combatants by Americans

WASHINGTON, March 24.—When the State Department was most loudly proclaiming its impartiality in Nicaragua, it was tacitly selling arms and ammunition to the Diaz regime.

Announcement of Secretary Kellogg's attempt to "maintain law and order" by propelling Diaz with arms was made last night long after feeling on the Nicaraguan situation had died down in this country. The War Department had sold the Diaz Government 3,000 Krag rifles, 200 Browning machine guns and 3,000,000 rounds of ammunition. The munitions were shipped to Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, on February 25th.

"To Maintain Order"

The arms were sent to the Diaz regime "to maintain law and order in the country and suppress revolutionary activities, which not only threaten the Constitutional Government of Nicaragua, but also the lives and property of Americans and other foreigners," according to the State Department.

Protest Killing of Non-Combatants

WASHINGTON, March 24 (FP)—Formal protest has been delivered by President Sacasa of the Liberal Government of Nicaragua to Secretary of State Kellogg against the killing of Nicaraguan non-combatants and the burning of several blocks of buildings in the center of the town of Chinandega by two American aviators, Major Bill Brooks and Major Lee Mason, employed by the Diaz forces which are backed by Kellogg. The aviators burned the town during recent fighting there.

The United States cancelled the citizenship of aviators who served the French in the war against the Riffs in Morocco, Foreign Minister Espinosa declared in his protest to the State Department. He then says:

"My government which in the public opinion of the continent, counting that of the great democracy of the United States, is the constitutional government of Nicaragua, respectfully but earnestly requests of yours in the name of justice, to proceed in this case as in the case of Morocco, by withdrawing the privileges of American citizenship from those who for no reason at all accept that of mercenary profit have come to perform such acts against a weak nation that is not at war with yours."

It Is War On China!

The action of the United States and British warships in bombarding the city of Nanking that had just fallen to the Nationalists is an act of war and no quibbling of the state department can make it look otherwise.

The city of Nanking fell to the Nationalists without the loss of a drop of blood. Early reports from Shanghai said that the situation was peaceful and that the lives of foreigners were not in danger.

Then like a bolt out of a clear sky came the story of the bombardment and the big newspaper headlines of Americans killed. But details were suspiciously lacking.

One Washington dispatch had it that the shells from the warships fell in the closely packed streets of Nanking and it was estimated that thousands of Chinese were killed.

Another report was that 20,000 United States troops in the Philippines would be rushed to China regardless of the treaty with China which does not allow American military forces to occupy any part of the country.

The dispatch stated that this treaty would be considered "a scrap of paper." This is the phrase that made so much trouble for the ex-Kaiser of Germany during the late world war. American imperialism is on the rampage. It will brook no opposition to its onward march.

The collaboration between the United States and Great Britain in China hitherto only hinted at is now a reality. The two strongest imperialist powers in the world have joined forces to crush the Nationalist revolution or frighten it into submission. They will fail. The power of 100,000,000 people in revolt is a dangerous buzzaw.

The workers of the world and particularly of the United States and Great Britain must see to it that their governments will not be allowed to strangle the people of China in their struggle for emancipation.

Right Wing and Bosses Get Injunction

Picketing Forbidden Joint Board By Court Order

Positive proof of collaboration between Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the employers in the dress industry is provided by the temporary injunction which was granted yesterday to the New York Association of Dress Manufacturers against the New York Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' Union.

Sigman With Bosses.

Appearing as the defender of the agreement made by Sigman and the manufacturers, and which was never ratified by the workers in the union, the lawyers for the manufacturers, thru the injunction, hope to prevent the further picketing of shops which the Joint Board has called on strike, because of the discharge of workers who refused to register with the right wing International officials.

Thirty active members, officials of the Joint Board, business agents, and shop chairmen are named in the injunction procured from the courts with the connivance of the right wing official machine. The court order prohibits the strikers from "calling the name 'scab,' picketing in front of or adjacent to buildings, inducing employes to break and repudiate the agreement of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union."

Affidavits Alike.

A large number of affidavits, signed by members of the Sigman clique who have become professional "attestors," were appended to the application for the injunction of the bosses. Many of the affidavits were also suspiciously similar in content and phrasing to those furnished by Luigi Antonini, manager of Italian dressmakers' Local 89 when he applied for an injunction to prevent the Joint Board from collecting either dues or taxes from their members. This move, inspired and backed by the entrenched official machine, has not yet materialized.

Max Schechter, Sam Burger, and other members of Sigman's "boo-lag" Local 35, are among those who signed affidavits; there are also a number of others signed by Italian men and women who signed some for Antonini. Among the latter, there is an amusing angle in the fact that S. Amico, against whom vague charges of "assault" are made, had on a number of occasions spent friendly evenings with them at dinner.

Application to make this injunction asked by the right wing leaders and the bosses' association permanent will be considered next Monday by Justice Edward Glennon in the state supreme court.

Kellogg Paves Way to War

Says Coolidge Loses Friends For U. S. Everywhere

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Charging that the termination of the Mexican anti-smuggling treaty had paved the way for a revolution against the Calles government, sponsored and supported by American oil interests, Senator Norris (R) of Nebraska, in a public statement today, characterized the recent action of President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg as "shocking to every peace-loving citizen in civilization."

"If the president and the secretary," Norris said, "can sell guns and munitions to keep Diaz in power in Nicaragua, there is no reason why they should not sell more battleships to Mussolini.

"The action of the president and the secretary of state with regard to Nicaragua and Mexico has lost us the friendship of every nation on this hemisphere."

Force Sapiro to Drop Third of His Charges

Judge Tells Him Not To Be Interviewed Any More

DETROIT, March 24.—One third of the libel charges, upon which Aaron Sapiro sued Henry Ford for a million dollars damages, were dropped from the trial this afternoon when Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond accepted Sapiro's amended declaration of libel.

The court rendered a tentative opinion allowing the changes, over the protest of counsel for Ford. The amendments eliminated 54 of the 141 specific allegations of libel and struck out two of the twenty-one counts.

The judge, however, refused to allow one paragraph in Sapiro's amended general declaration. This paragraph made a new reference to articles published in the Dearborn Independent over the years ago the court held the statute of limitations applied to them.

"Jewish Issue" First.

The amended declaration was filed by Sapiro after the court had warned his counsel that the old declaration of libel was "insufficient." In its reversed form the declaration held that Sapiro was libelled when Ford linked him to a Jewish ring that exploited the farmers by charging him with using Communists and anarchists as assistants and by declaring his cooperative plan looted the farmers.

Sapiro's counsel said the amended complaint would "concentrate the case on the Jewish issue."

Wouldn't Adjourn.

The changes were only tentatively allowed, the court said, in telling the Ford counsel he might change his ruling if they submitted precedents showing he had errored. The court then ordered the trial to proceed although counsel for Ford pleaded for an adjournment until Monday.

With William J. Cameron, editor of the Dearborn Independent back on the stand, opposing counsel got into an argument immediately over a question about Ford's attacks on the Jewish race. The jury was excluded.

Anti-Semitism Proper?

The court again ruled that any inquiry into Ford's general attack on Jews was improper. He held that witnesses could not be questioned on Ford's anti-Jew crusade unless it were shown the attacks were levelled on "a class of individuals or toward individuals." He made the same ruling on two preceding occasions.

Judge Gags Sapiro.

Judge Raymond trying the case has apparently set out to establish a reputation for being fussy. He has notified all spectators that contrary to the usual practise in New York and Chicago, he wants his court room to be a scene of "cathedral decorum". Furthermore he has ordered Sapiro to stop giving interviews to the press. He had already asked the reporters not to write up their papers those parts of the testimony he orders excluded from the record. Each such exclusion is a blow to Sapiro's case.

In the interview, which caused the judge whose has been under unique mandate, Sapiro is quoted as saying that Ford was a bigotted genius, who, "just as I am color blind, seems to have a blind spot where justice to certain races is concerned."

More arguments over the amended complaint is expected. Cameron will probably be on the stand for several days, and then Fred L. Black, the business manager of Ford's magazine. After that, either Sapiro himself, or Ford himself—the two big events of the trial.

Attempt to Fleece New England Shoe Workers Exposed By the Union

BROCKTON, Mass., March 24 (FP).—Attempted fleecing of Brockton shoe workers by Florida real estate sharks has been stopped by action of the joint council, Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. John M. Long, council secretary, made an appeal to the Minimum Wage Board when the local shoe workers responded to an ad in Brockton papers promising Florida work.

Workers who answered the ad received real estate ads but no mention of prospective shoe making work. A Brockton employment agency had signed up 800 shoe workers for southern work when the snag was discovered.

Admiral Williams, in charge of the American fleet has sent an ultimatum to the Nationalist commander saying he will shell the city at one o'clock Friday unless all the foreigners are aboard the ships by that time.

Three of the most modern cruisers in the American navy, the Marblehead, Cincinnati and Richmond, were ordered from Honolulu to Shanghai under full draught. They steam at 35 knots an hour and should reach Nanking in seven days.

Nanking—Where U. S. Warships Shed Blood of Chinese People

Nanking, or Nankin, is the capital of the Province of Kiang-Su.

It is situated on the right hank of the Yang-Tse-Kiang, 130 miles from the mouth of the river, and about 580 miles s. s. e. of Peking.

Its ancient walls can be traced over a distance of many miles, but the modern walls are much less extent.

The part nf the city occupied by the Manchus is separated by a wall from the Chinese town.

In the early part of the 15th century, Nanking was attacked by the Tai-Ping rebels, who destroyed the remarkable porcelain tower, a structure 291 feet high and with nine stories.

Nanking has little foreign commerce. Its the Grand Canal, which crosses the Yang-Tse-Kiang about 50 miles to the east. It communicates directly with Peking.

The city is a great military depot, and the chief seat of literature in China.

The treaty between China and the British, which terminated the Opinim War, was signed at Nanking in August, 1842.

In 1853, the Tai-Pings assaulted Nanking, took it, and made it their capital. It was captured by the imperialists in 1864. The population is between 300,000 and 350,000.

The American Consul at Nanking is John K. Davis. The Vice-Consul is J. Hall Paxton.

The commander of the American warship William B. Preston is Lieut.-Commander G. B. Ashe. Lieut.-Commander R. C. Smith, Jr., commands the Noa.

American institutions and organizations functioning in Nanking include the American University, Friends Mission, Gingling Women's College, Language School, Methodist Episcopal Mission, Nanking University, North Presbyterian Mission, South Presbyterian Mission, University Hospital, Y. M. C. A., Liggett and Myers Tobacco, Standard Oil Company and Texas Oil Company.

FEW HOMELESS CHILDREN IN THE SOVIET UNION, THORO SURVEY SHOWS

A reply to the recent capitalist press campaign by our own Moscow Correspondent.

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE.

That misinformation about Soviet Russia, and bitter attacks fatally unrelated to facts, are still popular "dope" with the capitalist press is evident from the publication of a statement by a Yale professor of history denouncing the Soviet Union's present form of government as "the worst in her long life."

The professor, altho born in Russia has not lived there since 1917, yet he unhesitatingly pieces details on the "deplorable" economic condition of the country, and the dissatisfaction of the people; and he points to the "thousands of homeless children," who have been so vividly exploited in the American press, as an example of the terrible rule of the Soviet Government.

The DAILY WORKER feels it is time the truth was told about these children, so it has arranged for a series of special articles written from observation and first hand information. One is printed today and the others will follow at intervals.

THE newspapers of the enemies of the working class have opened up a new barrage of attack against the Soviet Union, and again the attack is cunningly delivered from an angle calculated to win sentimental support from the masses of the American "common people" who are being more and more impressed by the very real "social progress" recorded in all fields in the United Socialist Soviet Republic. Last year, our readers will remember, the anti-Soviet campaign harped upon the alleged sad lot of mythical thousands of political prisoners.

So plausibly was the tale presented that even some of our best friends among the liberals and bourgeois radicals were taken in by it. It was completely exploded by the reports of various workers' and trade union delegations which visited the Union.

Even MacKenzie Knew Better.

And now only the English weekly edition of the N. Y. Jewish Daily Forward (The New Leader) has brazen enough to attempt to rehash the prison atrocity garbage long since discarded by the capitalist press. Evan MacKenzie, a reporter as F. A. MacKenzie, long stationed in Moscow by the Chicago Daily News, reported on his return to America that Russian jails were considerably better, and prisoners much more humanely treated, than in the county jail in Chicago.

Missed the Winter.

The New Leader is behind the times. It should turn its sob-sisters loose in the wake of the rest of the

BATTLEFIELDS OF OLD WON'T GET ANY CASH

Propose Pay Raise For Governor Smith

ALBANY March 24. — Political leaders in the legislature here are apparently less eager to preserve old battlefields than they are to create new ones. It seems that New York state has decided that it needed some of the "historic spots" in connection with the celebration this summer of the sesquicentennial of the Revolutionary War of 1776. Republican politicians who have the say in the legislature now-a-days refuse, however, to O. K. the proposal for $350,000 asked for by members of their own party.

Must Bet Cash.

With the only alternative now being to pass the hat among sympathetic friends of past American revolutions, there is a serious prospect that the only official contribution to the celebration will be $1,000 given by Rensselaer county and a speech by President Coolidge when Bennington celebration on August 16th.

Eight Baumes Bills Pass.

Eight of the 40 bills urged by the Baumes Crime Commission have already gone in defeat. Opponents today were continuing the drive against the remaining ones, and predicting that more than half of the entire number would never become law.

At the same time seven recommendations of the commission were approved by the assembly. The senate has passed three of the "anti-crime" bills and sent three to committee for amendment, with the understanding that Gov. Smith would pave the way for their passage during the closing hours of the session with the aid of emergency messages.

Cops Measure Beaten.

Two bills strongly approved by Police Commissioner McLaughlin of New York were defeated. One would have compelled former prisoners to report to the authorities once a month after being released. The other called upon prison wardens to notify chiefs of police of the release of all criminals.

Assemblyman Goodrich, of Westchester, led the attack on the bill which would have compelled prisoners to report to police chiefs after their release saying "this would be a duplicate of the old yellow ticket of tsarist Russia."

Smith Wants Raise.

The voters of New York state will have an opportunity at this fall's election to decide whether or not they want Gov. Alfred E. Smith is putting in too much time for the pay which he is getting at present.

A proposal to amend the state constitution to increase the governor's salary from $10,000 to $25,000 was favorably reported by the assembly rules committee.

The committee also reported a proposed amendment to the constitution to provide for an executive budget.

Local Unions Send Protest Notes to Bethlen, Szecheny

The following resolution was passed by Local Painters' Union 499, to be sent to Count Bethlen, Hungarian minister-president and Count Szecheny, Hungarian ambassador at Washington. A motion also carried to have a copy of this resolution sent to the New York District Council of Painters for its consideration. The resolution reads as follows:

Resolutions

"We, the members of Local Union 499, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, in regular meeting assembled, voice our protest against the inhuman treatment accorded to fifty Hungarian workingmen and citizens of that country, arrested recently by order of the Hungarian government for their protest against the dictatorial regime of the Bethlen government.

"We demand that these men be protected from the brutal tortures and terrorism of the gendarmery and that they be tried in an open public court instead of the special military court of Admiral Horthy.

"We further demand that the working class of Hungary be granted their right as citizens of their country, with the right to organize for their protection and collective bargaining."

Other protest notes have been sent to Szecheny and Bethlen by the Structural Iron Workers' Union, various needle trade locals, the Sick and Death Benefit Society, the I. L. D. and many others. A mass-demonstration is to be held in front of the Hungarian embassy in Washington for the purpose to arouse a demand for the liberation of the persecuted Hungarian workers.

Organize the Traction Workers

ARTICLE XI—THE 1916 STRIKE; DOUBLECROSSED!

By ROBERT MITCHELL

From the very first moment, it became evident that the Interborough had only agreed to the Mediation order to gain time for its customary union smashing preparations.

"Yellow-dog," individual contracts were immediately distributed among the men, which the workers were forced to sign on the pain of dismissal. Scores were fired for refusing. Perhaps hundreds were suspended. In the meantime the work of gathering strikebreakers began with feverish haste. The men were all for immediate action which would undoubtedly have saved the situation but the ingrained "psychology" of the international officers towards conciliation, their incapacity for direct and drastic action necessary to defeat unscrupulous capital, led to the loss of the passing opportunity.

Right Cause—Wrong Tactics.

Fitzgerald permitted the days to go by with mere statements to the papers and charges of "bad faith." The Interborough proceeded to build quarters for and train its strikebreakers and established recruiting stations in the principal cities, particularly Binghampton and Chicago.

Then another interesting event took place. Mayor Mitchell came in on the picture as a "interested" party to the dispute, secured a promise from Fitzgerald that no strike would be called before he was notified, and left for an extended trip to visit his military friends at Plattsburg.

Men Strike Anyway.

In the meantime, the men on the road were beginning to leave their work in scores and hundreds, enraged at the events which were going on around them. Four hundred mechanics quit work at Van Cortland Park when ordered to build barracks for the coming finks and strike breakers. "I advised against a strike," reported Fitzgerald, "because I gave my word to Mayor Mitchell that we would give him an opportunity to return from Plattsburg before we took action."

But the men refused to wait. The company tools were doing all in their power to provoke a strike among isolated sections of the men. The strikebreakers were sent in with definite instructions to abuse and insult the workers.

Thugs, gunmen and spies rode the railroad everywhere. On the Third Avenue "L," three hundred more man walked out when ordered to "break-in" the strikebreakers. Still Fitzgerald refused to sanction a strike. Instead he sent telegram after telegram to Mayor Mitchell, who refused to answer.

The Company Union.

Leaderless, confused, isolated, the men continued to leave their work in groups during the last days of August. In the meantime the Interborough was put to play another of its trump cards. On the 17th of August it circulated a notice of the formation of a company brotherhood to embrace all the men of the road.

This was the beginning of the company union of which considerable has already been said. Mr. Ivy Lee, then the private secretary of John D. Rockefaller, Jr., had been given a "leave of absence" to work out the plan. Membership in the brotherhood was to be "voluntary" and by secret ballot.

Scores were again discharged for refusing to join the company union; others were beaten up and stabbed by the paid thugs. In all not over a few hundreds signed either the "yellow-dog" contract or its step-son, the company union appliestion. The Interborough announced, however, that 9,800 out of 11,700 man had voted in favor of the faka "Brotherhood."

Still Negotiate.

Even under these conditions, Fitzgerald continued to "negotiate" with the officials of the Interborough in the hope of averting a strike. "We are tired of being fooled," he admitted, but on August 31st, the day was still spent in conference.

The early days of September continued in this fashion. The strike breaking agency of Bergoff Bros. & Wudell, notorious throughout the country for its criminal activities, established a new headquarters ostensibly for the Hotel Continental, but quarters of the Amalgamated officials; the Interborough fired the men who pott on the September union buttons, on explanation with the whole committee of local officers of the union which had been meeting with Hedley was fired in a body.

Unanimous For Strike.

That evening the men were called to a mass meeting and voted unanimously to strike. At the completion of the vote the thousands assembled at the East 86th Street Lyceum, shouted uninstructedly for ten minutes before quiet could be regained.

The sentiment for organization and strike was so great that it exceeded all previous bounds. For the moment it overcame all the uncertainty and confusion of the past few weeks; it rose above the mistakes of leadership and the omissions of policy. But it could not overcome the weakness of that fatal month of preparation which had been given the Interborough.

Fight To Finish.

The position of the company was not long in doubt: "We are going to the mat with this thing," said "Rough Stuff" Quackenbush, "and fight it out even if we have to discharge every man in our employ and hire new ones. There are a lot of Columbia college students who want jobs as ticket sellers and choppers."

On his part, Fitzgerald adopted an equally firm attitude, but now hostilities were finally forced upon him: "If the government was thrown into a state of intense confusion to free the black men. Now, if I can free a whole lot of white men by throwing the city of New York into confusion, then, by God, I will do it."

"When they deal with horse thieves in Arizona, they have a very simple method—they hang them. It is not necessary to hang Mr. Hedley, for every time he opens his mouth he hangs himself."

More Ruthless Than Directors.

It is interesting to note the exact words of Fitzgerald, because it was on an entirely misleading and garbled account of them that the Interborough in part has been able to secure the existing injunction against the Traction Workers.

The board of directors of the Interborough had drafted a tentative wage increase which was to have been presented to the men; they voted in favor of arbitration and no strike. But without consulting them and in actual violation of their command, "Rule or Ruin" Hedley together with Quackenbush had precipitated the strike.

CURRENT EVENTS By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

CAPITALISM is a success. With all its little faults we should love it still! What matter is millions of people are murdered in periodic wars because of this self-interest? Don't the few live in luxury? And are not the great majority stupid anyway? Why bother with them?

OUR capitalist editors will ignore the Falls, Dohenys and Sinclairs that plundered the national domain of the Fall who scooted away from his graft tryst with Dohony, the Fall who accepted a gift of $100,000 from one oil baron and a $25,000 herd of cattle from another and yet lives the life of a feudal lord on a splendid ranch in salubrious New Mexico, so respected that his indignant fellow-republicans threaten to return him to the United States senate as an act of redemption. They will also steer clear of Daugherty, Jess Smith, Colonel Miller and divers other pillars of the Harding administration who pocketed over $300,000 out of their tinkering with the Alien Property Custodianship. Those lads were not shot. Only buffaloed.

THE Soviet Union is not yet free from the virus of corruption. But every thing from the old system which the Soviet Union is trying to replace by Socialism. But corruption is not indigenous to Socialism as it is to capitalism. Under capitalism the acquisition of wealth is considered the noblest and highest pursuit. He who concerns himself with creating wealth for the use of society with no thot of self is regarded by the general public as a nut and more often than not he dies in a shack, alone and forlorn. The acquisitive baldich with the mentality of a bull frog rolls around in the Rolls-Royce and smokes cigars on the veranda of his own home. He is the man who is out for himself. "Getting his" is his credo. How he gets it does not matter unless he gets caught. This is not the case in the Soviet Union.

HERE is a story by way of illustration: Two dejected individuals dragged their half-petrified limbs after them into the waiting room of a Moscow prison. They were accompanied by soldiers with long, naked swords. The governor of the prison, a big swaggering fellow who lived in Boston for many years and returned to fight in the Revolution, interviewed the prisoners in a kindly manner. What were they here for? One has committed murder and was sentenced to serve five years with so many concessions for good behaviour that the time would be cut to half. And then there was always the possibility of a pardon. But his comrade in distress was a Communist who was employed as a cashier in a Government store and could not account for 16,000 roubles. He was sentenced to death.

THE judges, proletarian judges, looked into whatever extenuating circumstances existed and commuted the sentence to life imprisonment which means ten years under the laws of the Soviet Union. He was a worker who weakened under temptation. A worker who was denied all the good things of life while he toiled under the capitalist system. He was not of the stuff that martyrs are made, but he had a creditable record in the past. He was a good union man and pulled his pound in the Revolution. His life was saved.

A NEW morality is being developed in the Soviet Union. Like a lily growing amidst foul weeds this new psychological growth is affected by the noxious miasma from the putrid and decadent morality of the capitalist world. In the new world the urge to effort will not be the acquisition of wealth but the urge to excel in one or other fields that add richness to life. When the fear of want is lifted from the human soul, the generous, open types will come to the front and the foxy, mean, Rockefeller type will be relegated to the rear and ultimately fade out of the biological picture.

Noisy Admiral Ruins Plan To Get Millions For Spy Organization

CHICAGO, (FP)—Partly because a convivial admiral spilled the beans at the Washington birthday dinner and scared off rich but gentle donors by his belligerency, the American Citizenship Foundation is giving up its campaign for a $2,000,000 cash foundation for its work. So it's officially announced, while stating that the work will go on in spite of the crimp put in the begging campaign.

So far as independent investigation has revealed, the work has consisted in good measure of maintaining an anti-blacklist of liberal, pacifist and labor speakers like Jane Addams and others. It has in a number of instances successfully interfered to prevent the liberals from speaking. It is associated more or less closely with interlocking directorates with military spy and industrial espionage organizations.

revolutionary army in Nanking, an important city on the Yangtse River which fell to the attackers without the firing of a shot.

Early reports had it that the situation was peaceful and that there was no danger facing the foreign residents of the city.

It is believed here that the bombardment marks the beginning of the interventionist policy which the British and American commanders in Chinese waters have been unofficially threatening for some time.

Excuse For Shelling.

The excuse for the bombardment was that several American and British foreigners were killed by the Nationalist troops, but it is more likely that northern troops were using the British and American possessions as bases of operations against the Nationalists and that the latter attempted to dislodge them.

There is no attempt to conceal the rivalry of the imperialists over the fall of the cities of Nanking and Chinkiang. Only yesterday the report was spread that the northerners had won a big victory and that the Nationalists were forced to retreat twenty miles from Nanking with heavy losses.

The Nationalists now have virtual control over the entire Yangtse valley.

Deliver Ultimatum

WASHINGTON, March 24. — Admiral Williams commanding the American fleet in Chinese waters cabled the navy department today that the British and United States commanders at Nanking delivered an ultimatum to the Nationalist leaders demanding the protection of all foreigners, and private property, that the Nationalist general in command report on board the British warship Emerald before 11 P. M. tonight and that all foreigners be escorted to the Bund by ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Threaten Move West

Unless this ultimatum was obeyed Admiral Williams said that Nanking would be considered a military area, which means that the British and the United States naval and military forces at Nanking would wage war against the Chinese city.

While military action is being taken against the Nationalists by the United States, Kellogg still maintains the fiction that this country is neutral in the Chinese civil war

BARGE OWNERS MEET TO BLUFF THEIR WORKERS

Can't Carry Out Threat To Deport Strikers

The Barge and Boat Owners' Association called a meeting of their members shortly after the Cullen Coal and Fuel Co. began to terrorize its striking workers back to their jobs with fear of deportation.

This Barge and Boat Owners' Association is a strange phenomenon on the labor horizon in so far as it appears and disappears with the coming and passing of all strikes or attempts at organization in the ranks of the severely exploited barge workers and boatmen. The Barge and Boat Owners' Association in short exists only for the purpose of breaking up any effort on the part of the workers to better their working and living conditions on the floating hell holes in which they are imprisoned during the period of their sporadic employment.

Cowardly Tactics.

The owners of barges and boats which take the cargoes of coal and similar material between the New Jersey and New York river and sea ports are represented by Steele, the agent for one of the largest coatractors in this part of the country, namely Henry Steers and Co.

"If we only have come together" to discuss ways and means to break up the spirit of the suffering bargemen and their families.

This is the latest move in the most cowardly and filthy tactics that the corporation heads in the industry have as yet tried. The majority of the workers in New York harbor thru their foreign birth are susceptible victims to the merciless courts and the immigration authorities.

Bluff Workers.

Of course even under the present corrupt Tammany administration it would be impossible to deport the thousands of workers who are naturally involved.

But the bosses take advantage of the fact that the workers, who are forever tied up to their miserable floating graveyards, never had a chance to gain any sort of education, and in rare cases have been fortunate enough to pass the reading and writing stage, and cannot see thru this bluff.

Recently Dr. Poland of the Marble Collegiate Church, after a short survey of the situation in which the barge and boatmen and themselves and their families, returned to his Fifth Avenue Cathedral and was moved to an inspirational outburst, in which he made the subject matter, instead of conditions, the theme of his sermon, drawing an allusion to hell on earth, etc. This same gentleman, however, was warned by the bosses that the act on striking for their just demands. He painted the picture so vividly, however, that one of his wellquanched congregation who happened to have been born with the sum of $20,000,000 to his name, was moved to see the subject matter of a few thousand dollars a year to educate the heathen savages in Africa and Asia. Ha came to the conclusion that there were more heathen than one.

At another time the Rt. Rev. Dr. Murphy came down to see for himself whether the conditions which The DAILY WORKER is depleting in its columns.

He also deplored the miserable existence of the workers on their boats and barges. In conjunction with the honorable Mrs. Barnes of the New York board of education he agreed that the wages which the workers were receiving were hardly sufficient to keep the children of the barge masters in school for any length of time.

Consequently the New York Board of Education decided to discipline the children of tha workers on the barges and boats. You can picture for yourself what this indicates.

Union Sheet Is Way.

The Independent Tidewater Boat and Bargemen's Union advocates the organization of the barge and boatmen into the ranks of the union.

In this way they will be able to fight the bosses and their wiles. They will be able to get a minimum wage scale of $100 a month instead of $80 or $90 a month and while it is true that this is by no means a sufficient wage scale for the barge workers, it would be the first step to the gaining of the proper working and living conditions for barge and boatmen and their families.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 24.—Several hundred workers responded to the call for the Ruthenberg Memorial meeting which was held at 2212 Market Street.

The meeting opened with the playing of the Red funeral march, during which time the audience stood in silence. Representatives from the Hindustan Gadar Party (India's National Party) the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang of the United States, and the Society for the Advance of Sun Yat Sentism in America, made this memorial meeting a truly international one and emphasized the point that the struggle against imperialism will be carried on.

Edgar Owen and Malcolm Bruce were the speakers for the Workers (Communist) Party. The Freiheit Gesangverein closed the meeting by singing the International. The District Organizer, Emanual Levin was chairman of the meeting.

Letter From Hindus.

The following letter from the Hindustan Gadar Party was read at the meeting.

Dear Comrades:

We mourn with you the loss of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, the General Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of America. He was the leader of the revolutionary workers in the United States. He was also the leader in the struggle against imperialism, particularly against British imperialism. India is under the yoke of British imperialism. It is only the revolutionary workers who can really aid the oppressed nations. Their loss is our loss.

The oppressed nations of the world look upon the revolutionary workers of the world to assist them in freeing themselves from their oppressors, the imperialists. In the death of Comrade Ruthenberg we have lost a great friend who had always taken the side of the oppressed peoples.

Successful Conclusion.

We know that his work in the revolutionary movement will inspire the members of the Workers (Communist) Party and that they will carry on to a successful conclusion the work which he started.

His death calls upon all of us for renewed activity in order to fill the gap caused by his untimely death.

Fraternally,

(Signed) Munaha Sungh, Secretary.

N. Y. Pioneers Honor Ruthenberg; to Launch Big Membership Drive

Every section of the Young Pioneer League of American, New York district, will commemorate the death of Charles E. Ruthenberg, Saturday, March 26th. At these meetings the Young Pioneers of New York will pledge themselves to carry on the work for which Comrade Ruthenberg sacrificed his life.

The Young Pioneers of America is part of the working class movement and for them Ruthenberg's last words "Build the Party" mean also "Build the Pioneers." This Saturday, commemorating the death of Comrade Ruthenberg, the lovers of workers and their children, the New York district of Young Pioneers of America is officially opening the Ruthenberg Enrollment Drive.

The problem that the Pioneers of New York districts have before them now is to double their membership, strengthen their organization, to build the "Ruthenberg Movement." The Party and the League must help them to carry out their campaign successfully.

Every workers' child must belong to the Young Pioneer League of America, the only organization of workers' children.

Urge Unity.

The leader of the Workers (Communist) Party compared Ruthenberg as a leader of the workers with Powderley of the Knights of Labor, De Leon of the socialist labor party, and Debs of the socialist party, showing that Ruthenberg as the present leader of the socialist party and late member of the Communist Party was the true leader of the workers, and the one whose passing will be most deplored.

Revolutionary Music.

A trio gave a fine program of revolutionary and classical music appropriate to the occasion. A number of Ruthenberg's books and pamphlets were sold and a substantial collection taken. One young man signed an application to join the Workers (Communist) Party.

His Legacy.

Workers Party, Yonkers, N. Y.—Words and expressions are entirely inadequate to express our deep and painful feeling on account of the sudden death of our great leader and teacher, next to Comrade Lenin, Comrade Charles E. Ruthenberg who departed from us in the prime of his life and glorious achievements in the building of the Workers (Communist) Party of America. We mourn his immense and thereby unanimously accept the legacy left to us by him, his will pronounced just before he died. We accept it and swear to fulfill his last words, "LET'S FIGHT ON."

TAGORE'S NIECE STUDIES WOMEN WORKERS; REPORTS TRADE UNION PROGRESS IN INDIA

By ESTHER LOWELL.

(Federated Press)

Gathering information about the activities of women in the American labor movement, Sushama Tagore, niece of the Hindu poet Rabindranath Tagore, is a visitor in this city and plans to extend her research work to other parts of the United States.

Miss Tagore is particularly interested in educational work, especially for workers and workers' children, for she and her sister are devoting themselves to elementary educational work in India. With friends she discusses the problems of her own land, as she carefully observes what is being done here.

Women Active Unionists.

Says Miss Tagore:

"In India those women who are organized in unions are in the same unions with men workers, as in the Workers' education is still unknown, textile mills, particularly of Bombay, are best organized. They successfully fought a 12½% wage reduction in 1925. Women also work in the paddy mills where rice is ground. Miss Tagoro wants to tell these Indian women workers about American workers' activities."

Educational work in the unions particularly interested Miss Tagore. As yet only 1% of the Hindu women (and 3% of the men) are schooled. Workers' education is still unknown, since the union movement is so new. But Miss Tagore and her sister are striving to increase the elamentary education facilities for the millions of workers and small farmers of India. They have a girls' school in Calcutta.

Interested in Education.

New methods of education especially interest Miss Tagore. She is visiting the different modern schools here. Masumi, the resident country school for workers' children, is one she hopes to see first hand, she told Nellie M. Seeds, executive director, Manumit, in a report comes largely from trade unions and might suggest possibilities of a similar enterprise in India.

Industrialization of India is breaking down the caste system to a great extent, says Miss Tagore. In the factories men and women of many castes work together, disregarding the old taboos, except in regard to marriage. In some instances the caste series as a rough equivalent to a trade union, she relates. If the hundry caste decides to charge more for washing clothes, those who emblem these workers find themselves faced with a "closed shop" and must pay.

POWERS WORKING FOR ANTI-SOVIET BLOC — "PRAVDA"

Britain Trying to Draw Germany Into Plot

MOSCOW, March 9th., (By Mail) —The "Pravda" writes:

"The Geneva negotiations have as their purpose to enforce the direct and active participation of Germany in the anti-Soviet coalition. This business, however, could not be carried out because the British diplomacy wanted to pay with money from a strange pocket. French diplomacy has not shown itself particularly ready to consider the participation of Germany in the anti-Soviet block as due compensation for the evacuation of the Rhineland.

"The German government, on its part, is not ready to burn all bridges that lead to the East and be bound up finally with the purposes of British diplomacy. Therefore, the plan as a whole has not been successful, it was not given up finally, however, but only postponed. For the moment it has only been hinted to Germany that the question of the evacuation of the Rhineland will be raised in the next session of the League of Nations if Germany will abstain in the course of the next months from granting loans or credits to the Soviet Union. This is an attempt to prepare the financial boycott of the Soviet Union and illustrated merely the 'peaceful' policy of British diplomacy.

Anti-Soviet Frame-up.

"Dealing with the ratification of the Bessarabian protocol by Italy, the 'Pravda' reminds of Churchill's visit in Italy, which preceeded this act, and points out that the ratification proved 'in accordance with Italy's interests' just in that moment when in Geneva all means were used in order to reach at least some anti-Soviet agreement.

[Although the results of the secret activity of the prized 'pacificators' are not great at the moment, this circumstance may not decrease the watchfulness of the world proletariat. The attempts to hinder the peaceful economic growth of the Soviet Union will continue. The working class of Western Europe must realize whose hands are working without interruption for the preparations of new international conflicts."

Co-operative Delegations.

MOSCOW, March 9th (By Mail)— The Central Union of the co-operatives of the Soviet Union send an invitation to the Egglish, Scottish, Swedish, German, French, Czecho-Slovakian, Bolgian, Austrian and American co-operative organizations to send delegations to the Soviet Union next summer.

Fascism Plans Curb on Press, Stage, Art; Most Strict Laws in World

ROME, March 24.—The strictest censorship laws in the world are being considered by the Italian Chamber of Deputies in order to prevent criticism of the Fascist dictatorship.

Penalties varying from light fines to imprisonment for three years and fines of 50,000 lire are provided by the measures. The Minister of the Interior and the prefects of provinces will supervise all books, periodicals, plays, photographs, works of art, moving picture films, advertising copy, theatrical manuscripts and phonograph records, if the proposed measures become laws.

The measures will guarantee moral as well as "political purity."

SHARP CLASH ON DISARMAMENT BY BRITAIN, FRANCE

French Once Again Ask Wealth Be Figured

GENEVA, March 24.—The League of Nations Preparatory Disarmament Commission had before it today the difficult task of striving to reconcile British and French theses of disarmament.

M. Paul Boncour, French delegate, has submitted the French thesis, which is in opposition in almost all points to that submitted by Viscount Cecil on behalf of the British.

The British thesis provides for the legislation of war-making bodies, whereas the French thesis provides for the regulation of all potential war-making bodies.

Would Limit Air Craft.

The French thesis suggests a permanent board of inquiry and it provides for the limitation of not only men actively in the military service but of men in the gendarmerie, customs guards and all others capable of being mobilized for war purposes.

Aerial disarmament, as proposed by the French, would include not only naval and military aerial forces but would be based on the total cubic volume of all airships owned by the contracting nations.

The French would base naval disarmament on global tonnage, and they would also place restrictions upon budgets during the period of one disarmament treaty.

Britain, U. S. Use Wealth

Great Britain and the United States are in opposition to the general thesis of the French plan, which is the limitation of civil as well as military power.

Viscount Cecil has already warned the correspondents here not to expect too much of the conference, and the task of the delegates today seemed to be a decidedly complicated one unless the French will withdraw their plan. Meanwhile Germany is demanding immediate disarmament and has announced she must be on an equal footing with all other continental powers.

COMMUNISTS OF GERMANY MEET IN SIX-DAY SESSION

Dawes Plan Resulted in Longer Work Day

By MANUEL GOMEZ

ESSEN, Germany, March. 8. (By Mail).—With a huge open-air demonstration, in which 60,000 of the half-a-million inhabitants of Essen braved the pouring rain to hear the speeches of Thaelman, Ewert, Pieck and Eberlein, the eleventh national convention of the German Communist party closed here yesterday. The convention lasted six days. It considered as its main political task the struggle against Dawes-Plan "rationalization," which has lengthened the working day, lowered wages and increased unemployment throughout Germany.

The convention was an emphatic endorsement of the policies of the central committee, whose resolutions on every point on the order of business was carried almost unanimously.

Workers Delegations

A feature of the convention was the great number of communications and delegations received from shop, mill and mine committees in different parts of the country. Many of these were from workers having no connection with the Communist party. A delegation of Social Democratic workers appeared at the convention to ask the Communists to take up a struggle against the right-wing leadership in the trade unions. All members of the delegation were expelled from the Social Democratic party the day following.

Special interest attaches to the Essen convention because it was the first one for the German Communist party since receipt of the now famous letter from the executive committee of the Communist International. That letter declared the chief internal enemy of party progress in Germany to be Ruth Fischer, which under the Ruth Fischer-Maslow regime resulted in a suicidal policy towards the trade unions and towards the united front in general.

Ultra-Left Weak.

Of the 183 delegates at Essen, representing the 130,000 members of the German Communist party, the ultra-left was at no time able to muster more than 12 in support of its proposals. These twelve, it is true, do represent a fairly homogeneous group. The ultra-left opposition was divided into the Weddingers, the Leipzigers, the ones opposed and the Urians group. The new delegates of the latter group (Hactels, Slecht and Grollowitz) openly declared their solidarity with Ruth Fischer, Maslow, Frlschou and all other so-called comrades who stand upon the common political platform. The convention thereupon removed them from the positions of party responsibility for a period of one year and ordered them to immediately give up their seats in Peoplesorg and Landtag.

Message To Workers Party

The new central committee, elected practically as proposed by Comrade Thaelman in the name of the retiring committee, represents a step toward consolidation of the party leadership on a broader basis than heretofore. Elements formerly in the opposition were included with a view to winning them for the party line of policy.

On the third day of the convention a cablegram was read announcing the death of Comrade Ruthenberg. The entire convention rose in respect as Comrade Remmele described Ruthenberg's contributions to the movement. Following a short address by the fraternal delegate of the Workers (Communist) part of America, it was decided to send a special message to the American party.

WORKERS CRUELLY MALTREATED IN HUNGARIAN CELLS

Building Resounds With Groans of Tortured

VIENNA, March 9th., (By Mail)— The Socialist and Communists who were arrested in Budapest, are still being most brutally tortured by the police.

The leader of the Socialist Workers Party, Stefan Vagi, and Zoltan Szanto, were terribly beaten. When they protested, the police agents said to them with scorn: "I'm glad that we don't beat you to death; in Bulgaria such criminals as you are immediately done away with."

The young workers Lecsi and Szeyen had to be taken to the hospital after three days of tortures. When they were taken back to the prisons, they had to be supported by the revolutionary policemen, because they could not walk alone.

Young working girls, Bona Vamos and Marie Matta had their heads punched several times against the wall, till they fainted.

The young worker Rabis is lying in his cell like a dead man.

The worker Hugo Kies has broken down after the tortures and looks like an old man.

The inhabitants of the houses in the surroundings of the police building cannot sleep during the night on account of the noise that comes from the police building.

The police even place small children in its service, who are instructed to observe the workers houses.

The "Neue Freie Presse" has printed an interview with the chief of the Budapest police, Hetenyi, in which he admits that the Budapest police use spies. He appeals to the police authorities of all big towns of Europe to co-operate in the fight against Bolshevism and intends to call a conference to Budapest in April for this purpose.

LONDON TIMES EXPOSES U. S. IMPERIALISM

Says Wall Street Sends Ultimatum to Mexico

LONDON, March 24.—Notice of nullification by the United States of the convention with Mexico designed "to prevent smuggling" is described by the Times as "without exaggeration an ultimatum."

Referring also to the Nicaraguan policy the Times comments:

"If the men who count for most in the formulation of the policy have their way, the Caribbean Sea must henceforth be considered as a United States lake.

"This is no longer a mere argument; it is an axiom".

After giving the details of the discarded agreement with Mexico the Times adds:

Prepared Against Revolution.

"The financial situation of the Calles government is admittedly precarious. There is no longer talk every day of its downfall by revolution and unless it does something to placate Washington it must perhaps be prepared to find the forces of discontent armed with American rifles and firing American bullets.

"There will be an immediate violent criticism of the Coolidge administration in some quarters but congress is no longer in Washington to pass resolutions in favor of arbitration.

Business Rules Supreme.

"Senator Heflin can no longer use the capitol as a great sounding board to denounce any overt act against Mexico as a papal plot and Senator Borah—with his 'God made us neighbors, let justice make us friends'—is just now an itinerant preacher and no more.

"There will be little for some months to come unless public opinion should be moved to retard the process which if continued would make Mexico an economic dependency of the United States.

"In the meantime it would perhaps be well to take President Coolidge's objection to the treaties with Nicaragua suggested by Senor Don Adolfo Diaz with a grain of salt.

Diaz Well Tamed.

"Diaz is ready to hand over his country and all of its activities to the United States for protection and tutelage not caring whether this conflicts or not with the Central American treaties of 1923.

"The United States government will hardly be so careless but what is undesirable in law may be and is being accomplished in fact.

"This is being done with Mexico which hasn't only threatened the great oil interests but interfered in Nicaragua and is now being disciplined".

FASCISTS ARE HELD IN HIGH BAIL BY COURT

Seven Blackshirts Assaulted Workers

WHITE PLAINS, March 24.—The seven members of the New York branch of the Fascist League of America, who were arrested following an attempt to break up a mass meeting called by the Anti-Fascist League of North America in Portchester Sunday, were held today in $10,000 bail each.

The prisoners are charged with using knives, sticks, stones and handgrenades in assaulting the Anti-Fascists.

About 50 Fascists came to Portchester by auto and by train last Sunday with the intention of beating up the speakers, Enea Sormenti and Carlo Tresca, and stopping the meeting. This was preceded by numerous threats that they would "break up" any meeting arranged by the anti-Fascists.

There are few Fascists in Portchester and the immediate vicinity, and the local blackshirts depend for assistance on the New York organization.

Enea Sormenti and Carlo Tresca are leading the fight against the cohorts of Mussolini through the Anti-Fascist Alliance.

"Civilian" American Army Officers in Nicaragua.

Two dispatches challenge our attention—one an associated press wire from Managua, Nicaragua, the other from the Herald Tribune Washington bureau. They read as follows in the order named:

1.) Fierce fighting is going on near Terra Azul, not far from Muy Muy, between Liberal and Conservative forces, the CIVILIAN aviators Lee Mason and William Brooks, who are attached to the Conservatives, reported tonight.

2.) The firing of several blocks of buildings in Chinandega by MAJOR William Brooks and MAJOR Lee Mason, American aviators serving with the Diaz army in Nicaragua, was charged in a protest submitted to the state department today by Dr. S. T. Vaca, agent for the Sacasa government here.

Who has given permission for these "civilian" American army officers to fly over Nicaragua homes and bravely bomb the helpless inhabitants? The state department? The war department? Kellogg? Coolidge?

If some Nicaraguan worker or farmer, enraged by the sight of his burning home and the shattered fragments of his kindred punctures one of these American citizens with a well-aimed rifle shot this will immediately become a monstrous atrocity justifying the most extreme measures by the American forces.

In this manner are the Latin Americans taught to understand that American citizenship is a high and holy thing. Every bomb is an offering to the American god of business and bombing of Latin American cities therefore a holy rite.

We hope some peasant with a Mauser has a little luck.

FEW HOMELESS CHILDREN IN THE SOVIET UNION, THORO SURVEY SHOWS

counter-revolutionary press. Now it is barking on a gold trail. The latest fashion in anti-Soviet propaganda calls for tears over "Russia's hordes of vicious, homeless children," who "stand in ragged filthy groups on the corners of the city's busiest streets, their bare feet stirring restlessly in the snow, their arms hug their meagre chests, while their eyes eagerly appraise the fur coats of the wealthy." This was contained in a story sent by mail by a Moscow correspondent to his paper six weeks before the first heavy snow flew in Moscow, a month to an unusually late winter and long, mild autumn. So we have to do here obviously with a male-to-order horror story reminiscent of Hearst's cable to the artist, Remington, sent to Cuba for "war pictures" just prior to the sinking of the "Maine". "You furnish the pictures and I'll furnish the war," the millionaire publisher wired the artist when he reported from the scene that there was no war for him to depict. The Moscow correspondent needed only to furnish the date-line, the snow and the freezing children could be furnished in New York.

Heritage of Past.

No Communist denies that there are homeless children in Russia. There are—many thousands of them. The problem is frankly and publicly recognized, and the Soviet government is making most strenuous efforts to completely eradicate this evil, inherited from Tsarist days and tremendously aggravated by years of imperialist war, following by intervention and counter-revolutionary pestilences, and by one of the worst famines in history.

The government is doing more and spending more to overcome this evil than any other country on earth to overcome the identical evil in its boundaries, and does not even claim the richest of all: the United States. It has already astounding successes to its credit and the complete liquidation of the problem is reckoned with in the course of a three-year program of governmental and voluntary social activity.

I shall try to show not only how greatly the capitalist newspaper stories about "children who lurk like lean and hungry wolves in the shadows of Russia's cities" distort and exaggerate the problem, nor how false are the tales of exile prisons on Arctic islands, and the crime-wave of "6 and 7-year-old handits," but, in addition, these articles will show the origin and true extent of this problem, and the measures employed to cope with it. It will then be seen that not only are these fairy-tales untrue—but that from the very nature of social relationships in the Soviet Union they CANNOT POSSIBLY be true.

How Many Are There?

On this question the plute propagandists ought to get together first to agree on a common line. A two-page Hearst Sunday "spread" tells us with its customary "scientific" accuracy that: "Official estimates place the total strength of this juvenile army of the wretched at between 300,000 and 600,000." Surely there is enough leeway here, it is as if one said that the population of New York City is between 15 million and 30 million—even the lowest is about twice too high, and another hundred percent is added for good-measure. This is a typical expression of "100%" American journalism.

Real Figures Lower.

The Moscow dispatch by a correspondent stationed here, H. R. Knickerbocker, puts the figure at 125,000, which is approximately correct, although many well-informed people insist that even this is much too high because of the duplication involved in the estimates. These children do not stay in one place but shift with the seasons, spending the summer at Caucasian and Crimean centres and the winter in the larger towns, and they are estimated in both cases at the peak.

Made out of whole is the story that "in Moscow alone 65,000 homeless children are registered," and implying that there are facilities for only 2410 of them in public institutions.

As a matter of fact no such number are registered anywhere. There are a total of 102 institutions under the supervision of the Moscow Department of Education, and in them 25,748 children are cared for. Not more than from 800 to 1000 are outside of these homes and schools in Moscow and in Leningrad the census showed only 250 entirely homeless. This is not because "the homes are full to the overflowing," as Mr. Knickerbocker writes, but because these left-overs are of a footloose vagabond type that can be and are being won over only one by one through the application of highly interesting social methods, which I shall describe later.

Many Sent to Parents.

From October 1925 to October 1926 a total of 7140 homeless children have been reclaimed from Moscow's streets, of which 4590 were sent back to parents or relatives and 2640 were put into institutions; 80% are transients from other towns. These youngsters who are left are not "6 and 7-year-old bandits" as the Hearst press puts it—6% of the footloose children who took advantage of the excellent Children's Night Shelter in Moscow from May, 1925, to January, 1926, were 14 years of age and 30.6% between 14 and 16, (according to an article by Dr. Footer in the organ of the "Society of Children's Friends," May, 1926). Nor are they "bandits" as well, nor they are not treated as such even though their method of getting a living does transgress the law somewhat. They are children who, as a result of conditions beyond their control, have lost their social roots, and the Workers' and Peasants' Republic is sparing neither effort nor funds to reclaim them and give them an opportunity of taking their rightful place in the proletarian productive process.

Custom Tailors Plan Membership Drive

Arrangements for an important membership drive will be made at a meeting of Local 1, Custom Tailors of New York, at the Bohemian Hall, 321 East 73rd street, Monday evening.

The membership of the local has increased considerably in the last few months, and active members hope to make the local more militant and effective than it has hitherto been. An interesting program has been provided for Monday's meeting. All tailors, in or out of the union, are urged to attend.

The Disintegration of the Socialist Party

By DAVID KVITKO.

ARTICLE II.

CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL is remembered not only by the socialists of New York state, whose gubernatorial candidate he was at the time when the socialist party had been still in its glory. He had been quite frequently seen on the socialist platforms throuout the United States. Yet his sudden disappearance from the socialist ranks caused no more stir than that of other "shining lights." Nor is it surprising now to learn the two causes for his breaking away from the party—"The St. Louis platform of 1917, and the performances of the wild-eyed in Russia."

THESE two events, which stand out as the two bright spots in the drab past of the socialist party, were the last straws which broke his socialist back. He and the "American people" can never forgive the socialist party these two sins, though the leaders tried hard to repent. As for Mr. Russell himself, he covered quite a distance, since he parted company with the socialist party. In fact he went so far that he is even ashamed of his own socialist past. He now stands on the solid rock of the American type of "democracy", and from his lofty heights he advises the socialist party "to can all this stuff about scientific socialism and all the terminology jargon that goes with it. There is no "class consciousness" in this country and will not be in your time. It is worse than useless to talk about it. Forget all about the economic interpretation of history and value, price and profit. These are things for the classroom, not for hustings. Drop all the names and abstruse dogmas that you have learned at the feet of long-winded prophets of the International. They will never go here."

MR. RUSSELL, as we see, is quite a mature person, and class-room stuff is quite unbecoming such a respectable gentleman. That this wisdom is harvested from the Soviet Union he is ashamed to acknowledge, for it does not befit such an "independent thinker," as he deems himself to be, to follow the footsteps of utter preachers than the "long-winded prophets of the International." Yet prophecy must be quite an alluring occupation, in spite of its dangers to fall into company of fools instead of the wise, and Russell could not resist the temptation of predicting that they "will not be any class consciousness in your time."

OF COURSE, his wisdom is not exhausted by his prophecy or advice, and he further teaches the "radicals" to drop the word "comrade" out of their vocabulary, as "you can never make headway with a political party in America whose members call one another by any such name. It only makes Americans stare and laugh—which is bad for your aimings." The "comrade" feels provoked of this plebian name in the "decent" company in which he finds himself at present, and the S. P. leaders also pay land there soon.

NOW suppose the party of "radicals" is built and the name "comrade" is omitted, what shall the name of the party be? For "Mr." Russell (comrade it was in the old "foolish" days) advises also to change the name of the party. "For the rest of this generation," says he, "the very word 'socialist' will be hateful in the ears of Americans." The reason we know already. The socialist party associated once with the "wild-eyed" Russians, and on its guilty conscience lies the "St. Louis platform of 1917." Now we have the plan of a party which shall drop the name 'socialist' and "comrade". A question no less serious arises, who should be the leaders of the party? Mr. Russell thus answers the question: "Select young Americans for leaders . . . Gently but firmly put into the discard the leaders that were responsible for the catastrophic folly of the St. Louis platform . . . . It is quite not useful to you in your present situation. What you want is somebody that understands the American psychology. . . . Give up the idea of reforming the world in a swoop and bringing in a complete new social order overnight. There are some things that don't happen in this world. This is one of them. Besides, how far will you get with the American voter if you start out by assuring him that everything in this country is perfectly putrid, but you know how it can all be changed and made lovely? He will merely move toward the nearest patrol box to have you run in for the psychopathic . . . Progress in this world is made a step at a time . . . ."

IT is curious that this wiseacre teaches the socialist party leaders to take "one step at a time" and to write the platforms in "straight out old-fashioned American, and don't require everybody that reads them to understand perfectly what Marx meant in the fourteenth chapter of 'Das Kapital'."

Mr. Russell is certainly courageous besides being wise. To write in the socialist party press, and to advise its leaders, who offered him the columns of the paper, to expel their betters, requires nerve. But what is most amusing is to charge the socialist party leaders in having demanded of their readers a perfect knowledge of Marx's Capital. If this terrible charge were true, there would not have been so many ignoramuses in the socialist party. Everybody knows, with the exception of Mr. Russell, perhaps, that the theoretical level of the socialist party membership was never high enough to boast of; and here the poor socialist party leadership with all the charges against itself, is handed one of which it is certainly innocent. The fact that Mr. Russell himself still betrays from the large portion of "Das Capitnl" he swallowed simply shows that he could never digest the material, and the fault lies with the socialist party but with his own stomach.

SUPPOSE now that the party has done away with the names "socialist" and "comrade", has ousted its old leaders and stopped feeding its members on scientific socialism, would that purging be enough to be eligible for a new party? Here is what he says: "You will never address a labor audience down to make faces at the American Federation of Labor. That organization may be scientifically all wrong, but you will notice that it trundles right along and keeps up its membership while your own has just about disappeared. The best thing you can do is to support the Federation and trot along with it. It is a blame sight nearer to the mind and will of the American worker than you are or are likely to be . . . . Get a hold upon its coat tail."

MR. RUSSELL surely judges the party by what it used to be in 1915, or else he would not speak of the socialist party's policy of "nonthe A. F. of L. Or it is possible that the socialist party's policy of "noninterference" with the A. F. of L. is taken by Russell as making faces? Is it possible that such a "keen" psychologist, as he is, failed to see that the socialist party leaders are not only far from criticizing the A. F. of L. policies but are actually very useful in helping its leaders in their war upon the left wing? That the socialist party leaders of a membership which "has just about disappeared" wish to hang on to the A. F. of L. coat tails is an open secret, and his advice to "Forget all about the Third International and the Thirty-third and all between" only shows that Russell's data is antiquated.

THE Russells are too tedious and they would interest us very little, indeed, unless as an example of people who turn traitors at the first onset of revolutionary wind. What is interesting is the psychology of the Oneals who offered these gentlemen the socialist party paper to abuse the party. What induced Mr. Oneal to publish such advice as to do away with the last vestiges of socialism? Not the novelty of criticism. The socialist party has been previously criticized from the right far more ably.

The reason must be sought elsewhere. The socialist party and the editor of the "New Leader" are much nearer to the "American" conception of Russell, that is the borrowed A. F. of L. program, than Russell to the old socialist ideology. If the socialist party cannot play the leading role in the A. F. of L. it can and tries to hang on to its coat tail (and the A. F. of L. knows how to discard its friends). Some useful services it can certainly render in the fight upon the Communists. Russell, consequently, does not repudiate the socialist party of today but of yesterday, and his advice to throw off the misnomer "socialist" is quite in accord with the tactic that prevails now in the socialist party. That of the socialist party only its name remains, which is a misnomer, we shall see from our further analysis of the "New Leader" symposium.

Why a Communist Children's Movement?

By EVA STONE.

With the intensification of the class struggle, we will find that the children's movement will be playing a more distinct and significant role.

The Boy and Girl Scouts is an international children's organization of the bourgeoisie. Its composition is mostly of working class parentage. On first observation, the scouts are a sport organization which is devoted to developing the children physically. Give them enough physical training and out-of-door sports so that they might grow up to be healthy and happy men and women. If a members of the scouts would be questioned on the purpose of the organization such would be the answer. Let us look what is here beneath the surface. What is the one aim of the scouts movement? The capitalists support the Boy and Girl Scouts movement both financially and morally. It is thru the propaganda of the scouts that the children are imbued with the spirit of loyalty, patriotism and devotion to the ruling class—the bosses. This is what the capitalists get in return for their support. And just, but not least, scout propaganda will prepare staunch defenders of and fighters for capitalism, and will turn out the future anti-labor agitators and strike-breakers. The whole nature life in the child as meaning no more that that with which they come in contact with on hikes or at camps. In other words, they picture life as being full of happiness, joy, beauty and plenty of opportunity. For these children no class struggle exists, and no misery can be found. In short, the Boy and girl scouts is an organization to train fighters for the defense of the bourgeoisie.

On the other hand, there is the Pioneer Youth. An educational club and camp organization of workers' children, sponsored by many trade unions and leading educators. This is according to the last conference of the Pioneer Youth which was held on March 2nd, 1927. Altho the Pioneer Youth call themselves an organization of workers' children, at the same time being sponsored by trade unions —they also claim to be "free from isms' and propaganda." Do you mean trade union "ism" by that also? This seems quite contradictory. For a working class organization to be free from propaganda, and play a neutral role must arouse suspicion. Agreeing that our society is divided into two distinct camps; the working class and the capitalist class, and that these two classes continually fighting each other like two enemies at war, it is impossible for such a thing as neutral to exist? Although the Pioneer Youth may claim to be neutral, they are obviously collaborating with other bourgeois organizations.

In order to counteract and fight the propaganda of both these organizations, the Pioneer Youth and the Boy and Girl Scouts, and to arouse class consciousness among the children of the working class, making them realize the true conditions that prevail, and finally rally them to the side of the proletariat in the struggle for emancipation—there is in existence the Young Pioneer League of America, the children's section of the Communist movement.

The Young Pioneer League is based on the active participation of its members in the class struggle. The main sphere of activity is centered around the school where the minds of little children are daily being poisoned with the propaganda of the nature of the boy and girl scouts in addition to the incorrect interpretations given to the children on the current events as well as historical facts—all tending to serve as capitalist propaganda in the schools. In cases of strikes, as in Passaic, the teachers are the spokesmen of the capitalist class in propagandizing against the workers who are fighting for a living wage, a strong union, and better conditions. The Young Pioneer League carries on propaganda thru the issuance of leaflets and bulletins in the schools, particularly enlightening the children on what is going on and giving a working class interpretation to these incidents as they arise as exposing the conditions in the schools. The Pioneers are participating in these activities of the workers in general, and in the interests of the working class children in particular. Although educational activity is carried on quite extensively within the Young Pioneer League, the first principle in education is thru active participation in the struggle. It is not education for the sake of education, but rather education that will develop active, militant participants in the struggles of the workers. A class education that will develop class leadership for the purpose and aim of the educational activity which is being carried on.

The Young Pioneer League has a big task before it at present. A task of educating the large masses of workers' children who are found in other organizations, and winning them over for active participation in the struggles of the working class. For this task we will depend upon the adult workers to cooperate with us. The children of militant trade unionists belong in the Young Pioneer League or they will otherwise become our enemy.

The Pioneer Ruthenberg Enrollment Drive should inspire you to send your child to the only working class revolutionary children's organization of America, THE YOUNG PIONEER LEAGUE.

Let us pave the way, fellow workers! Let us save the children of the working class from the capitalists!

Naturalization Boss Likes to Have Fascist Thugs as Citizens

WASHINGTON (FP).—Raymond F. Crist, commissioner of naturalization in the U. S. Department of Labor, has expressed the view that Italian Fascists are just the sort of material from which to make American citizens.

Crist was asked his opinion of the argument of Dr. Chas. Fama, of the Anti-Fascist League, that men who had sworn implicit obedience to Mussolini, as members of the Fascist organization, after they came to the United States, were not in good faith when they swore allegience to the United States government.

The naturalization commissioner said he saw no objection to Fascists; indeed, he thought they were just the sort of men needed here.

Bloodless Revolt

"Inheritors" is an essay on the vanishing pioneer freedom of America.

ROMNEY BENT

Plays an important role in John Howard Lawson's "Loud Speaker" at the 52nd Street Theatre.

Reviewed by HARBOR ALLEN.

THERE is a great play to be written about the old American pioneer spirit which drove men out to topple over forests and conquer a continent. Such a play must be written in a white heat, with turmoil and battle and epic grandeur. It must come out of some fierce, rugged mind like a giant welding or a colossal dynamo.

In "Inheritors" (at the Civic Repertory Theatre) Susan Glaspell attempted to write a play about pioneer love of freedom. She was not equal to the task. She had glow, but it was the glow of a lamp rather than of a furnace. She chips at a cameo instead of striking at an iron cast. She offers refinement instead of grandeur. She has "beautiful thoughts" and "exalted language" and "inspiration" instead of clash and battle and blood.

Her pioneers are loveable, gentle, tired people who have dropped their hoes and guns to talk. Their grandchildren who in 1920 fight for the old, lost freedom, do it sitting in a library. The play behind Miss Glaspell's "Inheritors" somehow never reaches the visible stage. It gets lost in the wings. It takes place in the intervals between the acts. Before you are only people talking, talking, interminable talking. They talk about how they feel, what they think, what their grandfathers thought, what they wish would happen, what has happened, and what will happen. They walk in, they sit, they rise, they go out. Actually nothing happens. The pity of it is that so much might.

In Act I you have old Silas Morton dreaming of the college he will found on the hill above the pioneer settlement. It will be his gift to the unborn children of the new country, of this light on the hill; his way of expressing love for the land, of passing on the vision he has caught from his learned neighbor, Felix Fejevary, the revolutionary refugee from Hungary.

Forty years later, in act II, Morton college is a Babbitt factory on a hill. It pays lip homage to its pioneer founder; meanwhile begging money from reactionary legislators. The students are anxious to squeeze out the "jays" and "get the right sort." its conscientious objectors have been sent to jail. Its Hindu students, clamoring for Indian freedom, are threatened with the fate of pioneers, arrested, beaten. its radical professors are muzzled with the threat of dismissal. The light on the hill is pretty well burned out.

Only Madeline, granddaughter of old Silas and old Felix, still feels the pioneer fire. But there is no longer room for the old free spirit; and in the end she is carted off in a cell. What a play this might have made! What a scene could have been written about the skirmish on the campus, this Hindu boy thundering against England, the students jeering, the police jerking the speaker down, Madeline beating them with her tennis racket! Instead, all you have is a broken racket and tedious recital. Granted, the Greeks did it too. But this isn't Greece, and the talky, intellectual drama has had its day.

Pick Walsh as Lawyer For the Jailed Strikers

Masses Applaud Furriers' Answer to Green

The thousands of cloakmakers, dressmakers and fur workers who jammed Cooper Union—seats, aisles, platform and lobby—last night at the call of the Unity Committee of the two New York Joint Boards were informed by the chairman, C. S. Zimmerman, that Frank P. Walsh, the noted attorney, had yesterday decided to become the lawyer for the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers.

Mr. Walsh had conferred with New York Joint Board leaders for the past six weeks on this matter, and after a thorough investigation decided the wide-spread charges made by the reactionary officials of the International Furriers' Union and the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union were just a bogey raised to frighten the general public.

Walsh has decided that as soon as he finishes his present legal work, said Zimmerman, he will take up the task of defending the workers who were the victims of Judge Otto Rosalsky's severe sentences.

Veil of Aggressive Fight.

The enthusiasm which greeted this announcement at the opening of the meeting mounted steadily as one speaker after another told of the aggressive fight being carried on by every branch of the united needle trade forces. There was an ovation for Louis Hyman, general manager of the New York Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers, when he rose to speak; there was another demonstration for Ben Gold, general manager of the furriers' Joint Board, when he arrived n the platform. Repeated applause, shouts, and laughter marked the various speeches and the announcements of contributions to the defense fund.

Shop Chairmen Speak.

There were a number of shop chairmen who spoke of conditions in the trade—S. Biro, chairman of the Furriers' Council, M. Seidenberg, chairman of the J. Buchman shop which sent a contribution of $66.60 for defense; M. Bleiman, I. Brauner, chairman of the Cloakmakers' Shop Chairman's Council; S. Bleeff, chairman of the Lustig Shop; and B. Topchik, who came from the Main Cloak & Suit Shop in Passaic, N. J., with a contribution of $180.25.

In a resolution which was unanimously adopted by the shop chairmen, they pledged once again their whole-hearted support to the Joint Boards and urged all cloak and dressmakers to give a half day's pay—as quickly as possible—for the Defense Fund, and all fur workers to pay their $25 tax which had been voted several weeks ago to help carry on the fight against the union-smashing forces of their International and the A. F. of L.

Long Ways From Death.

Louis Hyman in ridiculing the International's repeated charge that the left wing is worn out, in fact really dead, pointed out that after 14 weeks of fighting the progressive forces—stronger, than ever—have now engaged Frank Walsh to strengthen their legal battle ranks, and they will begin today issuing their new needle trade paper. Great excitement was caused by the appearance on the platform of a page-proof of this new weekly called "Unity."

Judged By Company.

Hyman showed that the reactionary International officials could be judged by their friends.

"When we cloakmakers voted a day's pay to the furriers when they were on strike," said Hyman, "the Industrial Council telegraphed its members telling them not to let us do this. Now when the right wing International officials are trying to make a break among the furriers give them a day's pay, the bosses co-operate by urging the workers in their shops to turn over their money.

"When labor began advocating the 8-hour day, the bosses martyrized the leaders in the Haymarket case in Chicago. Now when the advance ranks of labor have won the 5-day week, the bosses are more clever and instead of leading the attack themselves they use the reactionary labor officials to do the work."

Joseph Goretsky, manager of Local 35, who was another speaker, told of the continued efforts to frame him and land him, together with the other cloak strikers behind prison bars.

Gangsters Quarrel.

Ben Gold, who was the final speaker, told the workers many rumors of the fights that are growing within the right wing ranks. The two chief gangsters of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have had a falling out, said Gold, Sigman and Breslaw are quarreling for control of the "hoteg Local 35" which they have set up, and the black klan is warring with the marco-syndicalists all along the line.

There is even the rumor that Benjamin Schlesinger, former president, will have to be brought back to save the right wing line from cracking.

Gold spoke of the woman's committee which had been formed by the Unity committee, and which had done such valiant work in preventing some of the brutal attacks of the industrial squad on Tuesday.

Roher Trial Starts.

San Ansher a cloakmaker and Joe Diamond, a furrier, received sentences of five days in Jefferson Market Court. They were arrested recently during the disturbances that have followed the attempts of the two Internationals to drag workers to register in their "fake union."

In the afternoon of the same day the Western Pennsylvania Council, which is part of the National Council, will meet in conference at 805 James Street.

Solomon Roher, picket during the cloakmakers general strike, was begun yesterday. A jury was drawn and actual trial will begin today.

Samuel Brossman, who is serving sentence imposed by Judge Rosalsky for his loyalty to his union, was called into general sessions yesterday accused of another assault, but this frame-up, which Joint Board leaders believe to be instigated by the International, failed, and the charge was dismissed.

Pennsylvania Solons Deny Poor All Birth Control Information

HARRISBURG, Pa., (FP).—Facts and arguments seem to have little effect upon the house committee on health and sanitation of the Pennsylvania legislature, but let a young lady smoke a cigarette in front of that committee body and the effect is tremendous.

Able speakers were presenting the case for the Sterling bills, which would permit doctors in Pennsylvania to give contraceptive advice and drugs to married persons. Dr. Stuart Mudd, University of Pennsylvania medical school professor; Dr. Boswell Johnson, president, American Eugenics Society; Dr. H. C. Westervelt of Pittsburgh; and Dr. James F. Cooper, medical director, New York City birth control clinic, argued for the bills.

The doctors said that the Pennsylvania laws of 1870 and 1897 which all but forbid anyone to mention birth control are antiquated, inhuman and unenforceable.

These arguments were ignored by the opposition—Dr. John A. Mcgilin of Philadelphia, the only opposing speaker, confining himself to personal attacks on the advocates of birth control.

FUR WORKERS' JOINT BOARD SAYS GREEN GIVES CRY OF DESPERATION

The shop chairmen of the cloak, dress and fur industries who met last night in Cooper Union at the call of the Unity Committee recently formed by the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers, and the Joint Board of Furriers, of New York, heard with interest the statement drawn up by the Furriers' Joint Board in answer to a speech delivered last Monday night by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, at a special meeting of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council.

At the close of the statement, which was read by Ben Gold, general manager of the Furriers' Joint Board in the course of his speech, the shop chairmen shouted with laughter when Gold asked "Do you think Green will organize Unity?" The shop chairmen that he certainly would not, for the Joint Board says:

"The Joint Board of the furriers' union considers the speech of President Green, which ha delivered at the meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council on Monday, March 21st a cry of desperation.

"President Green's slanderous attacks and accusations against the Joint Board are defeat signals from one fighting a losing battle. In his speech before the delegates at the Central Trades and Labor Council, President Green threw aside his dignity as president of the American Federation of Labor and became hysterical. Unconsciously he revealed the pitiful condition that has resulted from his attempts to build up dual unions in the furriers and the cloak and dress industries in New York.

Repeats Old Story.

"President Green's repetition of the discredited police bribe charges, with which he attempted to intimidate the city authorities, reveals very clearly the policy of provocation and frame-up which he and vice-president Woll have pursued and intended to use against the furriers' union.

"Every officer of the Joint Board mentioned by President Green in connection with these ridiculous bribe charges absolutely denies the statements attributed to them, and demands to know from what spurious documents Mr. Green was reading at last Monday's meeting and which he led his hearers to believe were the testimony of members of the Furriers' Joint Board.

Bullying Furriers.

"The threat of President Green to go to the extent of revoking the charter of the International Fur Workers' Union if its officers make peace with the Joint Board, is convincing proof that the officers of the A. F. of L. have constitutionally.

Withdraw Stupid Charges!

"The Joint Board again demands that Mr. Green should withdraw his clumsy frame-up charges of police bribery; that Mr. Green should remove from the fur market the sluggers who are terrorizing the workers; that Mr. Green shall reinstate the Joint Board and the locals which were unconstitutionally dissolved and suspended.

"The Joint Board further demands that instead of talking empty phrases about 'law and order'—by which Mr. Green really means intimidating the fur workers with the aid of police and gangsters—and that he shall see to it that the regular convention of the union, which is due in May, is called at once. Thus he will be practicing a little law and order and a little constitutionality."

SHOP CHAIRMEN OF NEEDLE UNIONS SEE BEGINNING OF AMALGAMATION

The meeting adopted with unanimous enthusiasm a resolution which reads:

"We, the shop chairmen of the Joint Board Cloak and dressmakers' Union and the Joint Board Furriers' Union assembled at a joint meeting in Cooper Union on Wednesday, March 23, greet with enthusiasm the formation of the Unity Committee from both Joint Boards.

"It is our firm conviction that through the united forces of both Joint Boards the struggle against the union splitters, the Sigmans and the Schatmans, will be led to a victorious conclusion.

Towards Amalgamation.

"We greet the unification of both Joint Boards as the first step toward complete amalgamation of all the needle trade unions.

"We pledge all our energies to the struggle against our enemies, and fervently appeal to support the unity committee of both unions in their efforts to free our unions from the menace of Sigmanism and Schatmanism.

"The shop chairmen assembled at this meeting call on all the cloak and dressmakers to contribute their half day's pay toward the defense fund immediately, and call upon all fur workers to pay their tax promptly so as to carry on the struggle to a speedy victory."

The Manager's Corner

INDIVIDUAL VS. GROUP JOURNALISM.

Flats flew freely in a fierce quarrel between J. T. Ruland, editor and publisher of The Observer of Northport, L. I., and J. Alden Brett, editor of The Journal of the same city. It seems that Mr. Brett met Mr. Ruland in the local post office, called him a "yellow dog" and punched him in the eye. This was in reply to an editorial in The Observer denouncing Mr. Brett in the following terms: "The vituperation of our gifted defamer reminds us of the dying hiss of a deadly serpent."

This quarrel is a relic of the period of individual journalism, when newspapers were largely the expression of some dominant individual like Horace Greeley and the like. The newspapers of today have lost this characteristic. They are largely owned and controlled by powerful corporations like the Scripps-Howard Syndicate, Press Publishing Company, New York Times Publishing Company, Hearst's, etc. These corporations are definitely group-supported and group-controlled. By maintaining control of a chain of these newspaper syndicates covering the entire country, the capitalist class is enabled to control practically the entire publicity machinery of the United States.

The DAILY WORKER, the national labor daily, must also be group-supported and group-controlled. It must be controlled and supported by those whom it serves, the workers. For this reason the Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund is, in every sense of the word, a logical and necessary step in building our paper. In this spirit it is being eagerly carried forward by workers throughout the country.

FIGHT ON!

The way to meet that challenge is to get into the fight for 25,000 readers for the Daily Worker. Roll up your sleeves and prepare to put every ounce of strength into every blow you strike for the Daily Worker. Remember that every reader you get is another BLOW against the rule of the capitalist class, another worker enlisted in the army of economic and social freedom. Remember that every subscription you obtain is a BLOW in the interests of Labor.

Comrade Ruthenberg showed us how. He was hated and feared by the ruling class and loved by the workers because he struck BLOW after BLOW at the present system of exploitation. Now it is your turn to STRIKE A BLOW. You must strike hard and often WITH SUBS.

The Blood of the People Is on the Heads of Those Who Defend the Old Order

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE imperialist cutthroats are very evidently seeking and no doubt, they believe they have found an excuse to open war on the Chinese revolution as a result of an incident resulting from the taking of Nanking and Chunkiang by the People's Armies.

Nanking, especially, becomes the center of interest instead of the greater city of Shanghai, as the capitalist news services report that American and British destroyers are "laying down a terrific bombardment of Nanking with high explosive shells."

This report must be taken in connection with the news that came thru yesterday. The Associated Press, under date of Shanghai, March 23, stated:

"Nanking fell without fighting. All the Americans and the United States consulate are safe. Only minor disorders within the city occurred.

"THE CITY OF CHINKIANG ALSO FELL BLOODLESSLY AND THE AMERICANS THERE ARE SAFE."

If there is any trouble, therefore, at Nanking, or at Chinkiang, it is certain that it was instigated by the Imperialist invaders. The People's Army has nothing to gain by the incidental killing of a few profit parasites.

Ever since the People's Armies began moving down the Yangtze Kian River toward Shanghai, the military machine of the alien profiteers, including warships from a dozen nations, have been itching to begin their business of murder.

The robber imperialists have viewed with agony the development of the Chinese revolution. They have seen great sections of China go over peacefully and without bloodshed to the People's Standards.

This is March, "The Month of Revolutions." It was in this month, ten years ago, that czarism was overthrown in Russia. This was accomplished practically without bloodshed. The same was true when the masses, in the cities and on the land, went over to the Bolshevik position in the following month of November.

This is the month of the anniversary of the Paris Commune. Fifty-six years ago the working class of Paris successfully held aloft the banners of revolutionary until their class enemies in both France and Germany joined forces, a combined power that was too strong for them. Then the massacre began—the slaughter of the 30,000 workers of Paris—at the hands of the butchers whose descendants today have their murder ships in battle array before the great cities of China where labor is today successfully assuming power.

The Hungarian Soviet Republic was established practically without bloodshed. The same was true of the Bavarian Soviet Republic. But these were heroic efforts to win western Europe for labor. But the slaughter came, the terror reign ensued when the old order in Europe, ally assisted with American gold, successfully overcame, in a bath of blood, the will of the many.

The Paris Commune was unsuccessful but it proved an inspiration and a lesson to labor in the years that have followed. The workers of Hungary and Bavaria were unable to repeat the victory of the Russian workers and peasants. The Chinese masses are proving more successful, but they have great struggles ahead.

World labor cannot permit the Chinese revolution to face the fate of the Paris Commune. There are many indications that such will not be the case. The Chinese revolution has a powerful party—the Kuomintang—as its leader. It is defended by a well disciplined and carefully trained army, the Kuominchun! The unity of the city workers with the peasants is being developed. National solidarity grows.

But the capitalist order will not give up China without a struggle, no more than it has given up hope of conquering the Union of Soviet Republics even to this day. But the blood is on the heads of the supporters of the dying social system. It is on the heads of those responsible for the fascist states that have been erected in Europe, at the cost of tens of thousands of workers' lives, especially in Italy, Spain, Poland, the Balkan countries, the bloodiest being Roumania and Jugo-Slavia, and the Baltic provinces of the Paris peace bandits, nests of terror, most crimson with labor's blood being Finland and Lithuania.

The scene changes to Nanking, China, city of 580,000 population, the center of many struggles since the Manchus were deposed and the Chinese republic came into existence in 1911. Chinkiang is about 45 miles down the Yangtze, at the juncture with the Grand Canal, with extensive imports.

The winning of these two ports is important alike for the Chinese revolution and for world imperialism.

"Socony Hill," the stronghold of the Standard Oil Company in Nanking, becomes the news center of the day. It is charged that "Americans" have been compelled to seek Socony Hill as a sanctuary, to protect themselves against the Chinese.

The first news dispatched said that the "Americans" had to take flight before the depredations of "Northerners," the retreating columns of the foreign profiteers. If there were any disorders this is no doubt the correct explanation.

If there are any American dead in China today, at Nanking or elsewhere, missionaries, Standard Oil agents, or the marines, bluejackets or other lieutians of the international banker, they have doubtlessly been slain by their own hirelings.

In explanation of the situation, one of the paragraphs in the manifesto issued by General Pai Tsung Hsi, in command of the People's Army at Shanghai, is very enlightening. He says:

"For eighty years the imperialists, under protection of unequal treaties, have reduced China to a state of vassalage.

"AFTER THE REVOLUTION OF 1911, THE FOREIGN IMPERIALISTS CONTINUALLY SUPPLIED CHINESE IMPERIALISTS WITH RIFLES AND GUNS, WITH WHICH THEY HAVE WAGED WAR FOR THE LAST FIFTEEN YEARS.

"On the one hand the foreign imperialists have checked the development of Chinese education and industries, and on the other have secured for themselves special privileges.

"But the Chinese now have awakened and Shanghai, the greatest commercial center in the Far East, will become not only a strong base for Chinese nationalism, but for a world revolution."

The paragraph referred to is set in bold faced capital letters. But the paragraph that stirred the imperialists of the world and their press was the last paragraph, the declaration of solidarity of the workers and peasants of China with the oppressed of all lands.

The shelling of Nanking by United States and British warships was the answer. Any display of solidarity with the working class of other countries is a crime in the eyes of the imperialist world. Imperialism seeks to punish that crime in the only manner that it knows how.

American labor cannot remain idle as this struggle grows.

PRINCIPALS IN FORD-SAPIRO SUIT SNAPPED AT TRIAL

Here are the principals in the $1,000,000 libel suit brought against Henry Ford and the Dearborn Independent by Aaron Sapiro, Chicago attorney and organizer of farmers co-operative societies, snapped at the trial in federal court at Detroit, Mich. They are, left to right, Henry Ford; Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, chief defense attorney; Aaron Sapiro, who is suing the auto magnate and the magazine for articles appearing in the Independent; and William Henry Gallagher, Detroit attorney, who is prosecuting the libel suit for Mr. Sapiro.

The Citizens' Military Training Camps

By NAT KAPLAN.
(One-time member of the Recruiting Publicity Bureau, U. S. A.)

To the American youth who thinks of war as an adventure, a series of triumphal marches and parades, no book will be more revealing than that written by the marine corps captain, Laurence Stallings—"Plumes," which we had the pleasure of rereading recently.

Stallings knows war, but, more to the point, his experiences in the "war to democracy," "the war to end war," taught him the bitter lesson of his betrayal, along with that of thousands, by the Judas-kisses of the patriot politicians, bankers and editors who today, as then, form the sideline chorus for the clicking typewriter music of the C. M. T. C. recruiters.

The marine captain fell with many wounds during an attack on Belleau Wood. He endured all of the agonies of battle and surgery and returned to the United States with a wrecked body and a mind sickened by useless, purposeless butchery. Despite heroic attempts by plastic surgeons, Captain Stallings was forced to have a leg amputated. All of this, for what?

* * *

"Richard Plume had life stolen from him. Stolen by all those scoundrels who were not there with him. The scoundrelly . . . . orators were not there.

* * *

The same orators are playing the marionetta, now dangling from strings that center at Wall Street, extend to Washington and, from there, are put into operation by the Recruiting Publicity Bureau at Governors Island, New York. Most notable will be the air-thumping gesticulations, the flag-waving gestures, the fervid mouthings of these strumpet puppets, these kept-clergymen, these Wall Street yes-men, while they plead for the "mental, moral and physical development" of American youth and respect for duly constituted authority.

Leaders and authority of what sort? To return to Stallings, marine captain.

"War is a brutal and vicious dance, directed by ghastly men. It was the tragedy of our lives that we had to be mutilated at the hands of dolts and fools. I was seduced into it by men like Taft, who went about speaking for Wilson's participation in the war. Until I went to France a long succession of baptist preachers had threatened me with the horror of death. I've lost that interest, and I'm not afraid to die. I can walk into a church and laugh in the preacher's face. What does he know about death?"

These same holy men are helping to sell the military training idea with the usual line of tripe, treacle and hokum. "Physical training," "mental, moral and physical development," "citizen's training camps," "free vacation,"—and so forth, with a skillful avoidance of things and terms military.

But glance at a copy of, "The Military Instructors Manual."

"Success in battle is the ultimate object of all military training."

"The scheme is to make the student a good shot, singly and collectively, in time of peace and in time of war."

"The functions of bayonet training are (1) to teach the correct use of the bayonet until it becomes instinctive; (2) to develop the fighting spirit; (3) to develop speed, accuracy and coordination."

"The most vulnerable points of the body are: Lower abdomen, base of the neck, small of the back (on either side of the spine), chest and thighs. Bony parts of the trunk must be avoided by accurate aim."

"After every butt blow a thrust must immediately follow, since no butt blow of itself, is apt to be fatal."

Coupled with these contributions to the "mental, moral and physical development" of the American youth, courses in "history" and "citizenship" are given, but in the interest of saving your laughter for a perusal of the comic magazines, none will be given—except the all-pervading "axiom" that all opposition to the military and patriot creed has its origin in Moscow, that all opponents are either castrati, nervous women or reds.

This is the sort of teaching that is masked by the "free summer camp" garb of the Citizens' Military Training Camps, ballyhooed by the type of advertising and "news" stories that would have sent Diogenes scurrying for another lantern.

Citizens' Mill. Train. Camps. Trial 2 weeks will be the air-thumping gesticulations, the flag-waving gestures, the fervid mouthings of these strumpet puppets, these kept-clergymen, these Wall Street yes-men, while they plead for the "mental, moral and physical development" of American youth and respect for duly constituted authority.

A newspaper review of "What 'Price Glory?" says "It deals with the should-be forgotten side of the struggle in France." In the same attitude, a kept press seeks to either ignore or endorse the C. M. T. C. campaigning of the American fascisti patriots. Instead of the black shirts worn by the Italian terrorists, they seek to employ the O. D. of the C. M. T. C. They bristle with Hun psychology, their "school" grounds are within the bounds of army posts, notorious for their moral laxity, reeking with obscenity, vulgarity and filth, and they prate a never-ending line of "mental, moral and physical development."

A solid, massed front of public opinion, meeting the lies of the recruiters and apologists with truth, will defeat the hidden purposes of the Citizens' Military Training Camps.

THE QUESTION.

Are you pleased with Judge Seeger's decision in the "Peaches" Browning case?

THE PLACE.

145th street and Broadway.

THE ANSWERS.

Mrs. Rhudd, McCombs Place, housewife: "Yes. Even tho I'm a woman myself, I do not sympathize with Peaches. She wasn't fair to Mr. Browning. She didn't live up to her side of the bargain. Judge Seeger was right in denying her alimony."

Sam Keller, Newark, salesman: "No. I regret that Browning won. The judge was to merciful to that fool. He knew what he was going in for and he ought to pay now."

* * *

Mrs. Winston, West 142nd street, housewife: "Yes. Peaches should have been more appreciative. She wanted too much and now she has nothing. However, I wouldn't be surprised if they reconcile."

* * *

M. Gutnick, 231 West 29th street, manufacturer: "No. I believe there might be some truth to Mrs. Browning's charges. At any rate, Mr. Browning is rich enough and should pay for his 'youthful folly.' I, too, think that they will reunite."

* * *

Mrs. J. Rodgers, West 149th street, housewife: "Yes. I sympathize with Mr. Browning. I feel he was tricked into this marriage. Personally, I believe Mrs. Heenan is more to blame for it than Peaches."

Made World Better Place.

Editor, Daily Worker:—Under date of March 14, 1927, I notice that the government is dismissing its case vs. C. E. Ruthenberg. This reminds me of the war prosecution which hounded Ruthenberg into prison.

I admire his courage and his manhood, for he was a man. He helped to make this world a better place in which to live. Sincerely yours, Ernest Lundeen.

Follows Nearing's Advice.

Editor, Daily Worker:—One of the best methods to increase the circulation of The DAILY WORKER was suggested by Comrade Scott Nearing at the Lenin Memorial meeting. He advised that regular readers and friends of The DAILY WORKER buy copies of the paper while on the way to work, leave them in the subways, and repeat the process while going home.

I have been buying regularly 3, 4, and 5 copies of The DAILY WORKER each day, and always leave them in trains and street cars. I have noticed that on many occasions the papers are picked up by passengers and read with great interest.

I urge all those who want to see the Greens, the Wolls, and the Sigmans driven from the labor movement and a new class-conscious fighting spirit injected into it, to help spread with all their means the only English labor organ, The DAILY WORKER.

—Henry Walters.

BOOKS

SACCO, VANZETTI, AND "THE RESPECTABLES."

The Case of Sacco and Vanzetti. By Felix Frankfurter. Little, Brown and Company. $1.00.

To anyone familiar with the case at close range, attendance at a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting is rather a disturbing experience. You fidget as speakers rummage helplessly in the heaped-up mass of evidence and legal phrases, facts and near-facts. You wonder why speaker after speaker somehow picks some specially harsh bit of misinformation as the cue for a burst of eloquence. Each speaker has his own version of the case—not exactly erroneous, just truths torn out of their context and badly assembled.

But gradually the disturbance passes. You are caught up by the spirit of such a meeting. You realize that however wrong in detail, the speakers are right on the whole. They cut through the legal ramifications and evasions to the grim heart of the matter: two radical workers being tortured to death by the master class. They make vivid what the workers all over the world have sensed—the Sacco-Vanzetti case as a flaming symbol of the class struggle.

Felix Frankfurter's book takes no cognizance of this symbol, except where he does so by implication and almost unconsciously. His book is meticulously correct on detail—and horribly wrong on the whole.

Let it be understood to begin with that he has made a masterful summary of the purely legal aspects of the case. The physical facts are presented in concise, organized form. The book should be read and re-read by labor speakers and writers and by workers generally who want their indignations a little more concrete. There was no reason why Prof. Frankfurter should consider the deeper meaning of the case, the development of the international agitation, etc. All that was outside the scope of his intention. In the limits which he set for himself he did exceedingly well, and despite the remarks which follow, this review is intended as an endorsement.

At several points, however, he betrays his feeling about the larger aspects of the case. That feeling is as much determined by his liberal cast of mind as was Judge Thayer's reaction to the case as a whole. The liberal mind shrinks from the unpleasant reality under the surface; it gets the bibbyibbies in the full view of a loud rough international agitation; it prefers to narrow all issues to some polite and respectable formula. Thus Frankfurter—after himself showing how all the social, financial, political and legal forces joined in an orgy of persecution—meekly apologizes for having questioned the infallibility of the courts. The efforts to revise the work of the courts, he pleads, "in no wise imply an attempt to undermine the necessary safeguards of society against crime."

* * *

"Rather do they reveal confidence in our institutions and their capacity to rectify errors. They also serve to warn against too marked an assumption that, because ordinarily the criminal machinery affords ample safeguards against perversions of justice, a situation may not arise where extraordinary circumstances have deflected the operation of normal procedure."

* * *

That's where he stopped. Those are the last words in the book. Beyond that point the finicky liberal, no matter how well-intentioned, cannot go. The road becomes too rough for him. If they cared and dared to go on he might discover that the sad exception by a curious chance generally affects the life of a leader of the workers; that the safeguards collapse just as soon as class issues are involved.

I want to single out two passages in the book, not because they are important in themselves but because they reveal an attitude typical of a large body of liberal opinion. Unfortunately many of our friends have yielded to the same attitude; and even the Italians in the Sacco-Vanzetti committee are lending themselves naively to the leadership of well-meaning American liberals (some of them call themselves "socialists").

(1) Referring to William G. Thompson's entry in the case on October 1, 1923, Frankfurter says: "The espousal of the Sacco-Vanzetti cause by a man of Mr. Thompson's professional prestige at once gave the case a new complexion and has been its mainstay ever since." In other words, the case was suddenly made nice and respectable, fit to be touched without gloves. The facts were the more damning of the Massachusetts court the day after October 1st than the day before. Yet, he says, the complexion of the case was changed.

Well, in the first place, the forces operating in this case, on both sides, are no less [illegible] Thompson or two dozen Thompsons do not affect it. The radical attorney, it is true, got a rough deal from the courts. But how the eminently respectable Thompson fared? He argued the appeals before the Supreme Court—and that court stood squarely by Thayer. He presented new testimony—and Thayer brushed it aside with contempt. He defied Judge Thayer's fairness—and he was called crazy in an official opinion. In a word, his experience was precisely the same as his predecessor's, Fred H. Moore's. It is only in Frankfurter's mind, and minds like his, that any change has taken place. The complexion of the case is still what it was—a class persecution. Not all the optimism of Thompsons and Frankfurters can make the Massachusetts courts kosher.

(2) The same absurdity crops out earlier in the book in a reference to Moore, who is described as "a Westerner, himself a radical and a professional defender of radicals . . . an outsider . . . unfamiliar with the traditions of the Massachusetts bench . . . a factor of irritation. . . ." In effect this is an attack upon Moore because he gave Sacco and Vanzetti a class-conscious defense. Naturally only a radical could give them such a defense. Had there not been this effort on Moore's part to meet a class persecution frankly as such, without persiflage and make-shift, the international agitation might never have come to pass. Of course that agitation is an unsavory business in the respectables in Massachusetts and they will never forgive Moore. But without it there would be no Sacco-Vanzetti case. There would be only two corpses.

Frankfurter himself shows that the first conviction of Vanzetti was even more farcical than the second. There was no Moore to antagonize the court, no agitation whose complexion needed a beauty doctor. Yet there was not a ripple of protest. By the time the second trial came the radicals and Moore's bold tactics had aroused attention. But even then the protest came from radical and working class sources only. The respectable opinion which is now the "mainstay" of the case was extremely dumb. It remained quite dumb year after year although the facts were as clear then as now. The very quotations made by Frankfurter were in hundreds of labor papers—there was no excuse for the respectables not knowing. There was no excuse for the Atlantic Monthly waiting till 1927 to print the thing. It received and rejected articles to the same purport in 1922. The workers' agitation—which would have been impossible without Moore's deliberate appeal to the class consciousness—was then as now the mainstay of the case. Without it the Sacco-Vanzetti case would have been extremely dead by now.

It was not Fred H. Moore's supposed lack of familiarity with Massachusetts courts that "irritated" Judge Thayer, but the fact that at every point he was merciless in exposing class bias and prejudice by judge and prosecutor. Moore had ample opportunity to learn about Massachusetts law when he successfully defended Ettore, Giovannitti and Caruso in a murder frame-up after the Lawrence strike. His great popularity with the hard-boiled New England newspapermen who covered the trial is proof that Thayer's rather than Moore's personal characteristics were to blame for the irritation between them. Anyone else who would have tried to show up the farce would have been equally irritating and infinitely less effective. Thompson is irritating to Thayer now. Thayer was equally annoyed with non-Westerners like Elizabeth Glendower Evans and Anna Davis.

These slurs at a brilliant and courageous labor attorney, and the silly assumption that the case has miraculously become respectable in the eyes of the Boston Herald et al, are just laughable—unless the workers take them up seriously. That is why these remarks had to be made. Whatever the outcome the credit belongs to the radicals, attorneys and others, who showed up justice and made a case whose complexion offends certain fastidious tastes.

Bearing this in mind, by all means read Frankfurter's book. Buy it for permanent reference. Give it to somebody else to read.

The Negro in Industry.—The total Negro population in continental United States in 1920 was 10,463,131, an increase over the 8,827,763 of 1910. Of this number 4,824,161 aged 10 years and over were engaged in gainful occupations in 1920, a decrease from 5,192,535 in 1910. The percentage of Negro population gainfully occupied is considerably larger than that of the white population.

11,000 Millionaires.—"It is computed that a person who receives a yearly income of $50,000 or more must have a total wealth of $1,000,000. In 1914, upon this basis, there were probably about 4,500 millionaires in the United States. This number increased to about 6,600 in 1915, to about 10,900 in 1916, to about 11,800 in 1917, the maximum number of American millionaires at any one time—due probably to war conditions. At the present time there are probably about 11,000 American millionaires."—Joseph H. McCoy, in American Bankers' Association Journal, September, 1926.

FIVE dollars for a three minute exhortation to the capitalist deity is the compensation allowed by the New York assembly for that kind of labor. Mrs. Edith Craig, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hoosick, N. Y. has the doubtful honor to be the first woman to have ever opened the New York assembly with prayer. After reading Elmer Gantry by Sinclair Lewis, one would not be surprised if the spiritual Edith adjourned to the cloak room after her effort, to shoot a little game of craps with the speaker.

THE sum of $92,000,000 will be split among the stockholders of the Lackawanna railroad by order of the directors. The par value of the road's stock was originally $50 but is now $173 on the market. A Supreme Court decision ordered the Lackawanna to separate itself from its coal properties twelve years ago. The road was busy with other matters and the Supreme Court is always patient with rail magnates and coal barons. Now the Lackawanna will organize a new corporation which will hold the securities that are not allowed to repose legally in the railroad's safes. And everything will go on just as before. This is surely a convenient social system.

THE United States government now admits that it "sold" 3,000 rifles, 200 machine guns and 3,000,000 rounds of ammunition to Diaz of Nicaragua with which to "suppress revolutionary activities in that country." Of course the supplies were not sold. Diaz hasn't the price of a meal and there is not a corporal's guard in Nicaragua that would give him a drink of water if they found him dying of thirst in a desert. The United States government not only supplied Diaz with military supplies but supplied him with the soldiers to use them.

THE bombardment of Shanghai by the British and United States warships is a piece of effrontery that neither bullying imperialism would dare try on a country like Germany or France or on the Soviet Union. This is the kind of treatment they meted out to the Soviet Union when it was torn to pieces by civil war and struggling to get on its feet. That was before the Red Army was whipped into shape. It is safe to predict that the cock British and American naval commanders in Chinese waters will use different methods in China in a few years from now when the Chinese Red army will not have a civil war on its hands and a gang of reactionary brigands to get rid of.

The Hungarian Terror Opposed By Painters In Sharp Resolution

Thomas Wright, secretary of the New York council of the Painters union representing 14,000 workers has sent a telegram to Count Bethlen, premier of Hungary, protesting against the attempt of that white guard government to railroad to the firing squad 50 Hungarian workers who are now before a court martial. They were recently arrested because they were actively participating in the workers' struggles.

BROPHY AND HAPGOOD TELL NEED OF SIMULTANEOUS MINE CONTRACTS

Present conditions in the coal industry and the struggle against bureaucracy within the United Mine Workers' Union, were discussed by two of the leaders of the progressive union forces, who have appeared and a result the union has been in a real strategic bargaining position.

John Brophy, former president of District 2, at a dinner held last night in the Cafe Boulevard, 41st street and Broadway, under the auspices of the "Democracy in Trade Unions Dinner Committee".

Brophy, who was a candidate for president of the union running against President John L. Lewis at the election last fall, devoted himself to describing the conditions of the workers and the union's responsibility for such conditions.

Should Have One Contract.

"There have been times", said Brophy, "when the agreements in the anthracite fields and the bituminous fields have evolved at the same time "This is one of the things we want to have established permanently, instead of the present situation where the anthracite men struck last year, and the bituminous man were virtually scabbing on them; and this year we have the bituminous agreement running out on March 31st, and the

NEW YORK BAKERS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO SPREAD UNION

A strenuous campaign to organize the unorganized bakers in New York is being waged by Local 1, Amalgamated Food Workers.

Finding that the consolidation of the baking trust threatens to lower the standard of living and to reduce the New York baker to the status of a mere helper, the union is determined to bring the unorganized, who constitute 85 per cent of the bakers in the city, into the union.

A mass meeting, which prominent speakers will address, will be held to discuss the question of organization at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th street, Saturday April 2nd. All bakers are urged to attend.

Unity Idea Spreading; Pressers and Furriers Get Together In Forum

An important meeting of all active members of Local 35, the Pressers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, will be held today at 12:30 at local headquarters, 10 East 22nd Street.

Pressers and furriers yesterday joined in a spirited open forum at Local 35 headquarters, at which there was discussion of the various phases of the fight between the progressive and reactionary forces in the needle trades.

Mussolini's New Law Prohibits Mention Of Somber Fascist Crime

ROME, March 25.—The Italian chamber of deputies is hard at work, under taskmaster Mussolini, to perfect the world's most drastic censorship law.

Penalties varying from light fines to imprisonment for three years and fines of 50,000 lire are provided to wipe out pornography and sedition. Before theatrical, musical, dancing, pantomine or cinematographic productions may be presented, they must have the double approval of a special committee of the minister of the interior and the prefect of the province.

The prefect would have virtually complete powers of rejection without appeal, also being able to withdraw approval or suspend production at any time.

One of the things expressly forbidden is the publication, of details of "grewsome crimes," such as the fascist outrages or the murder of Matteoti.

Notorious Wall Report Handed On by Walker

Judge McAdoo "Familiarizes Himself With It"

The report of the special American Federation of Labor committee appointed to investigate the furriers strike of last year, has now been passed on to Chief Magistrate McAdoo, so Mayor Walker has announced.

It was turned over to Mayor Walker two weeks ago by the members of the committee and President William Green, and at that time the A. F. of L. officials denied that any charges of graft against the New York police but claimed that the fur workers had made such charges and their statements were handed to the mayor for his consideration.

Mayor Walker now announces that Magistrate McAdoo will "familiarize himself with the case" and report to the mayor on Monday about assigning some magistrate to take testimony in the investigation of the charges.

HOTEL WORKERS IN ORGANIZATION CAMPAIGN IN N.Y.

Series Of Big Meetings Being Arranged

Several hundred were present at an enthusiastic meeting held at the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Hall, 133 W. 51st St., called for the purpose of beginning an intensive organizational campaign.

H. M. Wicks, J. Lesino, Michael Overmyer, and P. Pascal Cesgrove, secretary-organizer of the union, were among the speakers who emphasized the vital importance of immediately bringing into the New York organization the thousands of underpaid, overworked employes in the city's hotels, restaurants and clubs.

Big Meetings Soon.

Plans were definitely laid at this meeting for a series of mass meetings to reach all classes of workers in hotel and restaurant work. The first meeting will be held for Greek workers on next Tuesday evening, the 29th. On Monday, April 4, a meeting will be called for Italian, French, and Spanish workers, and the third meeting, to be held at Bryant Hall, 41st St. and 6th Ave., hotel and restaurant workers of all nationalities will be invited.

Results Expected.

Lesino, a former organizer of the hotel workers in New York, reminded the men of the struggles of 1912 and 1918, and urged them to make a concerted effort to form a strong, vital union in this city.

P. Pascal Cosgrove, in discussing the campaign for building up an effective organization in New York, said that the next few months will see a program of agitation and organization which will show real results.

Ford Hires Man to Write His Articles

Say He Threatened To "Upset Sapiro's Apple Cart"

DETROIT, March 25—Henry Ford's literary offerings, which appeared on his own page in the Dearborn Independent, were all written by William J. Cameron, editor of the publication, the latter testified today at the million-dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit.

Cameron told the jury in Federal Court here that he wrote the Ford articles, giving the billionaire's "philosophical thoughts."

Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond meanwhile again ruled out all questions relating to the Jewish race as a whole. The court added, however, that he would allow questions touching upon individual Jews or a small group of Jews.

Attorneys for Henry Ford were on the defensive today in the million dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit following two rulings by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond. Aaron Sapiro, so-called wheat king, gained ground when the court first permitted him to eliminate 54 of his 111 alleged libels and then indicated that the auto king's attacks on individual Jews might be admitted to evidence to shew Ford's malice toward Sapiro.

Ford Threatened Sapiro

The first sensation of the Ford-Sapiro million-dollar libel suit came this afternoon when James Martin Miller, a New York writer testified Henry Ford had threatened in 1923 to "expose" Aaron Sapiro, the so-called wheat king.

The threat was voiced by the auto king, said Miller, during a visit to his office at Dearborn, Michigan.

Miller quoted Ford as saying: "I think we will upset his (Sapiro's) apple-cart."

"Ford said 'Sapiro is organizing the farmers with the Jews. The Independent has a large circulation among the farmers and we are going to expose him and I think will upset his apple-cart."

Judge Raymond excluded from Aaron Sapiro's libel declaration an attempted definition of the word "Jew", as used by Ford. Ford uses the word, Sapiro declared, as a term of "reproach, hatred, contumely and scorn."

On the other hand, some of the matter excluded in the revision, by Gallagher, Sapiro's attorney, was acceptable to Ford's lawyers. They protested against having to change their case.

In commenting on Mr. Gallagher's amendment to strike out the nineteenth count of the indictment, which was based on an editorial appearing in the Independent, Mr. Hanley contained:

"We plead the truth of the matter set forth in that count and stand prepared to prove that Mr. Sapiro is a grafter, a fakir, a fraud and a cheat.

Dunne Speaks On Irish Revolution At Workers School Forum, Sunday

"The Future of the Irish Republic" is the subject of the Open Forum lecture at the Workers School, 108 E. 14th St., and William F. Dunne, Editor of the DAILY WORKER, will be the lecturer.

The subject is of special importance, according to Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the school, because Easter Week and the anniversary of the Dublin Revolution of 1916 are drawing near.

Connolly's Heroism

Commenting on Dunn's talk, Weife said:

"The speaker will take up the story of Jim Connelly's heroic leadership of the Irish Revolution and the fiasco of the Free States as well as the future prospects of the Irish Workers' Republic. This lecture should be of special interest to Irishmen on account of the 11th anniversary of the Dublin revolt, and should prove of great interest to all workers who do not knew that the first uprising that attempted to turn the imperialist war into Civil War, preceding even that of the Russian Revolution, was the uprising in Dublin under Connolly's leadership."

On the following Sunday night, April 3, Richard B. Moore, who has just returned from the Brussels World Congress against Imperialism, will tell of the achievements of that significant meeting.

Legislature Adjourns; Most of Baumes Crime Amendments Beaten

ALBANY, March 25.—The state legislature adjourned yesterday with many bills dying with the session. Undoubtedly many of them will be reintroduced in the next legislature.

Among the defeated bills are the following:

All measures to permit municipalities to own, operate or control public utilities.

The governor's proposal to reorganize and consolidate county governments.

The governor's proposals to restore direct primaries for state and judicial offices, abolish motion picture censorship and provide for biennial sessions of legislature, a score of anti-crime measures were passed though the majority of the Baumes bills were defeated.

MOSCOW SOVIET IN PROLONGED APPLAUSE AS CHINESE NATIONALISTS TAKE NANKING

MOSCOW, March 25.—Prolonged, stormy applause greeted the announcement today at a meeting of the Moscow Soviet that the Nationalist forces in China had captured Nauking.

"The more such blows are dealt to imperialism, the more allies the proletariat will have," declared M. Uglanov, secretary of the Moscow Communist Party. "We must continue the struggle to win over a majority of the world's populations to our side, and when that has been accomplished, world socialism will have been assured."

KUOMINTANG DELEGATE DENOUNCES IMPERIALIST LEAGUE OF NATIONS

MOSCOW, March 25.—Shao Li-tsi who was the Koumintang's representative at the recent Brussels anti-imperialist congress, has arrived here and given the Moscow press an interview on his impressions of the congress and his views of the situation in China. He said:

"The Kuomintang looks upon the league of nations as a tool in the hands of imperialism, for the oppression of the weak nations and the encirclement of the Soviet Union.

Defends Chinese Unions.

"I attach great importance to the Brussels congress which will play an immense role in the creation of a true international unity.

"The fact that the British government did not allow representatives of the Kounintang and the All-China Trade Union Federation to enter England after they were invited by the London Trade Union Council and prominent leaders of the British trade union movement, once more proves that the British government fears approachment between the English working class and the national revolutionary movement.

"Rumers abont the alleged split within the Kouimintang including the driving out of the Communist and the alleged willingness of the Koumintang to compromise with imperialism which are being circulated by the bourgeois reformist press in Western Europe are totally unfounded.

"No Compromise".

"The Koumintang will not agree to any compromise with imperialism and will continue to bring the national revolutionary struggle to a conclusion. The main line of the Koumintang policy is directed towards preserving the alliance with the Soviet Union.

"The Kenmintang is growing stronger as is testified by the recent conference of the executive committee. That fact that Hsu Chao-chen, the leader of the Canton workers entered the national government is the best proof of the consolidation of the Kuomintang ranks".

SECRET SAILING ORDERS FOR NAVY INDICATE EXPEDITION TO MEXICO

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Relatives of naval officers have been telling their friends that secret sailing orders have been issued for service in the Caribbean, and the navy department is buzzing with gossip about probable service on the Mexican coast. If these reports are true, the Coolidge-Mellon administration is sending a naval expedition to encourage a revolt against the Mexican government by the extreme clerical and reactionary forces, who have the backing of the American oil interests for which Mellon, Sinclair and Doheny are spokesmen.

If such an expedition were [illegible] its first task would probably [illegible] seize the Tampico oil fields [illegible] planned during the world [illegible] general staff. At that time [illegible] vigorous protest of a liberal army officer prevented the plan from being approved when its announcement within 24 hours was expected. After the oil fields, the navy would presmably take or blockade Vera Cruz, in order to cut off Mexico City from getting shipments of munitions from abroad.

Amounting To Acts of War.

Such steps would only be taken if the United States government administration decided to defy the unanimous resolution of the senate that its quarrel with Mexico be settled by arbitration. Its termination of the treaty against smuggling arms into Mexico indicates that it does intend to ignore the advise of the senate. If secret orders have been issued for a naval expedition to Mexican ports, it is significant provocation.

Fire of Warships Hinders Evacuation

Coolidge Cabinet Gives Admiral Williams Power To Make War On Chinese People

BULLETIN.

LONDON, March 25.—The spectra of another general strike fell athwart Shanghai tonight, when the General Labor Council sent an ultimatum to the municipal council of the foreign settlement, threatening a new general walk-out unless the electrical workers, who went on strike when the recent general strike was ordered, are reinstated, according to a dispatch to The Daily Express tonight from Shanghai.

The workers' places have been taken by Russian white guard mercenaries.

The ultimatum declared that the strike will be called for 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon unless the demands are met.

NANKING, China, March 25.—Despite the extremely provocative attitude of the American Admiral Williams, and the fact that sending out of the American, British and Japanese nationals has been greatly hindered by the continued bombardment from the imperialist warships lying opposite the city, most of the foreigners are now embarked on ships and out of the way. They were marched without baggage to the Nanking Bund.

In the opinion of Chinese Nationalist authorities here, either a deliberate attempt was made to precipitate a war by the English, French and American naval officers, or they yielded to extreme hysteria. When the Nationalist army broke into the defenses of Nanking at five o'clock on the morning of Thursday, March 24th, the 400 American residents here who had been living on the backs of the Chinese as missionaries, or bosses of the Standard Oil, American tobacco, or other foreign firms, took fright and fled to Socony hill and to the Nanking university.

Numbers of Chang Tsung Chang's soldiers, breaking their formations, fled along with them. The pursuing Nationalists were fired upon alike by the northerners and by the English, French, Japanese and American warships lying in the harbor.

Fire On Protectors

When a patrol of Nationalists started up Socony Hill to escort the foreigners out of the scene of battle, the warships laid down a complete barrage of shell fire around the hill, killing thousands of non-combatant Chinese, men, women and children, and endangering the patrol, which withdrew.

When protest against the cold-blooded slaughter was made by the Nationalist commander, Admiral Williams characterized him as "insolent," and reported his demands for evacuation of the foreigners. The Nationalist commander let them wait, as American guns made it dangerous to approach them.

Finally an agreement was reached by which they could be sent out without precipitating another bombardment by the war fleet.

The inhabitants of the town greeted the People's Army by displaying flags of the Kuomintang. It is expected that General Chang-kai-shek will enter within a few days.

Part of the city is still burning. Numerous northern troops, who broke ranks to loot, were drowned when they fled before the People's Army and tried to cross the river to Pukow. Their officers had already fled from the city.

Coolidge Backs Williams

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Unlimited backing for Admirals William and Hongh was the decision of the administration at today's cabinet meeting.

The two admirals have been given 'the widest discretion possible" and hey will be backed to the limit, cabinet members said after the meeting. This means that if Admiral Williams decides to involve the United States in a war with the Chinese nation ever Standard Oil properties, he may do so.

That the administration is willing to proceed to any extreme is indicated by the despatch of additional troops to China. Six more cruisers are now enronte to Chinese waters to reinforce tha Asiatic fleet, and Admiral Williams can have as many more as he deems necessary, cabinet members declared.

Chinkiang was bombarded today by the American destroyer William B. Preston according to a dispatch to the Navy Department from Admiral C. S. Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet.

The message did not state the number of Chinese killed by American fire. Americans are preparing to leave Chinkiang, Admiral Williams said. (Chinkiang is a strategically important city between Shanghai and Nanking, which the Nationalist's troops took several days ago.)

WAR NEARER AS JUGO-SLAVS ASK PROBE OF ITALY

Want Benito's Intrigue Investigated

BERLIN, March 25. — The war clouds hovering over the Adriatic threaten to take on a darker tinge again, following reports from Belgrade that the Jugo-Slavian government is preparing a circular note to the powers in which it will charge Italy with feverishly preparing for war and demand that either the powers or the League of Nations investigate these preparations because they present a grave danger to their neighboring countries and the peace of Europe.

Wants Italy Looked Into.

These reports, together with the inclination of Jugo-Slavia, to throw upon its own borders for international investigation only if Italy is investigated at the same time, reveal a considerable stiffening of the Jugo-Slavian attitude over night.

Since it is believed that Mussolini will never accept such an investigation, the League of Nations would again be placed in a very embarrassing situation. It is therefore expected that the powers will do their utmost to prevent Jugo-Slavian action.

Italy Spends Most.

The Jugo-Slavian parliament accepted the military budget today, which the war minister announced had been cut by one third. The Jugo-Slavian budget, it is said, provides for but twenty per cent, of the total for military expenditures, while the Italian military budget is said to total twenty-eight per cent.

King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia is going to Paris Saturday to discuss the situation with his ally, France.

Dragging in Germany.

Berlin is in an uncomfortable position because England and France persist in trying to draw Germany into the present disturbed situation in the Balkans.

The British Ambassador called on Herr Stresemann today to obtain German co-operation in settling the Balkan quarrel.

This is the first time that the allies have called upon Germany to participate in a joint action with the big powers.

Stresemann reserved his decision but, it is believed, he will accept.

mate number of Americans alleged to have been killed in Nanking. Anybody at all acquainted with the inside workings of the newspapers can tell at a glance that the whole report is a fake, purposely sent out to stimulate public feeling in favor of intervention. The Tribune of yesterday stated that: "Reports of casualties are conflicting, but one Briton was known to have been killed, one wounded and a Japanese injured." The Tribune correspondent in Shanghai admitted that the reports of loss of foreign life in Nanking were unconfirmed.

IT appears that the original report was sent out by the Hearst Agency. The American consul in Shanghai took cognizance of the "report" but evidently did not believe it. Among the worst offenders against the Chinese, is the Hearst Agency, Universal Service. This lying propaganda agency stops at nothing in its mad desire to enhance this country in a war against the Nationalist revolution. Hearst is using the methods he practised in Cuba before the Spanish-American war. "You furnish the news" he cabled to his Cuban correspondent "and we will furnish the war." Those blood-thirsty imperialists care little if hundreds of thousands of human lives are blotted out in their greed for new conquests.

COUNT FELIX VON LUCKNER, who commanded the German sea raider Sea Eagle in the World War, was a guest at the Advertising Club last Thursday. Hundred Twenty-three Thousand Farmers Fall In 1926; West Hard Hit

WASHINGTON (FP)—Farm property has again been emphasized by statistics announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This time the department shows that 123,000 American farms have changed hands by foreclosure of mortgages during the past year.

Besides the loss of farms through foreclosure by regular process, the industry made a record of 170,000 farms sold or traded.

In the Dakotas and in Montana the defaults of payments which led to foreclosures were from 6 to 7 per cent of all farms, while in Georgia and South Carolina the worst of the Southern farm depression was indicated.

SPECTRE OF WANT HAUNTS EUROPE; GERMANY'S PLIGHT

Millions of Workers on Brink of Starvation

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

ESSEN, Germany, March 6. (By Mail).—Unemployment, the spectre that one sees everywhere in Europe, is most awful in Dawes's Germany. At least 2,000,000 workers are unemployed thruout the land. Some 4,000,000 more are working only part time. It is impossible to spend a week in any German city without having unemployment impressed upon your mind as the outstanding factor of the present industrial situation.

Dawes and Unemployment.

Unemployment is at its worst in those parts of Germany where the "rationalization" schemes which are the nxis of Dawes's Germany have had their widest application. In addition to Berlin, the areas principally affected are Westphalia, the Ruhr territory, Saxony and central Germany,—including all the centers of heavy industry. I have addressed meetings of workers in all parts of this territory. At every meeting a large part of the crowd was made up of unemployed.

Talk to almost anyone riding in the third and fourth class cars on the railroads, spend a few minutes with one of the many jobless workers who hang around the depots waiting for a chance to carry a suitcase, go over things with the secretary of a local trade union, and official figures no longer satisfy you as to the seriousness of the situation.

City of Jobless.

This city of Essen, in the heart of one of Germany's two greatest industrial districts, is a city of the jobless. The big Krupp works, which formerly employed 40,000 men, now employ 10,000. While the decline of Krupp's is explained by special causes, it is impossible to separate them from conditions in general. The steel industry as a whole, the entire metal industry, even the feverishly busy coal industry, are working with greatly curtailed payrolls. As often as not, reduced employment goes hand in hand with increased production, brought about under the speed-up methods imported from America. Such methods include not only Fordized specialization, standardization, the conveyor system, etc., but also lengthening of the workday.

For Eight Hour Day.

The German masses may thus be divided into two groups: one that works long hours under speed-up conditions; another that has work for only a few days a week, or not at all. -

It is significant that the Communist Party of Germany has had to take up the demand for a return to the eight-hour day! This demand, echoed by the numbers of Social Democratic and other non-Communist workers, is the central point in the class struggle against Dawes' "rationalization" in Germany.

13 Arrested for Sedition

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 25.—Workers of Pennsylvania are appealed to by the International Labor Defense to come to the aid of 13 of their fellows, all either convicted of sedition or arrested within the last few weeks on charges of sedition. They are all in danger of either being railroaded to the penitentiary, or deported.

Judges Go Slow.

The Horack case is before the courts, on appeal. He was arrested with nine others in 1923, tried three years later by a hand picked jury and convicted in defiance of the evidence.

The Pappas case is also before the courts, on appeal. He was arrested with 46 others in 1924, and although the company was paying off its workers, they stood at the pay window and questioned them as to whether they subscribed to Communism and if they read The DAILY WORKER or other papers which have radical tendencies.

Then they arrested 2 workers, an Italian, and a Slovak, and are now holding them for deportation, though these workers do not belong to any radical organization. Five days later, on Feb. 15, a Lithunnian, who was to speak at a meeting of the Lithuanian Literary Society, was arrested and put under $5,000 bail, for merely having in his possession some pamphlets.

Attack Communists.

The last arrest so far, on March 16, is that of Alex Bimpinas who the state was getting subscriptions for Uj Elore, the Hungarian paper. At the time of this writing, he is still in jail with the court demand $5,000 bail. It seems that the main attack is centered on the Communists, both by the government and the steel and coal barons who started a strike of the coal miners on April 1st.

The last convention of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor condemned the Flynn Sedition Law and passed a resolution which instructed the Executive Council to take organizational steps in preparing a campaign against it.

Fight Decisions.

The workers must understand that this law is not only against the Communists, but it is against any and all militant workers who are willing to fight for their rights. The workers must make up their minds to fight against this law and mobilize the rank and file to force the labor officials to fight against this law. It must be remembered that with the tremendous expense involved in these cases and with the exorbitant bail which the group of militant workers (there are only a few and who are burdened), have been standing, they are financially becoming exhausted and it is the duty of all workers to come to the defense of these workers who are fighting in the forefront of the most reactionary spot in Pennsylvania or the United States against this steel, oil and railroad barons and coal operators backed by the government and the labor officials. The backing must come not only financially but by huge mass protests to the local and state governments and also thru appeals to the International Labor Defense, 807 Mc-Geagh Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Tobacco Workers in Organizing Campaign

Editor, Daily Worker:—The campaign to organize the tobacco workers of New York and vicinity was formally opened last night with a special meeting arranged by the organization committee of the joint advisory board which had originally been elected from each local union to act as such in conjunction with the executive board of all locals, and the chairmen and committee of all shops.

If attendance and enthusiasm mean anything then this organization work will undoubtedly bear good results and with the small shops falling in line with the union, better conditions for the tobacco workers may be hoped for.—F. J. Van Praet.

OIL LOBBYISTS ORDERED MEXICO TREATY BROKEN

American Supplies for Rebels May End Tax

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25.—Coolidge has ended the anti-smuggling treaty with Mexico at the behest of the oil interests.

This termination of the anti-smuggling treaty is the step demanded some weeks ago by the Doheny-Sinclair-Mellon oil lobby in Washington. They declared that only this threat to the security of the Calles government would bring about a settlement of the oil law dispute. It was their guess that Calles, rather than face a revolt backed by the forces that run the Coolidge-Mellon administration, would yield on the oil law, and would permit a commercial treaty to be negotiated, or dictated to him, which would in fact nullify the Mexican constitution as to the oil claims of American companies.

Weasel Words

"Upon due consideration," says Kellogg's announcement, "the government has concluded to terminate the treaty at the expiration of the year (Mar. 28), and has accordingly given the appropriate notice to the government of Mexico."

All of which vague language means that unless Calles shall quickly agree to a treaty of commerce under which the American oil companies will be granted what they want, the arms embargo may be lifted at any moment.

The White House spokesman, when asked the real meaning of this action, said he had no comment other than the termination of "a small treaty with Mexico covering the subject of smuggling."

Oppose Intervention

On the day before this blow was struck at the safety of the Mexican government, a petition was delivered to Coolidge and Kellogg, asking them not to lift the embargo on arms shipments into Mexico. That petition was signed by 362 prominent citizens, including Dean Brown of Yale Divinity School, E. M. Borchard, professor of law at Yale; Dean Helen Taft Manning of Bryn Mawr College; President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin; Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, president of the American Ass'n. of University Women; Dr. John Latane, professor of American history at John Hopkins University; Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis; David Starr Jordan, president emeritus of Leland Stanford University; Wm. H. Johnston, former president of the Int. Assn. of Machinists; Judge R. W. Bingham, Louisville; Edward A. Ross, professor of sociology, Wisconsin University, and many other educators and publicists. Louis F. Post and Edward Keating of Washington were signers.

Baldwin Finds No Civil Liberty in England

LONDON, March 25.—Roger Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, departed for the Continent last night, ending a visit of the two weeks permitted him by the British Home Office to stay in England.

Following that as an American citizen he had no grounds for complaint in view of the record of the United States government for excluding Reds with "objectionable views." Mr. Baldwin said, "I have observed the pledge and the empire still stands. The two weeks' look I have had at the state of liberty in England certainly is worth the price of admission.

Large Auto Export to France.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—More than 80 per cent. of the passenger automobiles imported into France in 1926 came from the United States, according to the report made to the Department of Commerce by Trade Commissioner H. H. Kelly.

The foreign trade of France in passenger cars during 1926 as compared with 1925 on the weight basis showed an import decrease of 35 per cent. and an export increase of 27 per cent.

CHINESE WORKERS SCORED FOR BAN ON HOSTILE PRESS

U. S. Consul's Report Shows Class Bias

WASHINGTON, March 25 (FP)—Class fears of the radical labor element in the Chinese revolution are reflected in the State Department's official summary of a report by Consul General Lockhart at Hankow, Mar. 22.

"An American newspaper at Hankow, the Hankow Herald, and also a British newspaper, the Central China Post," it says, "have been forced to suspend publication since Mar. 19 by the radical labor union at that city. The labor union forced the suspension of these newspapers by compelling Chinese employes to quit work. There was no apparent cause for this action. No previous warning had been received and no difficulty with the employes had been experienced.

This astonishment by Lockhart, at a political strike such as has been common in China for years, is modified by a further statement:

"It is probable that labor leaders were dissatisfied with the attitude of the two papers toward the labor cause and that the leaders of the radical labor group had decided to close them down. This is reported as the most drastic action yet taken by the radical labor group and has created a sensation in Hankow."

Favors Northerners

In the midst of a working-class revolution, the anti-labor press owned by foreigners has gone on undisturbed for four months, and Lockhart finds a "sensation" in the decision of the labor unions of Hankow that they do not care to continue to permit foreigner's attacks upon their national resurrection and emancipation! He lacks the word "radical" to "labor" three times in a brief report. This is in sharp contrast to the tone of American reports from the northern Chinese headquarters, where exhandreds are never referred to in diplomatic dispatches as "ex-bandits" or "militarists" or "reactionaries."

Lockhart further reported that the "loyal" Chinese employes of the British Cigarette Co. offices in Hankow had been "spirited away" until the offices were forced to close. Foreign control in China, had been "threatened, but have not been harmed."

WASHINGTON, March 25 (FP)—China's Nationalist government aroused no enthusiasm in the State Department when its forces captured Shanghai. Secretary Kellogg declined to discuss the question of possible American recognition of the winner. Disappointment was registered on official countenances. Sympathy with the American officials has been with the Northern militarists all along. It has made numerous protests to the Nationalist foreign minister, Eugene Chen, who is American interests were affected by the acts of the revolutionary forces. It has not reported any serious protests against looting and violence by the Northern soldiers.

Minister Sao-ke Alfred Sze, accredited to Washington by the Peking government-that-was, is still acting as envoy for China.

Mississippi Supreme Court To Rule On Jim Crow Case Of Chinese

JACKSON, Miss.—Among the appeal records on file in the office of the clerk of the Mississippi supreme court is one on the March term docket which presents the Chinese color line question for decision.

This is the case of W. F. Bond, state superintendent of education against Joe Tig Fung a minor son of Joe Tig Fung. Suit is from the circuit court of Coahoma county and pertains to the statutory racial classification of the Chinese in relation to admission to the public schools of the state.

The case grows out of the expulsion of the Chinese youth from the Dublin Consolidated school in Coahoma county which the record shows he had been attending for some time. A short time prior to the filing of his mandamus petition Joe was notified by the Dublin school trustees that he would not be permitted to attend that school further. Judge Alcorn sustained the petition and the school authorities took the appeal.

Students Will Study Southern Conditions

Surveys of conditions under which Mississippi women work are to be made by students of the State College for Women. Nearly 70 girls have enrolled for the first studies to be made in the university town, Columbus.

Students seek first hand answers to the problems of 4000 women in Mississippi, working over 10 hours a day at a medium salary of $8.60, says the New Student—national college student publication. The surplus cotton crop situation is mentioned as another field for student study.

The Manager's Corner

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

During the week of March 21 to 26 the New York comrades arranged a series of benefit performances of Pygmalion. Thirty odd comrades took these tickets for sale. Due to the systematic efforts of these comrades we managed to sell out completely and to net several hundred dollars for The DAILY WORKER.

This affair and the results obtained marks a new policy for The DAILY WORKER. It demonstrates that it is possible to secure valuable support painlessly. It shows that we can easily exploit the very natural desire of our comrades to see a good play and at the same time reap some benefit for The DAILY WORKER. We are planning more of this. The next play which is being given for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER is Michael Gold's "Fiesta," the new Mexican revolutionary play, during the week of April 11 to April 16. We ask our comrades to keep these dates in mind in preparing their future plans. We ask also that other cities copy the tactics so successfully followed in New York. There are plenty of plays, amusements, movies, etc., which could be bought out cheaply in order to bring a profit to The DAILY WORKER.

In connection with the Pygmalion performance we wish to acknowledge particularly the good work done by: Frances Gross, Celia Samarodin, William Hayden, Z. Sherron, Samuel Leibowitz, L. E. Katterfeld, Rose Rosen, Dora Luskin, Rae Heimowitz, Dora Spiro, A. Rosenblatt, Milton Weich, I. Hirschman, W. Wolf, Efrin Wolenetz, M. Reingold, Minnie Zuraw, Fannie Unterman, E. BRITISH WORKERS PROTEST AGAINST TROOPS IN CHINA

Intervention Scored In Manifesto

LONDON, March 25.—Workers thruout England are protesting against intervention in China and demanding the withdrawal of British troops and gunboats.

A circular letter demanding that foreign powers keep their hands off China has been signed by representatives of all the large trade unions.

Pointing out that troops have been sent to China at the instigation of British bankers and that Chinese workers have been savagely exploited by foreign capitalists, the manifesto declares, "We call upon Britain to bring back the warships from China, or cease forcing with the efforts of the people of China to form any government they choose."

All Unions Protest

The manifesto is signed by A. E. Bae, Trades Union Educational League; J. S. Garden, Labor Council, N. S. W.; F. A. Armstrong, Clerks' Union, J. Howie, Coachmakers; A. Middleton, painters; J. Stewart, Electrical trades; D. Duncan, A. W. U. Central; J. Ryan, meat industry, N. Jefferey, meat workers; F. Chapman, hatters; W. Bright, bricklayers; D. Rees, miners; A. Sherwin, hotel, club and restaurant workers; J. Maclay, ironworkers; T. H. Bell, printers; D. McLelland, blacksmiths.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 25.—Without opposition, the assembly today passed the Westall bill, providing for a new charter form of government for Westchester county.

COURT WON'T LET WM. J. BRENNAN TAKE HIS OFFICE

Progressive Miner Cut Out; Isaacs Wins

SCRANTON, Pa., March 25.—William J. Brennan, former president of the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre district union of the United Mine Workers, loses his election appeal against Rinaldo Cappellini, whom he opposed in the biennial campaign of 1925. Brennan ran on the John Brophy ticket last year for secretary treasurer.

Running Mate Wins.

Brennan charged fraud. In turning down his appeal, however, the referee appointed by the court, gave a decision in favor of Brennan's running mate George Isaacs, who opposed Cappellini's vice president, Michael Kosik. Isaacs is declared the duly elected vice president of District 1. The ruling gives the remaining term of the job till August 1 next to him and orders the district union to pay his back salary from August 1, 1925, to the date of the "ouster." In addition, the entire costs of the appeal of Brennan, Isaacs and other associates are assessed against the district treasury. Appeal may be made.

Isaac's Chance Improves.

The decision has a bearing on the politics of this second largest U. M. W. of A. district. Isaacs has already filed for vice president in the 1927 elections against the administration candidate and the decision that he was unfairly defeated the last time is expected to aid his chances this year. Campbell is also a candidate for international board member this year.

Even Rosalsky's Jury Acquits Rohr

Garment Maker Is Cleared Of Fake Charges

The reactionaries in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, who are working zealously with the New York police in an effort to frame up active members of the Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers, received a severe blow when a jury sitting in Judge Rosalsky's court yesterday found Solomon Rohr, a member of Operators' Local 2, not guilty of an alleged assault.

Rohr was charged with assaulting Sam Gorelich, of 29 E. 10th St., an employer, on December 2 during the general cloak strike. His told a clear and convincing story on the witness stand, relating how he had discovered that Gorelich was using scabs and had secured a promise from him to stop employing them, a promise which Gorelich later broke.

Proves Innocence.

He was able to prove that he was innocent of the charge of assault, which he declared the boss had framed against him because of his activities in discovering the scabbing. It was also shown that Rohr was in an attorney's office at the time the assault was said to have been made.

Hook Up Sigman.

Further evidence of the close connection of the International with both the employers and the police is increasing each day. Yesterday an attorney for the International appeared in Jefferson Market court to press charges brought by one of the bosses of the Edelson Dress Shop, 48 W. 20th St., against Sam Hecht, of the Joint Board, who went to the shop to call its workers to a meeting.

As soon as the boss saw Hecht he called for the police, who arrested him on a charge of disorderly conduct. When his case was called before Magistrate Brodsky he found attorneys for Sigman's union pushing an additional charge of "malicious mischief" against him, alleging that he had destroyed property although he had not even entered the shop.

Sigman's Lawyer Vicious.

When Judge Brodsky refused to allow this charge, Sigman's lawyer argued for a "long sentence," and finally succeeded in drawing down for this worker a three-day sentence in the workhouse.

Hyman Ready To Confer.

Commenting upon the statement issued by Judge Louis Brodsky after Samuel Markewich, attorney for the right wing of the Furriers' Union, declined to confer on the suggestion to "end gangsterism in the unions," Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers, which was represented at the conference, said:

"During this entire fight the reactionaries have been charging that the Joint Board was using gangsters, but now Magistrate Brodsky has provided an opportunity to let the real facts be known, and has requested both sides to confer with him in an effort to bring about an understanding which will stop the use of guerillas. It is easy to see how false the charges were.

Both Joint Boards There.

"The two Joint Boards (the furriers' and the cloak and dressmakers'), went to the conference. We were glad of the opportunity to do so, for we never did employ gangsters and do not employ them now. The International, knowing well that they have been hiring professional gangsters, have been defending them in the courts, have been furnishing the high balls required for these thugs with long criminal records, did not dare to go before Judge Brodsky.

Same Old Excuse.

"They know too well that they cannot face these facts. Consequently they have fallen back upon their old excuse, which they have been using every time anybody has tried to get real facts about this fight. They have declared that they will not confer with Communists. Such a weak excuse will not conceal the truth—that the union-wreckers refused to attend the conference because they knew they were guilty of Magistrate Brodsky's charges."

A. F. L. Supports Appeal To Supreme Court To End Subway Injunction

Appeal to the New York supreme court is being taken by the Amalgamated Association of street and electric railway employes against the injunction of Justice Craig restraining the union from attempting to unionize the subway and "L" employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co.

The A. F. of L. is behind the appeal. The injunction is a carry-over from the strike of last year.

Scott Nearing in New Worker School Series On States of Europe

Scott Nearing, noted economist, will begin a new course of four lectures at the Workers School, 108 E. 14th St., tomorrow (Saturday) at 2 o'clock, and will continue for the following three Saturdays. His subject will be "Post-War Europe."

In these four lectures Nearing will discuss economic and social developments in Germany, Italy, France, and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. In a previous series he analyzed the forces that are making for the inevitable decline of the British Empire.

Three Failures and A Success.

Among the problems that will be treated in these talks will be: the problems of Germany as a financial colony of international bankers under the Dawes Plan, and as a capitalist nation attempting to revive its imperialist power; the problems of Italy under fascism and Mussolini; France, with its shaky franc, its unemployments, its militarism, its conflicts with England; and the Soviet Union as the one bright spot in post-war Europe; the dangers of a new world war; and the propects of the world revolution.

The first lecture on Saturday deals with Germany.

The fee for the entire course is $1.25. This is the final series of lectures by Nearing for the current term.

Brophy and Hapgood Tell Need of Contracts Ending Simultaneously

anthracite man will be working while their brothers are in a struggle for a living wage."

Excepts Partial Strike.

Asked whether he thot the strike would surely occur, Brophy stated that from present indications he believed that some of the companies would sign the old agreement, leaving part of the mines operating, and only part on strike.

Brophy was loath to comment from any personal angle on his election campaign of last fall but in response to questions, he said:

"Well, according to our union constitution there should be a tabulated report on the election published on January 15; but up to date no such report has been issued, and I doubt whether it ever will be."

Bucking The Machine.

The dinner guests were particularly interested in hearing Powers Hapgood tell, from his own experience, what happens to those who try to buck the Lewis machine or prod it into action on some of the plans formulated at the various conventions—such as nationalization of mines, and organization of the unorganized.

Hapgood recounted, very modestly, how he became a target at the last convention for the reactionary sluggers and was beaten up so that he might not be able to appear at the session. He told of the steam roller methods which throttled every voice of opposition, and the final vote to bar all Communists from membership in the union.

"Of course this will be used against non-Communists too", said Hapgood. "Anyone who is active against those in power in the union will be run out on this charge."

By a representative of The DAILY WORKER, Brophy and Hapgood were asked about expenditures in connection with the anthracite strike, in view of President William Green's repeated contrast of the economy of this strike with the extravagance of the furriers strike.

No Detailed Statements.

"Figures are hard to get", said Brophy. "There is no detailed statement of expenditures. But for one thing they had no scabs, so no picketing was necessary and therefore there were no arrests and expenses for legal defense.

No Benefits.

"Then of course the miners did not pay any regular benefits. There would be small amounts paid for relief in needy cases, but no regular weekly benefits as the furriers and cloakmakers had."

This is an interesting item to bear in mind when Mr. Green or his friends make accusations of extravagance against the furriers strike, for over $600,000 of the $800,000 was returned to the workers in weekly benefits, and a large part of the balance was used for legal expenses.

For Democracy.

The "Democracy in Trade Unions Dinner Committee" which arranged last night's dinner for Brophy and Hapgood is a group of labor economists and writers and other friends of the progressive forces in the trade unions. Two months ago it held a dinner at which speakers from the cloak and dressmakers' unions told of the left wing fight against the reactionary Sigman machine in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The committee includes Art Young, Michael Gold, Paxton Hibben, Ann Washington Craton, James Gellert, William Gropper, Tel. C. E. S. Wood and Robert W. Dunn.

Report No Americans Killed at Nanking

The dispatch states that the work of evacuating foreigners from Nanking is proceeding smoothly and that all foreign girls in the city are now aboard the Emerald.

Restore Order In Shanghai

SHANGHAI, March 25.—Nationalists are rapidly restoring order in this city. Drastic punishment is being meted out to disbanded northern soldiers engaged in looting.

A hundred thousand strikers have resumed work, following the expiration of the political strike which was called to paralyze the imperialists during the occupation of the city by the People's Armies. The occupation being now complete, there is no further need for the strike.

Anti-Imperialism.

The entire southern district of Shanghai is like a view of the first days of the October Russian revolution. The people's democratic government of Shanghai stands "Down with imperialism and militarism."

A meeting of the executive committee of the people's delegate conference elected a provisional local government based on the committee system, including twelve Communists. One represented directly the Shanghai branch of the Communist Party.

Committee Elected.

The committee elected includes representatives of the chambers of commerce, streets, unions, students and intelligentsia.

Armed workers typical of red guardists are patrolling the city. This impression is particularly strengthened by the use of the tramway park as a headquarters where workers not only armed with rifles but with machine guns, hand grenades, automatic rifles and other weapons can be found.

Huge meetings and demonstrations are being staged thruout the southern city and district. The principal meeting was held in the so-called Chinese recreation ground near the western gates where over 30,000 gathered. The speakers addressed the audience from many platforms. The essence of the speech was to support the uprising.

M. J. Olgin, "Nation" Editor Among Speakers At Symposium Sun.

Critics, actors, and novelists will participate in a public discussion on the subject "What kind of play best reflects American life?" at the New Playwrights Theater, 52d St. and Eighth Ave., tomorow afternoon at 3:30.

Moissaye J. Olgin, editor of "The Hammer," and wall-known proletarian critic, will discuss the attitude which workers ought to take in analyzing the social significance of a play.

The other speakers will be Joseph Wood Krutch, dramatic critic of The Nation, Elinor Wylie, novelist, Romney Brent and Helen Wesley, participants in various plays now being presented at the New Playwrights Theater.

John Howard Lawson, author of "Processional" and "Loud Speaker," will preside at the meeting which will be followed by discussion from the floor. Admission is free, and workers are especially invited to attend.

A Little Truth Among Many Lies.

Reports of splits in the Kuomintang Party of China have been frequent of late. Those reports became more insistent as the Nationalist armies advanced northward towards Shanghai. The northern mercenaries were scattered by the revolutionary armies like chaff before a storm. The imperialists must find consolation somewhere so they looked for a split in the Kuomintang Party. But tho they sought they did not find much.

It is true that there are differences inside the ranks of the Kuomintang Party. In fact even a graveyard is not entirely free from animation. Grass grows and worms crawl within its gloomy confines.

The Kuomintang Party is a federation composed of merchants, students, peasants and workers. Those elements represent the forces in Chinese national life that support the national liberation movement. But the workers and peasants have more ambitious aims. They want to free themselves from every kind of exploitation. And they have dominated the policies of the Kuomintang Party.

As the party program embodied more and more of the demands of the workers and peasants, the local landowners and militarists came into conflict with the party and were dropped, sometimes kicked out. Those elements that expected to carve careers out of a disunited China, were disappointed. They had to go. The next to feel the boot of the revolutionary workers and peasants in the Kuomintang Party were the big merchants, posing as patriots but in reality the commercial agents of the imperialists.

As the Nationalist armies advanced they took labor organizers along and taught the workers how to form trade unions. The hours of labor began to drop, from 84 hours a week to 70 and sometimes to 54. Wages were boosted as high as 50 and 100 per cent. This news fell on the ears of imperialism with a sound as unpleasant as the stroke of doom.

Land rents were cut 25 per cent and a peasant militia was organized to enforce the decree. This was a violation of the "sacred rights of property." This was not the kind of a war that George Washington waged against the British. It was another kind of revolutionary war. A pox on it! shrieked the imperialists. And there were a few careerists in the Kuomintang Party that still nourished illusions. They hoped China would stop short at the respectable bourgeois republican stage. They would like to see the Communists expelled. They would like to shake the hand of foreign imperialism in return for loans to develop Chinese industry for the benefit of the imperialists. On those elements Chang-Tso-Lin and his allies built their hopes. Those elements supply the juice for the elbow power of the imperialist scribblers that have been busy clicking out stories of splits to a hungry bourgeois world.

But two and a half million organized industrial workers and peasants under Communist leadership are strong enough to blast this imperialist dream. The splits in the Kuomintang end with the splitters on the outside and shorn of their power.

Where Is the Clayton Act?

Local 30 of the Milk Drivers' and Creamery Workers' Union, Boston, was ordered to pay damages to the tune of $61,971.44 to three milk companies by a Massachusetts court for having carried on agitation against those companies because they refused to recognize the right of their employes to join a union. This is an echo of the Danbury hatter's case in which the union was hit with a $272,000 award in favor of a manufacturer. The A. F. of L. collected money to pay the award.

Then came the Clayton Act. This was one of Sam Gompers' proudest achievements. He purred over it at every A. F. of L. convention and when a progressive rose to question the value of legal tinkering to the working class Sam usually floored the malcontent with a shot of Clayton dung.

There would be no more Danbury awards, now that the Clayton Act was on the statute books. It added to labor's dignity. Did it not definitely declare that labor was not a commodity, Karl Marx to the contrary. It is true that workers continued to offer their labor power for sale, but the A. F. of L. bureaucrats were not to be irritated with such things. The dignity of labor was attested to on a capitalist statute book, even tho the exploiters' heel continued to tickle labor's neck.

A socialist weekly observes that the employers cannot do those things in Great Britain. Sometimes they can and sometimes they cannot. During the general strike the employers got a taste of labor's power and they are now busy forging legal chains for hamper them when the next inevitable struggle breaks. And if British labor confines its defense against those efforts, to the mouthings of the right wing parliamentarians in the house of commons, all the gains that were made by British labor thru years of struggle outside and inside parliament will be wiped away over night. A law favorable to labor will remain on a capitalist statute book only as long as labor is strong enough to keep it there. And not until labor is able and willing to take the capitalist statute books and dump them in a deep gully, and write their own laws under the auspices of a workers' and farmers' government will they have a guarantee that laws are written to help and not to strangle them.

In fighting the British anti-labor laws the British Labor Party played a big part. If the American Federation of Labor bureaucracy was not a tool of big business it would take the lead in organizing a Labor Party in the United States instead of flunkeying to the democrats and republicans and waging war against the radical, progressive elements in the American labor movement.

Imperialism's Blood Bath on Thursday at Nanking Should Arouse All Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THURSDAY, March 24, 1927, should stand big as a date in the annals of history recording the developing relations between the workers of the United States and China.

It was on this day that Wall Street imperialism revealed itself as a blood ally of its British counterpart, the warships of the United States and Great Britain alike visiting death by wholesale upon the Chinese at Nanking, while American and English assassins in uniform co-operated at Shanghai, causing the foreign office at London to announce with delight that:

"Admiral Williams (head of the naval forces of the United States) and the British authorities are working in closest co-operation. The initiative taken by the American forces is characterised as most gratifying."

Workers of this country have been fed full for years of the poisoned propaganda that the United States had only altruistic motives in the Orient. The "open door" was urged as a new way of making the East "safe for democracy," even before Woodrow Wilson faked and hawked the same phrase to make the American entry into the world war palatable to those workers and farmers who could be blinded by this lying slogan.

It was pointed out that the United States enjoyed no extra-territoriality rights in China, that "dollar diplomacy" sought no concessions, only the "open door" to trade. British imperialism, that spawned the opium war against China, was held to be the real criminal. Liberal professors over the land preach themselves hoarse that what China needs is the American form of democracy that was brought forth upon this continent with the revolutionary war of 1776.

Revolutions, however, are different today than they were 150 years ago. They carry with them the demand for the abolition of profits, the shaking off of the grip of alien imperialism, as well as political independence from the homeland. In fact the three outstanding struggles against imperialism today, in Mexico, Nicaragua and China, are waged not to secure political independence, but against the ravages of the imperialist monster that recognizes no boundary lines laid down by geographers, but, claims the whole world as its domain.

Thus Frederick Moore, the Shanghai correspondent of the New York Times, in his dispatch dated March 23, proudly leads off as follows:

"American marines entered the first line entrenchments early this morning, assuming a position protecting the British left flank at the Markham Road Bridge, overlooking Soochow Creek."

The New York Times itself joyously proclaims in headlines, "Our Marines in Front Line."

In the front line for what? Not to protect American lives! The revolution in China has now been on for 16 years. All those who have no stomach for it, have had ample time to get out. Even the New York Herald-Tribune partially admits this when it says, Friday, March 25th, that:

"Of those (Americans)—for the most part missionaries—who have remained at isolated points, it is possible that only a few are in real danger. BUT THESE HAD AMPLE WARNING AND HAVE ACCEPTED THE DANGERS VOLUNTARILY AS A PART OF THEIR MISSION."

The same applies with equal, if not additional force to the agents of big business in China. American workers can have but one bit of advice to them all and that is to, "Get out!"

The imperialist government at Washington, however, gives no heed to the demands of labor for "Hands Off China!" to the insistent cry, "Withdraw the warships from the Orient!"

Instead Wall Street imperialism crawls closer to British imperialism in their common danger, revealing the character of both. The British brand of robbery has been openly accepted as the worst foreign foe of the Chinese people. The Wall Street bandits openly strive for that enviable position. The government at Washington rushes additional warships across the Pacific. Troops that have helped hold the Filipinos in slavery to American greed these past three decades (since 1898), are ordered to the continent of Asia. The state and navy departments at Washington announce that Admiral Williams, at Shanghai, like Admiral Latimer at Nicaragua, has "the fullest authority to act as he sees fit in the emergency."

Then came Bloody Thursday, March 24th, inevitable as a result of the authority given to Williams, when American destroyers, true to the name given these ships of war, rained death on Nanking, murdering the inhabitants wholesale and setting fire to sections of the city. This is the way that American warships "protect lives and property."

This is being written on Friday afternoon, March 25th. The latest news dispatches coming in are conflicting as to whether any American lives were really lost or not on Thursday. At 2:15 this dispatch arrived over the wires of the International News Service:

"London, March 25.—The work of evacuating the foreigners from Nanking is proceeding smoothly, a Shanghai dispatch to the Central News tonight (London time) reported. All foreign girls in the city are now accounted for and are all aboard the Emerald, the dispatch added."

Then at 2:25 o'clock came this dispatch:

"Shanghai, March 26. (1 A. M.)—One hundred and twenty Americans whose fate in Nanking has been unknown for 24 hours are safe and have arrived at the Nanking Bund for evacuation."

* * *

But in the early morning a London dispatch of the International News Service had declared:

"London, March 25.—A considerable portion of Nanking is burning, the fires having been started by the bombardment of British and American warships."—Shanghai today."

Thus imperialism, led by the alliance of United States with Great Britain, is putting its torch of destruction to Chinese cities, and snuffing out the lives of people that dare threaten to follow the pathway to the complete victory of the Chinese republic over its oppressors.

The New York Herald declares, in view of these developments, that "the only possible policy is to protect life with every available force," while the Times joins in with, "They (the foreigners) cannot hnt be relieved that Great Britain and the other Powers, including the United States, have assembled there sufficient forces to make an effective defense in case the tronble spreads to that city (Shanghai)."

That means that the imperialist powers are ready and eager to continue the imperialist attack that started with the Nanking blood bath on Thursday, and which they hope may somehow lead to the defeat of the revolution.

British and American labor, in the name of world working class solidarity, must unite to block that growing attack by more strenuously attacking imperialism at home.

Comrade Ruthenberg,

The Builder of the Party

NOTE.—The Ruthenberg Membership Drive is developing momentum in all sections of the country. Many new members are coming into the Party. Even where the Party is the best, Ruthenberg Memorial Meetings, of considerable size, have been held. The DAILY WORKER today publishes the speech delivered by Ben Gitlow, member of the Party's Central Executive Committee, at the Chicago Ruthenberg Memorial Meeting. Much of this material will be brought together later in book form. Comrade Gitlow said:

Tomorrow We Will Remember.

WE have come to mourn Comrade Ruthenberg's death. Today we mourn and tomorrow we will remember. Comrade Ruthenberg was one of the most loyal and devoted members of the working class. Comrade Ruthenberg was the one outstanding leader of that class. Not only does the Communist movement of this country suffer on account of the death of our comrade but the working class in the United States suffers equally as well.

Comrade Ruthenberg was that fighter in the ranks of the working class that during the period of the world war and the reaction following the world war, organized in the United States, the most powerful capitalist country in the world, a revolutionary political party, that will lead the American working class to final victory.

Comrade Ruthenberg's life was devoted to the cause of the exploited and oppressed masses, not only in this country, but in every country in the world. American capitalism is brutal. American imperialism dominates and subjects to its will practically the entire world. In our factories, in our mines, and in all our establishments millions of toilers are daily exploited. Comrade Ruthenberg built for the millions of toilers a Party that will continue to inspire them to militant action, a Party that will lead them in the struggle for their own liberation, a Party that in spite of tremendous difficulties, in spite of a powerful capitalist militarism, will direct these millions of toilers to final victory.

I remember the first Russian Party, when the world Communist movement lost its most foremost and outstanding leader, Comrade Lenin. I remember at that time that the capitalist press rejoiced at the death of Lenin. They were positive that Lenin's death would usher in a new situation, not only in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union but in the whole revolutionary working class situation. But to the surprise of the capitalist world, the death of Lenin solidified the ranks of the revolutionary working class movement.

In the United States we have lost a great leader, a great leader not only of our Party but a great leader also for the American working class. The death of Comrade Ruthenberg is a severe blow to our Party. On the occasion of Comrade Ruthenberg's death we pledge ourselves as members of the revolutionary vanguard that his life, his action, his courage, his determination shall be the spirit that will guide us to consolidate our ranks, to strengthen our Party, and to march forward in the line of Comrade Ruthenberg, ever fighting until victory is won. One fact all must recognize. Out of the chaos, out of the disorder that results from capitalism, there is only one force that is disciplined, that has a program, that believes in that program and has the courage to put it into effect. There is only one uncompromising foe of capitalism in this country and in every country in the world, and that uncompromising foe of capitalism is the Communist Party, together with the Communist Parties of all other countries welded together in a world Communist Party, the Communist International.

We must in memory of Ruthenberg, as a tribute to his life's activity solemnly pledge and decide that in these, the latest crises, we will build a Communist Party that in every factory will have a nucleus, a Communist Party against war, against capitalist brutality, against every dastardly act of capitalism. That we will build a Party which can give the signal to empty the factories, pour the masses into the streets, and demonstrate that real power lies in the working class, in the producing masses. If we continue to understand the importance of our Party, the importance of organization, and that we must have a powerful organisation to overcome the mighty organization machine of the capitalists in this country, then the success of the Communist movement, the success of the proletarian revolution in this country is assured.

Comrade Ruthenberg, our friend, our comrade, our leader is no more. Comrade Ruthenberg, we are sad, we mourn, but Comrade Ruthenberg we do not mourn forever. Comrade Ruthenberg, in your spirit, in your understanding of the necessity of organization we mourn no more. We now continue to build so that we can fight, so that we can win.

Fellow workers, members of the great army of the American working class, if you are convinced that the Communist movement is the movement of the working class, if you are convinced that it is the only force that can lead to the overthrow of American capitalism, then you can best pay your tribute to the memory of our departed leader by joining the fighting revolutionary political party, the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

THE QUESTION.

Do you agree with Clarence Darrow, that capital punishment should be abolished?

THE PLACE.

Broadway between 28th and 32nd streets.

THE ANSWERS.

H. Bader, 30th street, Coney Island, fur operator: "Yes. Capital punishment hasn't proven itself to be an effective check for crime. Despite the fact that many criminals are being electrocuted yearly, there is no marked decrease in homicides."

Harry Flaum, 2927 29th street, Brooklyn, insurance agent: "Yes, I believe that capital punishment should be abolished—two wrongs do not make a right. If it is wrong for an individual to commit murder, it is equally wrong for the state to do so."

Charles Binder, 4205 Church avenue, Brooklyn, broker: "Yes, but not until Mrs. Snyder's case is closed. Such murders might become more frequent if any clemency is shown her."

Mrs. Augusta Bernard, 1175 Grand Concourse, Bronx, housewife: "Yes, by all means. Capital punishment is cruel and barbaric. It is a relic of the dark ages. Criminal cases should be treated scientifically and not with stupid vengeance. Capital punishment as a means of preventing crimes has failed."

H. Levine, 72 East 114th street, taxi driver: "No. Cases like Mrs. Snyder's prove the necessity of capital punishment. If there wasn't any fear for being electrocuted, murders would increase manifold."

Laura Berkowitz, 1072 Findlay avenue, Bronx, unemployed: "Yes, I agree with Mr. Darrow. Life imprisonment is, certainly, enough punishment for any crime. Taking a life for a life does not solve the problem."

(Today's question was suggested by A. Mirk, 952 East Tremont Avenue, let us hear from more of our readers.—Egdamlat.)

FOOTNOTES TO THE NEWS

By EUGENE LYONS

Public Service.—The thrill of having performed a public service comes so rarely to this member of the American commonwealth that it is worth recording. The other day, for instance, we read that $600,000,000 in income taxes were collected in New York; a nice round figure, pleasant to behold and easy to fit into headlines. And we were thrilled by the knowledge that our contribution of $1.13 made it possible and prevented the annoying awkward total of $599,999,998.87. Some time before that we read in the morning paper that 15,000,000 had listened in on a certain radio program. Only by the sheerest accident, we knew, we had prevented the clumsy figure of 14,999,998 from smudging our press. We had been fussing with the dials in search of a bedtime story for our progeny and stumbled across the grand-opera concert, thus adding the two listeners who rounded out the total.

A Daniel Come to Judgment.—Who says judges have no heart? From Massachusetts, where Sacco and Vanzetti are winding up their seventh year of imprisonment, Phyllis Fenigston announces the discovery of Judge Frederick H. Chase and recommends that he "ought to be retained by the next group of workers who strike." Judge Chase, in brief, defended some Harvard students who had run riot and gotten themselves arrested. He pointed out that the boys were just having a good time . . . "the spirit of youth, a spirit which is not to be crushed by clubs, even though they be wielded by police officers." He pleaded (we quote the Boston Transcript!) that "in considering a charge of disturbing the peace, the time, the place and the circumstances must all be taken into account. . . . An officer has no right, when making an arrest, to use more force than is necessary. Officers have no right to create disturnbances when none exist. They have no right to impel their force into a peacable gathering and convert it into one in which there are cries and exclamations brought forth by their conduct." This view should be especially interesting to workers acquainted with procedure in the New York fur district, in the New Jersey textile sections, etc.

The following letter was intercepted by Henry George Weiss, who urges that we accept Mr. Scissorbill's dare and print in full:

Dear Sir:

I sometimes read The DAILY WORKER—tho I am too smart to believe in all that ignorant stuff about Communism—and therefore have seen where you want people to have about things. Well, I know you won't dare print this, because maybe if you did it would show the boobs that believe all your lies about the bosses how mis taken they are. About the bosses I mean. I have a good boss. He pays me eighteen dollars a week when I work, tho I don't always work every week. We've got one of those damn reds that works with us, and he's the sucker that shows me The DAILY WORKER whlen I sometimes reads. Yon bet he can't argue with me. The other day he's shooting his mouth off about the workers owning the shop and I says to him, it ain't possible, I says, to do without the bosses. Why not, he asks. Because, I says, who would pay us our wages then. Well, he looked terrible surprised. I bet he had never thot of that before. But then there's lots of things these suckers never think of because if they had brains they wouldn't be Communists. Well, I bet you don't print this for fear some of the boobs will read how I showed up this fourflusher. I am,

For the Bosses,

Some More About Liberals.—A letter in the current number of The New Republic has a comprehensive solution for the Mexican problem. The suggestion has at least simplicity to recommend it. And it is so typical of the liberal mind that probably it has not yet occurred to the editors of The New Republic that it is funny. The idea in brief is this: Certain oil companies have accepted the Mexican petroleum laws, others have not. Let the readers of The New Republic therefore buy their oil from companies which have complied. The correspondent himself has already begun this system. He buys only from nice companies. If there is a sudden unexplained settlement of the American-Mexican difficulties others may be puzzled, but readers of the N. R.—and those wise enough to study this column—will understand how it happened. We trust that readers of The DAILY WORKER, especially those with Rolls-Royces and motor-boats, will check up the source of their oil (including Nujol) before buying. On any little matters like interlocking directorates, etc., consult the nearest con.

FIVE dollars for a three minute exhortation to the capitalist deity is the compensation allowed by the New York assembly for that kind of labor. Mrs. Edith Craig, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hoosick, N. Y. has the doubtful honor to be the first woman to have ever opened the New York assembly with prayer. After reading Elmer Gantry by Sinclair Lewis, one would not be surprised if the spiritual Edith adjourned to the cloak room after her effort, to shoot a little game of craps with the speaker.

THE sum of $92,000,000 will be split among the stockholders of the Lackawanna railroad by order of the directors. The par value of the road's stock was originally $50 but is now $173 on the market. A Supreme Court decision ordered the Lackawanna to separate itself from its coal properties twelve years ago. The road was busy with other matters and the Supreme Court is always patient with rail maxnates and coal barons. Now the Lackawanna will organize a new corporation which will hold the securities that are not allowed to repose legally in the railroad's safes. And everything will go on just as before. This is surely a convenient social system.

THE United States government now admits that it "sold" 3,000 rifles, 200 machine guns and 3,000,000 rounds of ammunition to Diaz of Nicaragua with which to "suppress revolutionary activities in that country." Of course the supplies were not sold. Diaz hasn't the price of a meal and there is not a corporal's guard in Nicaragua that would give him a drink of water if they found him dying of thirst in a desert. The United States government not only supplied Diaz with military supplies but supplied him with the soldiers to use them.

THE bombardment of Shanghai by the British and United States warships is a piece of effrontery that neither befitting imperialism would care to try on a country like Germany or France or on the Soviet Union. This is the kind of treatment imported out to the Soviet Union when it was torn to pieces by civil war and struggling to get on its feet. That was before the Red Army was whipped into shape. It is safe to predict that the cock British and American naval commanders in Chinese waters will use different methods in China in a few years from now when the Chinese Red army will not have a civil war on its hands and a gang of reactionary brigands to get rid of.

The Hungarian Terror Opposed By Painters In Sharp Resolution

Thomas Wright, secretary of the New York council of the Painters union representing 14,000 workers has sent a telegram to Count Bethlen, premier of Hungary, protesting against the attempt of that white guard government to railroad to the firing squad 50 Hungarian workers who are now before a court martial. They were recently arrested because they were actively participating in the workers' struggles.

Jail Two More As Coal Strike Threatens

State Police Mobilize Around Pittsburg; L. L. D. Active

PITTSBURG, Penna. March 25.—Police in this district have showed increased activity, at the same time that all mining companies are surrounding their tipples with barbed wire and many are mounting machine guns and searchlights.

Uledar Mezzy, a Hungarian worker arrested in Woodlawn while having lunch in a restaurant is charged with sedition, under the Flynn act, and is held on $5,000 bonds.

Arrested Bringing Food.

Another Hungarian worker named Sheliata was arrested last night while trying to bring some food to Meszey in jail.

John Makl, a Finnish worker, was arrested in Monessen Tuesday night while distributing "Hands Off China" leaflets. His case is scheduled for hearing tomorrow morning.

The case of eight workers arrested in the Woodlawn armistice day picnic last year comes up in the Beaver county court Monday. A motion by the defense to quash the indictment against them is already pending and will be considered then. They are charged with sedition.

I. L. D. Defends.

The International Labor Defense is defending all of these cases, thru Attorneys Geo. J. Schaffer of Pittsburg and Charles Wolfson of Beaver. Attorney Isaac Ferguson of Chicago, who has had experience with several sedition law cases in the Pittsburg region is also assisting on the Woodlawn case.

Coal Miners' Local in Strong Demand Upon Board for Convention

HARWICK, Pa., March 25.—Local Union No. 524 of the United Mine Workers of America has taken the district executive board strongly to task for failing to hold the district convention as the constitution provides. District 5 is in the grip of Lewis' henchman Fagin, and in it a brute vote was piled up for Fagin's progressive opponent. Fred Siders, at the election for district president last year.

The reactionary executive board, however, is still ruling, and makes necessary such resolutions as the following:

WHEREAS, The Executive Board of Dist. 5, have taken the power unto themselves to postpone the convention of District 5, thereby setting aside Section 1, of article XI, of our district constitution, Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we, the members of Local Union 524, do hereby resent such action, and demand a convention as called for; and

FURTHERMORE, We call upon each local union of District 5, to indorse this necessary demanding resolution.

Present conditions in the coal industry and the struggle against bureaucracy within the United Mine Workers' Union, were discussed by two of the leaders of the progressive union forces, Powers Hapgood and John Brophy, former president of District 2, at a dinner held last night in the Cafe Boulevard, 41st street and Broadway, under the auspices of the "Democracy in Trade Unions Dinner Committee".

Brophy, who was a candidate for president of the union running against President John L. Lewis at the election last fall, devoted himself to describing the conditions of the [illegible] and the union's responsibility for such conditions.

Mussolini's New Law Prohibits Mention Of Somber Fascist Crime

ROME, March 25.—The Italian chamber of deputies is hard at work, under taskmaster Mussolini, to perfect the world's most drastic censorship law.

Penalties varying from light fines to imprisonment for three years and fines of 50,000 lire are provided to wipe out pornography and sedition. Before theatrical, musical, dancing, pantomine or cinematographic productions may be presented, they must have the double approval of a special committee of the minister of the interior and the prefect of the province.

The prefect would have virtually complete powers of rejection without appeal, also being able to withdraw approval or suspend production at any time.

One of the things expressly forbidden is the publication of details of "grewsome crimes," such as the fascist outrages or the murder of Matteoti.

Non-Union Mines May be Hit by Coal Strike

Fayette and West Virginia Fields Full Of Cossacks

FAIRMONT, West Va., March 25. With only six days left before the lockout of coal miners in the central competitive field, West Virginia non-union miners are taking counsel among themselves as to whether they should go out with the others.

Union officials have expressed a hope that at least half of the men will quit work, and tie up this important field.

Progressive miners have all along insisted that the only way to get a decent contract out of the operators this year is to carry on publicity and organization work among the non-union miners, to draw them into the strike.

Northern West Virginia operators have evicted thousands of union miners. More than 5,000 of these miners and their families are living in woodsheds hastily built and maintained by the international union. They are rough, unpainted buildings, without comforts or conveniences.

A typical barrack colonoy is located at Monanngah, near Fairmont. Here are living miners who were evicted in mid-winter by the Consolidation Coal Company. A school and a motion picture house have been erected by the union. A 50-piece band has been organized. The spirit of the miners is unbroken after three years of idleness. They are living on a dole from the union.

Bosses Quarrel.

Despite its increasing production, West Virginia has suffered greatly from throat cutting price competition.. In many places prices have jammed down to $1.25 a ton.

The average non-union wage here ranges from $4.20 to $5.75 a day as compared with the union scale of $7.26 a day for West Virginia. Some of the captive miners are paying close to the union scale. A captive mine is one owned by a railroad, public utility or a large industry which mines the coal for its own use and cannot afford to antagonize the union.

Opening Barracks.

PITTSBURG, March 25.—Besides the preparation which is being made in the stocking up of coal, the coal operators are taking no chances in leaving their non-union fields unprotected, as can be seen by a survey of the eoka region of Pennsylvania, where there was a bitter battle for 9 months for the recognition of the union in 1922. It was officially announced that the rural patrol which was withdrawn in 1923 from Fayette county is being re-established and Fayette county is being filled up with state police.

Cossack Patrol.

The rural patrol is a blind, it is a name under which the state police of Pennsylvania attack strikers. The local newspapers in Uniontown have come out in headlines, openly stating that the "state police are being sent to quell a possible strike outbreak".

Seven detachments of state police arrived in Uniontown on March 21st and 22nd. More will soon arrive.

Ford Hires Man to Write His Articles

Say He Threatened To "Upset Sapiro's Apple Cart"

DETROIT, March 25—Henry Ford's literary offerings, which appeared on his own page in the Dearborn Independent, were all written by William J. Cameron, editor of the publication, the latter testified today at the million-dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit.

Cameron told the jury in Federal Court here that he wrote the Ford articles, giving the billionaire's "philosophical thoughts."

Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond meanwhile again ruled out all questions relating to the Jewish race as a whole. The court added, however, that he would allow questions touching upon individual Jews or a small group of Jews.

Ford Never Writes

Cameron took the stand for the fifth successive day when Court convened. William H. Gallagher, chief of Sapiro's counsel conducted the examination.

"How many times did you see Mr. Ford?"

"Sometimes not once a week, sometimes once a day."

"What does he talk about when he drops into your office?"

"Oh, general subjects. Things he is interested in, such as agriculture."

"Do you discuss policies with him?"

"No, I use those occasions to get the philosophical angle of his thoughts."

"And you use this information to write Henry Ford's page in the Dearborn Independent?"

"Yes."

Cameron added that "Mr. Ford had nothing to do with it."

Allow Jewish Testimony

Attorneys for Henry Ford were on the defensive today in the million dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit following two rulings by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond. Aaron Sapiro, so-called wheat king, gained ground when the court first permitted him to eliminate 54 of his 141 alleged libels and then indicated that the auto king's attacks on individual Jews might be admitted to evidence to show Ford's malice toward Sapiro.

The first ruling, according to Sapiro, enabled him to "concentrate his case on the Jewish issue." The second afforded the "wheat king" a loophole through which he may prove Ford's alleged malice even though the court has ruled out all reference to the auto king's general attacks upon the Jewish race.

Ford Threatened Sapiro

The first sensation of the Ford-Sapiro million-dollar libel suit came this afternoon when James Martin Miller, a New York writer testified Henry Ford had threatened in 1923 to "expose' Aaron Sapiro, the so-called wheat king.

The threat was voiced by the auto

FRENCH MINERS THREATEN HUGE APRIL WALKOUT

Fight Wage Cuts; Send Ultimatum to Bosses

PARIS, March 25. — When the American soft coal miners go out on strike April 1st, they may be joined by the miners throughout France, according to the decision of the National Council representing the Federation of Underground Workers.

Refusing to accept the wage slash that is scheduled to become effective next month, the Council delivered its ultimatum to the mine owners and the government yesterday. "Not a centime off the pay unless living moves that way," is the slogan which the Council unanimously adopted.

In an effort to compete with the German mine owners who have been slashing wages, the French coal barons have been trying to reduce the standard of living of the French miners. Unless the wage-slashing policy is abandoned, a strike is inevitable, the Council announced yesterday.

Labor Leaders Gather To Oppose Passage of Bill for Ohio Cossacks

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 25.—This city is filled with representatives of the trade unions of the state, who are here to prevent the passage of the state constabulary bill, which is now before the legislature.

This is not the first time that the bankers, manufacturers and employers generally have tried to put across this bill. They do not do it directly, but induce the rural representatives to speak and vote for the bill on the grounds that the constabulary will be used in the rural districts.

They forget that the workers of this state have not such short memories. The workers know what takes place in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, two neighboring states, in which the constabulary is used not to protect the farm districts, but to police the industrial centers, especially the steel and mining towns.

Organized labor of this state will fight to the last ditch to defeat the measure.

MOSCOW SOVIET IN PROLONGED APPLAUSE AS CHINESE NATIONALISTS TAKE NANKING

MOSCOW, March 25.—Prolonged, stormy applause greeted the announcement today at a meeting of the Moscow Soviet that the Nationalist forces in China had captured Nanking.

"The more such blows are dealt to imperialism, the more allies the proletariat will have," declared M. Ugianoff, secretary of the Moscow Communist Party. "We must continue the struggle to win over a majority of the world's populations to our side, and when that has been accomplished, world socialism will have been assured."

Open Shop Booster Permits Dope Peddling

PITTSBURG, March 25. — The Pittsburg Coal Company, leader in the open shop drive scheduled to start April 1, on the expiration of the contracts in the central competitive field, was exposed as a corrupt influence in the community by international mine workers' officials sent here.

Get Rake Off.

In a paper read before the executive board of the Pittsburg council of churches, just a week before the big lockout is scheduled it was stated that:

"Immoral and unsanitary conditions" exist in the Pittsburg Coal Company mining communities.

"Bootleggers and dope peddlers do a thriving business and we are investigating a report that officials connected with the Pittsburg Coal Company enjoy a 'rake-down' from such sales."

The council is asked to take any action within its power.

SENATOR NORRIS SCORES SHIPMENT OF ARMS TO DIAZ

Costa Rica Protests U.S. Intervention

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Scoring the War Department for shipping arms to the Diaz government of Nicaragua and for terminating the anti-smuggling treaty with Mexico, Senator Norris (R) declared that President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg had lost us the friendship "of every nation" south of the Rio Grande.

The shipment of arms to the Diaz government was announced by the State Department as reports were received of another battle between the Liberals and the Conservatives, with preliminary successes indicated for the Liberals under General Moncada.

Latimer to Extend Control.

Rear-Admiral Latimer, commanding the American forces, threatens to extend the zones of his control should the Liberal success continue.

Senator Norris, in his criticism of the Administration, declared that our Latin-American policy is "shocking every peace-loving citizen in civilization."

SECRET SAILING ORDERS FOR NAVY INDICATE EXPEDITION TO MEXICO

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Relatives of naval officers have been telling their friends that secret sailing orders have been issued for service in the Caribbean, and the navy department is buzzing with gossip about probable service on the Mexican coast. If these reports are true, the Coolidge-Meilon administration is sending a naval expedition to encourage a revolt against the Mexican government by the extreme clerical and reactionary forces, who have the backing of the American oil interests for which Mellon, Sinclair and Doheny are spokesmen.

If such an expedition were sent, its first task would probably be to seize the Tampico oil fields, as was planned during the world war by the general staff. At that time, only the vigorous protest of a liberal army officer prevented the plan from being approved when its announcement within 24 hours was expected. After seizing the oil fields, the navy would presumably take or blockade Vera Cruz, in order to cut off Mexico City from getting shipments of munitions from abroad.

Amounting To Acts of War.

Such steps would only be taken if the United States government administration decided to defy the unanimous resolution of the senate that its quarrel with Mexico be settled by arbitration. Its termination of the treaty against smuggling arms into Mexico indicates that it does intend to ignore the advice of the senate. If secret orders have been issued for a naval expedition to Mexican ports, it means direct provocation.

Fire of Warships Hinders Evacuation

Coolidge Cabinet Gives Admiral Williams Power To Make War On Chinese People

NANKING, China, March 25.—Despite the extremely provocative attitude of the American Admiral Williams, and the fact that sending out of the American, British and Japanese nationals has been greatly hindered by the continued bombardment from the imperialist warships lying opposite the city, most of the foreigners are now embarked on ships and out of the way. They were marched without baggage to the Nanking Bund.

In the opinion of Chinese Nationalist authorities here, either a deliberate attempt was made to precipitate a war by the English, French and American naval officers, or they yielded to extreme hysteria. When the Nationalist army broke into the defenses of Nanking at five o'clock on the morning of Thursday, March 24th, the 400 American residents here who had been living on the backs of the Chinese as missionaries, or bosses of the Standard Oil, American tobacco, or other foreign firms, took fright and fled to Socony hill and to the Nanking university.

Numbers of Chang Tsung Chang's soldiers, breaking their formations, fled along with them. The pursuing Nationalists were fired upon alike by the northerners and by the English, French, Japanese and American warships lying in the harbor.

Fire On Protectors

When a patrol of Nationalists started up Socony Hill to escort the foreigners out of the scene of battle, the warships laid down a complete barrage of shell fire around the hill, killing thousands of non-combatant Chinese, men, women and children, endangering the patrol, which withdrew.

When protest against the cold-blooded slaughter was made by the Nationalist commander, Admiral Williams characterized him as "insolent," and reported his demands for evacuation of the foreigners. The Nationalist commander let them wait, as American guns made it dangerous to approach them.

Finally an agreement was reached by which they could be sent out without precipitating another bombardment by the war fleet.

The inhabitants of the town greeted the People's Army by displaying flags of the Kuomintang. It is expected that General Chang-kai-shek will enter within a few days.

Part of the city is still burning. Numerous northern troops, who broke ranks to loot, were drowned when they fled before the People's Army and tried to cross the river to Pukow. Their officers had already fled from the city.

Coolidge Backs Williams

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Unlimited backing for Admirals William and Hough was the decision of the administration at today's cabinet meeting.

The two admirals have been given "the widest discretion possible" and they will be backed to the limit, cabinet members said after the meeting. This means that if Admiral Williams decides to involve the United States in a war with the Chinese nation over Standard Oil properties, he may do so.

That the administration is willing to proceed to any extreme is indicated by the dispatch of additional troops to China. Six more cruisers are now enroute to Chinese waters to reinforce the Asiatic fleet, and Admiral Williams can have as many more as he deems necessary, cabinet members declared.

Chinkiang was bombarded today by the American destroyer William B. Preston according to a dispatch to the Navy Department from Admiral C. S. Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet.

The message did not state the number of Chinese killed by American

New Cases Total 158 In Montreal Typhoid Plague; Thousand Ill

MONTREAL, March 25.—The typhoid epidemic continues unabated, with about a thousand cases reported so far. A hundred and fifty-eight new cases developed yesterday. The disease was caused by infected milk brought in by large wholesale companies.

WAR NEARER AS JUGO-SLAVS ASK PROBE OF ITALY

Want Benito's Intrigue Investigated

BERLIN, March 25. — The war clouds hovering over the Adriatic threaten to take on a darker tinge again, following reports from Belgrade, that the Jugo-Slavian government is preparing a circular note to the powers in which it will charge Italy with feverishly preparing for war and demand that either the powers or the League of Nations investigate these preparations because they present a grave danger to the neighboring countries and the peace of Europe.

Wants Italy Looked Into.

These reports, together with the inclination of Jugo-Slavia to throw open its own borders for international investigation only if Italy is investigated at the same time, reveal a considerable stiffening of the Jugo-Slavian attitude over night.

Since it is believed that Mussolini will never accept such an investigation, the League of Nations would again be placed in a very embarrassing situation. It is therefore expected that the powers will do their utmost to prevent Jugo-Slavian action.

Italy Spends Most.

The Jugo-Slavian parliament accepted the military budget today, which the war minister announced had been cut by one third. The Jugo-Slavian budget, it is said, provides for but twenty per cent. of the total for military expenditures, while the Italian military budget is said to total twenty-eight per cent.

King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia is going to Paris Saturday to discuss the situation with his ally, Franre.

mate number of Americans alleged to have been killed in Nanking. Anybody at all acquainted with the inside workings of the newspapers can tell at a glance that the whole report is a fake, purposely sent out to stimulate public feeling in favor of intervention. The Tribune of yesterday stated that: "Reports of casualties are conflicting, but one Briton was known to have been killed, one wounded and a Japanese injured." The Tribune correspondent in Shanghai admitted that the reports of loss of foreign life in Nanking were unconfirmed.

It appears that the original report of war sent out by Reuter's News Agency. The American consul in Shanghai took cognizance of the "report" but evidently did not believe it. Among the worst offenders against the Chinese, is the Hearst Agency, Universal Service. This lying propaganda agency stops at nothing in its mad desire to embroil this country in a war against the Nationalist revolution. Hearst is using the methods he practised in Cuba before the Spanish-American war. "You furnish the news" he cabled to his Cuban correspondent "and we will furnish the war." Those blood-thirsty imperialists care little if hundreds of thousands of human lives are blotted out in their greed for new conquests.

COUNT FELIX VON LUCKNER, who commanded the German raider Sea Eagle in the World War, was a guest at the Advertising Club last Thursday. Had an American organization received the count any time between the years 1917 and 1920, they would soon see their quarters in ruins and patriotic morons doing an Indian war dance over the wreckage. The officers would be lucky to escape a coat of tar and feathers. People were arrested by stool pigeons during the war for suggesting that a few Germans may not be assassins.

A few had their necks tickled by a patriotic rope for opposing the war. Thousands were jailed for the same reason. Hundred Twenty-three Thousand Farmers Fail In 1926; West Hard Hit

WASHINGTON (FP)—Farm property has again been emphasized by statistics announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This time the department shows that 123,000 American farms have changed hands by foreclosure of mortgages during the past year.

Beside the loss of farms through foreclosure by regular process, the industry made a record of 170,000 farms sold or traded.

In the Dakotas and in Montana the defaults of payments which led to foreclosures were from 6 to 7 per cent of all farms, while in Georgia and South Carolina the worst of the Southern farm depression was indicated.

SPECTRE OF WANT HAUNTS EUROPE; GERMANY'S PLIGHT

Millions of Workers on Brink of Starvation

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

ESSEN, Germany, March 6, (By Mail).—Unemployment, the spectre that one sees everywhere in Europe, is most awful in Dawes's Germany. At least 2,000,000 workers are unemployed thruout the land. Some 4,000,000 more are working only part time. It is impossible to spend a week in any German city without having unemployment impressed upon your mind as the outstanding factor of the present industrial situation.

Dawes and Unemployment.

Unemployment is at its worst in those parts of Germany where the "rationalization" schemes which are the sain of Dawes's Germany have had their widest application. In addition to Berlin, the areas principally affected are Westphalia, the Ruhr territory, Saxony and central Germany,—including all the centers of heavy industry. I have addressed meetings of workers in all parts of this territory. At every meeting a large part of the crowd was made up of unemployed.

Talk to almost anyone riding in the third and fourth class cars on the railroads, spend a few minutes with one of the many jobless workers who hang around the depots waiting for a chance to carry a suitcase, go over things with the secretary of a local trade union, and official figures no longer satisfy you as to the seriousness of the situation.

City of Jobless.

This city of Essen, in the heart of one of Germany's two greatest industrial districts, is a city of the jobless. The big Krupp works, which formerly employed 40,000 men, now employ 16,000. While the decline of Krupp's is explained by special causes, it is impossible to separate the Krupp situation from the general. The steel industry as a whole, the entire metal industry, even the feverishly busy coal industry, are working with greatly curtailed payrolls. As often as not, reduced employment goes hand in hand with increased production, brought about under the speed-up methods imported from America. Such methods include not only Fordized specialization, standardization, the conveyor system, etc., but also lengthening of the workday.

For Eight Hour Day.

The German masses may thus be divided into two groups: one that works long hours under speed-up conditions; another that has work for only a few days a week, or not at all.

It is significant that the Communist Party of Germany has had to take up the nennnd for a return to the eight-hour day! This demand, echoed by wide numbers of Social Democratic and other non-Communist workers, is the central point in the class struggle against Dawes' "rationalization" in Germany.

23 Arrested for Sedition

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 25.—Workers of Pennsylvania are appealed to by the International Labor Defense to come to the aid of 23 of their fellows, all either convicted of sedition or arrested within the last few weeks on charges of sedition. They are all in danger of either being railroaded to the penitentiary, or deported.

Judges Go Slow.

The Horack case is before the courts, on appeal. He was arrested with nine others in 1923, tried three years later by a kangaroo jury and convicted in defiance of the evidence.

The Papcun case is similar; Papcun was arrested while organizing a local of the miners' union in the coke region. In both of these cases the judge is taking his time.

On November 11, last year, the Woodlawn workers interested in organizing militant union and co-operatives forces were arrested and charged with sedition. They had been fighting the Jones & Laughlin local government, and were most of them arrested at a picnic in the previous July. They were fined for false arrest, and the prejudiced court turned them down. It was during this trial that the postmaster admitted he had been censoring The DAILY WORKER.

The Department of Justice sent men to the mining town of Harmarville and while the company was paying off its workers, they stood at the pay window and questioned them as to whether they subscribed to Communism and if they read The DAILY WORKER or other papers which have radical tendencies.

Then they arrested 2 workers, an Italian, and a Slovak, and are now holding them for deportation, though these workers do not belong to any radical organization. Five days later, on Feb. 15, a Lithuanian, who was to speak at a meeting of the Lithuanian Literary Society, was arrested and put under $5,000 bail, for merely having in his possession some pamphlets.

Attack Communism.

The last arrest so far, on March 16, is that of a Hungarian worker who was getting subscriptions for Uj Elore, the Hungarian paper. At the time of this writing, he is still in jail with the court demand $5,000 bail. It seems that the main attack is centered on the Communist Party. The government and the steel and coal barons who expect a strike of the coal miners on April 1st.

The last convention of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor condemned the Flynn Sedition Law and passed a resolution which instructed the Executive Board of the state organizational steps in preparing a campaign against the law.

Fight Decisions.

The workers must understand that this law is not only against the Communists, but it is against any and all militant workers who are willing to fight for their rights. The workers must make up their minds to fight against this law and mobilize the rank and file to force the labor officials to fight against this law. It must be remembered that with the tremendous expense involved in these cases and with the exorbitant bail which the group of militant workers there are only a few and who are burdened), have been standing, they are financially becoming exhausted and it is the duty of all workers to come to the defense of these workers who are fighting in the blackest and most reactionary spot in Pennsylvania or the United States against the steel, oil and railroad barons and coal operators backed by the government and labor officials. The backing must come not only financially but by huge mass protests to the local and state government and also donate to the International Labor Defense, 807 Mc-Geagh Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Tobacco Workers in Organizing Campaign

Editor, Daily Worker.—The campaign to organize the tobacco workers of New York and vicinity was formally opened last night with a special meeting arranged by the organization committee of the joint advisory board which had originally been elected from each local union to act as such in conjunction with the executive board of all locals, and the chairmen and committee of all shops.

If attendance and enthusiasm mean anything then this organization work will undoubtedly bear good results and with the aid of the labor forces, and with the union, better conditions for the tobacco workers may be hoped for.—F. J. Van Fract.

Appeal to Coolidge Puts Anti-Salooner In Prohibition Job

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The anti-saloon league hoped once more into the saddle of federal prohibition enforcement today, with the appointment of Major Roy A. Haynes, its former executive head, as a former government dry chief, as "acting commissioner" of prohibition.

Secretary of the treasury Mellon announced the elevation of Haynes after one of the most determined fights waged for a federal post in recent years had forced intervention from the white house, senators, state executive and a former governors, associate and the new bureaus of customs and prohibition and upset the program Assistant Secretary Andrews has been developing for two years.

OIL LOBBYISTS ORDERED MEXICO TREATY BROKEN

American Supplies for Rebels May End Tax

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25.—Coolidge has ended the anti-smuggling treaty with Mexico at the behest of the oil interests.

This termination of the anti-smuggling treaty is the step demanded some weeks ago by the Doheny-Sinclair-Mellon oil lobby in Washington. They declared that only this threat to the severity of the Calles government would bring about a settlement of the oil law dispute. It was their guess that Calles, rather than fare a revolt backed by the forces that run the Coolidge-Mellon administration, would yield on the oil law, and would permit a comercial treaty to be negotiated, or dictated to him, which would in fact nullify the Mexican constitution as to the oil claims of American companies.

Weasel Words

"Upon due consideration," says Kellogg's announcement, "the government has concluded to terminate the treaty at the expiration of the year (Mar. 28), and has accordingly given the appropriate notice to the government of Mexico."

All of which vague language means that unless Calles shall quickly agree to a treaty of commerce under which the American oil companies will be granted what they want, the arms embargo may be lifted at any moment.

The White House spokesman, when asked the real meaning of this action, said he had no comment to make on the termination of "a small treaty with Mexico covering the subject of smuggling."

Oppose Intervention

On the day before this blow was struck at the safety of the Mexican government, a petition was delivered to Coolidge and Kellogg, asking that not to lift the embargo on arm shipments into Mexico. That petition was signed by 362 prominent citizens, including Bruce Brown of Yale Divinity School, E. M. Borchard, professor of law at Yale; Dean Helen Taft Manning of Bryn Mawr College; President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin; Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, president of the American Ass'n. of University Women; Dr. John Latane, professor of American history at John Hopkins University; Mrs. Louis D. CHINESE WORKERS SCORED FOR BAN ON HOSTILE PRESS

U. S. Consul's Report Shows Class Bias

WASHINGTON, March 25 (FP)—Class fears of the radical labor element in the Chinese revolution are reflected in the State Department's official report of a report by Consul General Lockhart at Hankow, Mar. 22.

"An American newspaper at Hankow, the Hankow Herald, and also a British newspaper, the Central China Post," it says, "have been forced to suspend publication since Mar. 19 by the radical labor union at that city. The labor union forced the suspension of these newspapers by compelling Chinese employes to quit work. There was no apparent cause for this action. No previous warning had been received and no difficulty with the employes had been experienced.

This astonishment by Lockhart, at a political strike such as has been common in China for years, is modified by a further statement:

"It is probable that labor leaders were dissatisfied with the attitude of the two papers toward the labor cause and that the leaders of the radical labor group had decided to close them down. This is reported as the most drastic action yet taken by the radical labor group and has created a sensation in Hankow."

Favors Northerners

In the midst of a working-class revolution, the official-labor press owned by foreigners has gone on undisturbed for four months, and Lockhart finds a "sensation" in the decision of the labor unions of Hankow that they do not care to continue to print foreigner's attacks upon their national resurrection and emancipation!

Lockhart further reported that the "loyal" Chinese employes of the British Cigarette Co. offices in Hankow had been "spirited away" until the offices were forced to close. Foreign employes, he said, had been "threatened, but have not been harmed."

WASHINGTON, March 25 (FP)—China's Nationalist government aroused no enthusiasm in the State Department when its forces captured Shanghai. Secretary Kellogg declined to discuss the question of possible American recognition of the winner. Disappointment was registered over the financial prances. Sympathy of American officialdom has been with the Northern militarists all along. It has made numerous protests to the Nationalist ministers. Eugene Chen, when American interests were affected by the acts of the revolutionary forces. It has not reported any serious protests against looting and violence by the Northern soldiers.

Minister Sao-ke Alfred Sze, accredited to Washington by the Peking government-that-was, is still acting as envoy for China.

Mississippi Supreme Court To Rule On Jim Crow Case Of Chinese

JACKSON, Miss.—Among the appeal records on file in the office of the clerk of the Mississippi supreme court is one on the March term docket with reference to the Chinese color line question for decision.

This is the case of W. F. Bond, state superintendent of education against Joe Tig Fung, a minor son of Joe Tig Fung. The case is from the circuit court of Coahoma county and pertains to the statutory racial classification of the Chinese in relation to admission to the public schools of the state.

The case grows out of the expulsion of the Chinese youth from the Dublin Consolidated school in Coahoma county which the record shows he had been attending for some time. A short time prior to the filing of his mandamus petition Joe was notified by the Dublin school trustees that he would not be permitted to attend that school further. Judge Alcorn sustained the petition and the school authorities took the appeal.

Students Will Study Southern Conditions

Surveys of conditions under which Mississippi woman work are to be made by students of the State College for Women. Nearly 70 girls have enrolled for the first studies to be made in the university town, Columbus.

Students' seek first hand answers to the problems of 6000 women in Mississippi, working over 10 hours a day at a median salary of $8.60, says the New Student—national college student publication. The surplus cotton crop situation is mentioned as another field for student study.

The Manager's Corner

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

During the week of March 21 to 26 the New York comrades arranged a series of benefit performances of Pygmalion. Thirty odd comrades took these tickets for sale. Due to the systematic efforts of these comrades we managed to sell out completely and to net several hundred dollars for The DAILY WORKER.

This affair and the results obtained marks a new policy for The DAILY WORKER. It demonstrates that it is possible to secure valuable support painlessly. It shows that we can easily exploit the very natural desire of our comrades to see a good play and at the same time reap some benefit for The DAILY WORKER. We are planning more of this. The next play which is being given for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER is Michael Gold's "Fiesta," the new Mexican revolutionary play, during the week of April 11 to April 16. We ask our comrades to keep these dates in mind in preparing their future plans. We ask also that other cities copy the tactics so successfully followed in New York. There are plenty of plays, amusements, stories, etc., which could be bought out cheaply in order to bring a profit to The DAILY WORKER.

In connection with the Pygmalion performance we wish to acknowledge particularly the good work done by: Frances Gross, Celia Samarodin, William Hayden, Z. Sherrow, Samuel Leibowitz, L. E. Katterfeld, Rose Rosen, Dora Luskin, Rae Heimowitz, Dora Spira, A. Rosenblatt, Milton Weich, L. Hirschman, W. Wolf, Efeia Walenath, M. Feingold, Minnie Zurav, Fannie Untermau, E. BRITISH WORKERS COURT WON'T LET PROTEST AGAINST WM. J. BRENNAN TROOPS IN CHINA TAKE HIS OFFICE

Intervention Scored In Manifesto

LONDON, March 25.—Workers throuout England are protesting against intervention in China and deploring the withdrawal of British troops and gunboats.

A circular letter demanding that foreign powers keep their hands off China has been signed by representatives of all of the large trade unions.

Pointing out that troops have been sent to China at the instigation of British bankers and that Chinese workers have been savagely exploited by foreign capitalists, the manifesto declares, "We call upon Britain to letire back the warships from China, cease interfering with the efforts of the people of China to form any government they choose."

All Unions Protest

The manifesto is signed by A. F. Rae, Trades Union Educational League; J. S. Gaiden, Labor Council, N. S. W.; F. A. Armstrong, Clerks' Union, Leeds; Coachmakers; A. Middleton, painters; J. Stewart, Electrical trades; D. Duncan, A. W. U. Central; J. Ryan, meat industry, N. Jefferys, meat workers; T. Fairlingham, boilermakers; W. Bright, bricklayers; D. Rees, miners; A. Sherwin, hotel, club and restaurant workers; J. Medley, ironworkers; T. H. Bell, printers; D. McLelland, blacksmiths.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 25.—Without opposition, the assembly today passed the Westall bill, providing for a new charter form of government for Westchester county.

Progressive Miner Cut Out; Isaacs Wins

SCRANTON, Pa., March 25.—William J. Brennan, former president of the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre district union of the United Mine Workers, loses his election appeal against Rinaldo Cappellini, whom he opposed in the biennial campaign of 1925. Brennan ran on the John Brophy ticket last year for secretary treasurer.

Running Mate Wins

Brennan charged fraud. In turning down his appeal, however, the referee appointed by the court, gave a decision in favor of Brennan's running mate, George Isaacs, who opposed Cappellini's vice president, Michael Kosik. Isaacs is declared the duly elected vice president of District 1. The ruling gives the remaining term of the job till August 1 next to him and orders the district union to pay his back salary from August 1, 1925, to the date of 1925 a year. In addition, the entire costs of the appeal of Brennan, Isaacs and other associates are assessed against the district treasury. Appeal may be made.

Isaac's Chance Improves.

The decision has a bearing on the politics of this second largest U. M. W. of A. district. Isaacs has already filed for vice president in the 1927 elections against the administration candidate and the decision that he was unfairly defeated the last time is expected to aid his chances this year. Campbell is also a candidate for international board member this year.

COOLIDGE GLAD SCHOOLS MADE SAFE FOR G.O.P.

Lauds Republican Class For School Girls

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press).

WASHINGTON, (FP). — President Coolidge sent a letter of laudation to the "school of politics" conducted by Mrs. Mary D. Lightfoot at the Willard Hotel under the auspices of the league of republican women of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Lightfoot had Sen. Jim Watson of Indiana, Dr. John Wesley Hill, George Lockwood and former Rep. Foss of Illinois as her star speakers. An assistant attorney general and an assistant secretary of commerce also contributed talks on "Upholding The Constitution" and "Aviation". Hill was a close adviser to President Taft at the time of the Ballinger scandal. Lockwood is the former secretary of the G. O. P. national committee who sent Blair Coan to Montana to "get" Sen. Wheeler in order that the exposure of Harry Daugherty and Wm. J. Burns be stopped. Foss was a lieutenant of Czar Cannon.

Tries To Oust Teacher.

It was Mrs. Lightfoot who some months ago spread broadcast among women's organizations in Washington multigraphed copies of her petition to the district commissioners, the board of education and other authorities that Harry Flury, teacher in a local high school, be dismissed. She charged that, at a meeting of the Secular League, he had made "atheistic, Communistic, socialistic and pacifistic utterances". The utterances in question consisted in reading from a speech made by Sen. Dill of Washington, criticising the administration for allowing the naval radio station NAAA to be used by militaristic organizations for their propaganda.

Meet Hear Republicans.

That the administration is bringing pressure upon the public school system to get into line for G. O. P. reactionary "yessing" is indicated by the strong arm methods adopted to gather an audience for Mrs. Lightfoot. The principal of one high school ordered a teacher to visit all the senior classes and invite the girls to attend this republican "school of politics".

ALBANY, N. Y., March 25.—By a vote of 107 to 31, the Cooke bill, extending the time for registration of voters from July 1 to Sept. 20, was defeated in the assembly this afternoon. Under the present law, certain days are set aside in October for registration.

Big Brewers Lock Out Union Building Trades Then Cut Scab's Wages

WASHINGTON (FP)—When the executive council of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor meets, April 4, in the Mt. Royal Hotel in Montreal, its quarterly session will take up the lockout of union building trades men by the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. of St. Louis.

That company ordered a cut in wages, and when the building trades mechanics refused to accept the cut, it turned them out. The reduction was enforced as soon as it will take to take the places of those locked out.

WAR ON COMPANY UNIONISM WAGED IN LYNN, MASS.

Fight Speed-Up in G. E.; Propaganda in Schools

WEST LYNN, Mass., March 25.—A series of mass meetings to expose the savage speed-up system which has followed the introduction of the company union in the General Electric plants here is being planned by the Central Labor Union, the Lynn Building Trades Council and the International Association of Electrical Workers.

Propaganda among school children is the latest method employed by agents of the General Electric Company for spreading company unionism. When Louis Budenz, editor of the Labor Age, who was visiting West Lynn, attempted several days ago to appear before the local high school to counteract some of the vicious falsehoods that were being propagated he was prevented from doing so.

Propaganda In Schools.

An investigation of company unionism in the plants of the General Electric Company at West Lynn, Mass., by Louis Budenz, editor of the Labor Age, flatly contradicts the reports of the situation that have been made by prominent liberals like Robert Bruyere of the Survey Graphic.

"Company unionism has resulted in the introduction of the speed-up system," he said. "Curious misconceptions of the operation of company unionism have arisen as a result of propaganda that has been spread by observers, who have been misled by G. E. officials. The General Electric Company has not merely misinformed observers, but it is actually carrying propaganda in favor of company unionism in the schools."

Arrest Fighters Wife.

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—A bench warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Jen Nixon, film stunt and former wife of Joe Benjamin, pugilist, to compel her to appear against her ex-husband, accused of assaulting her with a deadly weapon, has been issued, it was learned today.

Mrs. Houck's Body Goes Home.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The body of Mrs. Gladys Walter Houck, recovered from the river here after she had been mysteriously missing for three months, was enroute to Canton, O., today. Relatives took charge of it for burial.

PHILADELPHIA RUTHENBERG DRIVE FOR MORE PARTY MEMBERS NOW ON

(Special to The Daily Worker).

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 25.—Ruthenberg recruiting mass meetings are being arranged in every section of the city of Philadelphia. All details have been worked out by a special sub-committee.

In this campaign, special stress is being laid by the Philadelphia comrades on work based on individual solicitation for membership among the progressive trade unionists. Steps have also been taken to organizing the visiting of all such centers.

In the anthracite region, there is being organized a conference of delegates from all party units, so as to insure the greatest mobilization of the party's resources in the Ruthenberg enrollment.

Committee of Five.

The Ruthenberg recruiting drive in the city of Philadelphia proper is in charge of a section committee of five, amongst whom are the three section organizers, and comrades Lazarowitch and Ball. Already the drive has had the effect of strengthening the units of the party to a large extent. This is especially true of the party units in Sections 2 and 3 of Philadelphia. Likewise there is already evident a marked improvement of the party work in Philadelphia and Washington.

Comrade Alex Ball, who has just been unanimously elected as district organizer, is directing the drive.

Bulgarian Workers Active.

The Bulgarian National Language Fraction Bureau is throwing itself into the enrollment with full force. The Bulgarian fraction seekers are tying up the objectives of the Ruthenberg recruiting drive with the problems facing the Bulgarian workers in America, and with the struggles of the Bulgarian workers at home against their exploiters and oppressors.

Particular efforts are being made to win over in the Ruthenberg enrollment members of the Bulgarian-Macedonian Workers' Educational Clubs. In these clubs there are to be found some of the best elements of the Bulgarian workers in the United States.

The Ruthenberg memorial meetings in the Philadelphia district to date are by far the best meetings of any kind held in that district for a long time.

PHILA. WORKERS HOLD HANDS OFF CHINA MEETING

To March Down Broad Street Sunday

PHILADELPHIA, March 25.—Thousands of Chinese and American workers will march down the streets of Philadelphia Sunday afternoon to protest the slaughter of Chinese by American and British troops.

Commemorating the death of Sun Yat Sen, the Kuomintang of this city has arranged the monster parade and mass meeting. The demand for the withdrawal of American troops and gunboats from China will be voiced by prominent speakers.

Welsbord to Speak

William Pickens, field secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Albert Weisbord, leader and organizer of the Passaic strike, P. T. Lau, recently returned from Canton, P. S. Ho of the Philadelphia Kuomingang and Irving Green of the Young Workers League will be among the speakers at the meeting. Alex Ball of the Workers (Communist) Party will preside.

The parade will start at Broad and Race streets and will wind its way down Locust street to the Labor Lyceum, where the mass meeting will be held.

Protest Slaughter of Chinese

The slaughter of thousands of unresistants in Nanking by British and American troops has aroused the Chinese of this city. The meeting and parade, which were originally arranged to commemorate the death of Sun Yat Sen, will protest American intervention in China and will demand the withdrawal of American marines and gunboats.

Describes Growth of Labor

The growth of trade unions in China and their role in the revolution were described in an interview with P. T. Lau, young representative of the Kuomintang who has come over here to study our labor unions.

"The new government of China," he said, "will be a government for labor. The old government persecuted workers, and trade unions were compelled to remain secret organizations.

"Now Shanghai will be like Hankow. The sailors and the dock workers, the building construction workers, the cotton mill, tobacco and cigarette workers and the tram and bus workers will all be members of industrial unions."

Unions Powerful

The labor unions are the most powerful force in the Chinese liberation movement, he said.

Lau speaks English fluently. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, where he attended Scott Nearing's classes at the Wharton school of finance.

Non-Union Mines May Be Hit By Soft Coal Strike

Barracks already have been opened in North Belle Vernen in command of Corporal George Pierce. In Brownsville in command of Corporal Ellis Jacobson. In Masontown in command of Sargent Norman McBean, in New Salem in command of Sargent J. B. Dodson, and in charge of the county Sargent J. V. Buckley. They are all to be superseded by higher officers, a captain and two lieutenants.

Fear Strike Spreads.

It seems that the coal operators are afraid that the strike spirit might catch the Fayette county and in the Monongahela River district. The latter was at one time strongly organized but since the open shop drive of 1924 nearly all the union mines were wiped out. Now only Vestas Pike and Lilly remain union. It is rumored that the non-union coal operators in Fayette county have already hired into the coke region carry full equipment for each man besides 2 horses a piece. It is reported that one hundred more troopers will be there by April 1st.

The miners seem to be in a state of suspense throughout the coal region as the coal operators are making preparations for the coming strike which at this date seems inevitable.

Cappellini Fights For Job.

SCRANTON, Pa., (FP).—Rinaldo Cappellini, president, District 1, United Mine Workers, and attorneys for the union, are seeking to reverse the ruling of Referee Tinkham against Michael Kosik, district vice president. Tinkham, acting for County Judge Watson, ruled Kosik out of office after hearing the evidence in the election contest and awarded the post to his rival in the 1925 elections, Georga Isaacs.

Isaacs is a member of the progressive faction on a political opponent of the Cappellini administration.

Brophy and Hapgood Tell Need of Contracts Ending Simultaneously

anthracite men will be working while their brothers are in a struggle for a living wage."

Excepts Partial Strike.

Asked whether he thot a strike would surely come, Brophy stated that from present indications he believed that some of the companies would sign the old agreement, leaving part of the mines operating, and only part on strike.

Brophy was loath to comment from any personal angle on his election campaign of last fall but in response to questions, he said:

"Well, according to our union constitution there should be a tabulated report on the election published on January 15; but up to date no such report has been issued, and I doubt whether it ever will be."

Bucking The Machine.

The dinner guests were particularly interested in hearing Powers Hapgood tell, from his own experience, what happens to those who try to buck the Lewis machine up and put it into action on some of the plans formulated at the various conventions—such as nationalization of mines, and organization of the unorganized.

Hapgood recounted, very modestly, how he became a target at the last convention for the reactionary slugging and was beaten up so that he might not be able to appear at the session. He told of the steam roller methods which throttled every voice of opposition, and the final vote to bar all Communists from membership in the union.

"Of course this will be used against non-Communists too", said Hapgood. "Anyone who is active against those in power in the union will be run out on this charge."

In representative of The DAILY WORKER, Brophy and Hapgood were asked about expenditures in connection with the anthracite strike, in view of President William Green's repeated contrast of the economy of this strike with the extravagance of the farmers strike.

No Detailed Statements.

"Figures are hard to get", said Brophy. "There is no detailed statement of expenditures. But for one thing there had no scabs, so no picketing was necessary and therefore there were no arrests and expenses for legal defense.

No Benefits.

"Then of course the miners did not pay any regular benefits. There would be small amounts paid for relief in needy cases, but no regular system of benefits as the furriers and cloakmakers had."

This is an interesting item to bear in mind when Mr. Green or his associates start their next campaign against for in the furriers strike, over $600,000 of the $800,000 was returned to the workers in weekly benefits, and a large part of the rest was used for legal expenses.

For Democracy.

The "Democracy in Trade Union" Dinner Committee" which arranged last night's dinner for Brophy and Hapgood is a group of labor economists and writers and other friends of the progressive forces in the trade unions. Two months ago it held a dinner at which speakers from the cloak and dressmakers' unions told of the left wing fight against the reactionary Sigman machine in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The committee includes Ait Young, Michael Gold, Paxton Hibben, Washington Craton, Hugo Gellert, William Gropper, Col. C. E. S. Wood and Robert W. Dunn.

Ford Hires Man to Write His Stories

klige, said Miller, during a visit to his office at Dearborn, Michigan.

Millar quoted Ford as saying: "I think we will upset his (Sapiro's) apple-cart."

"Ford said 'Sapiro is organizing the farmers with the Jews. The independent has a large circulation among the farmers and we are going to expose him and I think will upset his apple-cart."

Judge Raymond excluded from Aaron Sapiro's libel declaration an attempted definition of the word "Jew", as used by Ford. Ford uses the word, Sapiro declared, as a term of "reproach, hatred, contumely and scorn."

On the other hand, some of the matter excluded in the revelation, by Gallagher, Sapiro's attorney, was acceptable to Ford's lawyers. They protested against having to change their case.

In commenting on Mr. Gallagher's amendment to strike out the nineteenth count of the indictment, which was based on an editorial appearing in the Independent, Mr. Hanlay continued:

"We plead the truth of the matter set forth in that count and stand prepared to prove that Mr. Sapiro is a grafter, a fakir, a fraud and a cheat. Our avidance on that count applies to other counts, and just how the elimination would affect our pleading cannot be determined without study.

BERLIN, March 25.—Fearing that the return of Kaiser Wilhelm would create political turmoil, Harr. Braun, Minister President of Prussia, has written Chancellor Marx asking him to bar the Kaiser from Germany.

MORALES CASE PRECEDED BY TERROR REIGN

Police Shot at Mexican Beat, Robbed Others

CHICAGO, March 25.—The Immigrants' Protective League, in a pamphlet now in preparation, will devote a chapter to the case of Augustin Morales, the young Mexican to be tried May 2 for the murder of policeman Lyman J. Stahl.

As Morales' attorney proceeds with the preparation of a strong defense, new atrocities committed on Dec. 7 against the Mexican colony at Melrose Park come to light. It is learned that among the 86 Mexicans arrested, beaten, robbed, and fined, was Ramon Sanchez, a cousin of Jose Sanchez, who was also shot at that time.

Instead of fining Ramon, he was turned out of jail at ten o'clock at night, alone, and was followed by two policeman who shot at him. Bullets passed thru his clothing and he escaped with his life by swinging on to a passing freight train, smashing his arm in so doing.

The defense of Morales, who is believed innocent by impartial observers, will be sensational. The Chicago Crime Commission is also investigating the whole affair. It appears that Melrose Park is in for an airing.

Report No Americans Killed at Nanking

fire. Americans are preparing to leave Chinkiang, Admiral Williams said. (Chinkiang is a strategically important city between Shanghai and Nanking, which the Nationalist's troops took several days ago.)

Nanking Reported In Flames.

LONDON, March 25.—As a result of the bombardment of Nanking by American and British warships on Thursday, a considerable portion of the city is burning, according to a Central News dispatch from Shanghai today.

The dispatch states that the work of evacuating foreigners from Nanking is proceeding smoothly and that all foreign girls in the city are now aboard the Emerald.

Rectore Order In Shanghai

SHANGHAI, March 25.—Nationalists are rapidly restoring order in this city. Drastic punishment is being meted out to disturbers of the peace. Quiet prevailed in northern districts reported in looting.

A hundred thousand strikers have resumed work, following the expiration of the political strike which was called to paralyze the imperialists during the occupation of the city by the People's Armies. The occupation being now complete, there is no further need for the strike.

CLEVELAND BUILDING UNIONS HAVE NO VERY STRONG ADVOCATE IN ARBITRATOR THEY ASK

CLEVELAND.—The building trades of this city are in a chaotic situation. Only a few unions have agreements with the contractors, while the contractors' association, backed by the "Cleveland Citizens Committee" refuse to make any agreements granting protection to the workers. They are determined to force through the planket agreement, which allows them to put a non-union man beside a union man.

The unions are resisting—but the old agreement has expired, and now they are working under no agreement whatever, with the intention of dropping their work when the season advances if the contractors dare to put non-union men on the job.

The latest move is to submit the dispute to arbitration. Building Trades Unemployed Association insists upon this umpire being a man selected by a local federal judge. The unions demand a board of three, consisting of a rabbi, a priest and a probate Judge. Fine Judges for the workers!

The rabbi Brickner, recently relieved himself of a statement that "the problem of the future is to teach the working classes to make profitable use of their leisure time so they may attain happiness." Therefore he considers the 5-day week "premature." "The eight-hour day was sensible and salutary. Further reduction to the forty-hour, five-day week in all industries would prove a tremendous burden on the unorganized workers." Brickner is skeptical whether we would be able to compete with German industry if the five-day week were universally introduced. He is against labor unions coercing free Americans to join the union." He "advocates the preferential shop, where a non-union man may work beside a union man," adding "only I believe that the union man should be given preference, all things being equal."

And that is one of the men to decide what late of the building trades workers—and proposed by the workers' representatives themselves.

The building trades workers of Cleveland had better watch their representatives, or they will find themselves sold over body and soul, because the rabbi is considered a "liberal." Of such stuff liberalism is made!

Czecho-Slovak Worker Youth Stage Gym Meet In Chicago, April 3

CHICAGO (F. P.) — About 150 athletes are entered in the gymnastic exhibition of the Czecho-slovak Worker Club Youth, to be staged in Chicago April 3. A complete indoor track and gym meet will be held. In precious years thousands of spectators have attended this annual event. Part of the gate receipts will be turned over to the Labor Sports union, with which the Youth Club is affiliated.

The Labor Sports union, with headquarters at 453 North ave., Chicago, issues a labor sports press service and attempts to build up labor union interest in athletics as an offset to the anti-union athletic work of the big corporations.

ASK HELP FOR BOSTON STRIKE OF CAPMAKERS

Workers Determined to Win; Fifty-third Day

BOSTON, March 25.—Today is the 53rd day of the struggle of the Capmakers of Local 7 of Boston, for better conditions in their trade.

At the usual meeting, J. Miller the chairman of the general strike committee, addressed the strikers calling upon them to keep on with their activity as they had up to the present, to come to the picket lines and the meetings.

That the workers are determined to fight on until the strike is won, can be proved by this conversation overheard by the Daily Worker correspondent. An elderly women who was at the picket lines most of the morning, in the cold, walking up and down the street in the capmaking district, was speaking to one of the men who had caught a bad cold while on the picket line she complained of feeling sick).

She told him that he should go home and that she would go to the picket line instead of him. "After all," she said, "what's a few hours on the picket line?"

This week the strikers have sent out a call for relief. Aid is urgently needed. To win the strike the entire labor movement must help. All the money should be sent to M. C. Rosenthal, 28 Hayward Place, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON CHAIR MAKERS BEGIN ORGANIZATION

Drive for Wage Raise; And No Time Card

(By Worker Correspondent.)

BOSTON, March 25—At a meeting held in Foresters Hall, Gradner, on Sunday, plans for an organizational campaign in the local chair shops were laid before the assembled six hundred workers and were unanimously accepted—not one dissenting vote being cast.

The meeting was called by a local committee of chair-workers in protest against the last wage cut of 20% which the workers were forced to accept on March 7th. This wage cut, applied to workers in the shops and offices, (not excluding foreman and superintendants) was the climax of a long drawn out efficiency scheme which the bosses have been putting over for the past few years.

Murdock Tells History

Wm. Murdoch addressed the meeting and gave an outline of conditions in the trade since 1918. . . . In that year the reed-workers, a highly skilled branch of the industry, managed to win a 55% organizational strength and boosted wages and shortened hours till a nine-hour working day was won. However, fibre took the place of reed in chair manufacture and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners were not able to maintain organizational control due to the fact that they could not adopt themselves to the changing factory conditions—having no provision for shop committees.

Started Turning Screw

The big-scale plant, after the union went out of business, started in to reorganize and standardize production. The main office of their shops is on Washington Street, Boston, and such controls a world wide organization, took hold of the Gardner plant of the company. The Superintendent, Ubbinhart, was fired (some he was, too angry and a new super, whom the workers name "Red Head" was engaged to do the dirty work.

Workers who showed any resistance to the new plans, or who did not come up to the demands of the new college-bred efficiency man, were summarily fired. All the parts were standardized, and the number of chair designs reduced from 2 to 7 so as to simplify the work. By this part of the program was supposed that it would be possible for the less skilled workers to take the place of the regular hands.

Time Card Scheme

A time card system similar to that in vogue in the large machine shops, was introduced. . . . Then when the work could be easily directed, when the bosses felt their power, they introduced the piece-work system.

Even "Red Heath" was cut from sixty dollars to forty dollars a week, and at least one foreman, an old hand who had been promoted from his job as yard manager and given option of work in the cellar at $25 a week or walking the street. . . . Such is the reward of years of the bosses for faithful service. . . .

Against Piece Work

The organizational drive was endorsed by the local, Chairmakers union represented at the meeting, and the following demands were approved:

"Abolition of the time-card and efficiency schemes."

"Abolition of the piece-work system."

"A twenty percent increase in day rates."

"A forty-four hour week."

"Shop control by the Union."

A Little Truth Among Many Lies.

Reports of splits in the Kuomintang Party of China have been frequent of late. Those reports became more insistent as the Nationalist armies advanced northward towards Shanghai. The northern mercenaries were scattered by the revolutionary armies like chaff before a storm. The imperialists must find consolation somewhere so they looked for it in a split in the Kuomintang Party. But tho they sought they did not find much.

It is true that there are differences inside the ranks of the Kuomintang Party. In fact even a graveyard is not entirely free from animation. Grass grows and worms crawl within its gloomy confines.

The Kuomintang Party is a federation composed of merchants, students, peasants and workers. Those elements represent the forces in Chinese national life that support the national liberation movement. But the workers and peasants have more ambitious aims. They want to free themselves from every kind of exploitation. And they have dominated the policies of the Kuomintang Party.

As the party program embodied more and more of the demands of the workers and peasants, the local landowners and militarists came into conflict with the party and were dropped, sometimes kicked out. Those elements that expected to carve careers out of a disunited China, were disappointed. They had to go. The next to feel the boot of the revolutionary workers and peasants in the Kuomintang Party were the big merchants, posing as patriots but in reality the commercial agents of the imperialists.

As the Nationalist armies advanced they took labor organizers along and taught the workers how to form trade unions. The hours of labor began to drop, from 84 hours a week to 70 and sometimes to 54. Wages were boosted as high as 50 and 100 per cent. This news fell on the ears of imperialism with a sound as unpleasant as the stroke of doom.

Land rents were cut 25 per cent and a peasant militia was organized to enforce the decree. This was a violation of the "sacred rights of property." This was not the kind of a war that George Washington waged against the British. It was another kind of revolutionary war. A pox on it! shrieked the imperialists. And there were a few careerists in the Kuomintang Party that still nourished illusions. They hoped China would stop short at the respectable bourgeois republican stage. They would like to see the Communists expelled. They would like to shake the hand of foreign imperialism in return for loans to develop Chinese industry for the benefit of the imperialists. On those elements Chang-Tso-Lin and his allies built their hopes. Those elements supply the juice for the elbow poster of the imperialist scribblers that have been busy clicking out stories of splits to a hungry bourgeois world.

But two and a half million organized industrial workers and peasants under Communist leadership are strong enough to blast this imperialist dream. The splits in the Kuomintang end with the splitters on the outside and shorn of their power.

Where Is the Clayton Act?

Local 30 of the Milk Drivers' and Creamery Workers' Union, Boston, was ordered to pay damages to the tune of $61,971.11 to three milk companies by a Massachusetts court for having carried on agitation against those companies because they refused to recognize the right of their employes to join a union. This is an echo of the Danbury hatter's case in which the union was hit with a $272,000 award in favor of a manufacturer. The A. F. of L. collected money to pay the award.

Then came the Clayton Act. This was one of Sam Gompers' proudest achievements. He purred over it at every A. F. of L. convention and when a progressive rose to question the value of legal tinkering to the working class Sam usually floored the malcontent with a shot of Clayton dung.

There would be no more Danbury awards, now that the Clayton Act was on the statute books. It added to labor's dignity. Did it not definitely declare that labor was not a commodity, Karl Marx to the contrary. It is true that workers continued to offer their labor power for sale, but the A. F. of L. bureaucrats were not to be irritated with such things. The dignity of labor was attested to on a capitalist statute book, even tho the exploiters' heel continued to tickle labor's neck.

A socialist weekly observes that the employers cannot do those things in Great Britain. Sometimes they can and sometimes they cannot. During the general strike the employers got a taste of labor's power and they are now busy forging legal chains for hamper them when the next inevitable struggle breaks. And if British labor confines its defense against those efforts, to the mouthings of the right wing parliamentarians in the house of commons, all the gains that were made by British labor thru years of struggle outside and inside parliament will be wiped away over night. A law favorable to labor will remain on a capitalist statute book only as long as labor is strong enough to keep it there. And not until labor is able and willing to take the capitalist statute books and dump them in a deep gully, and write their own laws under the auspices of a workers' and farmers' government will they have a guarantee that laws are written to help and not to strangle them.

In fighting the British anti-labor laws the British Labor Party played a big part. If the American Federation of Labor bureaucracy was not a tool of big business it would take the lead in organizing a Labor Party in the United States instead of flunkeying to the democrats and republicans and waging war against the radical, progressive elements in the American labor movement.

Imperialism's Blood Bath on Thursday at Nanking Should Arouse All Labor

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THURSDAY, March 24, 1927, should stand big as a date in the annals of history recording the developing relations between the workers of the United States and China.

It was on this day that Wall Street imperialism revealed itself as a blood ally of its British counterpart, the warships of the United States and Great Britain alike visiting death by wholesale upon the Chinese at Nanking, while American and English assassins in uniform co-operated at Shanghai, causing the foreign office at London to announce with delight that:

"Admiral Williams (head of the naval forces of the United States) and the British authorities are working in closest co-operation. The initiative taken by the American forces is characterized as most gratifying."

Workers of this country have been fed full for years of the poisoned propaganda that the United States had only altruistic motives in the Orient. The "open door" was urged as a sure way of making the East "safe for democracy," even before Woodrow Wilson faked and hawked the same phrase to make the American entry into the world war palatable to those workers and farmers who could be blinded by this lying slogan.

It was pointed out that the United States enjoyed no extra-territoriality rights in China, that "dollar diplomacy" sought no concessions, only the "open door" to trade. British imperialism, that spawned the opium war against China, was held to be the real criminal. Liberal professors over the land preach themselves hoarse that what China needs is the American form of democracy that was brought forth upon this continent with the revolutionary war of 1776.

Revolutions, however, are different today than they were 150 years ago. They carry with them the demand for the abolition of profits, the shaking off of the grip of alien imperialism, as well as political independence from the homeland. In fact the three outstanding struggles against imperialism today, in Mexico, Nicaragua and China, are waged not to secure political independence, but against the ravages of the imperialist monster that reconquers no boundary lines laid down by geographers, but, claims the whole world as its domain.

Thus Frederick Moore, the Shanghai correspondent of the New York Times, in his dispatch dated March 23, proudly leads off as follows:

"American marines entered the final line entrenchments early this morning, assuming a position protecting the British left flank at the Markham Road Bridge, overlooking Soochow Creek."

The New York Times itself joyously proclaims in headlines, "Our Marines in Front Line."

In the front line for what? Not to protect American lives! The revolution in China has now been on for 16 years. All those who have no stomach for it, have had ample time to get out. Even the New York Herald-Tribune partially admits this when it says, Friday, March 25th, that:

"Of those (Americans)—for the most part missionaries who have remained at isolated points, it is possible that only a few are in real danger. BUT THESE HAD AMPLE WARNING AND HAVE ACCEPTED THE DANGERS VOLUNTARILY AS A PART OF THEIR MISSION."

The same applies with equal, if not additional force to the agents of big business in China. American workers can have but one set of advice to them all and that is to, "Get out!"

The imperialist government at Washington, however, gives no heed to the demands of labor for "Hands Off China!" to the contrary. "Withdraw the warships from the Yangtze!"

Instead Wall Street's imperialism crawls closer to Britain's. It "backs to the limit" Britain's demand for the punishment of the Nationalist government. It "backs to the limit" Britain's demand for the punishment of the Nationalist government. It "backs to the limit" Britain's demand for the punishment of the Nationalist government

DRAMA

Does New York Want a Proletarian Theatre?

"Reflect American Life With Robust Carelessness, Says John Howard Lawson

John Howard Lawson's "Processional," produced by the Theatre Guild several years ago, is the finest labor play yet written in America. Mr. Lawson is likewise the author of "Roger Bloomer" and Loud Speaker," and is one of the directors of the New Playwrights Theatre. For years, as the leading advocate of the "dynamic" theatre, he has been crying out against stuffy bedroom and library sob-stories and demanding more movement, more life, more play of imagination on the stage. He will speak at the symposium on the new type of drama to be held at the 52nd Street Theatre tomorrow afternoon, with Mauritz Olgin, Joseph Wood Krutch, Helen Westley, Romney Brent, and Eleanor Wylie as speakers. Other articles in this weekly series on the new American drama are being prepared by M. Olgin, Louis Lozowick, V. F. Calverton, and N. Buchwald of the Prolbuh.

Manifestos of intention and the like have no place in the running of a theatre. The whole point of the thing is to put on plays as well as we are able and to be judged by the fruit of our work. To say that the New Playwrights Theatre makes a special appeal to the mass of people who have been alienated by the stuffed shirt atmosphere of the commercial establishments does not mean that we are committed to any ism or to any special type of play. We believe that any art that is living is good art, in whatever form it may be cast. If it lives up to this requirement its social effect can be tremendous, for it can hold a mirror up to the distortions and social problems of our chaotic day. But this does not at all mean that any solemn lesson is embedded in the design of the thing.

One of the main criticisms which I hear concerning my own play, "Loud Speaker," is that it is low-brow and popular in character. This seems to me one of the main values of the play and I am delighted that many critics who came to the first night of this entertainment expecting symbolism and solemnity went away to write horrified notices concerning the simple flippancy of the show. It seems to me about time that the idea of a revolutionary theatre be divorced from the idea of a preachy message. It is the age-old function of the theatre to express feeling and thought in its own terms —to say it with laughs, emotion, the electric spark that welds actors and audience. The only test of a play is the degree to which this audience contact is established.

It is my own feeling that similarly too much has been said about newness and oddity in the theatre. In a sense of course every play must be a new entity, because creative playhouse, if it is to exist at all, must be a place of continually fresh invention. Beyond this reliance on fresh ideas (provided the ideas themselves hold out), there is no essential difference between the Playwrights Theatre and any other organization trying to present plays to a mass audience. We are out to get audience support, because we cannot exist without it. We believe there is a definite value in relying upon invention rather than upon the jaded tricks which make up the bulk of the Broadway output. And we believe that this freshness can appeal to a new sort of crowd—the workers, the people with living contacts and living minds.

Such a theatre cannot be highbrow and it cannot be dull, because solemnity about art is as out of place in American life as a telephone in a medieval monastery. It is my impression that most of the art-stuff in the American theatre is a monastic flowering, a wish-fulfilment on the part of people who would much prefer to go back to the middle ages. But this is the day of the telephone, and we live in a country and in an age which conspicuously takes nothing seriously. whether this curious quality of the American mind is an asset or a horrible liability is a matter rather for prophecy than for dramatic presentation. It is a question to be thrashed out on the lecture platform. But the immediate concern of the theatre is to reflect the life about us with the robust carelessness of the actual scene. I do not mean carelessness in technique, or carelessness in fundamental thinking. But rather I mean the design and meaning in the noisy gaudy life which we see on every hand. There is bitterness in this and harsh laughter, as in the grind of the subway, the endless whirring of stock-tickers, the nervous rhythm of the city.

This is not a matter of a formula or a technical trick. I stated in the first paragraph of this article that the Playwrights, in their experimental work in Fifty-second street, are not committed to any special type of play. As a matter of fact, "Earth," the Negro folk play by Em Jo Basshe, which alternates with "Loud Speaker" in the present repertory, is an absolute contrast to it in technique and feeling. "Earth" is a terrifically stirring picture of the religious feeling of a race. It is rooted in the very depths of the Negro consciousness. But here again, in a manner utterly different from the flippancies of my own play, you have the direct contact across the footlights. The play says exactly what it means to say.

Symbolism has no place in a real theatre. Away with theories! Away with aesthetics and formulas! Laugh with us or at us. Give us feeling, color, movement, above all vitality.

MARCH 26, 1927. ALEX BITTELMAN, Editor

EDITOR'S NOTES

By ALEX BITTELMAN

"SHANGHAI FALLS; U. S. MARINES LAND."

This is a typical headline of the many that appeared in the capitalist press of this country early in the week upon the receipt of the news that the Nationalist revolutionary army was about to take control of Shanghai. Our so-called open door policy in China is working out very nicely . . . for the American imperialists. It is a door made open for further penetration, conquest and exploitation of China by American imperialists instead of by the older exploiters of Britain, France, Japan, etc.

The American government is apparently reluctant to join hands with the discredited government of Great Britain for common military action against the Chinese revolution. But—and this is the important thing to remember—not for a single instance is the American government taking its hands off the Chinese situation. It is continually strengthening its military forces and defiantly demonstrating its power before the Chinese. It is ceaselessly maneuvering for a split in the revolutionary People's Party of China—the Kuomintang—which is leading the war of independence. It, our own imperialist government, is skillfully conspiring against the Chinese revolution with the view of making American capitalists the chief beneficiaries of such action as against the imperialists of Britain, Japan, France, etc.

ACCORDING to "popular" capitalist propaganda in this country, American capitalism is supposed to be less interested in maintaining the rule of foreign imperialism in China than is Great Britain. This is not true, of course. American capitalism, being comparatively a newcomer in the field, is unwilling to accept as final the old arrangements whereby Britain and Japan are enjoying the position of dominancy. American imperialism wants elbow room and more powar for itself, and is preparing to fight for it by sacrificing the lives of thousands of American workers. American diplomacy in China is dedicated to nothing else but this "noble" end.

ALREADY the investments of American capitalists in China are of considerable proportions. In the city of Shanghai American imperialism is interested chiefly in industrial enterprises, such as, tanneries, chemical factories, automobile and tobacco concerns, etc. American capitalists in Shanghai are large employers of native labor and are therefore the main enemies of the awakening of the Chinese workers and of the growth of trade unionism in China. American diplomacy in China is quite consciously devoted towards breaking the influence of the Chinese trade unions and the toiling masses generally upon the Nationalist revolution, the aim being to bring about a central capitalist government in China which would agree to sell the country for joint exploitation by American and Chinese capitalists. It is for this reason that the capitalist press in this country treats us so generously to the so-called Communist "menace" in China.

THE sympathies of the working class thruout the world have become so actively in favor of the Chinese revolution that even the Second International, the sworn flunkey of world capitalism, felt compelled to issue a manifesto calling for the support of the Chinese revolution. The pressure of the masses seems to have become too strong for the champions of so-called class peace and class collaboration.

But in issuing this manifesto the Second International makes sure that it does not fall out of touch with the imperialist policies of its masters. Hence, it already attempts to limit the scope, contents and nature of the Chinese revolution by confining it to the establishment of a "decent" honest-to-goodness bourgeois democratic government in China. Says the manifesto:

> Give your support as much as is possible, to the Nationalist and Democratic liberation movement of the Chinese people which constitutes the basic condition for the liberation of the proletariat.

In other words, according to the decree of the Second International, the Chinese revolution must not go beyond the establishment of a nationalistic democratic bourgeois government. But suppose the exploited masses of China are of a mind and have the power to make a few revolutionary economic and social changes in the life of China? What then? Well, then the Second International will consider it its duty to oppose the toiling masses of China and to support their exploiters, the same as the Second International is doing in the case of the Russian revolution. If the Chinese working class, in alliance with the peasantry, attempt to expand the bounds of the revolution by giving it basic social content the Second International will play the role of reaction and counter-revolution. This is the meaning of the sentence quoted above.

A TELEGRAM from Geneva, Switzerland, the other day reads like this:

> Tension in the Balkans today caused a stir in league of nation circles as the league's preparatory commission assembled to discuss preliminary plans for an international disarmament conference.

This stir, we understand, was caused by Mussolini's protest to the European capitalist governments against alleged warlike preparations of Jugo-Slavia on the Albania border.

The truth of the matter is that by this protest Mussolini is attempting to cover up a nasty little conspiracy of his own against Jugo-Slavia and against the peace of the Balkans generally, in which conspiracy he is being ably assisted by Chamberlain acting for British imperialism. It is quite generally known that Mussolini is preparing to seize control of Albania thus thrusting a knife into the heart of Jugo-Slavia. It is also quite generally understood that the recent action of Mussolini recognizing Bessarabia as part of Roumania constituted a hostile move against Jugo-Slavia as well as against the Soviet Union, all this being a part of the British-Italian imperialist game.

Now, when Jugo-Slavia begins to manifest some uneasiness over these hostile and aggressive moves of Italian imperialism, Mussolini raises the cry of danger coming from Jugo-Slavia. The Italian fascist press professes to feel anxiety over the situation on the Jugo-Slav-Albanian frontier charging the Jugo-Slav government with stirring up revolt in Albania. All of which is a new variety of the old burglar trick raising the cry of "Hold the thief" in order to escape punishment himself.

The "Red" Hater

By ALEX JACKINSON

SINCE the war ended, November the eleventh has been a memorable day for Sam. He made it an irrevocable habit to don his soldier's uniform each year on that date in order to commemorate with a shadow of his former self a lost cause.

Today was that anniversary and he prearranged to sleep somewhat later than usual. Immediately upon arising he made an effort to collect his sleep thoughts; after doing so, he walked to a corner of the room where a battered trunk stood. There was something about it that brought back old memories. He opened the lid, and withdrew from the bottom his uniform which he keeps carefully preserved from year to year. Without further ado he stepped back to his bed and began dressing. It was still dark in his scarcely furnished room and he interrupted his routine by drawing up the shade, allowing a thin streak of light to penetrate. Thoughts flickered through his head; they were brief reminiscences of other days; troublesome thoughts at that, which however, did not disturb his mental balance. A vague semblance of a smile, or it may have been a sneer contorting the corners of his mouth.

A half hour later he finished dressing. He then looked at himself, as best he could without the aid of a mirror. First his eyes glanced at his shoes, then shifted to his body. The look in his eyes betrayed that he was displeased. His uniform, creased from lying untouched did not fit as well as it once did. The jacket hung loosely on his shrunken frame, as though it suddenly grew several sizes too large. And his stained trousers bore evidence of long usage. On his left breast pocket hung two medals, one of which he won for bravery, and the other he picked up in a pawnbroker's for fifty cents. Then exchanging a soiled handkerchief for a clean one he drew down the shade and walked out of the room.

He paused on the steps of his house, before he decided to walk down Houston Street. At the corner he bought a copy of his favorite tabloid and stepped into a coffee pot. He ate a scant breakfast, reading the paper, while his fingers kept dipping a cruller into a cup of coffee. Regaining the street, he buttoned his jacket and shivered. It was a cool autumn day, and he felt chilled without the protection of a topcoat.

Out on the street cries of hallelujah once again welcomed Armistice Day. Laughs and smiles, intermingled with enigmatic howls of delight sounded everywhere. It is on this day that people pin patriotic emblems in their coat lapels, and large and small flags wave silent communications. Also on this day fresh wreaths of flowers are placed on weed covered graves. All these things have a meaning, more than that, a purpose.

There is something about this day which brings to life long-buried corpses that smell of a dead lust. These corpses infuse the air with an artificial spirit of patriotism, which people seem to enjoy inhaling. It intoxicates them like a sweet drug, which feels good before it bites into their system and kills.

Sam turned up Second Avenue. He was thinking, not of the pontilities of life, but of events that made this history. Of wars and of great deeds and his thoughts." Today is his holiday. The only day in the year he does not open his newsstand. To do so would have been tantamount to a gross sacrilege. This day he reserved for a solemn rite. Even as the day he planned to attend the reanian dinner given each year for disabled war veterans.

That was hours later, meantime to while away the time he joined the carnivalic procession on the avenues. He bought a small flag which he stuck into one of his buttonholes. Past gaudily decorated windows behind which lay an assortment of merchandise. And past grinning civilizers, whose faces seemed saturated with tranquility, he walked. Up the avenue, and down, not only on this street but everywhere pedestrians turned out.

There was something of paganism about their motions which Sam disliked. The smiling faces that swarmed about, to him desecrated the solemnity of Armistice Day. This day was too sacred to Sam for mere trivialities. He unwillingly recalled that on a similar date some years ago something within him ceased to exist. It was his manhood. That which he now keeps in constant remembrance. He shrunk way from curious glances, obviously nervous, and ill at ease. His eyes gazed at a flag displayed behind a window pane. The stars and stripes unfolded a half forgotten message which he did not care to read.

It was a different Sam who marched gaily off to war ten years ago. And he was conscious of the change. The right side of his face was frightfully disfigured. He spent a year in the hospital waiting for the skin, grafted in place of the flesh torn off by an exploding shell, to heal. It did, but the scars remained, turning after awhile to a purple hue. When he saw himself in the mirror for the first time he grew violent, and shattered the looking glass with his fist. Since then he had a dread for mirrors, never keeping one in the house.

He left the base hospital emaciated, and broken in health. For a long time he brooded, before becoming reconciled with life, but on a different basis. Sam was no longer the same person. His real self died on the battlefield. What now walked in his stead, was in reality nothing more than a mere mechanism of a man. This person, who doctors predicted would someday become insane, suffered from a mania which let itself loose in a deep rooted hate for "reds," as he termed all the opposers to this system. This hate was the one tie that bound him to life. It became an obsession with him that gnawed steadily at his vitals. He saw in that hate his own disillusion, and the more bitter he felt against society the stronger became his aversion for radicals who Sam felt profaned his heroic sacrifice.

Sam still believed in democracy. That for which he enlisted lived in his thoughts after everything else died. His disfigured face was a constant reminder of what he gave for it. Yet he felt a strange heroism in that. He talked himself into believing that he did something for humanity. It was the mockery with which people spoke of it now that embittered him. That too he blamed on the "reds."

EDITOR'S NOTES.

situation has become extremely difficult, almost critical, as far as the miners are concerned, as a result of Lewis' policy to negotiate district agreements.

The mine workers' union is in danger. The situation has been made incomparably more dangerous by the policy of district negotiations and by the obstinate refusal of the Lewis machine to mobilize the miners, organized and unorganized, for a strike to enforce the demands of the workers upon the mine owners. What is going to become of the miners and their union? The call of "Save the Miners' Union" issued by the progressives and left wingers in the United Mine Workers' of America is rallying the rank and file of the organization around a program of action which represents the only solution to the present crisis in which the union finds itself. But the policies of the Lewis machine are of such a menacing nature that immediate organized action by the progressives and left wing in the union becomes imperative.

WHAT are the American trade unions doing to help the miners to save their union? This question, too, must be raised in every labor union in the country. It still necessary to prove that the fate of the American trade union movement is inseparably bound up with the fate of the miners' union? Is it really still necessary to argue the point that the miners' union constitutes the most important, basic and vital link in the chain of organizations that make up the American trade union movement? The fact is obvious that a further weakening of the miners' union which is today in a critical situation due mainly to the policies of the Lewis machine, would do terrific damage to the working class of this country as a whole and would seriously weaken the entire labor movement. The program advocated and fought far by the progressives and left wing in the United Mine Workers of America is supported by a majority in the union. While Lewis was arranging and stealing the elections from the progressive left wing block and in railroading his reactionary policies through the packed convention which he dominated, he cannot obliterate the fact that the majority of the rank and file of the union are with the progressives and left wing. It is the program of this bloc, which if put into effect will save the union. Hence, it is the duty of every honest trade unionist and every progressive trade union organization to assist the miners by all means possible in their present struggles.

SPARTACUS

By LEON ZINC

It does not matter much
That Spartacus is slain.
For Spartacus is such
That he must rise again.

With the passing years he grew lonelier and suffered more from melancholia. He would often walk to an abyss of despair from where he saw no escape but suicide. To ward off depressive attacks he built a world of fantasy in which he secluded himself more and more. It was only in his dream world that he was free from torment and weakness. There he let his imagination play tag with reality.

One by one His friends terminated their relations with him. Somehow he was glad when they stopped calling. He was tired of their condolences. Sam was even glad when his wife left him. He had one refuge where he was welcome; Katie's, an Allen Street brothel. There he went often in search of something tangible, but embraced only substitutes of companionship which neither pleased nor alleviated his unrest.

Sam continued to make his way uptown. Through many strange streets he walked. And bodies of men and women continued to press about him. He grew bewildered and self-conscious. There were too many people looking at him. He returned their stares but more often lowered his eyelids and sauntered inwardly. Fleeting ideas pressed against his head. Faces and buttocks came suddenly together and circled his thoughts in a delirious rhythm. Sidewalks became like raging seas that rocked people about. His head swirled, his delusions were interrupted by incoherent soliloquies. He collided with someone. "Beg pardon," he whispered faintly, and stepped aside. There was no escape. He sank into thought as he zigzagged through the shuffling columns of people. He muttered profanities, sometimes to himself and at other times amongst them if some passerby who attracted his attention. He felt lost and angry. Laughter continued to sound in his ears. His face turned crimson, and the color that was scarred a dark purple. People looked at him, at his bewildered expression, at his shabby dress, and smiled. He was an apparition, reminding them of an unsightly that once lived.

He turned down a side street, only to feel there a repetition of what he wanted to get away from elsewhere. His fingers slipped to his hip pocket, there he felt a heavy weight press down. It was his service revolver. A vital part of his equipment. The touch of it reassured him. He wanted to take it out and spray bullets into the laughing crowds. That would have pleased him. He smiled, for it was merely the unwinding of his distorted brain. He stepped into a cigar store, emerging several minutes later with a cigarette between his lips.

Near one of the city squares, reserved for such occasions, a huge open air meeting was being held. Here a large crowd of workers gathered to protest against American imperialism. A solid mass of bodies circled steadily about in a continuous chain. Above the heads projected white banners inscribed in red ink, "Hands Off China," and similar inscriptions.

Into this gathering came Sam, attracted by the huge crowd. He knew it was a protest meeting of some kind. What it was he did not know until he drew closer. He read whatever placards were within his range. A woman handed him a leaflet. He saw the headline, "Fight against Wall Street Rule." Sam did not read the contents. His glance lingered on the bottom which bore the signature of the Communist Party. He let the leaflet slip from his fingers. "Reds" he whispered to himself. That was sufficient to bring back chaotic ring to nerves of a deep rooted hate.

The contact with people had a strange effect upon him. His attention was still riveted upon the speaker who several times pronounced the word not be sacrificed again." These words beat steady tatoos in Sam's head. He felt himself being pressed together by other bodies. The contact crowded old hates into new desires. Symbolic fancies unfolded in his head. He bit his lower lip and elbowed his way to a less crowded spot. Here he paused. He again heard a loud outburst of applause. The continuous clapping and encouragement of the existing order began to irritate and in turn get on his nerves. He was in complete confusion. A cold chill slowly enveloped him. His thoughts assumed grotesque shapes. These mental pictures alternated with reconstructed war scenes. He once more pictured himself face to face with the enemy. A new enemy this time. A deadlier one than he faced years ago. Forms of dead soldiers presented themselves with vivid likeness. Muffled sounds of exploding shells echoed in his ears.

Something in his head snapped. He no longer had control of his faculties. Out of his wild dream formed curious pictures, one image followed another in a conglomeration of ideas. A cold smile settled across his face. He saw himself waving his revolver in the air. And the crowds dessimated into swarms in little groups, running before his bullets. Pent up emotions kept running in all directions. He saw women crowding, pushing each other and falling dead in the streets. His face was wet with perspiration. The gutters became a pool of blood. Sam laughed out loud. It was a wild inharmonious laugh. The cigarette fell from his lips. "Bastard," escaped his mumbling lips. These neuters to him gave him a curious look and redirected their attention to the speaker.

Dolores Del Rio, the young Mexican actress who is playing Charmaine in the screen version of "What Price Glory?" at the Sam H. Harris Theatre, has been assigned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to the leading part in "The Trail of '98," by Robert W. Service, which is being screened by Clarence Brown in Colorado.

Herbert Brenon's latest picture "The Telephone Girl," will be shown at the Paramount Theatre next week. Madge Bellamy, May Allison, Holbrook Blinn and Lawrence Gray, play the leading roles.

The Duncan sisters have begun work on "Topsy and Eva," their first motion picture, in California.

Universal has booked "Potemkin" the Russian revolutionary film, recently shown on Broadway, for its theatres in San Francisco, Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburg. The Little Theatre, an art cinema house in Washington, will open with this Amkino production on April 6. "Potemkin" will get a second showing in New York City when it is shown at the M. & S. Commodore on Second Avenue, April 3.

To obtain the panoramic effect of the spectacular sea scenes in the production of "Old Ironsides" at the Rivoli Theatre, the screen is automatically magnified three times its normal size, through the use, for the first time of Magnascope, an invention of Lorenzo del Riccio, of Amsterdam, N. Y., who spent seven years in perfecting this innovation.

Artistic films seem to be taboo in the hinterland, judging by a report from Albany, where a manager was compelled to withdraw "Faust," because his patrons complained it was too "high-brow." He replaced the picture with another, called "Ashes Preferred." "Faust" which was shown here at the Capitol Theatre was considered one of the finest films sent us from Germany.

The Young COMRADE SECTION

Edited by the Young — Pioneers of America

A Page for Workers' — and Farmers' Children

RUTHENBERG YOUNG COMRADE DRIVE

Comrades, we have pointed out to you last week that the best way in which we could honor Comrade Ruthenberg and carry out his slogan "Let's Fight On!" was by joining the Young Pioneers and by subscribing to The Young Comrade. This week we are going to tell you about the big special Ruthenberg Young Comrade Drive that has been started by the Young Pioneers of America. In this drive the readers of the Children's Pages must take an active part. The Young Pioneers are going to offer many prizes to those who get the most subscriptions. A very pretty picture button will be given to each child who gets at least one sub. Anyone can do that. Any child who gets 10 subs or more will be given a week's stay at the nearest Pioneer Camp free of charge. That sure is some prize. The third prize will be a surprise prize. We won't tell you what it is. The one who gets the most subs will get that and he won't be sorry.

Now, the question is how are we to get subs? We will tell you a few ways.

1—You must become a subscriber yourself.

2—Talk to your schoolmates and friends about the Young Comrade. Show it to them and get them to subscribe.

3—If you belong to a club, dramatic, sport, social or any other club, explain to the other members what the Young Comrade stands for, speak to each member personally and get every one to subscribe.

4—Visit the houses of your neighbors, relatives, friends, and speak both to the parents and to the children about the Young Comrade.

5—Get your parents to help you. Make them talk you to union meetings, affairs and clubs. Try to get these organizations as a whole to contribute, and get each one present to contribute. Get your friends to help you.

These are only a few suggestions, but they will surely give you an idea of how to do this work. So, Comrade Children's Page Readers, get on the job, fill out the Ruthenberg Subscription Blank, and FIGHT ON by getting Young Comrade subs.

OUR LETTER BOX

DESCRIBING A SCAB.

Dear Comrades: I am a girl of 13 and in the eighth grade. We live near a mine which is working since 1917, a scab mine as I call it. The children of the scab workers go to our school. We always tease them and call them scabs and fight all the time. We tell them we fight for our freedom, for our fathers to go to work in the mine as union men and not like your fathers working and taking our fathers' jobs away and our mothers' and children's bread away. They keep quiet then. On account of us fighting with these scabs a deputy was coming to guard these children. As soon as the school board or politicians heard about it they had a case, saying that the deputy must not come near the school. He must take care of Pittsburgh Coal Co. ground not the public road. But before that a little boy was coming home from school for his lunch as the deputy was guarding those scabs. He looked through the little boy's pockets and scared him almost to death. One of these deputies is a Lithuanian. I wish I could get to speak to him. I would tell him something. He is from Scranton, I will continue the other part next week.—HELEN BALSES.

ALL CHILDREN WELCOME.

Dear Comrades: I just wish to inform you that we just organized the branch of the Young Pioneers at the Hungarian Workers' Home, 8400 West Jefferson Avenue, Detroit, Mich. Our next meeting will be held next Sunday. All children are welcome.—ANNA HECK.

POEM

By WM. MURPHY.

Pioneer, Pioneers, you know very well
And Pioneers can tell
That if you want to put a rope around their neck
You'll have to work hard by heck.

IN THE PIONEERS

ESTHER WIDEVICH and BELLA MILLER

When we have our meetings here,
They are cheerful full of cheer
In the Pioneers.
How we talk about the news
And then we all give our dues
In the Pioneers.
Then we have the roll call
And we answer "Always ready."
We end the meeting full of song
And games too all along
In the Pioneers.

A Letter From a Teacher.

By M. R.

I am a school teacher. Children are put under my care. Who are these children? Ninety-five per cent of them belong to workers, good, hard factory workers, who send their children to school hoping that they will not have to slave in the future. What happens. These children of the workers are taught certain subjects—reading, writing and arithmetic. Is that all? Of course not. Their most important subject is Americanism. What is Americanism and why is it given first inportance in the public schools? Why are children daily taught the pledge of allegiance to the flag? To continue the present system under which we are living—to poison the child's mind while they are young, so that they will not want any other reform. In other words to make him think as the bosses think. What happens to teachers who refuse to do as they are told? What happens to any teacher who criticizes the present form of government? They are thrown out of the schools.

The public schools have become the tool of the capitalist class, and they use the schools to kill any real thinking thru the children may have. The teacher thus becomes the tool of the capitalists. To fight this the children of the working class must join the Young Pioneers where they will learn to think.

YOUNG REBELS

Y is for youth who leaders shall be
O is for all which capitalists scorn
U is for union with which we agree
N is for nonsence, which into our minds is thrown.
G is for groups which we organize,
R is for Russia that country of ours.
E is for end which with capitalism will be
B is for bank which teachers tell for hours.
E is for endeavor a workers' world to create
L is for Lenin whose ideas we follow.
S is for bosses' stuff which we will not swallow.

MY TEACHER.

This is the first time I am writing to you. I am nine years of age and in the fourth grade. My teacher is the same like all teachers are. She teaches us pretty well to salute the flag and many other foolishness, but she never says a word about the working class. She does not like a workers' organization.—HELEN CARLIAS.

THE SCAB

ANNA BLASKOW.

A scab! A scab!
He's on the bosses' side
If he don't shut his gob
He'll get it in the eye.

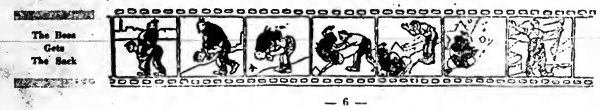
HEALTHY SLAVES

Dear Comrades: I thought it might interest you or the Young Comrades who read the children's page, how we are taught to become worthwhile American citizens in school. They say that we must have health. But to be healthy we must live in a house with nice and clean surroundings, we must have good warm clothes and eat wholesome food.



They tell us that we should learn to save while young. But they don't tell us where to get the money to save. For a man who has a big family to support, will be glad to live anywhere as long as he lives under something. Not because he likes to live there, but he can't earn enough to even LIVE. Anyhow they just want us to be strong and healthy, so when we are ready to work, the capitalists will be able to get more out of us.—JOLAN MARSE.

CLASS STRUGGLE IN WEST VA.

By MARGARET JANCSAR.

I used to live at Cliftonville, West Va. One summer day, July 17, 1922, Monday morning. (I remember it as if it was today. I'll never forget it in all my life.) I awoke and heard a bullet whistle thru the house. I went out to see what it was and I saw some soldiers, so I told my mother there is a world war. My mother told me not to be afraid of the soldiers. She told me to go to the store and buy a loaf of bread. As I was going between the hills, two soldiers came running towards me pointing their guns at me. I was scared. But they saw I was a girl so they said that I can go and I went and bought the bread. As I was coming back from the store, I saw a man running from a hill. He ran so fast that he fell down and the soldiers caught him and beat him until the blood came from his body. When they were tired they took him to jail. You see! What the soldiers do to workers when they go on strike. Boys, don't join the army.

FROM SLAVERY TO FREEDOM

TEN YEARS AGO

(Proclamations of the Bolsheviki During the Last Days of Czarist Rule)

"Down with the War! Up with the Civil War!" Verbatim text of a printed proclamation distributed in Siberia at the beginning of February, 1917.

Comrades!

THE most infamous of all wars known to history has, for the last two and a half years, been devastating a large part of the earth. This war is destroying the most valuable inheritance of mankind; it is threatening to bury under its ruins everything of which Europe boasted at the beginning of the twentieth century.

Why are those people suddenly beginning to speak of peace, who had dreamed of trampling the whole of Europe under the iron heel of their armies? Germany and her allies are not speaking of peace because a conscience has awakened in the mind of the German Ministers, not even because their forces are exhausted.

No!

Nothing has changed in the mind of the Ministers who have condemned the flower of their nation to death only that they may conquer new territory, only that they may take in new profits for the capitalists of their country.

Not a love of peace and not weakness have forced the governments of Germany and Austro-Hungary to make offers of peace. It is the threat of revolution, which is growing beyond their control, that has decided them to take this step.

Our comrades, the proletariat of Germany and Austro-Hungary, have long ago taken up the fight against the devastations of war. They were the first to inscribe on their banner the slogan dear to us: "Down with the war!"

For two years they have fought bravely and tenaciously under this banner. The German government has thrown them into prisons and has fired on the crowds in the street. The blood shed for the cause of freedom, for the cause of mankind, will not be absorbed in vain, not without fertilizing the barren soil, as is the blood of those who die on the battle-field. In Germany, the army of the proletariat, which has risen to fight for the restoration of peace, is growing from day to day, despite all violence.

The voice demanding that the war be stopped, is heard more and more distinctly, sounds more and more threatening. The waves of the people's wrath are dashing, with greater and greater violence against the walls of the palaces. This angry sea is causing thrones to totter.

The governments of the countries fighting against us are beginning to speak of peace. It is not difficult to see on what they are reckoning. They are making proposals of peace to their opponents. If their enemies reject the peace negotiations, they will say to their nations: "We have done everything in our power to put an end to the shedding of blood. You see for yourselves that the possibility of putting an end to the war is out of our hands. We are being attacked, we must defend ourselves."

The success of this manoeuvre would be a deathblow to the movement of the German workers against the war. The flames of war are flaring up with fresh vigor. New streams of blood, new piles of corpses, more victims called to the colors! How will it all end? When will this madness cease?

The whole manoeuvre of the German government is based on the presumption that the German proletariat is alone in its struggle for peace. The German government has staked everything on the hope that the workers of Russia, England and France will not support the workers of Germany in their demand: "Down with the war!"

It is the popular movement alone which has compelled the governments of the countries fighting against us to make offers of peace. Only the people can compel the governments of Russia, England and France to accept these offers of peace. Will the call of our brothers, the German workers, find an echo among the Russian workers? Will the Russian workers support them in their great and difficult struggle for peace?

The moment has come when the fate of Europe is to be decided. The question is to be decided as to whether the offer of peace made by the governments of the countries which are fighting against us, is to be a step towards peace or towards a further intensification of the fury of war. This question is on the point of being decided, and no one can keep aloof from this decision in whose breast a heart still beats, whose brain has not ceased to form clear thoughts, whose conscience is not dead.

Comrades! Which of you has not in his mind, cursed this present, futile, inhuman war? Any cry emitted between four walls is useless, when what is needed is action.

Every day of the war costs 25,000 human lives. Every hour the war continues demands the lives of thousands of human beings and destroys the happiness of thousands of families. Every hour by which we hasten an armistice, will save hundreds of comrades and brothers from perishing.

It is a crime to keep silent at such a time. He who holds his tongue today, shares the responsibility for the continuation of the war . . . What are we to do? What must we get accomplished?

We will tear the mask from the faces of the hypocrites who speak of peace whilst at the same time they feed the flames of the world war.

What we desire is that the solution of the question of peace or war be taken out of the hands of the secret cabinets of diplomacy, where all questions are solved by intrigue, corruption and treachery, and entrusted to the peoples.

Peace negotiations must be commenced at once.

All proposals made by the governments of the countries fighting against us must be made public and discussed by the whole nation.

When the proposals of both parties have been made known, we and our comrades in Germany and Austro-Hungary will be faced by the same tasks.

We shall resist the lust for conquest of our ruling classes. Our comrades on the other side of the front will continue their courageous fight against the plans of conquest of the capitalists of their countries.

Together we shall fight for peace on the basis of the recognition of the rights of the peoples. We cannot, however, entrust the peace negotiations either to our government or to our National Duma.

We declare that the voice of Russia, is not the voice of the people. In the hour when the fate of the people is being decided, it must not be left to a handful of sycophant courtiers of Nicholas II and Grigori Rasputin.

In no case can the Duma, which was elected by the landed proprietors on the basis of the law of June 3rd, speak in the name of the people when that hour comes; the Duma which consented to the condemnation of the labor deputies and which drove from its meetings the deputies of the social-democratic fraction, the only fraction whose hands are not stained with the blood of those murdered in the war, the only fraction in which the people has faith.

The government and the National Duma are equally responsible for the present war. The government and the Duma have led the country to the edge of an abyss, and the people cannot entrust its fate to them. The decision as to the question, war or peace, must be placed in the hands of the people itself. Forces will arise from the midst of the people, which will heal the wounds it has suffered through the war. Once more our cry echoes throughout the country demanding a constituent assembly.

Our country is at the parting of the ways. The whole of Europe is at the parting of the ways.

Only the united forces of the proletariat of all countries can quench the fire of the world war.

Our comrades in Germany have raised the banner of the fight against war. Across the trenches they are reaching out their hands to us; they are prepared to cast away their blood-stained weapons.

It is now our turn. What shall we say? What answer shall we give to their appeal?

We greet them heartily! We will say to them: "Your banner is our banner, your cry is our cry." Down with the war!

Peace negotiations must be started at once.

All civil liberties for the free discussion of the terms of peace by the people must be established without delay.

A Constituent Assembly elected on the basis of general, equal and secret franchise should be summoned at once to conduct the peace negotiations, to conclude peace and to regulate the life of the country.

These are our demands. In the struggle to have these demands fulfilled, the proletariat of Germany, Austro-Hungary, England and France are our allies. Let our old cry: Proletarians of all countries, unite! echo throughout the whole world which is looking to the working class to save it and to set it free!

Down with the war for the subjugation of other nations!

Hurrah for civil war and the liberation of the whole of mankind!

Down with arbitrary rule! Long live the Constituent Assembly!

Down with all the enemies of freedom!

Long live the Russian Social Democratic Labor Party!

A Newly Discovered Lenin Manuscript

By W. ILJIN

Preface to Bukharin's Brochure: "World Economics and Imperialism."

Note of the Lenin Institute:

Comrade Bukharin writes in his preface to the brochure: "World Economics and Imperialism" (at the end of 1915):

"About two years ago, the manuscript (of the brochure) was sent to Russia from abroad and, after having first of all fallen into the clutches of the military censorship, it found its way by mistake to another publisher.

"After the February and March revolution (1917) it turned up. In the July days it was to have been printed, but the police spies and Junkers, who destroyed our Party printing works, took my manuscript also into their care. Some time later I succeeded in recovering the manuscript, though in a crumpled and mutilated condition, but with the loss of the comprehensive and, extremely valuable preface of Comrade Lenin, to whom I here express my deep-felt thanks."

Lenin, who apparently attached much importance to his preface to the above-mentioned brochure which was written in December, 1915, had made a manuscript copy for himself, which was preserved among his papers and is published herewith for the first time by the Institute.

The whole written manuscript consists of six pages in a small handwriting. On the fourth page of the manuscript are calculations in figures, written in pencil, apparently the number of letters in the manuscript.

At the head of the manuscript are pencil-notes by Lenin: "Kautsky" and "NB." Lenin Institute.

The significance and relevance of the theme to which N. I. Bukharin's article is devoted, needs no special elucidation. The question of imperialism is not only one of the most essential, but we might say the most essential questions in that field of national economy which concerns itself with the changes in the forms of capitalism in recent times. Anyone who is interested in national economy or in any other field of modern social life, must absolutely become acquainted with the facts which have been so richly compiled by the author on the basis of the newest material. It goes without saying that it is impossible to speak of a concrete historical estimation of the present war, unless this estimation is based on a complete understanding of the nature of imperialism both from the economic and from the political point of view. From no other standpoint can an understanding of the economic and diplomatic relations of the last decade be acquired—if this understanding is wanting, it is impossible to form a right judgment as to the war. In this question, Marxism expresses with particular clearness the demands of modern science as such, and if, by a concrete historical judgment of the war, be understood the selection of individual, insignificant facts from diplomatic "documents," political events of the day, etc., facts which suit or are pleasant to the ruling classes of a country, Marxism has nothing but a smile for the "scientific" significance of such machinations. Thus for instance, G. Plechanov had to say good-bye to Marxism, in order to replace the investigation of the fundamental qualities and tendencies of imperialism as a system of the economic relations of the most recent, most highly developed, ripe and over-ripe capitalism by extracting a few trifles such as are pleasing to Purishkevitch and Miljukov. In doing so, the scientific conception of imperialism is brought down to the level of a term of invective against the immediate competitors, rivals and opponents of the above mentioned imperialists, although both of them stand on the same class plane as their rivals and opponents. In our day of forgotten words, lost principles, uprooted views of life, resolutions and sacred promises thrust on one side, this is not to be wondered at.

The scientific significance of N. I. Bukharin's work is especially that it investigates the most important facts of world economics, which are related to imperialism as a whole, as a definite stage of development of capitalism at its zenith. There was a time when capitalism was comparatively "peaceful," when it had finally defeated feudalism in the advanced states of Europe and could develop comparatively in a most calm and peaceful way, could "peacefully" expand over immense less territories, over countries which had not yet been finally drawn into the capitalist whirl-pool. Even in those times, in the period which embraces the years from 1871 to 1914, conditions were created by "peaceful" capitalism which, both in a military and in a general class sense, were infinitely remote from real "peace." For nine-tenths of the population of the advanced countries, for hundreds of millions of people in the colonies and backward countries, this was not a time of "peace," but a time of oppression, of distress and of terror—perhaps all the more frightful because it seemed to be a "terror without end." This time is passed beyond recall; its place has been taken by a time of sudden, eruptive, catastrophic development, full of conflict, in which what is typical for the masses is no longer "terror without e[nd]" or "terrible end."

It is particularly significant that this change has been brought about by nothing else than the immediate development, expansion, continuance, of the deepest tendencies of capitalism and of the production of goods altogether. The growth of exchange, the development of large industry, these are the fundamental tendencies which we can observe in the course of centuries, without any exception throughout the world. At a definite stage of the development of exchange, at a definite stage of the development of large industry, that is at the stage which was reached at about the threshold of the 20th century, exchange created such an internationalization of economic relations, such an internationalization of capital, large industry grew so strong that monopoly began to take the place of free competition. No longer are those concerns typical which "freely" compete with one another within the country and within the scope of relations with other countries; the modern type is that of monopolist associations of industrialists—trusts. Today, the typical "former" of the world is financial capital, which is particularly movable and elastic, which is strongly interwoven both within the country and internationally, is extremely impersonal, detached from direct production, which can be particularly easily concentrated and is already so well concentrated that the history of the world is literally in the hands of a few hundreds of milliardaires and millionaires.

Speaking theoretically, in the abstract, we may come to the conclusion, to which Kautsky (who, although in a somewhat different way has also abandoned Marxism) came, i.e., that the day will soon come when the magnates of capital will combine in a trust on universal lines, when the competition and the struggle of the elements of financial capital which were separated according to states, will be replaced by financial capital organized internationally. This conclusion is however as abstract, simple and wrong as the similar conclusion drawn by our "Struvists" and "economists" of the nineties of last century who drew either apologetic conclusions (bowing to capitalism, being reconciled with it, singing its praise, instead of opposing it) or apolitical conclusions (the rejection of politics or negation of their significance, the probability of general political upheavals, etc., a mistake of the specialized "economists") or even professed their faith in the general strike (the "general strike" as the apotheosis of the general strike movement, carried through consistently even so far as to forget or ignore other forms of the movement, i.e., a clean "leap" from capitalism to its defeat by the weapon of the strike alone). conclusions drawn from the progress of capitalism, from its inevitability, from its final victory in Russia. There are signs that even today the indisputable fact of the progressive character of capitalism as compared with the semi-petty bourgeois "paradise" of free competition, the fact of the inevitability of imperialism and of its final victory over "peaceful" capitalism in the advanced countries of the world, may also lead to similar monstrous and manifold political and apolitical mistakes and aberrations.

In Kautsky's case especially, his open breach with Marxism has not taken the form of a negation or disregard for politics, of "skipping" the political conflicts, concussions and transformations which are particularly numerous and manifold in the time of imperialism, has not taken the form of an apology for imperialism but has expressed itself in dreams of a "peaceful" capitalism. "Peaceful" capitalism has been replaced by a capitalism which is not peaceful, which is bellicose, which advances by leaps and bounds;—Kautsky must admit this, as he has already admitted it in a special article published in 1909*) in which, for the last time, he drew definite conclusions as a Marxist. Since however, it is not possible to dream simply, openly and without disguise, of imperialism being converted into "peaceful" capitalism, would it not perhaps be possible to clothe these dreams, which are essentially petty-bourgeois, in the form of innocent meditations on a

This Is "Moving Time" For Imperialism.

Representatives of colonial peoples "congratulate" Briand and Chamberlain on receiving Nobel peace prize.

"peaceful" "ultra-imperialism"? If we give the name of ultra-imperialism to the international coalition of national-imperialisms (or, more correctly, of imperialism divided according to states) which "might" save the petty bourgeois from the conflicts which are particularly unpleasant and exciting to him and which disturb his peace, such as war and political upheavals—could we not avoid the epoch of imperialism, which has already set in, which is already with us, which is unstable and full of conflicts, by innocent dreams of an "ultra-imperialism" which is comparatively peaceful, comparatively free from catastrophes and conflicts? Would it not in the same way be possible to avoid the "urgent" tasks which have been set and are being set by the imperialist epoch, by deluding ourselves with the idea that this epoch may possibly not last long and that it is conceivable that it may be followed by a comparatively "peaceful," "ultra-imperialist" era, which demands no "rigorous" action? Kautsky actually says: "Anyhow, a new phase of capitalism of this kind (ultra-imperialist) is thinkable. We lack sufficient preliminary evidence to decide whether it can be realized." ("Neue Zeit" * *).

There is not the least trace of Marxism in this endeavor to avoid the imperialist era on which we have entered and to lose ourselves in dreams of an unknown something, perhaps of an "ultra-imperialism" which may be realized. In this construction, Marxism is recognized only for that new "phase of capitalism," with regard to which its inventor himself could not guarantee that its realization was possible. In the phase of development, which has already set in, in which we are living today, a petty bourgeois and thoroughly reactionary endeavor to smoothe out contradictions, is being dished up instead of Marxism. Kautsky gave his promise to be a Marxist in the future full of catastrophes and conflicts, which he could not fail to foresee and the coming of which he admitted unreservedly when, in 1909, he wrote about the future. Today, when it cannot be denied that this time has come, Kautsky again merely gives his promise to be a Marxist in the future, in an ultra-imperialist era which will perhaps never be realized. Briefly, he makes many promises to be a Marxist, but at some other time, not today, not under present circumstances, not in the present epoch! Marxism on credit, Marxism as a promise, Marxism—tomorrow, but today a petty bourgeois, opportunist theory—and not theory alone—of smoothing down contradictions. This is a kind of "export internationalism," which is so widespread "nowadays" which the enthusiastic—and how enthusiastic—internationalists and Marxists sympathize with any expression of internationalism—in the camp of their opponents, wherever you like as long as it is not in their own house, not amongst their own allies; they sympathize with democracy . . . as long as it remains nothing but a promise of the "Allies"; they sympathize with the "self-determination of the peoples". . . with the exception of that which depends on the nation to which the sympathizers in question belong. . . In brief, one of the thousand and one species of hypocrisy.

Can anyone dispute that after imperialism a new capitalist phase of development can be "imagined" in the abstract? No, we can at least imagine such a phase in the abstract. In practice however it means becoming an opportunist who shuts his eyes to the urgent tasks of the present in order to indulge in vague dreams about "less urgent" tasks in the future. In theory this means that they do not rely on the development as it actally exists, but detach themselves from it for the sake of these dreams. There can be no doubt that development is tending towards the formation of an all-embracing world trust which will include all undertakings and all states without exception. This development, however, is proceeding at such a rate, in such circumstances, with such contradictions, conflicts and upheavals—not only economic but also of political national etc.—that, even before we arrive at an "ultra-imperialist" world alliance of national financial capital, imperialism will inevitably collapse and capitalism will turn into its opposite.

Prison Poems

By H. LEIVICK.

(Translated from the Yiddish by O. B. Magil.)

Note.—H. Leivick, one of the foremost living Yiddish poets and dramatists, was active in the pre-war revolutionary movement in Russia and spent several years in Czarist dungeons. The present poems, which are from a volume published in 1919, recount some of the terrible experiences of those early days.

Leivick is also the author of "The Golem," produced by the Moscow Habima players, of "Rags," which is part of the repertoire of the Yiddish Art Theatre, and of "Shop," now running at the Irving Place Theatre. He is a regular contributor to the "Freiheit" and "The Hammer," the Yiddish Communist monthly.—A. B. M.

I

The windows are barred.
And frozen the walls;
Feebly the light
Of the doorlamp falls.

Under a cover
Of gray I lie;
A point on the wall
Has fastened my eye.

I am far from myself,
Forget all I know;
Who knows? Perhaps I
Was freed long ago.

And maybe I died,
And dutifully
The doorlamp was lit
In my memory.

II

Dry are the tears
And laughter is bleak;
The good and the bad
Are equally weak.

Our bodies are beaten
With iron bands,
And he who is fearful
Licks the guard's hands.

We all are shadows
In the house of dead pains.
Does the silence scare you?
Then rattle your chains!

III

Our hole is small,
But we all must sleep in some wise—
One puts his feet
Upon his neighbor's eyes.

And one leans his head
On the shackles of a brother;
Our hole is small—
So we all embrace each other.

IV

Somebody tells me: Be still,
Silent your tread and your touch.
And if you get tired of silence,
Cry, but don't cry too much.

Don't think you know why you weep,
You weep for no reason at all;
And all that you need to laugh
Is to look at the spots on the wall.

Measure the length of your cell,
Count the boards of the floor;
Don't lie around there kissing
The dirt beneath the door.

Stand up against the wall
And watch those that go past;

THE "BENDS": Divers and "sand hogs"—men who work at considerable depths under great pressure, are subject to a peculiar disease known as "caisson disease." The workers usually refer to it as "the bends" for the simple reason that it bends a man up or "ties him into knots." It is terrifically painful and usually results in partial or complete paralysis and deformities and often, death. The cause of the disease seems to be that under great pressure the blood dissolves a considerable quantity of air. If the pressure is now gradually released, the air is slowly given up by the blood and carried out of the system. But if the pressure is released suddenly, air is given up suddenly, in the form of bubbles, which remain in the blood stream.

For this reason, great care must be taken on entering or coming out of the pressure. The workers are usually kept in an airtight chamber for about twenty minutes while the pressure is being gradually increased, or on quitting work, while the pressure is being gradually reduced to normal. It has recently been discovered that if the nitrogen, which forms 80 per cent of the volume of air, be replaced by another gas—helium, in other words if the decompression chamber is filled with an "artificial air" made up of 20 per cent oxygen and 80 per cent helium, the pressure can be released many times as rapidly without causing bubbles in the blood and consequent injury. It remains to be seen whether the sand-hog or the boss is going to get the benefit of the extra time saved by helium decompression.

SNAKE-BITE SERUM: Snake poison seems to be similar in some respects to the poisons (or toxins) produced in the body by certain diseases. In the case of diphtheria, typhoid, etc., it was discovered many years ago how to produce an anti-toxin, i. e., a substance that will counter-act the toxin and cure the patient. A small quantity of the toxin or of the bacteria that produce it is injected into the body of a horse; the horse's body reacts by producing the antitoxin which distributes itself through the blood. A small portion of this blood containing the anti-toxin or "serum" is now withdrawn and injected into the human patient.

There is nothing new in all this. But in Brazil, where the snakes feel that the country belongs to them, scientists have been experimenting for years on snake poisons and have found that serums against snake poisoning can be prepared in the same way as serums against diphtheria, etc. All that you have to do is catch the snake and make it squeeze out some poison. Although this sounds about as practicable as putting salt on a bird's tail, the fact is that it can be done, and a contrivance involving a forked stick, a noose, and various other little things is described for catching the snake. Once caught, the snake is grasped close behind the head (so that it can't turn and bite, the poison glands are pressed, and a few drops of poison drip out through the fangs. The Bronx Zoo recently arranged to have on hand a considerable quantity of snake-bite serum.

"SOLIDARITY"

By LEON ZINC

A wave is such that needs another wave
To make a dash against a stubborn foe
It takes an oceanful of waves to shock
A shore, to overrun a cave.
A single wave is tragic to behold.
It rolls with daring splendor on to death.
It flings a life away for one soul breath
Of struggle wild and beautifully bold.

You're not the first in the cell,
Be sure you won't be the last.

V

I steal from my cell to you for a day.
For one single day.
Should somebody ask: "Who's in your house?"
"One passing this way."

Shut all the windows, hang them with black
For mourning and crying,
Should somebody ask: "Who's in your house?"
"One who is dying."

Dumb will I sit, only gazing and kissing
Your dress with bowed head.
Should somebody knock—cover me quickly,
Say: "He is dead."

A Herald-Tribune, London dispatch tells us that labor received a severe setback in the Leith, Scotland, election when the liberals won a long-awaited victory, defeating the Labor Party candidate and the conservative. As a matter of fact the Labor Party gained 1,210 votes over their previous record in the same constituency in the last general election. The Leith seat was formerly held by Captain Wedgewood Benns who recently quit the liberals and joined the labor party. The Labor Party has been winning by elections so consistently since the general strike that the British bourgeoisie went as crazy over this slim victory—the liberals' plurality was only 111—as they would over the successful bombing of an Arabian village.

THE American farmer is again going thru the process of being inflated with financial health dope by scriveners who are as far removed from the waving corn of the wide open spaces as are the authors who supply real cowboys with thrillers of prairie life. The journalist-doctors that medicate the farmers' ills get their dope from the libraries and the "wild western" writers from contact with the habitues of Amsterdam avenue pool parlors. So the farmers continue to vote for the capitalist parties and the cowboys smoke toasted dust.

TEMPTATION in business has received a severe jolt according to a West Side Y. M. C. A. secretary who informs us that his office is swamped with calls from business men who are ready to drop their flapper stenos for married ones. Business men, it seems, contrary to general belief, mourn the disappearance of the "old fashioned girl" who chewed not gum, wore short skirts or bobbed her hair. Our commercial kings, lords and commons have been misunderstood. It was not their fault if they were detained until late hours at committees. It is the woman that always pays. But supposing Mr. Sumner steps in and inquires why the sudden fondness for male stenographers? What then Mr. Businessman?

Gray is the man who is alleged to have murdered another man whose wife he coveted and who was coveted in return by the murderer man's wife. A marriage ceremony kept sacred the relations of the murdered man and his murderer wife until booze and a crowbar separated them, despite the religious command which warns that those whom God binds, no man shall separate, or words to that effect. Here is where a nifty divorce lawyer would be less deadly and less sinful than a skinful of poisoned whiskey and a tap from a crowbar. Why not fasten this murder on bourgeois morality?

Thirty Iowa Operators Sign Temporary Agreements

FAIRMONT, W. Va., March 27.—Coal mine operators in the Northern West Virginia field have failed to accept the invitation of Van A. Bittner, United Mine Workers' organizer, to discuss a wage agreement discussion.

Bittner, and J. L. Steddard, president of District 31, United Mine Workers, left for Grant Town, after the operators failed to make their appearance.

Thirty Companies Sign.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 27.—Thirty independent operators in the Iowa field, small companies, have signed up with the United Mine Workers of America to work thru the strike in the central competitive field.

The agreements are of the type advised by International President John L. Lewis in his letter to district presidents, following the break-down of the Miami wage negotiations. The companies agree to pay the Jacksonville scale as long as they care to operate—no time limit being fixed. The contracts specify that as soon as the wage is decided upon in the central competitive field, new agreements based on it shall be negotiated in the outlying districts.

Bully Dutch Merchants Into Buying Bad Flour Sent By Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Financial pressure brought by American bankers on Dutch flour importers has forced them to end their boycott of American flour.

The Dutch merchants refused to take any more flour brought by the U. S. shipping board when they discovered that much of it was infested with worms. But after being spoken to rather harshly by U. S. bankers' agents abroad they agreed to meet delegates of the shipping board and representatives of the milling interests of the United States in a conference at Kansas City in the near future.

Prussian Government Suspects Chancellor Will Readmit Kaiser

BERLIN, March 27—The continued banishment of the Kaiser beyond July 1 of this year, when the present banishment expires, was demanded today in a letter sent to former Premier Marx by the Prussian government.

The Prussian government requested that the national government be not dominated by the intentions of the nationalists.

The Prussian government hints that it has information that the Kaiser is planning to return as soon as the present law expires. The nationalist ministers maintain the strictest silence in the matter.

Ford to Testify Shielded From Exposure

Legal Technicalities Will Hide Ignorance

DETROIT, March 27.—Interest in the Sapiro-Ford case centered today around the possibility of Henry Ford being called to the witness stand this week. Attorneys for the plaintiff, Aaron Sapiro, suing the auto king for a million dollars for libel thru the Dearborn Independent, are speculating on just what they will be allowed to ask him.

The chances of showing up Mr. Ford's general lack of information on the public affairs he presumes to settle in his paper, and his peculiar notions about race, religion, history, etc., seem to be limited.

Ford will not appear for his side. He will be subpoenaed by Sapiro, and the right of cross-examination allowed in such cases is according to previous decisions of the federal courts, strictly limited.

Ford Displays Ignorance.

During the trial some years ago, when Ford sued a Chicago newspaper for libel, he spent a most uncomfortable time on the witness chair, and had trouble answering such questions in American history as form fit examination topics for the sixth grade in grammar school, winding up by declaring, to the joy of the scoffers, that "history is bunk, anyway".

Not Exactly Literary.

Ford's editor, Cameron, on the stand during the closing days of last week, has already stated that "Henry Ford's Own Page" a feature of Ford's Dearborn Independent is written by a hired man, who has only "philosophical" contact with the man in whose name the articles appear.

This is an important issue in the case, as Henry Ford's page often contains very sharp attacks on the integrity of races and peoples that Mr. Ford is well known to dislike, and the rest of the paper in which his views are spread, has in the past carried the series of articles on which the present libel suit is based.

Sapiro states that he is accused, to his great financial loss, of being engaged in a "Jewish Ring" to bring the American farmers under the domination of "The International Jew bankers (who don't lend money to Ford), and the Communists, I. W. W.'s and radicals". Although not a Jew, Frank Rowden, republican presidential timber, is included in the "ring" by Ford's writers and defense attorneys.

Sapiro To Testify.

Sapiro himself will probably take the stand before Ford, and will face

AMERICAN HIGH COMMISSIONER IN HAITI SMUGLY REPORTS BUSINESS LIKES BORNO

WASHINGTON (FP) — John H. Russell, American High Commissioner at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, has made his annual report for 1926, showing how the Haitian "republic" has been conducted by its puppet government, headed by Louis Borno, and the American Treaty Officials. He declares that because the main crop is coffee, and this crop was exceptionally good, with an unusually high price, the year was a banner one. He announces that "the prosperity was immediately indicated by the increased purchasing power of the peasants, the many new huts erected by the country people, the material increase in development of the soil, and the planting of new gardens."

No Popular Elections.

Ignoring the violation of the constitution by Borno, who refused to permit the holding of elections for a new congress, Russell tells that "the Council of State solemnly met in its regular chamber and . . . . proceeded, according to law, to elect a President of Haiti for the ensuing four years. President Louis Borno was electically unanimously reelected on the first ballot. Confidence among business men which . . . . had been trembling in the balance, was restored immediately."

How Haitians love their American government is disclosed in Russell's discussion of the judiciary system: "Trials by jury are farcical. The jury is always opposed to the Government and can be easily swayed by racial or other prejudices or by drawing upon its imagination or sympathy." Borno is now planning a "drastic reform" of the courts to protect the pro-foreigners.

Starving Workers Taxed.

Russell admits that wages in Haiti are very low, so that large numbers of workers migrate each year to Cuba to work in the cane fields. A tax has been placed on these migratory laborers, since Russell and Borno find that "the economic position of Haiti is not sufficient to permit of a high scale of wages for common labor, or in fact to utilize all its available labor."

Thus the American rule of Haiti penalizes those workers who try to escape from starvation wages and chronic unemployment, by going to Cuba.

URGE "STOP WAR" DRIVE

Workers Party Demands Hands Off China

Scores Murder of Chinese People at Nanking

CHICAGO, March 27—Pointing out the savage exploitation of China by foreign imperialists and protesting against the attempts of foreign profiteers to smash the Chinese revolution, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has addressed the following message to the American working class:

Hands Off China:

Hands off China! Recall the American warships from Chinese waters! Withdraw all troops from Chinese workers!

The admiral of an American warfleet in Chinese waters threatens to bombard Chinese cities and he does it in the name of you, the American people!

Workers, for more than a century foreign imperialists have pressed the very life blood out of the Chinese peoples to coin profits out of it.

The peoples of China were poisoned with opium, in the name of freedom of commerce their territories were stolen; they were robbed of their resources; their workers were exploited at the point of starvation; their sovereignty was stuck on the bayonets of a foreign soldiery which guarded the extra-territorial rights of the foreign oppressors.

Raise Against Taskmasters.

But the Chinese workers and peasants rose to defeat these foreign taskmasters. Victoriously they proceed to win back their country and to govern it themselves and by themselves. And against these fighters for freedom, Wall street and its puppets threaten war in the name of the American people, workers of America.

Where do you stand? Do you consent that war be carried on in your name for Wall street and against the Chinese fighters for freedom? Do you consent that under the pretense of the protection of property of American capitalists in China, American warships should bombard and destroy Chinese cities, the property of the Chinese people? Do you consent that under the pretense of the protection of some American lives tens of thousands of Chinese men, women and children should be slaughtered through these bombardments? Do you consent that in your name the life of every son of an American worker in an American army or navy uniform should be sacrificed in a war against the Chinese workers and peasants, who never fought against you, but are fighting a struggle for their freedom?

Labor Must Protest.

No, American workers, you cannot consent to that. Your interests, your hearts, your hopes, your wishes are with the Chinese workers and peasants. You will write these wishes into one mighty demand to the government in Washington: "Hands off China."

Demand from government: recall every American warship from Chinese waters and withdraw every American soldier from Chinese soil.

Success to the Chinese revolution!

Central Executive Committee, Workers (Communist) Party."

Stop the Wall Street-Coolidge-Kellogg War Against New China

British imperialist policy has triumphed over that of its American rival in China and the world's working class faces the menace of a war of aggression against the Chinese people.

The feverish preparations for naval and military mobilization, the viciously hostile tone of the American press, the conference of cabinet officers and heads of naval and military departments in Washington on Saturday, the jubilant tone of the British press following the bombardment of Nanking which brought death to hundreds of helpless Chinese, the joint ultimatums delivered by the British and American commanders, all point to but one conclusion, i. e., Washington and Downing street have united to dispute the progress of the Chinese national liberation movement because of the definite mass character which it has displayed in the last two weeks.

The prestige of Great Britain has been enhanced and her power for evil in the Far East greatly increased by the unity of action in the Nanking massacre.

The London correspondent of the New York Times under date of March 26 says:

"The hesitations of Washington have been overcome by the necessities of the situation. . . . and altho Admiral Williams had received authority to act as he saw fit and circumstances might dictate there had existed an uneasy feeling that American cooperation might be kept within strict limits in order that the United States could play a lone hand.

THIS FEELING HAS BEEN DISPELLED BY THE COMMON ACTION OF THE AMERICAN AND BRITISH FORCES. (Emphasis Ours.)

The British foreign office apparently takes it for granted that America will hurl shell for shell into crowded Chinese cities to teach their inhabitants that the two great imperialist nations are a unit against Chinese independence.

This policy of the American state department, a policy adopted without sanction from any source other than Wall Street, a policy that does not and has not met with the approval of even the sluggish senate, will be repudiated by the American masses who have no quarrel with the Chinese workers and peasants.

There has been no public demand for battleships and troops to be sent to China. There has not been a single mass meeting calling for intervention in China. Most of all, there certainly has been no popular mandate given the Wall Street-Coolidge-Kellogg administration to pull the scorched chestnuts of British imperialism out of the Far Eastern fire.

Coolidge is committing this country to war on China.

He must be made to understand that the only thing the American masses want is the withdrawal of all armed forces from China, the evacuation of all civilians who want to leave, the balance to stay at their own risk.

Coolidge must be made to understand and to act in accord with the understanding that as far as the great mass of American workers and farmers are concerned they would not waste a .22 caliber cartridge in "defense" of merchants, missionaries and corporation agents who have taken their chances in a country where 400,000,000 people have determined to end imperialist rule and where thousands of workers, peasants and students have given their lives in the struggle for freedom.

The People's Government and the People's Armies of New China have done their best to protect these American residents from their own folly and their own crimes against the Chinese. It is one of the most remarkable facts of all history that the lives of foreigners have been so secure during this great upheaval and it proves that the Chinese revolution is not fighting individual foreigners but the system of imperialism.

From the standpoint of the particular interests of American imperialism the state department is playing a very stupid game. The Chinese masses know now that the "Open Door" policy means the open gunports and belching guns of American battleships and open graves for hundreds of Chinese people. They will make no further distinction between Britain and America.

FROM THE STANDPOINT OF THE AMERICAN WORKING CLASS THE COOLIDGE GOVERNMENT IS PLAYING A MURDEROUS GAME.

THAT GAME MUST END. THE BUTCHERS HAVE ALREADY ROLLED UP A BLOODY SCORE THAT IS TOO LARGE.

HANDS OFF CHINA! WITHDRAW ALL ARMED FORCES FROM CHINESE WATERS AND CHINESE SOIL!

CHINESE GRADUATES OF MISSION SCHOOLS FIRST TO EXPOSE MISSIONARY HYPOCRISY

WASHINGTON — China's national awakening, which has been marked by the leadership of students and working-class agitators against foreign imperialism and domestic exploitation of Chinese labor, has no terrors for the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. That alliance of 22,000,000 Protestant church members, which often is heard in defense of civil liberties and the right of collective industrial bargaining in the United States, has issued a letter of congratulation to the nationalist movement in China. Nationalists Had No Part In Nanking Affair

WASHINGTON, March 27.—By ordering 1,500 more marines and twelve additional airplanes to Shanghai, the United States has definitely embarked upon a policy of large-scale intervention in China.

Powerful influences at work here are slowly but certainly dragging the administration into an openly hostile position and forcing the United States into line with Great Britain in a war against the Chinese Nationalist government.

American business men and militarists in China have found the administration only too willing to comply with their demands for more troops and war ships. In addition to ordering 1,500 more marines to China, the administration is also considering the

SEATTLE WORKERS HOLD HUGE CHINA PROTEST MEETING

Laud Canton Triumphs; Rap U. S. Imperialism

SEATTLE, WASH., March 27.—Seattle celebrated the victories of Chinese Nationalists tonight.

Large crowds of workers jammed Skidd Road to demand the withdrawal of American marines and warships from China and the recognition of the Nationalist Government.

Protesting against the slaughter of Chinese woman and children by American and British war vessels at Nanking, the crowd adopted a resolution condemning imperialist intervention in China and demanding the withdrawal of our troops. The demonstration was one of the largest and the most enthusiastic held here in years.

Shih Chum Huang, Reginald Mar, of the Kuomintang, Aaron Fisherman and D. G. Hannahan were among the speakers. They emphasized the attempts of the imperialist powers to smash Chinese revolution and pointed out that workers of all imperialist countries could aid the revolution by demanding that their governments keep their "hands off China."

PENNSYLVANIA SEDITION CASE AGAIN QUASHED

Company Police Arrest Same Workers Thrice

PITTSBURGH, PA., March 27.—The Woodlawn sedition case, in which members of the Workers Party were charged with violation of the Flynn anti-sedition law, has been quashed, for the second time.

This case arose as a result of the raid on three houses in Woodlawn on Armistice Day, when eight men were arrested, put behind iron bars, charged with violation of the Flynn anti-sedition act and then released under $1,000 bail each. The raid was conducted under the guidance of H. G. Mauk, chief of Jones & Laughlin police.

Through the efforts of the attorneys George J. Shaffer and H. H. Wilson, representing the International Labor Defense and the American Civil Liberties Union, the case was dismissed before it ever came before the grand jury.

The Jones & Laughlin police, however, could not rest in peace and managed to get out another warrant for the arrest of the same eight men, practically on the same charge. Subsequent to that the bail of three of the defendants, Pete Muselin, Milan Reistne and Tom Zima was raised from $1000 to $5000.

Thrown Out of Court

This was before the case was submitted to the grand jury for action. The men were finally indicted by the grand jury on March 15 and the case was set for a hearing in Beaver County court for March 28th. Due to efforts of the attorneys of the ILD and the American Civil Liberties Union the case was again quashed.

The Armistice Day raids took place in revenge against several workers of Woodlawn who dared to sue the chief of police of Aliquippa for $10,000 damages for an illegal arrest on July 7. Aliquippa is another town owned and controlled by the Jones & Laughlin interests.

At the same time, two Hungarian workers were recently arrested in Woodlawn and charged with violation of the same Flynn Anti-Sedition Act.

The case of John Slaki who was arrested in Monessen for distributing Illinois off China Leaflets" was settled in court when John Maki paid $5 fine.

While the case of John Slaki was considered in the Monessen court, John Kaspar of East Pittsburgh was arrested while distributing leaflets advertising the film. "Breaking Chains." The leaflets were confiscated and Kaspar was released on $25 ail. The case was then dismissed by the Burgess.

Organize the Traction Workers

ARTICLE XII—THE 1916 STRIKE; WHY IT FAILED

By ROBERT MITCHELL

It is important here to pause for a moment to note more carefully the nature of the condition against which Quackenbush was contending when he announced, "We are going to the mat with this thing". What were the men fighting for; what hours were they working; what pay were they receiving?

The Interborough in order to ward off the rising tide of organization during the month of July had granted three successive increases of pay. The process of organization, as we have seen did not on that account stop. In spite of these increases the wage of the men was still under the subsistence level.

All Underpaid.

The Interborough at the time employed 634 motormen who received the hugh salary of $3.67 per day of 10 hours, 7 days a week; 2180 conductors and guards received $2.23 per day for a twelve hour day, 7 days a week, 84 hours, no time off; 710 ticket agents received $2.26 per day 7 days per week, 84 hours; 883 gatemen received $1.90 per day, 12 hours per day, 7 days per week; 386 station porters received $1.71 per day 12 hours per day, 7 days per week. Many of the men are still working these hours at the present time under a slightly improved wage.

Such conditions would have driven any group of workers to revolt. The strength and enthusiasm of their mass energy would have led them to victory in spite of all obstacles and mistakes if it had not been for one thing: On August 7th by 1 p. m. the Interborough was as dead as the proverbial door nail. The tie-up was complete—but the motormen did not come out!

Tricked Motormen.

The explanation of this fact gives an insight into the double dealing and knavery of the Interborough which no other description can reveal.

In the process of preparing for the strike the Interborough had used trickery, intimidation and fraud to induce some of the men to sign the "yellow-dog" contracts; it had used gunmen to compel men to join the "Brotherhood"; but even worse was its method of deceiving the motormen.

In order to do this it first went to the switchmen. A switchman is a worker who is learning the motorman's job. These switchmen were first of all told that if they went on strike, they especially would never get back inasmuch as any unskilled worker would be able to learn their work in a few days. In addition some of them were told that if they went on strike they would immediately be made motormen. This won over some of the switchmen.

Played Against Each Other.

When the task with the switchmen had been completed, the Interborough went to the most likely motormen and told them that the switchmen had all signed up to take over the motormen's jobs when they walked out.

A few men were deceived and upon request handed over their union cards. These cards were used by the various foremen of departments to get other motormen to sign over. In a few days practically all the motormen had been made to sign the "yellow-dog" contract.

Then they were called into the office again and informed that if they violated the contract they would be thrown into jail and every bit of possession taken from them.

Men Divided.

Accordingly, when the walkout spread over the system, the motormen, one of the most important divisions of the industry, remained aloof. This was the greatest blow the strike received. Not only had the Interborough succeeded in outwitting the Amalgamated officials but through trickery, double-dealing and fraud it had accomplished its aim of dividing the man.

The Amalgamated officers must accept responsibility for this situation for the reason that leaders can not be excused for the kind of criminal negligence which they should have avoided. Besides the men had been ready and anxious to act at a time when the situation could undoubtedly still have been saved.

Police Take Part.

The strike began in all its intensity. At first no trains whatever ware sent out. But soon with police protection and wire caging about the motormen's booths, a few of the believed at the company's failure to live up to its agreement with them to pay them in full for the period of waiting.

The agreement had been, $2.50 per day for the period preceding strike duty and $5.00 per day for the term of actual service. The Interborough double crossed even the strike breakers and finks! In a fight which took place at one of the agencies, a fink was murdered. Nothing was done to place responsibility for the crime, however. Life was cheap during the 1916 strike!

Accidents Multiply.

Every day saw a wreck, or a more or less serious accident. On the second day of the strike a fink motorman killed two people and injured 13 others. Several more were crippled for life and 14 injured the next day in a wreck on the "L". Interborough thugs and gunmen overran the city beating up and killing the strikers. The police beat up and rode down several East Side gatherings of the workers. All in all it was a time of strenuous excitement.

Still less interesting are a number of other developments which marked the progress of the strike. Considerable violence was in evidence at times. Naturally the company sought to prove that the leaders were behind it. One case of dynamiting was the outstanding feature of the strike. Nothing was ever proven against the men but they were condemned nevertheless. One of them later died on Blackwell's Island of pneumonia while serving his sentence.

"Preparedness".

Early in the strike efforts were made to have the public service commission step in first. The Interborough defied the commission but later Shonts and Hedley, president and vice president respectively of the company, appeared at the hearing. When Hedley was cornered with the evidence of his trickery in violating the agreement with the Amalgamated and the public generally he was not in the least put out. "For thirty years", he explained, "I have been an advocate of preparedness".

His testimony was so contradictory and manifestly false that Cohen, the attorney of the public service commission, proved that Hedley had lied repeatedly on the stand. Mr. Shonts made a much better witness. He joked continuously at their account in "putting it over on" the Amalgamated. The Company Union, he referred to as the "milente cordile" between the company and the men.

Nothing, of course, came of the hearing. Another evidence that the courts and investigating agencies of the capitalist class are best disposed for concealing the true nature of its power! The Interborough merely defied its decision to arbitrate the strike.

All Labor Interested.

The extreme interest aroused by the strike forced organized labor to take a stand on the issues involved. Agitation began for a general sympathetic strike on the part of the whole labor movement of New York. The labor officials of the city did not take this agitation seriously and at first went along with it.

To their surprise the movement gained unexpected momentum. One after another of the unions, forced by the pressure of the rank and file, voted to join the sympathetic strike. For a time it seemed as if such a general walkout would take place. Mayor Mitchell showed his true colors by threatening to call the militia.

General Strike Betrayed.

Then the forces behind the scenes began their deadly operations. One after another of the labor officials began to advise against such drastic measures. "Hesitant" Hugh Frayne openly stated that "a general strike may not be necessary after all". Sam Gompers came on from Washington to deliver an address to the machinists. In the course of his speech he said: "No doubt, you would like to have me speak about the traction strike, but at this time it would be better to stick to my subject". As a result, the sympathetic strike which could still have saved the situation was likewise sabotaged.

Battle Ends.

The struggle of the traction workers continued with declining power the combined forces against the men, the lack of an adequate leadership which would fight the battle along the correct class lines, the increasing needs of the men all proved too much for them. Besides the failure of organized labor to support the strike officially and especially its failure to carry out the plans of the general strike after it had raised the hopes of the traction workers, actually broke the back of the strike.

All through the summer the contest continued, the men fighting stubbornly and the company gradually whittling away its power. Assisted in all of the strike breakers under police protection. Christmas of that year still found the men holding out but it was clear that the battle was lost.

Victory for the workers is not won in a day. Most frequently there are lasing defeats along the way. The lessons of defeat are not learned as quickly and as thoroughly as one might hope. The Interborough traction workers had still another year to sustain before they could begin to build on a solid foundation. Such an event was the last 1926 strike, but no strikes are ever lost as we shall see. Each battle takes its place in the struggle leading to final victory!

Pittsburg Thugs On Job Ready for Big Coal Strike

PITTSBURG, March 27.—Pittsburg, center of the bitterest exploitation of labor in America, is getting ready for an intensified reign of the terror that stalked through the valleys in 1919 and 1922. Some of the big union coal outfits plan to continue production on a non-union basis after April 1. To this end "ranks of the coal and iron police granted by the operators are being increased," reports the Wall Street Journal. "Extensive installations of flood lights are being made to reduce the possibility of night attacks on properties."

Militant labor has been derelict in not establishing a powerful weekly paper in the important Pittsburg steel and coal district. While the editors of such a paper can expect cracked heads and ruined presses not only from the brutal anti-union employers they but from the hought and paid for corrupt trade union officialdom, the job has to be done sooner or later.

the life and future of their union will wage the battle without strike action from other parts of the country unless the activities of the progressive and militant sections is successful in bringing out the unorganized West Virginia and Kentucky fields. The far-sighted members of the union have for the past year been agitating for propaganda and an organizing campaign among these miners.

Brophy Speaks On Strike.

John Brophy, progressive miners' leader, speaking before the committee for democracy in trade unions, here, declared that in spite of the losses in the ranks of the miners' union caused by the misleadership of the present machine, the strike was heroically carried thru by the rank and file.

"When the Lewis administration failed to support the hundred thousand coke region strikers during the last walk out, and left them to their fate, altho they, unorganized, had struck to aid the union and to become a part of it, he served notice on the operators that it was perfectly safe for them to begin their inroads into the union fields," said Brophy.

"Since the signing of the Jacksonville agreement the United Mine Workers of America has lost 120,000 dues-paying members, and has also lost, in some measure, its hold on its own membership," declared Brophy.

Brophy, who lost the presidency of the United Mine Workers of America at the last election only as a result of the sleight-of-hand tactics of the Lewis machine, asserted that one of the conclusion of that agreement disintegration has resulted all along the line in the bituminous industry.

In declaring that the nationalization of the coal industry is the only alternative to the present chaotic condition, Brophy declared that the mine operators squander not only coal as a result of their incompetence and barbaric methods of competition, but also waste human life. "25,000 miners are killed at their work in the mines of the United States each year," he said. "That is three times the number of Great Britain."

The progressive leader said that he favored democracy in the trade unions not because he was under any illusion that it would create a state of perfection, but because "it provides the only chance for growth and changes for the best interests of the workers."

a most severe cross examination, say the attorneys for the inventor of "The Ford System". It is expected, however, that Senator Jim Reed, chief of counsel for Ford, will rest on his publicity already gained, and leave this routine job to Stewart Hanley, former Detroit judge.

Repeats Charge.

Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent, in its latest issue has reiterated some of the charges against Sapiro's handling of "cooperatives", and adds a long-winded defense of religious prejudice. It says about Sapiro's financial deals:

"Under the Sapiro plan of cooperative marketing organizations, farmers or growers, in whatever locality an association was formed, signed contracts binding themselves to deliver their entire crop output to the association over a fixed period of years, the association to sell the products, paying the farmer after deducting all operating and selling expense. It was claimed for the plan that through this form of cooperative marketing, prices could be better controlled and that the producers would receive greater return for his products.

Declares Plan Disastrous.

"Investigation of the Sapiro plan by The Dearborn Independent showed just the reverse. With few exceptions, the investigation disclosed that the Sapiro plan of cooperative marketing resulted disastrously for the producers.

"Following the publication of these stories, Mr. Sapiro in 1925 filed his suit for libel."

FILM SHEET HAS TROTSKY SCREEN STAR, WITH PAY

Arkansawyers Seriously Debate the Salary

By THURBER LEWIS.

McGEHEE, Ark., March 27.—"That guy Trotsky would have been a lot better off if he'd have stuck to the movies," and as the speaker, sitting next to me in the sun in front of what goes as a hotel in Arkansas, spit some reserves of natural leaf at a prowling razor-back, I sat back and confirmed in my mind that there are as many half-wits in the stall as I had thot.

My neighbor settled back in his chair and began thumbing the pages of his Saturday Evening Post with further observation. "His might have been a star now pulling down a fat salary 'stead of runnin' a country biggern ours."

"Where did you get all the dope on Trotsky, brother?" I asked.

Along With Normas.

"Here it is, right here," and he turned back tha pages of the "Post" and showed me a picture.

The reproduction I saw was part of a double page spread under the caption "Close-ups," written for Norma Talmadga, veteran silversheet haroine. It was a scene from a 1912 picture entitled, "My official wife." Clara Kimball Young, idol of the nickelodeon days, is shown surrounded by a group of the usual movie Russians. Underneath you are told that the unimposing looking gentleman with the full Van Dyke at the extreme right is none other than Leon Trotsky.

"Little Dreaming."

"Close Ups," I found on further inspection, is a sort of biography of Norma's film career. Whoever wrote it for her has the following to say about Trotsky's screen experience:

"Mr. Young (Clara Kimball's hubby), still has a number of photographs of scenes from his production, "My Official Wife," in which Leon Trotsky, now known as Mr. Bronstein, played one of the Russians. Little did any of us dream that Trotsky would one day play a more sensational role in the history of the world than anything the most creative imagination could have invented for the screen."

I mentally took back my observation about moronity in Arkansas and proceeded to some figuring. The picture starred a fellow starring from the text of the story, must have been produced around about 1912. As I recall, Trotsky came to the United States at the first begun, in fact as late as 1917, I believe, but certainly not before 1914. What's more, the "super" in the photo looks like Trotsky as he appeared in Leon is a strapping fellow. The diplomatic appearing conspirator "at the extreme right" is not only of military stature—but has a bald, Trotsky's shock of hair is too well known.

Hollywood Scream.

I am sure the Arkansas turned the tables on me when I let a little mental reservation of his own when he heard we laugh to scare the razorback out of his gumbo bath.

It was the humor of the Post for March 26th and anyone interested to observe for himself the lengths to which the Hollywood publicity boundup will go and the facility with which Mr. Curtis' Post falls for the obviously spurious will find Comrade Trotsky at the extreme right on page 26 of that number.

Six Cents Is Share Of Toilers In Steel Trust's Prosperity

U. S. Steel common stockholders are to get a 40 per cent stock dividend, whose cash value on each share at present rating is $114. Each $100 share is now valued at $285 and with the 40 per cent extra thrown in, will be worth $399 or four times its normal value.

Contrast with this the dividend increase that the U. S. Steel worker got last year in the shape of an increased wage over 1925. It was exactly six cents a day. His average wage in 1923 was $5.88 a day and last year it jumped (!) to $5.94. And at that Wallpaper little reliance in the steel trust's figures on wages. Just how the "average" was computed would make an interesting study in itself.

Just Soaked!

The original $100 steel trust share of common stock was outrageously watered and actually represented but a fraction of that amount in invested capital. But now it is worth $400. in one year it leaped in value by $114 while the workers' wages went up 6 cents!

That is not all by a long shot. The steel worker averages $1.06 less a day now than in 1920, on the trust's own figures. Oh, what a good strong union would do to those contracts. And what a good strong Communist party can do to the whole rotten setup in the steel industry where the owners get literally everything, leaving to the producers only the barest, most miserable existence.

Latin American Book, "The Bird of Prey," Raps American Eagle

WASHINGTON — (FP) — From Buenos Aires there has arrived in Washington an advertising poster for a new book, a best seller in Latin America, called "The Bird of Prey." This bird is the American eagle. The book recites the story of American armed aggressions in Latin America—in Mexico, Nicaragua, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, and alleged plans for intervention in other countries in this hemisphere.

Investigators last returned from South America say that large financial deals with American firms have recently been rejected by the governments of Colombia and Venezuela, with the explanation that public opinion in Latin America will not now tolerate any concessions to big business in the United States for fear that American armed forces may follow the dollars.

SENATOR NORRIS FLAYS WARLIKE ACTS OF CALVIN

Opposes the President On Mexico, Nicaragua

WASHINGTON, March 27 (FP).—Sen. Geo. W. Norris, leader of the progressive group in congress, has been the first to speak out against the warmaking program of the Coolidge administration in Latin American, indicated by the sale of arms by the United States government to Adolfo Diaz, its puppet president in Nicaragua, and by the ending of the treaty against smuggling arms into Mexico.

"The action of the president and secretary of state," said Norris, "is shocking to every peace-loving citizen in civilization. The action in regard to Mexico is solely to those who want to overthrow the Mexican government that they will have a free hand in shipping there from our country all the arms and ammunition that may be needed.

Seat a New Czar

"If the president and secretary of state without consent of congress can sell guns and ammunitions of war to Diaz to keep him in power in Nicaragua, there is no reason why they could not sell some of our battleships to Mussolini; there is no reason why they could not put a czar on the throne in Russia and sell him, in time, on his promissory note, the cannons and guns now belonging to our government."

Sen Borah, meeting the press correspondents daily, has not ventured to denounce the administration's acts, although he considers them in violation nof the senate resolution asking for friendly arbitration of the oil lands dispute with Mexico.

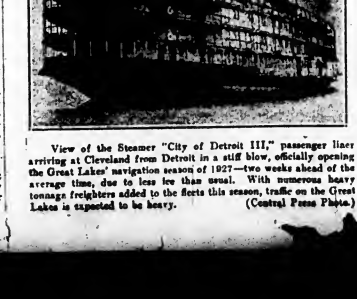
UNION HEADS TO FIX AUTO LABOR JURISDICTIONS

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Executives of all international unions claiming jurisdiction over parts of the motor vehicle industry took part in a conference in the executive council room at American Federation of Labor headquarters on March 21 to consider ways and means of organizing the 500,000 or more workers in the automobile, truck and accessories plants of the United States and Canada.

Jurisdictional Fights.

This was the second such meeting held since the A. F. of L. convention at Detroit last October ordered that a campaign be launched to unionize these workers. At the first gathering it appeared that some unions were indifferent, because of jurisdictional claims, to the project of creating an industrial union of automobile workers.

The executive council of the A. F. of L. then asked the several unions' executives to secure consent from their executive boards to surrender of jurisdiction, at least until all the automobile plants should be made safe for labor unionism. It was suggested that the allocation of the new recruits to the various trade unions could be worked up afterward.



Try To Settle.

Studies have meanwhile been made by the A. F. of L. research department as to just what labor processes are involved in the industry, and how these harmonize operations, performed generally in connection with new and complicated machinery, may be classed as to trade.

This problem of deciding whether a Ford or General Motors employe is a machinist or a sheet metal worker or a common laborer is the most difficult one with which the jurisdictional experts have had to deal. The employe may be shifted from the one class to another and from that to a third within a brief time.

No Part in Nanking Affair

SHANGHAI, March 27.—Reliable reports of the events leading up to the massacre of about two thousand Chinese in Nanking by American and British war ships have reached here.

The "attack" on the foreigners was sent by the Nationalist troops, but by the remnants of the Shantungese army. The Nationalist troops, by occupying Nanking harbor, cut off the Shantungese and prevented their escape across the Yangtze. The foreigners, mostly French and British, had gathered on Seeony Hill, about two hundred kilometers to the east of the harbor. Surrounding them were the Shantung troops, who were in turn surrounded by the Nationalists.

Shantungese Open Fire

Panic-stricken, the Shantungese began shooting on all sides. Stray bullets, falling on the hill, killed an Englishman and wounded the British consul. Hearing this, the Anglo-American warships opened fire with their main six inch batteries and landed marines.

Large numbers of Chinese non-combatants who parked the streets of Nanking were killed by the rain of shot and shell from the warships in the harbor. Sections of the city were set afire—but the performance is regarded as quite noble in the foreign settlement here because a few score of foreigners were safely placed on the American and British ships in the harbor, where the Nationalists were trying to place them all along.

Shanghai Quiet

Despite the anti-foreign sentiment that has followed in the wake of the Nanking massacre, the Nationalist troops and the recently created Peoples' Assembly have succeeded in establishing order.

Most workers have gone back to their jobs in compliance with the proclamation of the tieneral Union, terminating the strike. Unless the Municipal Council, re-employs union members in strategic positions, such as the electric power house, however, the union threatens to call another general strike.

Nationalists Save Americans.

The humanity of poorly paid, often abused Chinese servants and the aid of Chinese householders was perhaps the greatest factor in saving many American lives in Nanking. The tragedy, necording to stories reaching here tonight from refugees aboard the warship Preston, which arrived here today from Nanking.

When the northern regiments finally broke up before the attack of the People's army, groups of soldiers began to loot and kill before retreating from the city.

Hid In Chinese Homes.

According to the stories, many Americans hid in Chinese homes and the Chinese brought Nationalist officers to escort the Americans past the battle lines.

Students of the Nanking university repeatedly and heroically braved gunfire to procure escorts for teachers.

Many Americans declare that their nationality saved them from more brutal treatment than that meted out to others, by the broken forces of the northern war lords.

Horthy Ban On Flirting and Bare Wax Shoulder

BERLIN, March 27.—Flirting, as far as men are concerned, is taboo by law in Budapest.

And this edict has spread a mild panic among the sterner sex. As part of a campaign for modesty, jazz suppression and large families, the Budapest police have issued an anti-flirting decree.

Any man caught flirting with a female not known to him is fined. Second offenders are jailed.

Short skirts have also come under the puritanical ban. Hair dressers have been ordered to cover the busts of wax models displayed in the windows "up to the neck."

Records show that two hundred persons have already been convicted.

CHINESE GRADUATES OF MISSION SCHOOLS FIRST TO EXPOSE MISSIONARY HYPOCRISY

interpreted only as a pledge of cooperation between Protestant missionaries in China, the United States and the anti-imperialist government at Hankow.

This appeal to the Chinese nationalists, through the Christian church in China, is due to the fact that Chinese graduates of mission schools have almost unanimously joined in the revolution, and have been most active in denouncing the hypocrisy of Christian nations in their dealings with China. The Federal Council of Churches, in effect, begs the Chinese revolutionary masses to remember that it was through the teachings in the mission schools that the story of western nations' struggles for liberty has come to the Chinese, inspiring them to win emancipation for themselves. It begs the Chinese to give the missionaries a chance to show that they can serve them in the future, regardless of their having thrown in their lot with anti-imperialism.

BOSTON LEAGUE PROTESTS AGAINST NANKING SLAUGHTER; DEMAND WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS

BOSTON, Mass., March 27.—Protesting the slaughter of women and children in Nanking by American war vessels and demanding the withdrawal of American armed forces from China, the League of Public Information on China, here, has sent the following message to The DAILY WORKER:

"We protest emphatically against the wholesale killing of Chinese at Nanking and urge complete evacuation of American nationals from the war zone and the immediate withdrawal of American armed forces from China."—The League of Public Information on China.

WHITE GUARDS LOOTED IN NANKING, NOT NATIONALISTS, STATES CHIANG

The statements that Nationalist troops were responsible for the killing of foreigners in Shanghai were branded as deliberate lies by Chiang Kai Shek, commander of the Nationalist armies.

"The White Russians were responsible for the Nanking affair," he said, "despite the news which the British are carefully spreading that the Nationalists caused the trouble. The Russians, native bandits of the Shantungese forces, and the rabble started looting and killing before the Nationalists arrived."

British Propaganda

"The reports which the British are busily circulating that the National army and bandits engaged in looting are utterly unfounded, as the fact that the affair has already been settled with the power indicates."

Threatening that the Nationalists would use the boycott if foreign intervention continues, Chiang said, "the powers cannot suppress the Chinese by means of war ships no matter how numerous. Right must win over might."

AMERICANS WHO ARE NEUTRAL ARE SAFE IN CHINA, SAYS KUOMINTANG

United States government to the Chinese Nationalist government prompts us to make the following statement to the American people:

"In the name of the Committee for the Abolition of Unequal Treaties, elected by the Central Committee of the Kuomintang in the United States, we want to assure the American people that the lives of American citizens in China who are observing the neutrality laws are safe.

"We have this assurance on the fact that the Chinese Nationalist government and army have proved conclusively that they are able to restore and maintain order in all Chinese territory coming under their control. It is true that mob action takes place at the time of change in the control of the various captured areas, but even tho the defeated northern troops and the larger war lord guard Russians have always committed incredible outrages yet the troops of the southern army have been able to meet this situation in calmness and strength and have nuimbred to the lowest point the danger of such mobs or any other mobs.

"Let us emphasize that the struggle in China is not against foreigners but in one thro which the Chinese nation hopes to free itself from the existing unequal treaties and other imperialist influences.

"We are pleased to note that the chairman of the foreign relations committee of the United States senate, Mr. William I. Borah, is leading the way in cautioning against hasty conclusions and actions during these troublesome times. Senator Borahs reported statement that the present incidents in Nanking are not outbreaks against foreigners, should create a healthy influence at this critical stage in our struggle for liberation.

"This should be taken into careful consideration by all thoughtful readers every possible means should be taken against attempts that may be made either by Chinese or Americans that could lead to aggravate the precarious conditions that always exist under such circumstances.

"The Chinese thru the Nationalist government is now in a better able to defend and protect all foreigners in China who are not violating the understandings and agreements that exist between the American people and the Chinese Nationalist government has the situation well in hand and we wish to assure the American people to that effect.

Respectfully yours, Committee on the Abolition of Unequal Treaties in China, Dong Yuni, Chairman, 709 Jackson street, San Francisco, Calif.

STUDENTS HECKLE WISCONSIN PROF. IN CHINESE TALK

Draw Up Manifesto On True Situation

(Special To The Daily Worker).

By JOHN PICCOLI

MADISON, March 27.—Butter hecking and shouts of "he doesn't know what he's talking about," were hurled yesterday at Dean H. L. Russell by numerous Chinese students during a speech on present conditions on China at the University of Wisconsin here.

The statement that called forth the ingruest response on the part of the students was "it will probably be 100 to 200 years before China becomes settled politically, and civilized."

Chinese Object

The speech, given in Bascom hall before several hundred students by Russell, was based on information he said he acquired on a recent visit in the Orient.

The Chinese students gathered in a rooming house after the meeting and drew up a "Manifesto" in which they asserted that "the ruling class in America is still sticking to its old gunboat policy in regards to China, and declared their sympathy with the Chinese nationalist forces.

The manifesto did not mention Dean Russell, but was a flat contradiction of his statements and "interpretation" of the situation. It declared that "the present nationalist revolution is not sponsored by any outside influence, but the movement is endorsed by the best elements of both the upper and lower classes in China, who are seeking liberty and freedom."

Chinese Eastern R. R. Traffic Increases

MOSCOW, March 27.—The goods traffic on the Chinese Eastern Railway, operated jointly by Russia and China, reached 5.5 million tons for 1926. This represents an increase of more than 70 per cent over the traffic of 1925.

Seventy per cent of this traffic was made up of grain loads. Timber and building material, wood and coal were next in importance.

STAMFORD LABOR HITS IMPERIAL PROGRAM OF U. S.

Central Labor Union Votes Resolution

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

STAMFORD, Conn., March 27.—A vigorous denunciation of American imperialist policy in China, Nicaragua, and Mexico, is contained in the resolution adopted at a large meetiag of the Central Labor Union of this city. The resolution follows:

Whereas, the Coolidge administration, acting in accord with the wishes of Wall Street, the leader of the open shop movement in the U. S., has sent battleships and marines to Shanghai as a threat of intervention against the Chinese Nationalist government, which is fighting to rescue the Chinese people from exploitations and indignities forced upon them by the foreign imperialist powers, including the U. S., and Threatening Mexico.

Whereas, at the same time the U. S. government, in support of the same financial interests, is threatening Mexico and sending battleships and marines to aid a dictator in Nicaragua against the duly elected head of the Nicaraguan government, and

Whereas, all these activities in support of imperialist exploitation of other countries by the great financial powers of the U. S. carry with them the threat of involving this country in a new imperialist war in which the workers and farmers will be rallied upon to sacrifice their lives for the investments and profits of the capitalist investors, therefore be it resolved that

The Central Labor Union of Stamford declares its opposition to these imperialist pollres of the U. S. government and demands that the American naval forces and marines be immediately withdrawn from Nicaragua and from the Chinese waters; and that government cease its attacks and threats against the people of Nicaragua, Mexico and China, and be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the press and to the representatives in congress and U. S. senators from this state.

Moscow Press Scores America and England For Nanking Firing

MOSCOW, March 27.—The Communist Internationale appeals to "all Negroes, Hindus, Chinese and Malays, grouning under the Anglo-American yoke, to demand a reckoning for Nanking."

Workers! You must hinder in every way the sending of new troops and ammunition to China for this hangman's war England and America have declared," says the International's appeal.

The Pravda, newspaper, comments editorially as follows:

"Remember, you civilized gangsters, 10,000,000 organized Soviet workmen are cursing you! Realize that the Soviet workers will grasp, even more firmly, the hand of long suffering Chinese. The proletariat will stand up and defend those whom Admiral Williams is burning alive, and will throw in his face the epithets of 'villain,' 'hangman,' 'barbarian!'

"The proletariat will take measures against the further bombardment of China and other oppressed countries."

The Communist youth's organization sends a fiery appeal to the sailors and soldiers of foreign armies to join the cause of the Chinese Nationalists.

The Izvestia places the greatest blame on England.

"It is difficult to decide with what degree of unanimity the Americans are backing England," says Izvestia. "It is important to remember the non-participation of the Japanese. Japan does not want to join her fate with England and America in China.

"It seems, for the present, that the United States has no definite line of action and has not fully decided in throw in its lot with the English."

Olander Calls for Coin To Support WCFL

CHICAGO (FP)—Over the signature of Secretary Victor A. Olander the Illinois State Federation of Labor urges all affiliated local unions and central bodies to give financial aid to the Chicago Federation of Labor radio station WCFL. It is the only labor-owned radio broadcasting station in the United States.

The Chicago federation has been in communication with the American Federation of Labor regarding a transfer of ownership to the parent body but the question of meeting the maintenance costs called for further inquiry. President William Green is expected to have held. In a recent letter to Mayor William E. Dever the Chicago federation offered to donate the station to the city if the city would install it in the proposed civic hall and operated it itself.

New Auto Mergers Frighten Ford

Ford, thoroughly scared at last by the menacing rise of General Motors' Chevrolet in the cheap four cylinder class, in planning a four speed four cylinder car with 103 inch wheel base, according to an authoritative announcement from Boston.

Ford evidently thought that collapse of Ford sales late in 1926 was merely a temporary phase and that the famous model T, which has existed practically without change for the last 15 years, would again hit its stride after the holidays. The official figures for January and February, however, gave him no encouragement in this delusion.

General Motors Leads.

Ford total production is still under General Motors while in Wayne county (Detroit), the country's most sensitive motor market, Ford was actually fourth in February sales, ranking below Chevrolet, Hudson-Essex and Chrysler. This was probably the shock that sent the Ford organization into development of a new car with all possible speed. In the closing months of last year, Detroit registrations invariably showed Ford second, but the drop to fourth this year was too much for the old man's nerves.

Percentages Tell Tales.

Official January production figures in percentages is:

General Motors	34.35
Chevrolet	21.75
Buick	6.84
Ford	27.30
Hudson-Essex	6.57
Chrysler	4.71
Dodge	4.22
Willys-Overland	4.10

The really significant tendency is not Ford's decision to get out a car with four speeds, a type not produced in America except in the most expensive cars but common in Europe where speed has to be produced from small economical motors, but the astonishing progress of consolidation in the highly competitive auto industry. Autos are entering a new period in which competition instead of ranging wild among a score of different makes, will be centered in three big concerns, Ford, General Motors and the coming merger of the Independents.

Grand Consolidation.

Durant, probably Wall Street's most daring plunger and the man who perfected the General Motors merger before the war, is reputed to be behind the latest consolidation move. Durant cleaned up $90,000,00 out of General Motors and then lost it. He then pushed Chevrolet in punish the General Motors gamblers who had cleaned him, but Chevrolet was also gobbled by General Motors and then he went into the Star-Durant Flat scheme which netted him handsomely. Now he is willing to forget all about these cars and hook up Hudson-Essex, Chrysler, Dodge, Overland and as many other independents as he can get into a big merger which will line his pockets to the tune of tens of millions.

Now The Shakedown.

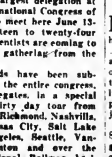
This move was presaged several months ago when the independents entered into an export arrangement in order to compete with General Motors and Ford in the rapidly increasing and lucrative export trade. Now all that remains is to extend the compact to the domestic markets along with the proper financial shakedown which accompanies such deals.

This consolidation business has the greatest significance to Detroit automobile workers. Wallprol will discuss that in a subsequent article.

COLLAPSE OF NINE TOKYO BANKS MAY BE START OF ANOTHER WORLD WIDE PANIC; ONE BEGAN SO

It's a far cry apparently from the failure of nine Tokyo banks to a crash in financial values in Wall Street in this year of the christian lord, 1927. And yet there was exactly that sequence in 1920.

In April and May 1920 dozens of Japanese banks failed and a real industrial crisis hit the Island Empire. Factories closed, trade languished and Japanese workers rioted for rice. Six months later Wall Street itself was involved in the panic which shut down three-fourths of all steel production, two-thirds of auto production and ushered in industrial wage cuts of railroad and mine workers in 1922 which shook capitalism to its very base.



Of course there's no need of saying that Japanese the Japanese crash in early 1920 preceded the American crash in the same year by six months, that there will be a repetition here this year. On the other hand Japan is an essential part of world capitalism now and repercussions of the financial crisis there now are bound to be felt here in greater or lesser intensity.

One of the most instructive features of the 1920-21 panic was the entire lack of preparedness for any such crisis here. In September of 1920 the Financial and Commercial Chronicle, the very last word in broadly Wall Street opinion, was confident that the unparalleled expansion of 1919 and early 1920 would keep right on. Not only believed this but it shook the industrial horizon for possible storm clouds, or if they did, they were blind to certain indications such as socalled overproduction and consumption which any trained Marxist could plainly see.

Wallprol has not looked over the files of the American Communist organs for the summer of 1920, but is confident that a search would reveal competent American Marxian economists predicting exactly what happened later in the year.

BORNO KNOWS HIS BOSSES TOO WELL TO DARE SNU SENATOR KING WITHOUT PROPER ORDERS

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator William H. King of Utah, who was barred, as an undesirable alien, out of the republic of Haiti, by President Louis Borno, a few days ago, doesn't class as a very radical member of the upper house of congress.

WM. H. KING

A Democrat, he's an anti-administration man, but not a vicious one.

There are Democrats on whom the "old guard" Republicans count for help when they need it, King isn't that kind.

He's in the "opposition," but only as a mild liberal. He isn't even faintly "pink," much less a "red."

King to Special Class.

If Borno had barred some more turbulent senator, Washington might have seen some sense in it.

Yet Shipstead about, as unmanageable a solon as makes speeches on Capitol Hill, is on a West Indian tour, too. Haiti's said to be on his Hinarery, and, from all the state department can be able to find out, no objection's raised to him.

To strain at King and swallow Shipstead looks a good deal like gagging over a gnat, and gulping a camel down whole.

THE fact seems to be that Borno's case against King is a state department case.

The Utah senator has been extremely critical of the Washington government's policies in all parts of the world where the United States has dependencies or "spheres of influence."

He has accused the state department of setting up dummy native governments in small countries where Americans have large interests—puppet administrations which wiggle as Washington pulls the strings.

In short, he says, we're traveling the path of imperialism, which he considers a mighty bad route to take. Other senators have said the same thing, but when King probably personated Borno's opponents was holding the latter's feet up to public inspection as about the worst of the state department's creations.

The Puppet Wiggles.

It isn't an human nature for a president to like being referred to as a "puppet," and to be referred to as a stained piece specimen even of Tammy, and a usurper and tyrant to boot, was enough to get any chief executive's goat.

Borno hasn't scrupled to describe Borno in substantially this way.

Borno visited Washington about a year ago.

He didn't give the impression then of having so much spunk.

He spoke little English, which made him appear awkward. Obviously he was ill at ease, clearly knew who his bosses were, and generally was seized up as rather meek.

Now he doesn't hesitate to warn the United States senator off his front steps as unceremoniously as Ellis Island turns a European count of countess back from the port of New York.

ONLY, are they Borno's front steps?

Local Agreements and the Coming Struggle in the Coal Mining Industry.

It is good news that comes from Iowa to the effect that 30 independent coal operators have agreed to continue the Jacksonville agreement but without knowing the tonnage which their mines turn out it is difficult to estimate the effect this will have on the general situation in the mining industry.

The coal operators of Central Pennsylvania have also agreed to continue the agreement pending negotiations and this too, while it indicates a lack of desire on the part of these groups of operators to fight the union openly at this time is also an indication that their continuation of the agreement is dependent upon the outcome of the dispute in the central competitive field—Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

But more important than the attitude of the operators is the fact that these scattered agreements are proof that the Lewis administration of the UMWA has definitely abandoned the policy of national agreements and national strike action in the bituminous industry. Without a struggle the Lewis machine is actually dividing the union into sections.

How soon this suicidal policy will make its deadly effects apparent in the coming struggle with the powerful operators of the central competitive field it is to early to state. As it is the union faces the end of the contract period on March 31 after its officials have given guarantees that a national strike is not contemplated.

The unorganized fields are decisive in this situation and local agreements serve only to emphasize the fact so often stated by the "Save the Union" bloc that only an intensive organization campaign in West Virginia and Kentucky will put the union in a position to talk turkey to the coal barons.

Anything short of this is playing into their hands.

Organizing the Automobile Industry.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor and a committee representing the various international and national unions affected have outlined a plan for the organization of the automobile industry. If the adoption of the plan is followed by immediate action The DAILY WORKER will be only too pleased to give all the support possible to the campaign.

The plan itself as reported by the Federated Press appears to be similar to that applied in the steel industry in 1919-20. It is designed to bridge the gap between craft unions and industrial unions, to reduce the dangers of jurisdictional disputes during the process of organization and in this respect it is an admission that in gigantic and highly specialized industries a new form of organization and new methods are necessary.

During the steel industry organization campaign the plan adopted provided for the concentration of all workers directly under the auspices of the organizing committee and their subsequent allocation to their respective craft and occupational unions. The present plan calls for the organization of a "temporary industrial union" but this is to include only the workers engaged in what is termed "repetitive" processes—machinists, pattern-makers, moulders and other skilled trades will be organized in the unions claiming jurisdiction over them. Following organization of the industry it is planned to "distribute" the repetitive process workers among the other unions.

The above plan is important only in that it indicates that the leadership of the A. F. of L. is unable to face honestly the cold facts of modern industry. The committee in charge will find that the attempt to organize workers in two different kinds of organization will be a terrible handicap. The plan introduces the element of division among workers who have been drawn closer to one another by the pressure of the machine process and it militates against the creation of that spirit of common need and solidarity so necessary in efforts for mass organization.

We will have more to say on this subject. At present in addition to the above it is enough to pledge the support of the only American labor daily to the proposed organization campaign in the auto industry and to urge upon A. F. of L. officials the necessity of utilizing all forces in this work—the Ford Shop Bulletin, published by the Detroit section of the Workers Communist Party for instance, with a circulation of over 10,000 copies, every one of which is read by an automobile worker.

The Chicago Elections.

Sample of mayoralty election propaganda in Chicago:

"All the Negroes are for Wm. Hale Thompson. Will you place yourself on the level of a Negro?"

Thousands of leaflets bearing this 100 per cent American message have been distributed by some individual or organization as campaign literature. The race war which took place in 1919 seems to have taught no lesson to the Chicago Nordics.

Thompson is one of the most crooked politicians in the United States, his slogan is "America First," his stock-in-trade jingoistic diatribes delivered against Great Britain but whoever distributed the above leaflet has assured him of a solid vote in Chicago's south side Negro residence district.

It will be remembered that Dever, the present mayor, knelt and kissed Cardinal Mundelein's ring during the Eucharist congress, and the Thompson "America First" slogan undoubtedly refers also to this manifestation of primitive piety on the part of Thompson's principal opponent.

Thompson will probably be elected by a combined klan and Negro vote, the city of Chicago will be in the hands of whatever capitalist interest will pay the highest price for the privilege and another instance of the fatuous futility of the official labor policy of supporting candidates of the capitalist parties will have been recorded.

The Disintegration of the Socialist Party

By DAVID KVITKO.
ARTICLE III.

"AS A MEMBER of the party and one willing to devote himself fully to the socialist movement I address these words to you. I firmly believe that they are entirely constructive." That is how Mr. Nathan Fine, associate director of the Research Department of the Rand School begins his apology for the sad news he is to break to the Socialist Party membership.

KNOWING that "seeing is believing," Mr. Fine adduces a table of votes polled by the Socialist Party in the last election. Yet so disheartening are the facts that he himself says that the "only conclusion that can be drawn from the table is that the Socialist Party is practically wiped out except in three States: California, New York and Wisconsin.. I hope that none . . . will think that I am a cynic or a secret or open enemy of the party. . . But this vote must mean even to the most sanguine old-timer and dyed-in-the-wool socialist party member or official that we have failed as a political party."

WHAT consolation can he offer to the members, if the last election results were so depleting? What encouragement can he give them if in 45 states out of 48 the Socialist Party broke down completely, and even in the three remaining states it was "not a state-wide vote?"

IF we compare the number of votes cast for the Socialist Party candidates in these three states with the number it used to poll, the status of the Socialist Party will be such that "we have nothing to lose by going out of business entirely as a political party, nationally in the States, and locally," a conclusion reached not by a "cynic or a secret or open enemy of the party."

NOW, the Socialist Party never participated in any other campaign save the political one. It usually became busy just shortly before election took place, in order to add to the number of votes it could count and tell the world to "watch us growing." It tabulated the votes when it received them to know how many it still lacked to elect an official. It cared little where these votes came from, so long as it could cash them in by electing some candidate to office. It boomed candidates by fire crackers and torch light processions. The emblem—the torch—had been physically in use a year, and it usually left an ill smell. If it happened to be indorsed by some trade union official, it counted the number of members belonging to that organization and it was jubilant. To go into the thick of this very membership, to be with it in its daily struggles—this was out of the question: "We are neutral," don't you see. And since its measure of strength has been in the number of votes cast for its ticket, to span the gulf between the economic and political sides of one and the same labor struggle was never attempted. The result is that its political "patronizer" have ceased patronizing it. The state of bankruptcy could not have been better admitted than by Mr. Fine stating in his cryptic sentence: "we have nothing to lose by going out of business." If it would not go out of business, it will become fossilized as the Socialist Labor Party has become, and the prospect of becoming a mummy is not very inticing.

OF course Mr. Fine speaks such discouraging words not because he lost faith in the "socialist cause." Oh, no, the socialist party has still a great mission, only. . . not a political one. Arithmetic is a dry subject, and Mr. Fine expects nothing good out of it for the future of the socialist party, for he sees it going fast to its destruction, and he warns it to retreat in time.

TO be sure, Mr. Fine did not come to speak of death alone, he came to speak of transfiguration. He advises the socialist party to die as a party and transfigure itself into a "socialist society," which should serve as a spiritual or educational buttress for the future party of "producers." He says: "My suggestion is that the socialist party reorganize itself into the 'American Socialist Society' and declare that it is no longer a political party, but solely a propaganda and educational society to promote socialism and independent political action of the producing classes. . . The socialist party together with others send out an invitation to the groups and organizations in the United States interested in establishing a clean-cut independent political party with power in the hands of organized farmers, trade union and independent political organizations. That is to say, such a conference would include the farmer-labor parties, especially of Minnesota, the progressive party of Illinois and possibly of Idaho, those farmers' groups which do not have any committee in the hay stacks, those trade unions and labor groups which are bona fide and represent the American socialist society. The Communists would be barred either as representatives of any labor organization or as part of any group whatever."

THIS plan dispels all doubt that Mr. Fine's words are those "entirely constructive," especially since the two chief things are to be well observed: (1) to make a thorough search for the Communists in the "hay stacks" and (2) "to nominate in local contests and concentrate, and try to 'deliver the goods,' concretely, by electing officials." Under such a plan the socialist party is converted into a "propaganda" bureau which is supposed to lead the parade with the "socialist torch."

IT is very easy to speak of the "socialist torch (propaganda or education) for the simple reason that in the torch there is nothing concrete. Here numbers mean nothing. In reality even in the past when the socialist party had one hundred thousand members, when a million members voted the Socialist ticket, then was the torch unable to light the path of the labor movement. The party had done next to nothing in the way of educating its members. Now it is too late, for its petty-bourgeois elements crept out and away, its proletarian elements are absorbed by the left wing movement.

YET the socialist party is not without a mission, whether it will be called "socialist party" or "socialist society." Its future activity will consist in using its "torch" to throw light on the "hay stacks" where the Communists may be hidden, that is to inform the A. F. of L. bureaucrats of the "whole who" amongst its critics. "For a "party" or "society" which has nothing to do with union activities, nor with political activities, as Mr. Fine proposes, has a reason for existence only then when it will help in the hunt upon the Communists; its future mission will consist in tracing the activity of the Communists and reporting it to the authorities. On this field it will be kept busy; there it is still needed. A socialist knows a little more about the whereabout of Communists than a Mr Green or Woll. That the socialist party leadership is already an important link in the chain of Mr. Lewis, Sigman, Woll and . . . Judge Rosalsky, may be seen by those who follow the socialist press.

YET the socialist party is by far not of one piece. Some would rather bury their heads in the sand, thus thinking to avoid the danger of destruction by not seeing it. That besides liquidation there are still some die-hards there, we shall see from the next installment.

Boston District of Workers Party Takes Energetic Steps to Carry Out Its Quota In the Ruthenberg Membership Campaign

BOSTON, MASS.—A special membership drive committee was elected by the last meeting of the Political Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party here. The following members were appointed on the District Membership Drive Committee to act together with the District Language Organizers:

S. Pulea	L. Marks	h. Feurabend
E. Pultur	J. Sannerih	R. Shohan
J. Grabir	S. D. Levine	R. Zelms
J. Karas	W. Sellan	S. Yellin
E. Pahpol	J. Resnick	M. Whittier

The committee is making an extensive plan to put over the membership drive and already the Committee has on hand over 2000 names of prospective Party members and they intend to reach each and every sympathizer. The drive will also be especially connected with our work in the trade unions and in the open air meetings, factory meetings, etc. The first meeting of the membership committee will be held on Monday March 28th at 36 Causeway St. 8 o'clock sharp and all members of the Membership Committee are requested to attend; also all Party functionaries of Boston.

A special Organizational Conference to consider the question of a Ruthenberg Membership Drive, and a number of other important organizational matters will be held on Sunday April 3rd, and it is expected that delegates from all cities will be present. District No. 1 is determined to put over its campaign on a large scale and in this way a proud tribute to Comrade Rothenberg and his life and work.

WORKERS THROUT COUNTRY ANSWERING RUTHENBERG CALL

CHICAGO, Ill., March 27.—Active members and in carrying out DEC and according to Jay Lovestone, acting general secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, reports indicate that throut the country the party members are answering the Ruthenberg enrollment call with considerable fervor.

From the units in Great Falls, Mont. the national office of the party has received the following reply to its call for action on the Ruthenberg enrollment.

"We wish to express our grief for the loss of our leader Comrade Ruthenberg. Our minds shall always be centered on the work he has accomplished for the workers and we pledge ourselves to carry on the struggle which was his last request, Comrade Ruthenberg will long live after his persecutors are forgotten. And long live the Workers (Communist) Party, the monument Comrade Ruthenberg so ably directed the construction of. Such are the sentiments of the Great Falls unit of the Workers (Communist) Party."

From the Coal Fields.

From the coal fields and steel centers of Pennsylvania we are receiving responses of this character:

"Here in our unit we have realized very well the loss of Comrade Ruthenberg. Therefore we have redoubled our efforts in recruiting new members, as well as in carrying out CEC orders. Yes, the death of Comrade Ruthenberg has inspired each one of us to a firmer determination to carry on the fight until death.

"We must keep The DAILY WORKER—these words will fall on willing ears here and you can rest assured that results will be obtained very shortly. By that I mean that every member will go out and seek new subscribers as well as donations."

Results Forthcoming.

From a unit in one of the mid-western districts we have received the following:

"We pledge to do everything possible at the last meeting after Comrade Ruthenberg's death, and your letter of the 19th instant will be read at the next meeting, which will be March 25th, and I am sure that results will be forthcoming."

The remarkable response of the comrades workers in the coal and steel centers is a source of great inspiration to the entire party. The comrades in this territory have been subject to the most vicious persecution and police terrorism. These acts of brutality have only served to strengthen their determination to help build the party.

Hold Special Meetings.

All the national language fraction bureaus, as well as all the DEC's are planning to hold special meetings to consider the most effective ways and means of getting the maximum results out of the present Ruthenberg enrollment for the upbuilding of the Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Youth Will Continue Fight.

SEATTLE, Wash., — "Resolution passed University Branch 2, Section 12, expressing deepest regret loss Comrade Ruthenberg, great man pass but cause moves on. His work so unflinchingly performed a great foundation stone for superstructure of party. Youth must be encouraged to prepare for leadership. Fight on."

Loss To Anti-Imperialists —

PALO ALTO, Calif.—"Wish to express our regret at the death of Comrade Ruthenberg which deprived us anti-imperialists of an able leader, but are sure his spirit will remain forever as a guiding light for its revolutionists.

"American Sun Yat Senist Society
Per H. Smith, Acting Chairman of CEC."

On The Death Of Comrade Ruthenberg.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"He falls and passes with a clean shield
No blood of any creature was on his hands,
He fought for the world's workers,
and wouldn't yield.
To tyranny, but battled for the poor in all lands.
"When the hour was darkest, his followers few—
Calmly and patiently this comrade-pioneer
Smiled and struggled till his courage grew
From thousands love and allegiance year by year
"A failure? Nay! a collosal success
His was the triumph that the mass shall share
Freedom from wrong thru martyrdom's caress,
His name shall live like John Reed's everywhere."

Ruthenberg Memorial Demonstrations Held By New York Pioneers

During the week-end nine Ruthenberg memorial meetings were held here in different sections of the city by the Young Pioneers.

They were addressed by the members of the district executive committee, who told the assembled children of the life and work of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, founder of the Communist movement of this country. Almost 100 new members were secured.

GINGERBREAD ROYALTY

Poison, emperors, and intrigue mix in "The Crown Prince"

Reviewed By HARBOR ALLEN.

A ROCOCO palace, a Gothic hunting lodge, poison, intrigue, a wily chancellor, an emperor with red pants and Franz Josef mutton chops, royal abdications, cadets who die for their prince, a princess with red hair and fiery temper,—an heir to the throne who years to "be a free man so I can marry the woman I love."

All thee are crammed into a pompous play called "The Crown Prince," translated from the Hungarian of Ernest Vajda by Zoe Akins, produced by L. Lawrence Weber at the Forrest Theatre. Fifty years ago this sort of gingerbread royalty had a glamor for "democratic" America. Now it is just stale cake, gone to crumbs. To freshen it up, it has been sprinkled with democratic icing: "You belong to the old order," says the prince to the emporer, "I to the new. To you the emporer's word is sacred because it is the emporer's word. To me and to the people, it is sacred only when it is just."

Pretty stale icing too.

The rest of the play consists of stilted speeches, ham acting, mysterious entrances through secret doors, orations on "the will to love," torn letters, threats, shots, a poisoning duet, and a program note insisting that the play is based on "actual facts." It has nothing for the worker.

BROADWAY BRIEFS

There will be three shiftings of plays, tonight: "That French Lady," will move from the Ritz to the Central Theatre; "Countess Maritza," at the Forty-fourth Street, will be transferred to John's, and "Menace," playing at the Forty-ninth Street Theatre, will move to the Comedy Theatre.

"Cradle Song" will be given Monday night, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees; "Inheritors," Tuesday and Friday nights; "La Locandiera," Wednesday night; "Three Sisters," Thursday night, and "The Master Builder," Saturday night.

The new plays scheduled to open tonight include: "Mariners" at the Plymouth; "Le Maire's Affairs," at the new Majestic; "Cherry Blossoms," at the 44th Street and "Lost" at the Mansfield.

This is the final week for "The Brothers Karamazov" at the Guild theatre. "The Silver Cord" is playing this week at the Golden.

FERDINAND GOTTSCHALK

Plays in "The Crown Prince," the new Ernest Vajda romance at the Forrest Theatre.

"Brilliants," a play by Lyman Brown, opens in Pittsburgh April 11 with Wanda Lyon and McKay Morris in the cast. It is due on Broadway the following week.

"The Field God," by Paul Green; author of "In Abraham's Bosom," will be produced by Edwin R. Wolfe at Werba's Brooklyn Theatre on April 11, coming here a week later. Fritz Lieber will head the cast.

Ibertha Kalich will open a two week's engagement on Broadway beginning April 18. She will be seen in "Magda" and "The Riddle Woman."

"The Message," by George A. Natanson and Arthur S. Ross, is scheduled for this city about the middle of April. Howard Lang heads the cast.

Arch Selwyn, just returned from Europe, announces that he will produce next fall "The Garden of Eden," with Corinne Griffith, motion picture actress, possibly in the leading role, a German comedy "Lahis to Dover," concerned with channel-swimming, and a new Lonsdale play, "Most of Us Are," in association with Arthur Hopkins.

The Stagers, rather inactive now for many months, is planning to produce a play called "Will Scarlet," by James Rosenberg.

Rosalind Fuller and J. C. Nugent will appear in a comedy called "What Would You Do?" translated from the German of Lajos Lauria by L. A. Burrell and Lawrence R. R. Brown.

FOOD WORKERS OF GARY, IND., FIGHT BOSSES

Restaurant Owners Ask For Injunction

(By A Worker Correspondent.)

GARY, Indiana, March 27.—The Restaurant Keepers Association of Gary, Ind., is making a desperate attempt to secure an injunction against Local 241 of the Culinary Workers of Gary, Ind.

This is the second attempt of the association. The first attempt failed miserably when a short time ago Judge Norton of the Circuit Court at Crown Point, Ind., denied the plea by the Solomon Restaurant for an injunction against picketing by the culinary workers. Judge Norton declared the laws of the State of Indiana do not prohibit peaceful picketing.

Before Superior Court.

Having failed before Judge Norton, the Restaurant Keepers Association is now trying its luck at the Lake Superior Court at Hammond, Ind.

The injunction sought by the Restaurant Keepers Association, acting through Michael A. Magioundis, the owner of the Delmar Cafe in this city would among other things "enjoin and restrain the union from combining and confederating to injure the plaintiff in his business and trade."

The restaurant keepers would thus deny the culinary workers the right to organize and bring to the knowledge of the residents of Gary the deplorable conditions under which the restaurant help is working here. The restaurant keepers however, feel free to organize themselves into an association for the purpose of fighting the union and maintaining the shocking conditions under which the restaurant workers are working.

Fine Its Members.

One of the members of this Restaurant Keepers Association disclose to the writer of these lines that the Association will fine $100.00 such of its members who would recognize the union.

The union of the Culinary Workers is striving to establish one day of rest in seven for its members.

The Restaurant Keepers Association adopted the following method of combatting the union. It advises its members to hire the help just for a short time and then discharge them.

The sympathies of all fair minded people in Gary is entirely with the Culinary Workers.

Wiener To Die.

Robert Wiener yesterday was sentenced by Judge Francis X. Mancuso to die in the electric chair in the week beginning May 2, next, upon his conviction of first degree murder. Wiener was found guilty of murder for his connection with the attempted jail delivery in Tombs prison last November, in which two jail officials and three prisoners were killed.

Scarlet Fever Prevalent.

Scarlet fever has been more prevalent in New York City since the latter part of February than ever before, according to Health Commissioner Harris. The number of fatalities, however, has been low, he said.

DETROIT EMPLOYERS OWN REPORTS SHOW BUSINESS WAVERS, EMPLOYMENT ALSO

DETROIT, Mich.—Reports from the Detroit Employers Assn. showing slow improvement in the employment situation there call attention to the irregularity of employment, a result of the highly competitive nature of the automobile industry. The report shows 227,613 workers on the payrolls of member concerns the 2nd week of March compared with 208,886 the 1st of January.

The report represents a material falling off compared with a year ago when the same concerns reported 272,184 employes. The numbers employed by members of the association the last week of each month during 1926 were:

Detroit Employers Association End of	Number of Employes	May	245,440
		June	224,857
January 1926	261,602	July	232,757
February	267,395	August	239,999
March	269,949	September	234,000
April	251,078	October	230,367
		November	206,123
		December	87,842

The 206,123 employed at the end of November mean a reduction of about 25% from the high point of the year, while in December, probably due in part to inventory taking, the number fell to about 63% from the peak. A quarter of the workers in Detroit are sure to experience considerable unemployment during each year.

RELIEF NOW WILL GIVE PASSAIC WORKERS CHANCE TO EXERCISE RIGHT TO ORGANIZE

The question was put to Alfred Wagenknecht, Relief Chairman of the big textile strike:

"Does Passaic Need Help Today?" Wagenknecht repeated.

"Emphatically YES! What have 16,000 textile workers in Passaic and vicinity fought for during a year or more of struggle? And why has organized labor throughout the country contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars? Was it merely to feed the strikers? Was it just for charity? Or to help them win their fight for a union?

"And now that they have won the right to organize, isn't it up to organized labor to give them its support in the present struggle to Build the union inside the mills? Build the union inside the mills! That is the new slogan. That is the new task to which the returning workers have set themselves with determination born of bitter experience. That is the rallying cry of the thousands who are still waiting to be called back to work.

"We must remember that the bosses are still antagonistic to the union. That they have recognized the union does not mean that they love it. Recognizing the union, with them was just a matter of expediency. Whether the union will continue to exist depends upon the returning workers and on the extent to which they are supported by organized labor.

Passing Crisis.

"Unless the thousands of workers who are at present unemployed are helped over the unemployment period they will return to the mills with their morale damaged, if not shattered. This will be a bad thing for the union. Those who have gone back are standing loyally by the union and working hard to build it up. Why? Because they realize the need of the union and realize that organized labor supported them through their bitter struggle. Those who are still out must return to the mills with the same spirit, with the same faith in organized labor.

Building the union inside the mills is the most important task the Passaic textile workers have faced. Necessary and important was the union in strike. But the really important work is the task of building the union inside the mills. It is no easy task. In some of the mills, like Passaic Worsted, Botany and Dundee the task is comparatively easy. In other mills it is much more difficult. But in all of the mills it is proceeding with the same crusading energy which distinguished these workers while on strike.

"The relief organization is endeavoring to maintain the morale of the strikers, is faced with the task of continuing relief to hundreds of families none of whose members are at work. Organized labor, to make a complete job in Passaic, must continue to send money for the relief of those families until at least one member of the family can secure work."

There is no danger of an influenza epidemic in this city, at least until the late fall. This is announced by Dr. Edwin L. Crosdens, chief of the bureau of preventable diseases of the Department of Health. An epidemic had been feared here because of the alarming spread of the "flu" in Europe.

DETROIT, March 27.—The suicide wave which has swept through the schools of the country claimed its first Detroit victim today.

POWER GRAB BILL PAST N. Y. SENATE, SMITH VETO DUE

Mellon and Young Pull Strings In Fight

ALBANY, March 27.—Now that the smoke of the battle between Republicans and Democrats has cleared away with the closing of the legislature, it appears that the Mellon and the General Electric water power interests are just where they stood before the opening of the legislature.

The Mellon interests secured a short-lived victory last Thursday when the Republican power measure was jammed through the assembly by a 79 to 64 vote. Governor Smith, who represents the interests of the General Electric Company, countered with the promise of a veto.

The republican measure, which had already been passed by the senate, provides for a commission of five to investigate power development and to report to the legislature in 1928. The object of the bill is to forestall action on the power question until 1928, when they hope that a governor more favorable to the Mellon power trust, will take Smith's place.

Smith Favors G. E.

Governor Smith, who favors the General Electric Company, has announced that he would veto the republican measure. Smith, who favors the state development of water power and its sale by a private power corporation, has advocated a water power authority, headed by Owen D. Young, vice president of the General Electric Company.

The Smith measure was defeated by a vote of 69 to 74, while another Smith bill which would have submitted to the voters at this fall's election the question of power development, went down to defeat by the same vote.

The victory of the Mellon interests is temporary since Governor Smith is certain to veto the measure.

In a last minute message to the lawmakers, just before final adjournment of the 1927 session, Gov. Smith took the republican leaders to task for having refused to pass his Water Power measures.

The governor expressed regret that he had not yet received the republican power bill so that he could veto it and send it back to the lawmakers before they adjourned.

EVEN ROSALSKY'S JURY ACQUITTED GARMENT WORKER

Garment Maker Cleared Of Fake Charges

The reactionaries in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, who are working zealously with the New York police in an effort to frame up active members of the Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers, received a severe blow when a jury sitting in Judge Rosalsky's court yesterday found Solomon Rohr, a member of Operators' Local 2, not guilty of an alleged assault.

Rohr was charged with assaulting Sam Gorelich, of 29 E. 10th St., an employer, on December 2 during the general cloak strike. He told a clear and convincing story on the witness stand, relating how he had discovered that Gorelich was using scabs and had secured a promise from him to stop employing them, a promise which Gorelich later broke.

Proves Innocence.

He was able to prove that he was innocent of the charge of assault, which he declared the boss had framed against him because of his activities in discovering the scabbing. It was also shown that Rohr was in an attorney's office at the time the assault was said to have been made.

Hook Up Stigman.

Further evidence of the close connection of the International with both the employers and the police is increasing each day. Yesterday an attorney for the International appeared in Jefferson Market court to press charges brought by one of the bosses of the Edelson Dress Shop, 48 W. 25th St., against Sam Hecht, of the Joint Board, who went to the shop to call the workers to a meeting.

As soon as the boss saw Hecht he called for the police, who arrested him on a charge of disorderly conduct. When his case was called before Magistrate Brodsky he found attorneys for Stigman's union pushing an additional charge of "malicious mischief" against him, alleging that he had destroyed property although he had not even entered the shop.

Sigman's Lawyer Vicious.

When Judge Brodsky refused to allow this charge, Sigman's lawyer argued for a "long sentence," and finally succeeded in drawing down for this worker a three-day sentence in the workhouse.

Hyman Ready To Confer.

Commenting upon the statement issued by Judge Louis Brodsky after Samuel Markewitch, attorney for the right wing of the Joint Board, declined to confer on the suggestion to "end gangsterism in the unions," Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers, which was represented at the conference, said:

"During this entire fight the reactionaries have been charging that the Joint Board was using gangsters, but now Magistrate Brodsky has provided an opportunity to let the real facts be known, and has requested both sides to confer with him in an effort to bring about an understanding which will stop the use of guerrillas. It is easy to see how false the charges were.

Both Joint Boards There.

"The two Joint Boards (the furriers' and the cloak and dressmakers), went to the conference. We were glad of the opportunity to do so, for we never did employ gangsters and do not employ them now. The International, knowing well that they have been hiring professional sluggers, have been defending them in the courts, have been furnishing the high balls required for these thugs with long criminal records, did not dare to go before Judge Brodsky.

Same Old Excuse.

"They know too well that they cannot face these facts. Consequently they have fallen back upon their old excuse, which they have been using every time a nybody has tried to get real facts about this fight. They have declared that they will not confer with Communists. Such a weak excuse will not conceal the fact that the union-wreckers refused to attend the conference because they knew they were guilty of Magistrate Brodsky's charges."

Increase In State Expense.

ALBANY, March 27.—New York State's government for the next fiscal year will cost between $210,000,000 and $216,000,000. This is an increase of approximately $30,000,000 over last year.

Two Million Married Women Work in U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 27 (FP)—Two million married women in the United States are employed at wages in industry, says Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor. This represents an increase of 41 per cent in the last 10 years in the number of married women employed in mechanical and manufacturing pursuits.

Over 8,500,000 women, according to 1920 census figures, were working in gainful occupations outside their homes. This represented one-fifth of the total number of wage-earners in the country. Over 4,00,000 of these working women were in the producing and distributive trades.

TONG WAR ABATES CONFERENCE HELD TO STOP FIGHTING

Chinaman Killed In Washington, D. C.

Chinatown was quiet yesterday after the shootings in which six men were killed.

The new developments include the arrest of Tom Foon, of 17 Doyers street, who is suspected of being connected with the death of two Chinamen following a fight in a Chinese restaurant in Brooklyn. A conference at which the long leaders attempted to end the warfare was held in Police Commissioner McLaughlin's office yesterday.

The streets of Chinatown were deserted yesterday except for policemen. There was a considerable ingress of Chinese from outlying parts of the metropolitan area who feel that they are safer in the well patroled streets of Chinatown than in the suburbs.

Patrol Buffalo Chinatown.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 27.—Twenty-five policemen armed with sawed-off shotguns were patrolling the Chinese district today to prevent a local outbreak of the long warfare which has swept the country. The authorities received a "tip" from Harry Chin, known as the "Mayor of Chinatown" that hostilities were expected. Three Chinese believed to be rival tongmen from other cities have been arrested.

Chinaman Killed In Capital.

WASHINGTON, March 27. — Hetrede of the Chinese tongmen spread to the capital city today when Lin Chong, member of the On Leong tong, was murdered in a restaurant. The killing marked the eighth victim in the renewed warfare between the On Leongs and the Hip Sings.

Ford Plant Creates Millions But Leaves Workers Unprotected

(By Worker Correspondent)

In Green Island, N. Y. there is a Ford shop. A year ago a swinging crane tipped over, nearly killing three workman in the yard of the plant. This crane is run by electricity, and the cable supplying the current is strung along the ground and is usually bad, especially in wet weather. The company is too cheap to buy an overhead crane.

Last Fingers.

On March 23rd, about 4 A. M., Louis Dodge, a resident of Green Island, stumbled over this cable in the yard and fell. At the same time they were backing in some railroad cars, and one of his hands want under a wheel and mashed his fingers. He has a wife and three little children. About a year ago this same worker was injured in the back and was laid off for over two months, while working in the Ford plant, and he was never paid anything for his loss of time.

He is a tractor operator on the mid-night shift.

Darrow and Dry Chief To Debate April 23

Clarence Darrow, noted Chicago lawyer, will tell Wayne B. Wheeler, head of the Anti-Saloon League, just why professional prohibitionists make him sick, when he appears in a debate at Carnegie Hall on April 23.

Darrow is going to maintain that "The National Prohibition of the bverage liquor traffic is detrimental to the public welfare," and Wheeler will attempt to deny it.

In commenting on the forthcoming battle Darrow declared that "the prohibitionists are the only bunch of fanatics, I think, who are hell-bent on putting a person for breaking a law which is only a misdemeanor. Might as well hang a person for swearing.

Darrow Discusses Criminals.

Clarence Darrow speaking at the New School of Social Research, on the subject of "Criminal Law and the Criminal" stated that juries were very often composed of twelve intelligent men who were called upon to decide whether or not a thirteenth man was worse or better than they were.

KUOMINTANG DELEGATE DENOUNCES IMPERIALIST LEAGUE OF NATIONS

MOSCOW, March 27.—Shao Li-si who was the Kuomintang's representative at the recent Brussels anti-imperialist congress, has arrived here and given the Moscow press an interview on his impressions of the congress and his views of the situation in China. He said:

"The Kuomintang looks upon the league of nations as a tool in the hands of imperialism, for the oppression of the weak nations and the encirclement of the Soviet Union.

Fears Chinese Unions.

"I attach great importance to the Brussels congress which will play an immense role in the creation of a true international unity.

"The fact that the British government did not allow representatives of the Koumintang and the All-China Trade Union Federation to enter England after they were invited by the London Trade Union Council and prominent leaders of the British trade union movement, once more proves that the British government fears approachment between the English working class and the national revolutionary movement.

"Rumors about the alleged split within the Kouminteng including the driving out of the Communist and the alleged willingness of the Kouminteng to compromise with Imperialism which are being circulated by the bourgeois reformist press in Western Europe are totally unfounded.

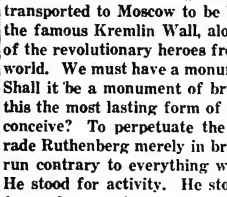
"No Compromise".

"The Kouminteng will not agree to any compromise with imperialism and will continue to bring the national revolutionary struggle to a conclusion. The main line of the Kouminteng policy is directed towards preserving the alliance with the Soviet Union.

"The Kouminteng is growing stronger as is testified by the recent conference of the executive committee. That fact that Hsu Chao-chen, the leader of the Canton workers entered the national government is the best proof of the consolidation of the Kuomintang ranks".

Comrade Zena Zuckin Killed By Defective Gas Pipe In Her Home

CHICAGO, Ill., March 27.—Comrades in this city are today mourning the death of Zena Zuckin, of 1254 S. Sawyer Avenue, who was killed this morning by gas escaping from a defective pipe in her home. The old couple with whom she lived, Solomon Schnitzer and his wife, Etta, were also asphyxiated as they slept.



About 7 A. M. neighbors smelled gas and called the police. A squad from the Lawndale station found the three victims lying in their beds, with the deadly fumes pouring from a leaky pipe under the flooring. All efforts to revive them proved unsuccessful.

Zena Zackin was a member of the Workers (Communist) Party and a members of Millinery Workers' Local 52 of Chicago. She had been a faithful worker in many party and union activities.

Army Plance Greet Dawes.

COLON, Panama Canal Zone, Mar. 27.—A fleet of twenty-five American army airplance greeted vice-president Dawes' ship, the Talon, as she entered the harbor yesterday.

After expressing his pleasure at the "smart appearance" of the fourteenth infantry guard of honor, the Dawes party left for Panama city.

Build a Revolutionary Monument to Comrade Ruthenberg

Comrade Ruthenberg's ashes are about to be transported to Moscow to be laid at the foot of the famous Kremlin Wall, alongside the graves of the revolutionary heroes from all parts of the world. We must have a monument for him here. Shall it be a monument of brick and stone? Is this the most lasting form of monument we can conceive? To perpetuate the memory of Comrade Ruthenberg merely in brick and stone is to run contrary to everything which he stood for. He stood for activity. He stood for a constant forward surge of our movement. He typified opposition to passivity and inertia. His monument must bring this home.

What more appropriate monument can we erect to the memory of Comrade Ruthenberg than a stronger and better DAILY WORKER? What greater service can we render to the revolutionary movement of which Comrade Ruthenberg was the leader? What more powerful weapon can we create in order to carry out his appeal to "Fight On"?

The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund has been established in order to build a stronger and better DAILY WORKER, a more powerful weapon in the class struggle. A stronger and better DAILY WORKER will not come by wishing for it. It will only come if we work for it. Let's put our shoulders to the wheel, everyone. Give, what you can afford. Give, regularly. Give and urge your fellow workers to do the same.

DAILY WORKER,

Seizure of Nanking Is Typical of Restraint of the People's Revolution

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

PRESIDENT Cal Coolidge and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur met at the White House in Washington last Saturday noon to exchange reports on the latest developments in China.

The newspaper reports do not give extended details as to this meeting. The Nanking massacre stuff had fallen flat. The excuse, eagerly sought for, to open hostilities on a large scale against the Chinese people, had exploded into thin air.

The report of the International News Service, for instance, of this meeting between the red-baiting secretary of the navy and the strikebreaker president, should be made a part of history. It reads:

"Secretary Wilbur went to the White House shortly before noon and informed President Coolidge that 'all of the Americans are out of Nanking'.

"Wilbur said the navy's advices indicated only one had been killed, Dr. J. E. Williams, and two wounded, a Miss Moffatt and a Mr. Hobart."

That was all. And it hasn't been proven that the People's army was responsible for this killing.

When bootleggers, beer runners and hijackers run amuck in Chicago the casualties are greater.

Yet in Chicago, as has been brought out in the municipal campaign now raging there, the attorney general of the state refuses to permit any investigation of such shootings, for instance, as the McSwiggin affair that resulted in three deaths.

The incident at Nanking, when the People's Armies took over this important city with nearly half a million population, is proof of the ability of the Nationalist government to maintain revolutionary "law and order." It is the highest tribute that could possibly be paid to the discipline of the Nationalist soldiers and the self-restraint of the Chinese masses.

When the People's armies successfully seized the city, it meant that 5,000 northern troops, the allies of the imperialists, including white (counter-revolutionary) Russian mercenaries, had to be driven out. Yet in this clash only one American life was lost, that of the Rev. Dr. J. E. Williams, who ought to have been back in his home town of Shawnee, Ohio, instead of trying to carry the bible gospel of Rockefeller's Standard Oil company to a people who had no stomach for it.

The imperialist government of the United States, however, is not worried about the fate of the Rev. Dr. Williams. When Wilbur and Coolidge met their only regret could have been that there were not more casualties to offer them a better excuse to come to the rescue of Standard Oil and other American investments in the Far East.

American workers and farmers demand that missionaries and the agents of big business get out of China, that all warships, with their hordes of marines and blackjackers be withdrawn. That will be the best protection for American lives in the present situation.

But the government at Washington decrees differently. Politicians, diplomats, swivel chair generals and admirals meet and decide to rush 1,500 additional marines to China. The nearly 4,000 marines and blue jackets already in China, with more than half a hundred warships, have not proved sufficient to stir up the necessary amount of trouble, to provide an excuse for an actual declaration of war. More must be sent. More are being sent.

But at the same time the campaign of the workers and farmers in this country against the sending of these trouble makers, and the withdrawal of the imperialist forces already in the Orient, continues and grows.

Thinking has run high in sympathy for those who lose their lives in the pay of the profit masters. They sell themselves for a piece of gold. They all have a price. They get their pay.

Labor in the country should be solely concerned with the fate of Chinese labor.

There is truth in the poster that is now being displayed in Shanghai showing a foreigner stabbing a Chinese girl.

It may be taken for granted, however, that practically every atrocity tale that comes thru, trying to picture great numbers of Americans massacred, is an empty lie. The faked massacre at Nanking should live for a long time as a warning to workers in this country not to believe the nonsense that appears in the kept press.

The DAILY WORKER has published the facts of American atrocities in China. Readers will remember that last year The DAILY WORKER gave considerable space to a letter from an American soldier in Shanghai who took great pride in the bloody role that he played in helping to suppress the general strike in that city.

Remember the opening paragraph of his letter, written in the American Club, at Shanghai, to a friend in the United States as follows:

"Dear Hank: Just before the battle, fellah, I'll write you a few lines from Shanghai—Li'l Ole Shanghai, where we spent the morning designing bridges, the noon fighting booze in the Astor House bar, and the afternoons and evenings shooting blood-thirsty Chinese. Yeah, even the wildest of us soon get tired of war, and even the most cold-blooded of us soon get tired of seeing the streets gory and veritable shambles."

The "blood-thirsty" Chinese were men, women and children who had gone on strike in the Shanghai textile mills, refusing to work the 12 and 14-hour day at a starvation wage.

* * *

Reminiscent of the Passaic, New Jersey, textile strike, this American writes of how death was dealt out to the Shanghai textile workers as follows:

"This afternoon we were armed for a long campaign, had killed ten Chinese, crippled many for life, and had spilled blood all over Nanking Road—to protect our interests."

"Well, when we were about to open fire again, and this time to perhaps kill hundreds, two of our armored cars arrived, each with one-inch steel walls, turrets, and machine guns mounted like in tanks—and these cars drove foil speed into the mobs.

"The injury was appalling, two crushed to death, their guts spurting all over the streets, broken legs, ribs, and battered bodies caused by the mad rush for safety."

At another point this soldier of imperialism wrote:

"The slaughter was pretty, seven at the first session. with the usual street full of heathens crawling on all fours, bleeding and screaming, and the usual street full of gore."

* * *

In the face of a century of provocation, the loss of one American life at Nanking, when this city was taken over by the People's armies, will stand forth as the greatest testimony possible of the calm restraint of a great people struggling to be free. The Chinese people's revolution has the numbers on its side. It moves like an irresistible glacier pushing imperialism and all its frantic allies into the Pacific Sea.

The Austrian Working Women in the Factories

By BERTHA BRAUNTHAL, Vienna.

THE position of the working women in Austria is deteriorating from year to year. Austria is a small country the industry of which is no longer able to compete on the world market with the more technically developed countries like Germany and England. As the employers cannot rationalise their production, they are endeavoring to maintain the anarchistic capitalist system by means of the intensification of labor, cutting down wages and prolonging the working day.

Women Workers First

The working women are the first to fall victims to this offensive on the part of the employers. This offensive is not meeting with the necessary resistance on the part of the working class as the GROWING UNEMPLOYMENT is being used by the employers to worsen the conditions of those still in employment.

The number of unemployed at the beginning of February amounted to a total of 1,800,000 workers, of whom one third are working women. Moreover, the latter are not so well organized as the men, as is shown by the fact that at the end of 1925, out of a total of 807,515 organized workers only 185,922, i. e. 23.02% were women. It must be admitted that working women do not take an active part in Trade Union life, while the Socialistic Trade Union leaders do not make any effort to attract the women into this work and to educate them.

Socialists Inactive

Thanks to the inactivity and the submissive attitude of the social-democratic party, which has practically the whole of the working class organized in its ranks, (out of a population of seven million there are 600,000 social democratic party members), the employers are proceeding to rob the workers of the last remnants of their revolutionary achievements.

Thus they are demanding that the workers give up their ANNUAL HOLIDAY to which they are entitled by law, whilst in practice the bosses manage to dodge this law by the expedient of dismissing women workers just before their holidays are due and engaging women again after a fortnight.

The same contemptible trickery is practiced in the case of pregnant women who are dismissed some time before their confinement in order to avoid the expenses under the health insurance law. Cases have been reported where employers go to such brutal action on the part of the employers, expectant mothers have committed suicide, rather than face the appalling hopeless prospect of child-birth coupled with the horrors of unemployment.

Bosses Threaten Lock Out

The bosses are now threatening to lock out their entire staffs unless they agree to work longer, generally TEN HOURS A DAY, and renounce their right to a holiday. This is of ten happens that after the dismissal of a number of workers, those left in the factory have to work more intensively in order to make up for those time missed. Where there were twelve working women, ten have now to perform the same amount of work as was formerly done by twelve. The exploitation of working women is most strikingly shown where women working on time rates have to perform the preparatory work for men engaged on piece work. These women are compelled to work at the same breakneck speed as the men in order that the latter shall not be kept waiting for material. The consequence is a terrible increase in the number of ACCIDENTS, which according to official statistics rose from 2417 cases in 1924 to 2634 in 1925. At the same time women receive much LOWER WAGES than the men. Among the cases mentioned above, in a certain factory whilst the men earn 50-60 (Austrian) shillings a week on piece work the women only get 28-32 shillings, i. e. less than one English pound for practically the same work. As a rule the women earn in the very best cases two-thirds, but generally only one half of the almost starvation wages of the men.

Equal Pay for Equal Work

The Communists are everywhere putting forth the demand of EQUAL PAY FOR EQUAL WORK, and as the result of our agitation the social democratic women brought forward the same demand at their last party conference in Linz. The social democratic party members, the employers are proceeding to rob the workers of the last remnants of their revolutionary achievements.

Just as in regard to the question of equal pay for equal work, so the social democrats have betrayed the interests of the working women in regard to the abominable ANTI-ABORTION LAW. In spite of all the big talk, not only has no serious fight been put up by the Social Democracy in Austria for the abolition of this law under which many working women are flung into prison for practising abortion, but at the above-mentioned Party Conference a motion calling for the complete abolition of the anti abortion law was rejected.

Communists in Serious Struggle

Only the COMMUNIST PARTY, in spite of the fact that it is still small, is carrying on a serious struggle against all the laws and conditions oppressing the working women. At this year's INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY the Party put forward the following main slogans:

EQUAL PAY FOR EQUAL WORK.

EXTENSION OF PROTECTION FOR WORKING WOMEN AND MOTHERS.

ABOLITION OF THE ANTI-ABORTION LAWS.

THRU THE CLASS STRUGGLE TO THE WORKERS' AND PEASANTS' GOVERNMENT!

Heard Nick Longworth, speaker of the house, at the recent banquet of the Cartoonists of America. He is a funny humorist—and, more to the point, he has to be. Likely enough, he will start the next session with, "May the best man win, and no hitting in the clinches!"

Attention New Playwrights!

We should like to join the round of discussion started by Messrs. Could Not Repay Loan, Young Worker Commits Suicide When Scolded

(By A Worker Correspondent).

DENVER, Colo., March 27.—Sam Dalidow, 17, a junior at high school, attempted suicide recently by taking poison.

Instead of metaphysical wonderings and of trying to find out about things after death like most of the recent student suicides he had the great love and now to worry about.

He worked for the Tramway Company after school as a trailor conductor and said he had to have money for change so he borrowed $25.00 from a loan shark.

He paid the $25 with interest back, but had to borrow some moro right soon and when he could not pay it back the loan company started to send letters to his home. His mother was angry because he borrowed money and he didn't know what to do, he said. Perplexed by life's difficulties he tried to end it all by death.

What is Proletarian Art?

Dear Editor, Daily Worker: What is this proletarian art I hear these learned birds talk about? It seems that it's something that every radical tries to attain and something that "The New Masses" made a sorry mess over. Way up here in the Bronx we havent much wherewith, but this much we are emboldened to say:

The guys who are looking for proletarian art in Greenwich Village or are trying to concoct some out of their own little heads are filled with the juice of the pretzel. What the matter with them is that they never worked at eighteen per. If they did they would find out what proletarian art is. They ought to hear the music of a truck-driver's oaths when he finds out that he's going the wrong way on a one-way street, and there's a cop at the end of the block—and no chance for turning. They ought to have to attend countless fraction meetings, membership meetings, committee meetings; they ought to do the countless little things that take the Communist's time and energy. Then, perhaps, in their few spare moments, would they write something that would approach that nebulous proletarian art they get so excited about.

Anyway, comrades, here's something from my typewriter which does not purport to be proletarian or any other kind of art, for that matter. I'm mean enough to hope that the New Magazine of The Daily Worker is so starved for copy that you'll even print some of my stuff.

Wants Movie Column

Editor, Daily Worker: Where is Walt Carmon and what has become of Sylvan Pollack? I enjoy Harbor Allen's reviews and chuckle at A. B. Magil's destruction of pseudo-revolutionary play-acting, but—these shows rarely leave New York City, and a review without the possibility of viewing the show is like doughnuts minus coffee. The movie, on the contrary, has nation-wide presentation and is generally more within the range of the plebian purse. An when A. C. reviews a screen story he interests us whether we live in N. Y. C., Podunk, or even Northampton, Mass. Is it possible that Walt is sulking in Chicago since the removal to New York,—and how does this excuse Sylvan Pollack, whom I believe to be a New Yorker? Give us more movie reviews and less bulletins of what's playing in New York theatres. The "Daily" is a National paper.

More power to Lovestone's and O'Flaherty's column, but have we gained close to lose Max Schacht. mann's "Weekly Review"? Twould be a shame.

Personal regards from one loaner to Comrade Miller who we miss greatly, and comrade greetings to the rest of the editorial staff.—AL BINCH, Boston, Mass.

Urges Ban On "Peaches"

Editor, Daily Worker: It isn't enough that the capitalist press has been plaguing us with its Peaches and Browning stuff

How regretable it is that even our own "Daily" should allow the symposium conducted by Egdandio to follow the example of the capitalist press. The purpose of which is to corrupt the morals of the workers. With comradely greetings.—HARRY WILKES.

Replies to Scissorbill

Editor, Daily Worker: I would like to meet Mr. Scissorbill and give him a piece of my mind. If it were not for ignoramuses like Mr. Scissorbill Communism would thrive more readily. A man who favors bosses when he actually never comes in contact with a boss is a fool. I wonder how he manages to live on that salary. Most probably he lives on the propaganda that the bosses hand out and for eighteen dollars he works like a mule.

Mr. Scissorbill, some of the best brains belong to the Communists and the true meaning of Communism has not gone through your thick head yet. If we had less fools like you and more intelligent men like that "damn red" this world would be a better place to live in. I am, Against the bosses.—A STUDENT.

TWO HYMNS OF HATE, AND A HYMN OF HOPE

Joseph Kalar

1.

The oozing slime of your minds has defiled all things; the whip in your hands has lashed all things, love, friendship, brotherhood, all things; and sanity itself you drowned in the putrid vomit of your souls!

These things—by God! We shall remember!

You have robbed, beaten, killed, and the smirk on your face deepens, and your hands close in pious affirmation of the goodness of God, a God created in your own image, bestial, cruel, insatiable!

The worker that toiled at your command, sweated blood in smelters, toiled in the damp hell of coal mines, shriveled in factories, was beaten in jails, sold like a slave that your paunch might hurst with your gluttony, you suffocated in the filth of your insatiable greed, and as he fell, you only lashed him the more, frothing at the mouth!

These things—yes, by God! we shall remember them!

I was told America was my sweetheart, that she was the light of liberty, that she fought the leprosy of ignorance and race hatred. I fell for that stuff, that bunk. I was ready to die for her.

That was before I caught her fornicating with the bestial looks that strip the rarb of all beautiful things; that was before I caught her pimping for the fat complacent men lolling like swine in their high chnirs, while my brothers were hung by the rope in their hands!

That was before I caught her stabbing Nicaragua, trying to throttle Mexico, joining with the rest of the whores in the mad swinich dance over China!

If they come to me with that sweetheart stuff again, by God! I'll know what to do!

I know now why my sweetheart is, and I'll never forget, even though they rape, murder, and burn her where my eyes, by God! I will never forget!

O God! Darkness! Darkness! Monstrous, horrible darkness!

Out of tha whirling agony that is the earth
Vomit clouds of acrid smoke!
Blood flooding the land, coloring the waters.
Cosmos itself on the wrack!
Hark! Out of the womb of darkness,
Slender fingers of light come stealing,
Bathing the tortured earth with waves of delicious warmth.
O blessed light! O beautiful unconquerable force!

HOMELESS CHILDREN — IN U. S. S. R. AND IN THE U. S. A.

We offer here one of a series of four articles from our correspondent in Moscow on a problem about which much noise was made recently in the capitalist press. In each of them one definite aspect will be taken up frankly and in detail. And as in the case of this one, not only will the truth be told about conditions in Russia, but this condition will be compared with those prevailing in capitalist countries—even in the richest on earth, the United States of America. In almost every case this comparison will be based upon government publications, and elsewhere on unquestionable non-Communist authorities. Inasmuch as this problem is a deep social problem it cannot be dealt with in any narrow reportorial manner. It involves questions of law, family, health, labor, education—and above all the class character of the two states involved.

There are three chief sources that account for the problem of homeless children in the Soviet Union: (1) the direct heritage from czarism and capitalism; (2) the imperialist and civil war; (3) the famine of 1921.

First, there is a direct heritage from czarism and capitalism in children of those elements so submerged by capitalist misery that they do not at once respond to the new conditions of the proletarian state, especially since in the beginning all efforts must be concentrated so sharply on the fight for life against the imperialist foes that, despite the best of intentions, proletarian social welfare work must wait.

Dead in America.

All countries will bequeath such a heritage to their young proletarian dictatorship. An American writer recently boasted that, thanks to the "forces", 70,000 children who would not otherwise have been provided for on Christmas day were given a big feed in the police stations." (Pozdick, "American Police Systems").

The Philadelphia Bureau of Children has stated that "about 100,000 children in Pennsylvania need some form of care, either public or private, away from their own homes or without their own homes under mothers' assistance." ("The Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science," Sept., 1925, p. 150.)

But the Russian load was an especially heavy one. Prof Lesnoi states that the number of families below the poverty line in Petersburg alone in 1914 amounted to almost 50,000, and that by 1916 this had risen to 83,000. Estimating two children per family we have a potential army of waifs of staggering size in the former capitalist an army greater than the total still to be cared for throughout the whole Soviet realm—a sixth of the earth.

The Actual Waifs.

In shedding its crocodile tears over the boys on Russian streets on water nights, the American press makes much of the army of children engaged in the so-called "street trades," a euphemism which hides a large part of the "besprezhorni" problem in capitalist countries. Even in rich America two million children must work for their living—which is a condition from which Soviet Russia is free. Adults only sell newspapers and deliver telegrams, special delivery letters, packages, etc. The adult cobbler is the only bootblack. The boys and girls go to school until it is time to continue their training in the industries.

But in America, the 1923 report of the chief of the children' bureau, department of labor (p. 16), states that in the American city of Wilkes-Barre, for instance, five out of every hundred school children are engaged in "street trades," half of them under the age of 12, even though the state law expressly forbids such employment to boys under 14.

Under-aged Newsies.

One-fifth of the newsboys were under 10 years of age—and "newsies" are reported to furnish 66 per cent of the reform school inmates in New York, 75 per cent in Philadelphia. In the 1920 official report of the same "children's bureau" (p. 22), we are told that in a mining town "5 of the boys and ½ of the girls in sweltering, torked in the damp hell of coal mines, shriveled in factories, was beaten in jails, sold like a slave that your paunch might hurst with your gluttony, you suffocated in the filth of your insatiable greed, and as he fell, you only lashed him the more, frothing at the mouth!

Under-aged Newsies.

One-fifth of the newsboys were under 10 years of age—and "newsies" are reported to furnish 66 per cent of the reform school inmates in New York, 75 per cent in Philadelphia. In the 1920 official report of the same "children's bureau" (p. 22), we are told that in a mining town "5 of the boys and ½ of the girls in sweltering, torked in the damp hell of coal mines, shriveled in factories, was beaten in jails, sold like a slave that your paunch might hurst with your gluttony, you suffocated in the filth of your insatiable greed, and as he fell, you only lashed him the more, frothing at the mouth!

These things—yes, by God! we shall remember them!

I was told America was my sweetheart, that she was the light of liberty, that she fought the leprosy of ignorance and race hatred. I fell for that stuff, that bunk. I was ready to die for her.

That was before I caught her fornicating with the bestial looks that strip the rarb of all beautiful things; that was before I caught her pimping for the fat complacent men lolling like swine in their high chnirs, while my brothers were hung by the rope in their hands!

That was before I caught her stabbing Nicaragua, trying to throttle Mexico, joining with the rest of the whores in the mad swinich dance over China!

If they come to me with that sweetheart stuff again, by God! I'll know what to do!

I know now why my sweetheart is, and I'll never forget, even though they rape, murder, and burn her where my eyes, by God! I will never forget!

O God! Darkness! Darkness! Monstrous, horrible darkness!

Out of tha whirling agony that is the earth
Vomit clouds of acrid smoke!
Blood flooding the land, coloring the waters.
Cosmos itself on the wrack!
Hark! Out of the womb of darkness,
Slender fingers of light come stealing,
Bathing the tortured earth with waves of delicious warmth.
O blessed light! O beautiful unconquerable force!

KELLOGG LETTERS ORDER UPRISING IN MEXICO

Appeal to the Members of the Workers [Communist] Party

STATEMENT BY THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

COMRADES! Our Party has, in the course of its existence, lived thru many trying and difficult moments. But at no time before in our life has our Party faced so complex a combination of severe tests and serious dangers.

All along the whole front, the bourgeoisie and their agents have launched a brutal offensive to crush us. With increasing frequency we find police persecution of our most active field workers.

SUFFER GREAT LOSS.

But just now the heaviest attack launched against us in the vicious campaign of the labor lieutenants of American imperialism to drive out of the unions scores of thousands of the Communists, militants and progressives.

It is at this critical moment of our Party's life that we have suffered our foremost and irreparable loss in the death of our leader, Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg. The grave loss in the passing of Comrade Ruthenberg to our Party is told by the Executive Committee of the Communist International when it declared:

"At no time since Comrade Ruthenberg raised the Red Flag against the imperialist war and led the way to the formation of the Workers (Communist) Party, has his leadership been more needed than today."

THE PARTY IS STRONG.

Comrades! Heavy tho the attack of our enemies may be, serious tho the loss we sustained may be, yet, our Party is strong and is well able to meet the situation. Our revolutionary determination will repel the attacks. Our revolutionary unity must make up our loss; our revolutionary propaganda and activities will recruit new fighters for our ranks. The opportunities for Communist work are great and we have pledged ourselves to fight on in the spirit and determination of Comrade Ruthenberg.

First of all, the entire membership, as one, must close our ranks—build the Party. We must now bend our foremost efforts to forget, to throw overboard, all prejudices, all remnants of factionalism, all excuses for friction and hostility which may have been lingering in our ranks as hangovers, as dying remnants from our previous faction fights and inner Party struggles. Petty differences and time-worn suspicions must be cast aside and banished from our midst. More than ever before is it necessary for all members to unify their ranks and give unlimited support to the Central Executive Committee of the Party working in closest harmony with and under the leadership of the Communist International.

DISUNITY IS COSTLY CRIME.

Today, above all, disunity in our ranks or failure to give fullest support to the Central Executive Committee would be a most untimely and costly crime against the Party, against the interests of the whole American working class.

The Central Executive Committee expects and feels

Judge Says Ford Trial Must Go To Finish

Sapiro Tells Of Close Link Between Himself and State

DETROIT, March 28.—Denying a motion for a mistrial by counsel for Henry Ford, Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond this afternoon allowed Aaron Sapiro to eliminate one-third of his allegations of libel and ordered the million-dollar libel suit to proceed.

Aaron Sapiro, who rose from an orphanage to a throne over American agriculture, took the witness stand this afternoon to explain how Henry Ford's attacks damaged him to the tune of a million dollars.

Stewart Hanley, of Ford's counsel, first filed an objection to the amended complaint and then asked that a mistrial be declared and the jury dismissed if the court accepted Sapiro's amended complaint. Judge Raymond tentatively accepted the amended declaration last week.

Prefer Original Attack.

Hanley declared the Sapiro move, eliminating 54 of his allegations of libel, had changed the whole cause of action. The changes, if allowed, said Hanley, will seriously jeopardize the rights of Henry Ford.

The court first sustained an objection by Ford's counsel to the introduction of a copy of the original letter of for retraction sent the Dearborn Independent by Sapiro. Than the court made final the tentative ruling, handed down last week, which allowed Sapiro to amend his declaration of libel and eliminate 54 of the 141 specifications of libel.

"The motion of the defense for a mistrial is denied," the court added.

Ford Knew Stories Denied

Parts of the letter from Walton Peteet to Henry Ford, protesting in the name of a cooperative organized in the Northwest against the Dearborn Independent articles and notifying Ford they were false, were admitted to the record, however.

Sapiro than took the stand, and plunged into his life history.

He told of his father dying, of life in the orphan asylum, of being educated in the Hebrew Union college of Cincinnati, and of teaching there for two years. He studied law at Hastings law school in San Francisco.

Hooked Up to State

After a brief venture in law, Sapiro said he became secretary of the state industrial accident commission of Cal-

Shanghai Chinese Denounce Killings

Wanton Bombardment Of Nanking Slaughtered 2,000, Burned Part Of City

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

SHANGHAI, March 28.—The bombardment of Nanking and the murder of more than 2,000 peaceful Chinese citizens has stirred people here more than any single event since the Shanghai massacre of May, 1925.

Despite the indignation of workers and students here, who have been holding huge protest meetings, revolutionary discipline is strong enough to insure the safety of foreigners who observe the neutrality laws, according to Chiang Kai-Shek, youthful commander-in-chief of the Nationalist troops. Whatever violence has occurred has been due to Shantungese and not Nationalist elements, he said.

Huge masses of workers crowd the streets of the city to protest the Nanking massacre. More than 150,000 attended the monster mass meeting which welcomed Chiang-Kai-Shek, to voice their indignation at the bombardment of Nanking. Red banners, in Chinese, Russian and English, read: "We appeal to all the labor unions of the world to help the downfall of imperialism."

In the meantime the question of the new provincial government remains unsettled, pending the ratification of the new constitution by the National Government at Hankow.

The well-disciplined Nationalist troops and the labor unions have succeeded in restoring complete order in

Chinese Union Leader Predicts Pekin's Fall And Workers' Republic

CHICAGO, March 28, (FP)—Ma Chen Juag, head of a union of 300,000 mechanical workers in China and an ardent partisan af the Cantonese nationalist movement, predicts that Pekin will fall to the Nationalists in 3 months.

In a recent interview to The Federated Press in Chicago this Chinese trade unionist declared that after the foreign exploiters have been disposed of the Chinese capitlers will come next.

Calles Has Mail to Ambassador Showing Plot

"Forgery" Is Excuse Given By U. S. Officials

WASHINGTON, March 28. — All Washington is humming with the news that the so-called "mystery notes exchanged between Secretary Kellogg and the Mexican government related to correspondence in the hands of President Calles now, and which shows that the U. S. state department itself was actively fomenting a clerical revolution in Mexico, financed with money from oil interests, and was prepared to intervene with a huge armed force to support any government friendly to foreign exploitation that might result.

Secretary Kellogg has refused to comment on this story. He does not deny it.

Employes of the state department, and influential publicists, however, have "defended" the state department by releasing a rumor scarcely less damaging to the repute of the capitalist government of the United States.

Mora Tampered Mail?

In this "explanation" it is charged that the authentic letters sent by Kellogg to Ambassador James Sheffield were mysteriously altered en route so as to be orders to the American ambassador to Mexico to take part in reactionary revolt plots, similar to those by which some years ago another American ambassador in Mexico City aided in the military coup d'etat of General Huerta against Madero, an affair which resulted in the murder of President Madero.

Use Excuse Second Time.

This, also, is the second case within a few weeks, in which Kellogg representatives have extricated themselves from an unpleasant situation by pleading that the official U. S. diplomatic mail pouches were opened and forged documents placed therein.

The same plea was made when Lawrence Dennis, American charge d'affairs in Nicaragua, suddenly threatened to make public Kellogg's instructions to place Diaz in power at a time when the United States was still professing "strict neutrality" in Nicaragua internal affaire.

Newspapers Intervene.

The present situation is further complicated by the fact that it first came to light thru the activities of a New York newspaper man, Gao. Barr Baker, who went to Mexico City on business according to the New York Times and dived in search of news, and was shown photographs of the damaging documents by President Calles himself. Calles did not say how he got them, but they showed that the Coolidge administration stood ready to wage war on Mexico in secret, thru Mexican hirelings of the stamp of Diaz of Nicaragua, and also was willing to make an open invasion of Mexico at any time thought appropriate. The object was plainly stated in the correspondence as being the control of the country thru a president pliable to American business interests. Many of the documents disclosed an great length the oil and mining situation in Mexico.

Embassy Silent.

MEXICO CITY, March 28.—Reports from Washington that the state department has been informed of forged documents, which aimed to create a crisis between Mexico and the United States, were received here with great interest.

The United States embassy refused to comment.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE "massacre" of Americans in Nanking has dwindled down to one preacher and it appears that he was killed by one of a band of northern troops. In fact the Nationalist commander Chang Kai-Shek states officially that the "massacre" which was seized upon as an excuse for bombarding the city was precipitated by fleeing soldiers of Chang-Tso-Lin, the underground ally of British and American imperialism. None of the capitalist papers that featured the reported massacre with glaring headlines have since admitted that the story on which the headlines were based was a fake dispatch manufactured out of the whole cloth with the object of inflaming the minds of the people in Great Britain and the United States against the Chinese revolution.

ALREADY this damnable propaganda is having its effect. The newspapers and the moving picture houses are on a war footing. "Heroes" are springing up like mushrooms in the newspapers and the morons at the movies applaud pictures of imperialist troops landing in China. The orchestras put more pep than usual into the American marching tunes and one can feel that every potential member of the K.K.K., the Knights of Columbus and the American Legion in the theatre is ready to cut a throat in the name of God and country.

THE number of Chinese slaughtered in Nanking by the uncalled for bombardment of the city by American and British warships is not known but the loss of life must be appalling. Imagine warships stationed in the Hudson River dropping explosive shells on Broadway between seven and eight o'clock in the evening and you will have some idea of the dreadful havoc wrought by the ships that shelled the narrow, teeming streets of Nanking. This act of unparalelled barbarism and wanton savagery is certain to drive the hundreds of millions of Chinese to a frenzy of hatred against the British and American imperialists.

THE British press hail the slaughter in which their "cousins" participated as evidence that "the two great English-speaking peoples" are ready to stand shoulder to shoulder against the Chinese as they did in 1917 against the Germans. There is no doubt that Wall Street and Threadneedle Street are ready to deluge the Orient in the blood of defenseless peoples rather than surrender the right to sell them opium and extract big profits out of their bodies. And while the Left Wing of the British trade union movement is protesting against the murder policy in China there is not a peep of protest from the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor. On the contrary the Baptist "Gantry," William Green is busy courting the bloody-handed Karensky and making war on the progressive elements in the trade unions. Is it any wonder that Coolidge and Kellogg can go right ahead and mur-

MARINES FIGHT IN NICARAGUA; PLANE SHOT AT

Admiral Latimer Scolds Diaz for Incompetence

WASHINGTON, March 28. — A minor engagement has been fought in the interior of Nicaragua between U. S. marines and residents of the country, whether actually incorporated in any army or not is unknown.

Admiral Latimer in charge of the naval and marine forces invading the Latin American republic reports that members of the patrol exchanged shots with Nicaraguans at Leon, and that a marine airplane, flying between Derio and Matagapa, was struck by bullets fired from the ground by some one unknown.

They Don't Like Marines

Considerable disasatisfaction is expressed at the navy department building here because of the restrained hostility with which the population of Nicaragua regard the presence in their midst of the swanking American forces. It was not realized before that the "natives" had a real ideal for the independence of their country.

Marines to Leave?

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, March 28.—Liberal sources heard today that the United States, needing marines badly in other parts of the world, has threatened the American puppet general, Diaz, that it will cease maintaining an army here in his defense unless he shows himself more capable on his own behalf.

These reports stated that Admiral Latimer told President Diaz that he felt that the conservatives were leaning too heavily on the American forces and that the conservatives' military forces should be brought into action to "re-establish peace."

Reports from Puerto Cabezas state that President Sacasa is still confident of eventual success of the liberals.

Industrial Expansion Predicted by Schwab; Says Nation Is O. K.

CHICAGO, March 28.—An industrial expansion unequalled in the nation's history was predicted today for the United States during the next few decades by Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate, enroute to California.

Schwab said the condition of the steel industry, barometer of American business, "has never been better," although prices are not entirely satisfactory.

"American business is healthy and sound," said Schwab, "and the majority of steel plants are operating to capacity. Prices are not as satisfactory as they might be but this, in my opinion is not significant. I look for recovery in the near future."

Militarist in Disguise

General Lejeune is commander of the U. S. marines, always ready to do the bidding of Wall Street when another little colony is needed. He is seen here in plain clothes. Even a butcher does not wear his blood-stained apron all the time.

"EXILE OF HOMELESS CHILDREN": MALICIOUS SLANDER ON THE U.S.S.R.

At the present time, when every sort of propaganda is being used in the attempt to create mass antagonism in Western Europe and America against the Workers' and Peasants' government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, the old standby of the "homeless children" is being overworked again. This fact has induced The DAILY WORKER to secure in a series of special articles from Wm. H. Kruse, its Moscow correspondent, a complete review of the situation of the homeless children, how relatively few there really are, and what is being done to relieve them. The third of these articles in printed below, and refutes some of the falsehoods so diligently spread.

The foregoing article in brief states the problem and its cause. In the following articles it is proposed to take up the remedies that are being put into effect, and to expose the lies that are being spread on this question. In this connection special attention will be given to the phases dealing with legal and family relations, since on both these fields the arrangements which prevail in the Soviet Union are far in advance of anything to be found anywhere in the bourgeois world.

The question however arises, why should such a fake campaign be directed against the Soviet Union at this time? The capitalist press will always villify the Soviet Union for the very good and sufficient reason that it is what it is—a capitalist press fighting for the preservation of an outworn social system of which it is the beneficiary. And of course it is not at all particular of the weapons it employs.

The Evolution of The Lies.

There has been a veritable evolution of propaganda tales exploited one after another in this way. The first howl that went up maintained that the Bolshevik "coup" could not last—time settled with that. Then came the brightly embroidered tales of the red terror—but these soon paled in comparison with the recollections of the slaughter of the imperialist war and with the admitted holocaust of white terror in Hungary, Finland, Italy and the whole of the Balkans, while hard-headed experience in their own smaller-scale class struggles told the working class that revolutions were never fought with rose-water.

Nationalization of Women.

But as soon as civil war and intervention were finally crushed, all basis for terror tales was dissipated. The "nationalization of women" story had its effect for some time with the puritanical petty-bourgeois masses before the facts counter-acted it, but the effort to blame the Bolshevik government for the ravages of the

Andrew Mellon's Coal Company Fights Union

Cabinet Official Spending Millions to Ruin U. M. W.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 28.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon is, thru his coal company, spending millions of dollars to break up the United Mine Workers of America.

The Pittsburg Coal Co., which Mellon controls, broke its agreement with the miners' union in 1925. Since that time it has been using its accumulated surplus of $78,000,000 and its unlimited borrowing power to break down all resistance from its workers.

It has operated non-union, and offers itself as a leader in a union smashing drive to start April 1, when the contracts in the union fields expire.

No Gratitude To Union.

Mellon, member of Coolidge's cabinet, takes this action although in the election of Coolidge and the placing of his administration in power, John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, played an important part. Lewis has been consistently republican, and has swung many votes to the men who are now making a frontal attack on his union.

In his support of the republicans, Lewis found himself in opposition on another point to John Brophy, his opponent in the last international election in the union. Brophy headed a progressive campaign which demanded along with more militancy on the part of the union, a labor party.

Ordered To Fight.

Just two yeare ago Secretary of Treasury Mellon and his brother put as dummy president in charge of the company with ordere to fight the union. Mellon aimed to sidestep the responsibility for war on organized labor. On April 1, 1925 The Federated Press carried the story that Pittsburg Coal had locked out its miners. Within a month the company started to operate on the 1917 wage scale. But the first year brought production to only one-sixth of normal while in 1926 it amounted to but one-fourth of the former 20,000,000 tons a year output.

The deficits for 1925 and 1926 would have been considerably larger if the company had not treated as income the money received from the sale of properties which it abandoned when it went non-union. Without these items the losses would have amounted to $1,917,903 in 1925 and $2,868,244 in 1926. The company actually lost about 45 cents on each

British Miners Preparing For Next Fight

Bosses Discriminate Against Militant Diggers

THIS is the first of a series of three articles specially written for The DAILY WORKER by Louis Zoobock, who recently finished a study of the situation in the British mining industry. While the miners have suffered a stunning defeat due to the treachery of the right wing leaders their militancy is still strong and they are preparing for another tussle with the mine owners and the capitalist government.—Ed.

• • •

Article I.

By LOUIS ZOOBOCK.

WHAT is the position in the British coal fields today? How do the minere live under the new district agreements imposed on them by the mine owners and government? What are the miners' plans for the immediate future? All the questions are at present of great interest to all those that have been carefully watching the development of the miners' struggle in Britain. This article is made in an attempt to answer these questions.

The District Settlements.

First, of course, we must analyse the district agreeemnts. Almost the only feature which is common to all of them—is an extension of hours. In every case the aim of the mine owners has been to make the datailed terms as different as possible from those in any other coalfield—and to conclude the agreements for such periods of time as to make impossiton produced in 1926 and 53 cents on each ton produced in 1925.

Big War Chest.

Such a costly campaign against the union men can be carried on only because Pittsburg Coal entered the fight with a $78,000,000 surplus accumulated out of the excess profits of former years. This surplus exceeds the combined value of preferred and common stock. The Wall Street Journal says, "The balance sheet of December 31, 1925 showed a sufficiently strong cash position to withstand a long seige of unprofitable operations and to continue preferred dividends."

The Journal asserts that on the expiration of the Jacksonville agreement several other operators in the Pittsburg district may join Mellon's war on the union. Until now they have hesitated, "influenced by the fact that the operation was costly on account of the expense of gathering men together and the expense of deputies, while even without any unusual expense the difference in wages between the November 1917 scale and the union scale hardly makes up for the low price at which the coal must be sold on account of non-union competition," as Black Diamond, a coal trade organ, puts it.

Non-Union Mines Fail.

This statement shows that even non-union operation does not bring a profit when cut-throat competition in an over-expanded industry forces prices below cost of production. Only the most favored non-union companies are making enough to pay dividends on common stock.

Consolidation Coal Co., the big Rockefeller enterprise, produced 15,058,804 tons in 1926 but its profits were so small that after preferred dividends only 83 cents a share remained for the common stockholders. Prior to 1925 Consolidation produced about 40% of its tonnage in union mines but early in that year it closed down these operations and a month or two later began its attempt to operate 100% non-union.

Elk Horn Coal Corp. is another non-union enterprise which is unable to make a profit for its common stockholders in spite of low non-union wages. Its properties are in eastern Kentucky and central West Virginia. Its report for 1926 shows a profit of $3.65 a share on preferred stock marking the first year since 1920 in which it has made enough to cover preferred dividends.

The way of the non-union operators apparently isn't all that it is cracked up to be.

Government Watches.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The Federal government is watching closely the developments in the unionized soft coal fields which are to suspend operations next Friday.

Agents returning from the fields reported today that there appeared little likelihood of heading off the tie-up in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania. Those states comprise the central competitive field. Operators are remaining steadfast in refusing to accept the United Mine Workers' proposal for a renewal of the present wage contract, they said.

Polley Committee Meets.

Considerable significance is attached here to the Miners' Policy Committee meeting today in Indianapolis. The committee has full powers to enunciate the union's policy for the suspension.

Under tentative agreements, the union will permit operations in central Pennsylvania, Wyoming, Montana, Washington and Michigan.

A meeting will be held with southwest operators on March 31, at which a final attempt will be made to negotiate a working contract.

Soft coal production fell off last week, the Bureau of Mines announced today. This was caused by a number of mines closing down in preparation for the suspension.

Human Pin Cushion.

SCRANTON, Pa. (FP).—Union anthracite miners who do not pay off debts contracted during the 1925-26 strike are faced with a lay-off, if district president, Rinaldo Cappellini, gets their names. Cappellini announced this to a meeting of 700 retail merchants.

"If members of the Retail Merchants' Assn. will report to my office the names of United Mine Workers who still owe strike debts, together with the place of their employment, and with the information as to whether they own their own home or pay rent, we will determine their ability to pay the debt based on their earnings, and whatever terms are agreed upon will be complied with or the miners will not work," Cappellini declared.

ble their expiration in the various districts at one and the same time. It is therefore very difficult to present the terms in a uniform way nor is it possible to cover all the points without simply giving each agreement in full.

With these qualifications, however, the following table makes the position clear on the most important points in the main districts.

The Districts' Agreements.

DISTRICT	Hrs. under-ground	Mini-mum %	Yr. of Ring Each	Pre-book-out %	Subsis-tence mini-mum	Ratio Wages & Profits	Year's Dura-tion	Remarks
Scotland	8	10	1926	10:33	7/0	87.13	7
Northumberland	8	10	1927	100	6/3½	87.13	2	Hewers 7½
Durham	8	85	1927	110	6/3½	87.13	1	Datal 6½
North Wales	8	5	1931	46:66		84.16		6½ Rate no subst.
Lancs. and Cheshire	7½	12	1911	46:66	7/0	87.13	2	½ hrs. Rate.
Yorkshire	7½	12	1911	46:66	8/3	85.15	3
Notts.	7½	12	1911	46:66	8/3	85.15	5
Derbyshire	7½	12	1911	46:66	8/3	85.15	5
Cannock Chase	8	5	1911	46:66	8/3	85.15	2	½ hrs. Rate.
Forest of Dean	8	5	1930	46:66	8/3	85.15	2	½ hrs. Rate.
South Wales	8	20	1918	12:33 not fixed		85.15	2	½ hrs. Rate.
Warwickshire	8	5	1931	46:66	8/3	84.16	4

What does this table show? First, as to hours. Prior to the stoppage the normal full hours of work underground were seven per shift counting from last man down to first man up; according to the Samuel report, this meant an average actual time underground of about 8 hrs. 37 min. Under the new agreements, the hours position for the underground workers ranges from 8 to 9 hours a day, including the time of going down and returning from the mine.

The minimum wage percentage, as seen from the table, has been reduced in all districts. In many places they were brought down to the 1921 level, when the average existed throughout the country were 9-2d a shift.

The ratios of profits to wages has been changed in most of the districts. Under the 1924 agreements, the ratio of profits to wages was: Profits 13 per cent; wages 87 per cent. Now over the whole eastern area the ratio is reversed to: Profits 15 per cent, wages 85 per cent.

Besides these changes, it must be remembered that in many districts, notably in Northumberland and Durham, local customs have been seriously interfered, while the percentage addition to piece worker rates, which was granted when the Seven Hours Bill was passed, was done away with in the new agreements.

Victimization.

Such are in brief the conditions imposed on the miners by the employers and the conservative government of Baldwin. But even these conditions do not seem to satisfy the greedy mine owners. Reports from every coal field show that established rules and customs—on point of which very greatly effect the earning capacity of the miners—are being violated by the owners, while victimization is rife, and the government's deliberate restriction of unemployment pay makes the conditions of those who are refused work absolutely intolerable.

The mine owners have decided to clean the mine fields of all those that took an active part in resisting the lock-out. Hence, victimization and repressions continue throughout the mine regions. Many miners and their wives in South Wales, are still being committed for trial on charges arising out of the dispute, such as "unlawful" assembly, intimidation and obstruction of the police. Twelve miners were given sentences varying from 6 months' hard labor to six weeks' imprisonment at Swansea on January 20th.

The finest and most courageous men in the coalfields of South Wales are being victimized. In some instances complete pit committees are being victimized; lodge officials and many prominent men in the organization have been refused reinstatement.

Elderly miners and others previously engaged owing to their injuries on "light" employment, and even the sons of active federation workers, have been refused employment. Prominent checkweighers have been prohibited from entering their weighing machines. In Tyrolstown, most of the active miners, members of the C. P., are still in prison. Many others are still awaiting their trial. All over South Wales a general attack has been made by the landlords and property owners against the workers to recover arrears of rent accumulated during the lockout. As a result, ejectment orders are now being served on workers find themselves thrown on the road, unless they can find alternative accommodations.

In Yorkshire, many cases of deliberate victimization are being reported. Piece work price lists have been attacked. At the Thurcroft Main Colliery nearly 2,000 miners are still locked out owing to the fact that the owners are refusing to abide by the district agreement and attempting to enforce a day wage rate (instead of piece rates) which would mean a drastic reduction in the men's earnings.

In Scotland, victimization is widespread. The manner in which the reemployment of the men has taken place amounts, in many instances to victimization. Checkweighers, local officials, committee men, and other active members of the Wranches have been shamefully treated. The checkweighers have been subjected to indignities that were unknown following the lockout of 1921, and many local managers have stated that on no account will they be re-employed.

In Lanarkshire alone there are twenty to thirty less checkweighers than in April last. Similar conditions prevail in other counties of Scotland.

In Derbyshire where at present more miners are working than before the stoppage, 900 members of the Derbyshire Miners' Association are still unemployed. Most of them are those who were active in trade union work and picketing. At the pits of one of the largest companies all the old checkweighmen have been kept out.

The same conditions of victimization exist in all other districts. Victimization, it must be pointed out, is largely directed against members of the Minority Movement and the Communist Party—who were the real leaders in the localities throughout the whole period of the lockout. The policy supplied by the owners to their pits, since the official termination of the strike, has been: "no Reds need apply." They are not to be reinstated. The employers direct their methods of repression not only against those who have been pronounced in their activities, but also against those in near or distant relations to them. With the result that whole families are to be starved and humiliated in order apparently to bring the miners to their knees to renounce their activities and grovel for re-employment.

Working Conditions.

There is no doubt that the 8-hour day for the underground miners and the extra shifts, double shifts and treble shifts, which have been forced upon the miners, will lead not only to an increase of unemployment, but will probably throw out of the industry between 200,000 and 250,000 miners. That this is so can been seen from the figures of output since the termination of the strike.

	Output	Wage earners
Week ending Dec. 18th, 1926	1,878,900	925,400
Dec. 25th, 1926	1,351,600	745,400
Jan. 1st, 1927	3,884,200	952,400
Jan. 8th, 1927	5,025,300	966,700
Jan. 15th, 1927	5,244,700	978,900
Week ending Jan. 17th, 1926	3,059,800	1,084,600
Week ending Jan. 10th, 1925	5,200,700	1,133,876

Thus we see that the output of the coal mines is approaching the normal, though the number of men employed is substantially less than in the previous two years. Reports from the various coal mines point to the same end; the 8-hour day leads to the establishment of a permanent reserve army of unemployed miners. In the Notts and Derby fields, for example, after a period of full-time work, a severe slump has again struck the mines in this area. Here is a list of certain collieries in the Mansfield area and the average number of days per week which they worked during January:

Colliery	Days
Crown Farm	4½
Sherwood	4½
Annesley	2¾
Langlor	4½
Bentick	3
Low Moor	3½
Pleasley	3½, etc.

These figures show that most of the collieries are in just as bad a position as before the stoppage. The 7½-hour working day which has been enforced on the men has only intensified the depression.

Mussolini Sick in the Head, Not the Stomach, States Famous Dr. Mayo

ROCHESTER, Minn., March 28.—Rumors from Europe to the effect that Benito Mussolini, dictator of Italy, is suffering from a serious illness were commented upon today by Dr. Charles H. Mayo, Universally famous surgeon.

Dr. Mayo told today how he had learned that Mussolini was suffering from a nervous trouble and not from cancer, as had been rumored.

Touring Europe a year ago with a number of leading American surgeons and medical experts, the doctors were asked by Mussolini's physician to conduct an examination of the Duce.

Having other engagements at that time, Dr. Mayo did not participate in the examination, but learned from his colleagues later that Mussolini's ailment was of a nervous character.

"Certainly there was no diagnosis of intestinal cancer by any of the doctors in our party," the noted surgeon said. "Had there been I would have been told of it at that time."

JERSEY GOVERNOR O. K.'s ACTIONS OF SCHOOL BIGOT

Negro Children Banned At Toms River School

TRENTON, March 28.—The governor of New Jersey, A. Harry Moore, today refused point blank to take any action on the demand of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that Edgar M. Fink, supervising principal of schools at Toms River, be dismissed at once for his activities in segregating Negro and white children and of barring the Negro children from the town's model school.

Lack of power over the board of education of Toms River, and a disinclination to recommend to the state commissioner of education, John A. Logan, that Fink be dismissed, were the reasons given by the governor to the 200 Negroes, headed by James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the association, who called upon him.

The delegation requested not only the reinstatement of the colored children in the model school which they had been attending, created until quite recently, but also the discharge of the principal who, they maintain, has proved his general unfitness to supervise the education of children.

The present situation was created when Fink, the principal, returned from a convention in Texas, where he said, he "learned just the right way the of handling Negroes." At that time he was reported as saying with approval that "lynching was the way of in which Texas take care of their Negro problem."

As a result of the principal's visit to Texas the 25 colored children who were attending the model school at Toms River were excluded, and the segregation followed.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People immediately secured a writ of mandamus compelling the school authorities to permit the colored children to continue as students of the school. The writ is returnable on April 2, when it will be argued in Trenton.

• • •

"Fink must be dismissed," declared Walter White, field secretary of the association to a reporter of The DAILY WORKER, yesterday. "It is not simply because of this stupid activities which has culminated in the present situation, but because he represents the type of mind which is attempting to nullify the free educational process. We will continue this fight until this petty, narrow-minded bigot is removed.

FOR TEACHING EVOLUTION IN SCHOOL—FIRED

A threat that he "would be blacklisted from every school in the city" was directed against Charles A. Wagner, young poet, who was summarily dismissed last Thursday as a teacher from the Berriman Junior high school of Brooklyn, by the school principal when the latter discovered that Wagner had given his story to newspapermen.

Wagner lost his job, after teaching continuously since last September, because of his explanation of the Darwinian theory to his class in geography. William F. Kurz, principal of the school, happened to be present at the time, and the dismissal followed.

The young instructor declared that the school official told him that "the Darwinian theory has no place in my school."

In a statement Wagner, who had a brilliant record while a student at Columbia where he graduated in 1925, asserted that "in bringing forward the protest that I was discharged for 'incompetence,' the principal of the school is evading the main issue. If no test is made of this case the banning of the teaching of Darwinism will go on in this underground manner to the compleio detriment of the children of our city, and the basic principles of humanity and science which they are thus robbed."

Radio Charged With Tending To Stir Up Religious Struggle

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Charges that some broadcasting stations are being used to disseminate propaganda tending to stir up religious and racial hatred probably will be aired before the federal radio commission, it was learned today.

The fight already has been started on the air. Within the past week from stations in New York have been presenting their sides of the case to the unseen audience.

Petitions are said to have been prepared in New York urging the commission to refuse licenses to one station on the ground that its programs are unfavorable to the Catholics and Jews.

A. F. L. PROPOSES INDUSTRIAL FORM FOR AUTO LABOR

Skilled Crafts To Join Regular Unions

(By Lamrence Todd, Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Plans drawn by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor for the proposed drive to organize the 500,000 workers in the automobile industry, were discussed, amended and sent back for approval in their amended form, at a conference held at Washington headquarters on March 24. The council will meet May 10, and it is expected to endorse the amendments and proceed with the campaign.

Statement Soon

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., presided at the conference, which was attended by executives of the various international unions claiming jurisdiction over parts of the motor vehicle field. He stated afterward that excellent progress had been made, and that a formal statement to the public would be issued following the next meeting of the council.

Narrow Field

Meanwhile it is known that the conference of executives of the international unions took this action:

1. Eliminated the accessorize plants from the immediate drive, narrowing the battle to the plants which produce motor vehicles.

2. Agreed to suspend jurisdictional claims to the men engaged in repetitive processes in these plants, so that a temporary industrial union of such workers may be established under the direct charge of the A. F. of L.

3. Agreed that skilled tradesmen such as molders, machinists and patternmakers in the motor vehicle factories will be asked to join their respective trade unions, rather than the new industrial union.

Will Put Up Cash

4. Agreed that the strategy and financial affairs of the campaign shall be directed by the A. F. of L., which will supply a general organizer. Each international union concerned shall put one of its own organizers at his disposal. Dues of $2, with $5 initiation fee, shall be collected by the A. F. of L. from the men organized, and the A. F. of L. shall defray expenses of the campaign from this fund.

5. Agreed that a "common sense" strategy of opening and conducting the enrollment of members in the new union shall be followed; that the main issue is unionizing the plants, and that distribution of the members from the industrial union into the various trade unions shall not be taken up until "stabilized" union conditions in the industry are secured.

Reason for postponing the attempt to unionize the plants which make automobile parts—such as ball bearings, upholstery, batteries, etc.—was due to decision that the job must be done in steps proportioned to the resources of the organizing force.

JUDGING from a perusal of the capitalist papers, they have received secret orders from the war department to pull out all the stops and let the patriot-hysteria-pabalum loose. Even the New York World, that pretends to be favorable to China editorially is just as vicious in its news columns as the New York Times. Every lie cabled by the Associated Press is printed without even a question mark. The New York Times fired an honest journalist who had hitherto covered the Chinese situation and supplanted him with the lying stool-pigeon, Frederick Moore. We are in a period of war hysteria and the capitalist government will not stand for any nonsense like telling the truth.

WHEN the story of the "massacre" appeared in the capitalist press The DAILY WORKER pointed out that it carried all the ear marks of a fake. There was no attempt made to give an approximate number of the dead and wounded. The dispatches were carefully written by trained liars. The press agencies were tipped off to produce a "massacre", and they did, partly to whip up popular hysteria and partly to justify the terrible deed committed by the two naval butchers that turned their guns on the civilian men, women and children, who were peacefully walking the streets of Nanking. I predict that when the truth about this crime reaches the public it will shock humanity, if it is not shock-proof by now.

CONGRESS is adjourned and the little Wall Street puppet in the White House is even freer than usual to do his master's bidding without interference. The scattered opposition in both houses is toothless. It barks occasionally but never bites. The sentiment of the masses thruout the country is against intervention in China. But United States marines are there, United States warships are there, Chinese people have been killed by American armed forces. Yet but for the protests of the Communists there is hardly a murmur. Where are the pacifists who so glibly talk of disarmament doing? What is the league of nations doing? this league in which the pacifists repose so much confidence. To answer the question here would be to insult the intelligence of our readers? What is the socialist party doing? It still professes to be against capitalism.

IF there ever existed an occasion on which the American masses, should be aroused it is now. There is danger of a world war and one that will make the last one look like a back alley quarrel between two small boys. That the imperialists are not as well prepared as they would like is true, but they are not masters of fate. They see the great Oriental expanse of juicy exploitative territory slipping from their grasp. They see the possibility of a mighty revolutionary union stretching from the Neva, Leningrad, to the mouth of the Yangtze River and from Vladivostok to the Dardanelles. England has a vision of India carrying the Nationalist revolutionary banner to victory and wiping out the Amritsar massacre in the blood of the King's Own Borderers. And Wall Street sees the Filipinos looking to an emancipated China for help rather than to fake political friends in Washington. Imperialism is in danger. It is showing its fangs.

INTERNATIONAL RED AID PROTESTS NANKING SLAUGHTER; FEARS NEW IMPERIALIST WAR

MOSCOW, March 28.—Representing six and a half million workers thruout the world, the International Red Aid Conference, sitting here, has adopted a resolution calling upon all progressive parties, trade unions, colonial and semi-colonial people to demand the withdrawal of imperialist troops from China.

Protesting against the bombardment of Nanking and the slaughter of more than 2,000 peaceful Chinese citizens, the resolution declared that the imperialist powers are provoking another world war.

Among those signing the resolution are: Clara Zetkin; Chung Li, China; Hoppe, Korea; Moranint, Italy; Anderson, Denmark; Ekbury, Sweden; Lindenberg, Holland; Bukharin, U. S. S. R.; Mayer, Poland; Dreyer, Indonesia; Schiner, Germany; Mandel, United States; Chen, Czechoslovakia; Tilton, Switzerland.

U. OF WISCONSIN CHINESE RAP AT U.S. IMPERIALISM

Score Propaganda in Capitalist Press

MADISON, Wisc., March 28.—Scoring the propaganda about China that has appeared in the capitalist press and pointing out that the Chinese Nationalists are struggling against foreign imperialism as well as against native war lords, the Chinese students at the University of Wisconsin have drawn up the following manifesto:—

We, the Chinese students at the University of Wisconsin, in view of the repeated misrepresentations of our home situation and in order that our own attitude may not be misconstrued, have thought it fit to issue this manifesto.

Fight For Independence

We solemnly publish and declare that our Nationalist Revolution is animated by the principle of liberty, freedom and independence;

That its ideal is, in its international aspect, "China for the Chinese"; and, in its domestic aspect, "government by the consent of the governed";

That the attainment of this ideal has hitherto been obstructed by two major forces: internally, by a gang of treacherous militarists in the persons of Generals Chang Tso-lin, Chang Tsung-chang, Sun Chuan-fang, Wu Pei-fu and their retainers, who rest their authority on sheer brutal force, who act as puppets of foreign powers and who make the country merely an swell their private fortunes and to please their foreign masters; externally, by a number of foreign powers, led by Great Britain, which, taking every advantage of the unequal treaties exported from China by force or threat of force, perpetuate our evil wars, slaughter our brethren, control and dictate our economic and political life in the interest of their merchant princes and financial giants;

Foreign Enemies

That our Nationalist Revolution is, therefore, directed against these two principal enemies, namely, foreign capitalists and Chinese militarists;

That our struggle will not cease until the militarists are ousted and the unequal treaties are abrogated;

That our Nationalist Revolution, though started in Southern China, is in every sense a nation-wide movement, meeting success and welcome everywhere;

That the ruling class in the United States, in pursuing its present gunboat-policy in China, unmistakably betrays itself with the enemies of liberty and freedom; and, as such, deserve the condemnation of the good peoples of both China and the United States.

Senator King Asks for Probe Into Government Of Hayti; Scores Borno

WASHINGTON, March 28.—A formal request that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee should investigate conditions in Hayti, under the American administration, was made to Senator Borah today by Senator William H. King, who was barred from Hayti recently.

King was refused admission by Louis Borno, so-called president of the little "republic," because he had charged the Haytian government with being the creation of the American administration and had accused General Russell of the U. S. marines of actually running Hayti.

The labor-smashing policies of the Haytian government have been dictated by large American sugar interests and the National City Bank, the principal investors in the island.

"Exile of Homeless Children": Slander on U.S.S.R.

famine proved a boomerang and won sympathy from these same masses instead of blame.

Distortion of inner differences of opinion in the government and ruling party were dished up so often that they were no longer good "news" even in a capitalist sense. Of late the opposition's pessimistic onslaught revived this school, but its effectiveness was weakened by earlier exaggeration of this theme. The prison atrocity yarns have already been mentioned, and now the "deportation!"

To Dim The Sight.

One after another these gas screens were thrown up to prevent the workers from seeing what is really being accomplished in Soviet Russia. One after another these screens are blown away by the reports of the workers' delegations and by the many thousands of visitors.—Social-Democrats, Liberals, and even reactionaries—to say nothing of Communists who after helping for a time in the building of Socialism in Russia return to their homelands to bring home to their fellowworkers the truth about the workers' republic and the necessity and method of duplicating its achievements throughout the world.

To Stop Recognition.

Coming at this time this campaign represents nothing else than an attempt to fight the rapidly approaching Russian recognition by the U. S. A., an attempt undertaken in the service of the most reactionary elements in America. A significant united front has been built up on this battleline—the most hardshell of the capitalists, the lowest of the venal capitalist press plus the Right wing of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy and the Social Democrats! This is precisely as it is throughout Europe, and while it proves that the S. P. has quite come of age, we can be sure that its efforts to hold back the workers will help very little.

One of the features of the fairy-tale campaign now going on in American newspapers and other avenues of publicity deals with an alleged proposal to exile delinquent waifs to an Arctic island north of Murmansk. This story originates from a dispatch by H. N. Knickerbocker some time last autumn, and it has been going the rounds of American newspapers and lecture platforms ever since. The alleged source being given 1 inquired as to the truth of the story and here is the reply from Comrade Egorux, chief of the Administrative Department of the Leningrad Soviet:

Egorux Answers.

Dear Mr. Krutch:

In reply to your inquiry concerning stories spread by the American telegraph agency "International News," which emanate from the Moscow correspondent of the said agency, and which deal with the situation of the homeless children in the U. S. S. R., I consider the following should be said:

First, in the dispatch it is stated: "Comrade Egorux, Chief of the Administrative Department of the Leningrad Soviet, proposed to that body that the more vicious of the homeless children should be shipped off to the uninhabited island of Kilbm, in the Arctic Ocean, whence they could not escape. . . . This suggestion followed the mutiny in Children's Home No. 67, in which one of the woman attendants was killed, and another educator had his skull fractured."

Sheer Falsehood.

The passage quoted above consisted of sheer invention by the correspondent of the "International News," which he has evidently sent in his paper for the purpose of discrediting the organs of the Soviet Government.

In the first place neither I nor any other administrative worker ever raised the question of banishing homeless children to the Island of Kilbm, in the Arctic Ocean. A proposal for exile to Kilbm—as one of the measures against vicious hooliganism, applied to adults, of course, to denizens of the criminal world, was discussed. And this was the sense of whatever appeared in the Soviet press on this question.

Children Respected.

No concrete decision has as yet been made on this matter, no one has been sent to Kilbm, let alone homeless children. While the Soviet Government adopts repressive measures against incorrigible hooligans, it employs altogether different means in combatting child vagrancy, viz., the the improvement of the material conditions of these children, their distribution to children's homes, etc.

As for the "mutiny in the Child ren's Home No. 67," here the "International News" correspondent has allowed his phantasy to run really too far. A special investigation has been conducted into this matter, and it has established the fact that there was no sort of mutiny in the children's home.

No Murder At All.

The depositions of the Director of this Children's Home, F. M. Lapin, and the employees Vladimirov, Bokhireva, Vologina and Michejeva, established that a small group of about 12 subnormal children who had broken the rules proved recalcitrant and threw bread-crust and pebbles at the teachers. The incident had no serious significance whatever, and there was at once liquidated by purely pedagogical measures. There was no such thing as murder or injury of teachers either, and the story sent out by the American newspaper correspondents is an absolute falsehood.

Thus the reports spread by the American telegraph agency, and sent in by the "International News" correspondent, are simply a series of wholesale distortions of things totally unrelated to one another.

Sincerely yours,

EGOROX (signed)

Princess Helps Lie.

It would appear that the reactionary forces in America intend to exploit this tale to the limit before the truth explodes it as fully as the other famous canard, the nationalization of women, was exploded.

The press tells of "Princess" Cantacuzene telling the students at Cornell the same yarns. Everyone who has been to Soviet Russia will bear witness to the fact that nowhere in the world are children treated as well, nowhere do they enjoy the freedom and protection that they do in the Soviet Union. If every worker could see these things for himself as I have seen them, the fine schools, dormitories, labor-schools and colonies, this silly campaign could not get far.

Since that is impossible we should bring about the greatest possible circulation of our press, which mirrors the day to day progress of the Soviet Union on all fields, and which is therefore the best antidote to such false, poison propaganda.

The reports of the various workers' delegations, and of the various delegations of women and working youth, should be spread as far as possible.

No more effective reply than this can be given: a trip through Russia as seen with the eyes of ordinary workingmen and women, non-Communists most of them, who have come right out of the factories in capitalist countries and who therefore have a good basis of comparison from which they can judge. The denial of this tale by Comrade Egorux is absolute and should settle the matter. I need only add that it corresponds with my personal observations in large numbers of institutions for children, most of them war and famine orphans. Nowhere in the world are working class children treated as they are in the Soviet Union—they are the "enemy," the coming citizenry of this workers' republic, and nothing is too good for them.

HUNGARIAN WORKERS ASSEMBLE TO EXPOSE HORTHY KOSSUTH SWINDLE

Vigorous denunciations of the reactionary Horthyi government in Hungary are contained in resolutions unanimously adopted by 2,000 Hungarians at a concert at Carnegie Hall Sunday night, sponsored by the Anti-Horthy League.

The campaign now being made by New York sympathisers of the Horthy regime to erect a monument to the political leader, Kossuth, was also branded in the resolutions as a pretext to bring 80 agents of the White Terror to this city for propagandist purposes.

Horthy Continues Murders

Declaring that the present reactionary Hungarian government, "in spite of protests of all civilized people still maintains an attitude of atrocity against workers and Jews, causing them to flee the country and distress and to be executed without process of law," branded the fake memorial for Kossuth was branded as "illicit and sinister." The resolution that a movement be started to enlighten the people of the United States on the true situation, and to request the American government to refuse admission to the Horthy representatives who, while attending the dedication of the Kossuth monument and preaching liberty in America, will at the same time making progroms on workers and Jews in Hungary."

On the musical program were Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt; Orkhs Heifetz, violinist; George Hercog, pianist; Agnes Lunhard and Romney Brent, of the New Playwrights' Theater; and Ferenc Zsolt, baritone.

Regarding the Shanghai situation, he said. "That can only be determined in consultation with the other powers. No negotiations are in progress at the moment nor is it possible to negotiate fruitfully in the present anarchical condition of the country."

RAILROAD DINING CAR COOKS STRUGGLE FOR REGIONAL STANDARDS OF WAGES, CONDITIONS

By ESTHER LOWELL,
(Federated Press)

Regional standards of wages and conditions are being sought by the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employes, states President Elenzi B. Lemus. The organization wants to make its agreements on railroads in each territory as uniform as possible.

In the nine years of the brotherhood's life it has doubled pay rates for railroad dining car cooks, waiters and dishwashers as well as shortening hours. Scales for fourth cooks and dishwashers begin now at the $80 which was top pay for chefs of 15 years' service before 1918. Chefs' wages begin at $135 to $140 for first year men and go up to $165.

But the men who serve the food, balancing trays perilously as the train swings along, are still chiefly depending on tips.

Although the majority of its 8,000 members and its officers are colored men, the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employes has in its ranks over 60 white cooks running out of Cincinnati on the Southern Railway. The same road employes in its cabs colored firemen and engineemen who are independently organized because the national brotherhood will not admit promotion to the rank of engineers.

There are over 5,000 dining car employes on eastern roads and about the same number on western roads which have not yet been organized. The brotherhood's main office is in Washington, D. C.

The Unholy Three and Mexico

The combined admission and denial which make up the latest and greatest sensation in connection with the Mexican situation force certain conclusions:

1.—No sane person can believe that the documents referred to are forgeries. They are genuine documents.

2.—These documents undoubtedly contain detailed instructions to Ambassador Sheffield, signed by secretary of state Kellogg, to aid by every means possible such organizations as the catholic church and individuals like de la Huerta who, financed by American money, are organizing a counter-revolution in Mexico.

3.—In addition to the instructions mentioned the documents probably outlined the methods by which a military and political campaign against Mexico was to be conducted.

4.—President Calles, we are morally certain, does not believe that the documents are forgeries and has acted on the knowledge that they are genuine American state department communications.

5.—Because of the possession of these documents which if made public would undoubtedly drive the last nail in the political coffins of Coolidge and Kellogg, the Mexican government has been able to secure guarantees of the cessation of the Wall-Street-Coolidge campaign for the time being and has also been able to bring the more belligerent American oil companies to terms.

6.—It is highly probable that the now thoroly discredited Doheny, the Coolidge heritage from the Harding administration, is mentioned in the documents as one whom the American ambassador must support in Mexico.

7.—The crude fake which the Wall Street-Coolidge-Kellogg administration has tried to palm off on the American public by claiming that the documents are forgeries without even attempting to identify the person or persons responsible is the best of evidence that a counter-revolution to be followed by intervention was being organized and financed with the knowledge, aid and consent of the state department.

It is difficult to find words to describe adequately the long series of actions on the part of the United States government to which the monstrous but childishly conceived scheme evidently outlined in the documents were a fitting climax. War was to have been made on Mexico without so much as a by your leave to the constitutional government agencies. The recent incident probably will close this chapter of American history—a chapter which records a descent to the uttermost depths of deception possible to clumsy tools of Wall Street and its kindred interests like Coolidge and Kellogg.

American workers and farmers may be sure that the same interests which worked thru the state department and plotted war on Mexico are also conspiring against the Chinese liberation movement, that the "official" news from China is just as much a tissue of diplomatic lies as was the state department propaganda directed at Mexico.

Kellogg the liar, Coolidge the hypocrite, Wall Street imperialism the force that moves these repulsive puppets—these are the rulers of the United States.

Why should American workers and farmers respect and obey the mandates of such as these who war on freedom everywhere?

The Capitalist Press Is Not Alarmed By the Lewis Program For the UMWA

The capitalist press, even such hardboiled sheets as the New York Journal of Commerce and the Chicago Tribune, are viewing the chances for a coal strike with the greatest of calm.

It is an indication that the spokesmen of American capitalism have been told that there is no great danger of a widespread strike and that if a strike of large proportions does take place in the union coalfields that the coal operators are not greatly alarmed.

This is to say that the most skilled observers for the bosses are fairly well satisfied with the leadership of the Lewis machine and does not believe that it will deal any serious blows to their profits or weaken their control of the coal industry to any great extent.

If the Lewis machine were planning a powerful organization in the non-union fields the capitalist press would sing a different tune. If the "Save the Union" program had been adopted against the opposition of the Lewis machine the capitalist press would be howling to high heaven for government intervention to save the dear public from the avaricious coal diggers.

To the advocates of worker-employer cooperation, "efficiency unionism," the present benevolent attitude of the capitalist press is proof of virtue. To the intelligent worker it is proof that the sinister tools for smashing the miners' union are working well and that the bosses see no effective opposition coming from official labor circles.

DENVER CITY OFFICIAL FORCES CONSTRUTION COMPANY TO OBEY EIGHT HOUR WORK LAW

DENVER (FP).—Many Denver workers have considerably more money than they expected because of the vigorous action of Commissioner Charles D. Vail in enforcing the $5 minimum wage and 8-hour day law on the Levy Construction Co. The concern tried to sneak out of the fair wage provisions of its contract for viaduct by forcing its workers to sign statements that they have received the legal rate. Actually the men had to work 9 and 10 hours to get the legal $5 for 8 hours.

Vail advertised for the men to come and get the difference due them in wages and he held up final payment on the contract until all claims for wages had been paid.

Appeal to the Members of the Workers (Communist) Party

perfectly assured that every Party member, without a single exception, will put his shoulder to the wheel to build the Party—to help the Party rise stronger than ever out of the present difficulties.

DOUBLE THE PARTY MEMBERSHIP.

In the RUTHENBERG RECRUITING DRIVE—in the RUTHENBERG ENROLLMENT—we must turn a face of flint to our enemies to answer their feverish hopes for our disintegration with a doubled membership for our Party. We can and must make the RUTHENBERG RECRUITING DRIVE the most successful campaign ever waged by our Party.

And in this hour when the reactionary trade union bureaucracy is in league with the blackest labor-hating employers to take the very life from the trade unions by expelling the Communists and progressives, it is especially necessary for every Party member not only to be a union member but a tireless, energetic, active trade union worker. Our answer to these devastating acts of the Wolls, Greens, Lewis', and Sigmans must be "Into the unions. Let us build the unions into mighty invincible champions of the working class." The key to the success of all our Party campaigns today is our vigorous participation in trade union work. We must strengthen our trade union fractions. We must spare no effort or pain to help build the TUEL into a mass left wing organization that will prove a powerful force for the rebuilding of our trade union movement. In this effort particularly, no task is too small and no cost is too great.

Our anti-imperialist work is to be pushed with the greatest vigor. Our American Imperialist Octopus is stretching its enslaving tentacles ever increasing sections of the earth. In Nicaragua, Mexico and China the brute force of Dollar Diplomacy is a constant menace to the lives and liberties of millions of colonial and semi-colonial people. Our Party, weak as it may momentarily be, must be on the job and do more than its bit to stay the crushing hand of American imperialism.

EFFORTS MUST BE REDOUBLED.

In our campaigns among the oppressed Negro masses, the exploited youth and working women, our efforts must be redoubled so that the cause of Communism can advance here at a greater pace than ever before.

Likewise our activities towards the development of the political consciousness of the American working class, towards the development of a Labor Party, should particularly now—with the reaction menacing the workers at every turn—go on not only with unabated vigor but with renewed, intensified spirit and determination.

All of our efforts, all of our moves, all of our steps must serve the upbuilding of the Party so as to prepare it for the leadership of the American proletariat facing the mightiest capitalist class of the world. The strengthening of our reorganized Party, making of every shop and street nucleus a living, virile unit of the Party, are bound up with the successful and energetic waging of our Party campaigns by our entire membership.

BUILD THE DAILY WORKER.

And a no more fitting tribute can be paid to our dead leader, Comrade Ruthenberg, and a no more effective weapon can be wielded for our success than the building of The DAILY WORKER into a mass Communist Daily which will inspire and guide the workers in their uphill struggles.

Comrades! We must move forward and work harder than ever before to try to make good at least in part, the loss we have suffered thru the death of Comrade Ruthenberg. We have weathered many a storm before. We shall more than weather this fierce offensive against us.

In recent months, especially, you have shown the enemies of the working class that you cannot only take but can also strike blows that tell.

ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED!

You have set the pace in the organization of the unorganized for the entire labor movement thru your valiant efforts. Witness Passaic!

Not even the most abysmal conspiracies of reactionary labor leaders, employers, gangsters and the entire State Power with its injunctions, police terrorism and jails could dampen your ardor or undermine your fighting spirit. Witness, the heroic fight you are so actively engaged in to save the New York Needle Trades Unions.

No, not even the unbridled brutality of the corrupt Lewis machine can crush you in the United Mine Workers of America. Only may disfranchise you—may steal your union elections—may sell out your members to the operators in the wage scale negotiations, but your splendid achievements to date to save the United Mine Workers' Union herald a better day soon.

It is these and many other such achievements on your part that insure our Party's facing the present moment when we are beset with difficulties on all sides, with unshaken confidence as to the outcome, as to the future.

Let us close our ranks. Let us unify our forces and rally behind the Central Executive Committee to build the Party. Let us double our membership.

FORWARD TO MASS WORK.

Our watchwords—unify all our ranks—full support to the Central Executive Committee—and forward to mass work.

Every member in his place! Every member on the job for the Party for Communism, for the victory of the working class.

Comrades! Let us go forward to put the fullest life into the last words of our dead leader, Comrade Ruthenberg:

"Tell the Comrades to close their ranks—to build the Party. The American working class under the leadership of our Party and the Comintern will win. Let's fight on."

LET US FIGHT ON—WITH SERRIED RANKS, MORE UNITY AND MORE DETERMINATION THAN EVER BEFORE AND WE WILL WIN.

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY.

DETROIT THROWING ALL ITS FORCES INTO RUTHENBERG MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

CHICAGO, Ill., March 28.—District Organizer Baker of Detroit, has informed the national office of the Workers (Communist) Party of America that in his district the Ruthenberg recruiting campaign is getting ahead with full speed.

Special arrangements are being made by Baker to utilize the Ruthenberg movie for the Party drive. The first showing of this remarkable film is ready for the city of Detroit, will be for party members only, and on presentation of membership cards.

Increase Activity.

Baker feels confident that thru the drive, the entire party spirit of the district will be improved and the members will be enthused and all party activities increased. There is already noticeable an increase in dues payments for the district.

Recent weeks have seen a steady influx of new members thruout the district. This influx has continued now for five months but it has been especially noticeable since the death of Comrade Ruthenberg.

Judge Says Ford Trial Must Go On To the Finish

ifornia. He helped to redraft a new workman's compensation act for the state, he said, and defended it successfully in the courts. From 1915 to 1917, Sapiro said he practiced law in San Francisco.

"What was your first experience in cooperative marketing?"

Follower of Weinstock

"The first I heard of cooperative market was in 1908," said Sapiro, telling of a farmers' meeting near Stockton, Calif. He became a follower of Col. Horace Weinstock, later California state director of agriculture.

"Weinstock had quite a library and I read it, particularly everything I could get on agriculture credits and marketing," Sapiro added. He spaced his replies with smiles.

Organized Chicken Raisers

When Weinstock took office as farm director, the witness said he went along as assistant. This brought him into direct contact with farmers and growers. At last, in 1916, he said, he incorporated the poultry dealers of California. This was the first of his cooperatives.

Senator James A. Reed (D) of Missouri, chief of Ford's counsel, watched the witness, and objected particularly to testimony as to his anxiety to fight in the Great War. Sapiro was in an artillery company at Tacoma, Washington, when the armistice came.

A General Organizer

After the war, Sapiro said he organized fruit growers, bean growers, tomato growers and dairymen in California. In 1919 he said, his cooperative movement spread beyond the limits of California. The first step was to Oregon, he said, to organize pinto growers, then to the Washington wheat growers.

Idaho was next and then he jumped across the nation to Mississippi where staple cotton growers wanted to organize. In rapid succession, Sapiro named North Carolina, Texas, Georgia, and South Carolina where he organized cotton growers.

Tobacco and Wheat

The first tobacco cooperative was organized in Virginia in 1921, he said. The next was Kentucky. At the same time he organized wheat associations in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, North Dakota, Nebraska and Colorado. Then he organized burley tobacco associations in Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana.

Into Canada

His first venture outside the United States was to "handle dairy and fruit problems in 1922" in the Canadian Province of Ontario. He went, he said, at the invitation of the minister of agriculture. He also organized wheat growers in the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. In 1922 and 1923 the witness said he organized potato growers in Maine, Minnesota, Colorado and Idaho. In early 1924 he helped organize wheat growers in Indiana.

EMPLOYERS OLD AGE PENSION EXPOSED AS VALUELESS FOR THE WORKERS' NEEDS

WASHINGTON, March 28 (FP).—In its weekly news service the American Federation of Labor publishes conspicuously the evidence gathered by the Pennsylvania Old Age Pensions Commission, showing that employers' pension schemes for workers are unsound.

"This pension system," says the Federation, "provides no guaranty of continuance of annuities to employees of the firm, as they are subject to withdrawal at the pleasure of the company.

"The commission's findings recall the recent collapse of the Morris Packing Co.'s old-age pension system when that concern was taken over by the Armour Packing Corporation. Several hundred Morris employes labored for years on a low-wage basis in the hope that they would be pensioned in their declining days. When the transfer was made, they failed to secure redress in the courts for this violation of an implied contract.

Borah Takes His Place with the Imperialist Foes of the Chinese Republic

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

AS the United States plunges toward actual war it openly declared against China, the lip service friends of subject peoples rapidly fall away. This always takes place. The present situation, not only with regard to China, but also Mexico and Nicaragua, is no exception.

* * *

It will be remembered that prior to the world war, Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, Ohio, had a reputation as a pacifist and liberal. Yet he became Woodrow Wilson's secretary of war, one of the worst jingoes of them all.

* * *

J. Mitchell Palmer, of Philadelphia, was a Quaker and pacifist, with a supposedly liberal twist of mind. But as Wilson's attorney general, he led a reign of terror, antedating the deposed Attorney General Daugherty as red baiter and radical hunter.

* * *

Now Senator William E. Borah joins the casualties including those turning against the Chinese masses. He strips himself of the last shreds of the anti-imperialist cloak that he has been wearing as a so-called friend of oppressed nations.

* * *

The stripping has been a gradual one for Borah. But it has, nevertheless, been effective.

* * *

He has continually urged the recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics. Recently when he was charged with having deserted his stand on this question, he reiterated that he has been recognition of the Soviet Union. The crucial test, however, occurred when Samuel Gompers, the late president of the American Federation, an enemy of the Workers' Republic, challenged Borah's stand. The open clash came at hearings held by the senate foreign relations committee, of which Borah is chairman. At the crucial moment, when Borah was expected to make an aggressive fight, he suddenly adjourned the hearings. His militancy on this question has gradually faded.

Borah's failure to take a definite and aggressive stand against the open intervention in Nicaragua is of more recent date. In speeches delivered on Tuesday at Utica and Syracuse, New York, he revealed himself more than ever as drifting closer and closer to an open stand with the imperialists. On the Nicaraguan issue he said:

"I object to the Nicaraguan situation not so much because our marines are there to protect life, but because we recognized the wrong individual."

That is about as deep as Borah's differences with imperialism go at the present time. Borah, in the same speech, declared that he had been campaigning for the republican party ever since the campaign for Blaine and Logan, way back in the last century, which means that he claims to have always been a good republican. Borah has been an upholder of the republican party during all the time that it has been the political spokesman of the developing American imperialist empire. He has never broken with it.

At Utica Borah declared that, "I think he (Cal Coolidge) is entitled to the nomination (for re-election as Senator here in 1928) and will have it if he wants it." Borah knows Coolidge wants it.

* * *

To support Coolidge in the United States is to support his creature, Diaz, in Nicaragua, of the imperialism that keeps Coolidge in the White House. This exposes how sincere Borah is in lending lip service to Sacasa, the opponent of Diaz. This is the Borah that contents himself with a speech in the senate on the "legality" of dollar diplomacy's aggressions in Central America, as if robbery could be committed "legally."

* * *

Another shred of large proportions was torn from Borah's anti-imperialist garments when he surrendered to the administration in its refusal to permit him to go to Mexico with other members of the senate foreign relations committee and investigate conditions there for themselves.

* * *

Senator Borah at least made on effort to get into Hayti, forcing the local stool pigeons of the Dollar Kings to keep him out. Not so, Senator Borah. At this time when Coolidge and Kellogg are trying to explain mysterious letters sent to the enemies of the Mexican workers, promising American aid and sympathy in support of any uprising against the Mexican government, Borah is unstable in New York making speeches that are favorable if anything to administration policies. The least that could be expected from Borah would be on immediate investigation of these letters and a strenuous demand that they be made public so that the workers and farmers of the nation could get a look at them and decide for themselves whether they are forgeries. But Borah has lost his zeal for open diplomacy. He winks both his eyes at secret, dollar diplomacy.

But it is in his latest statement on the Chinese situation, that Borah stands stark naked as an imperialist ally. No longer he parades as an anti-imperialist politician, as "the friend" of oppressed peoples and subject nations. Wall Street may be proud of the chairman of the senate foreign relations committee who says:

"The United States government is not seeking the lives of its citizens there (in China); the government has gone no further and will continue to protect its citizens until the spirit of the revolution has passed away."

No protest here against the wanton murder of 7,000 defenseless men, women and children at Shanghai. No voice raised against the assassin's aerial attack on the quiet villages of Bias Bay, under the shallow pretense that they were the abodes of pirates. No indignation at the slaughter of workers in Shanghai, both by native Chinese exploiters and alien imperialist soldiers who now number approximately 20,000.

* * *

One American has met his death at Nanking. It is shown that his slayers were the Shantung allies of the United States, France and other nations that continue as invaders in China. But Borah has closed his eyes to the actual situation. He wears the goggles of Wall Street and beholds the situation in China as presented to him by the gifted propagandists of Dollar Diplomacy.

* * *

All that is necessary now is for J. Pierpont Morgan to step forward and pin Dollar Diplomacy's most famed decoration, "The Double-Cross of Gold," on Borah's breast, heaving with love and admiration at the achievements of the armed fists, the army and navy, in crucifying helpless peoples. Yet, even without this decoration, Borah is now branded.

What Russia is Doing About Homeless Children

By Our Own Moscow Correspondent, WILLIAM F. KRUSE.

There are two lines of activity directed towards coping with the problem of the not more than 125,000 homeless children, and the approximately 800,000 in homes and institutions of various sorts. One is in the hands of the state organs directly, and the other is conducted by various social organizations, by trade unions, by the Young Communist League, by the Young Pioneers (Communist Children's Movement), and especially by a voluntary membership society of about two million members, the "Friends of the Children." All of the activities of all of these organs are of course closely interwoven and co-ordinated, for here certainly the state does not stand over and above the social organs of the working class.

Voluntary Workers.

It has already been pointed out that about 60 million rubles a year are spent in liquidating this post-war and post-famine evil. Most of this is furnished and spent by the various branches of the government. It may be well, though, to outline first the social units and their work in collaboration with the official agencies. The "Friends of the Children" is a great voluntary society of the type of "International Red Aid," "Society for Combatting Illiteracy," etc., in which the masses of Russian workers who are not Communist Party members, are actively engaged in political organizational life.

These members pay about 15 kopeks per month in dues, and thereby help maintain some of the childrens' homes, labor communes, night shelters, trade schools, etc.

In addition many trade unions are directly connected as "patrons" over certain homes, donating funds for special clothing, holidays, gymnastic exercises, etc., and the children from these homes in turn frequently visit the union meeting, give little entertainment programs, etc. The railroad workers in particular have provided very extensively for the salvaging of the young "tramps" with whom they come into specially close contact.

The "Friends of the Children" publish a magazine, run lotteries to raise funds, and employ specially qualified agents who go about among the young waifs to seek to persuade them to abandon their vagabondege in favor of the social arrangements at their disposal. The Young Pioneers, children themselves, do very valuable work in getting bold of the younger waifs, in uncovering cases of mistreatment of children in which connection they teach the youngest child what its rights are and help him maintain them.

The constant friendly influence of the spic-and-span young Communist children is one of the most powerful means of drawing hundreds of children off the streets. Hand in hand with their government the workers, young and old, are exerting all energy to cope with this big and complicated problem.

Activity of Soviet Government.

The programme for dealing with these youngsters was laid down in the decree of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee of the Soviets on March 8th, 1926, and on the basis of this decree the following measures are now being pursued by the Soviet authorities:

1) Help the children-set back to parents or relatives.

2) Place these children with working-class families, helping such families materially to care for them. (I have seen many such children now living as members of Russian families, and they share every advantage open to the children of that family).

3) Placing the children in institutions run by the "Department for the Protection of Mother and Child." 4) Placing the children in various children's institutions run directly by local government.

5) Placing them in hospitals and medical institutions.

6) Placing them in industrial and agricultural productive enterprises.

7) Material aid to children in their own homes.

8) Placing them in apprenticeship, trade schools, handicraft artels.

9) General state guardianship over all children so aided.

Spend Ten Times Over U. S.

At present the Soviet Government is spending 46 million roubles a year directly, to which must be added 9 million spent by individual unions, voluntary societies, etc.; and other items on the medical budgets which bring the total up to about 60 million roubles a year.

The present annual appropriation available to spend through the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, amounts to $1,240,000 provided it is matched by about an equal sum from the various states—less than one-tenth of what is being spent in the Soviet Union, and yet the whole appropriation is not used because some states refuse to participate.

Since the Children's Bureau was first started, its appropriation amounted to $25,640—less than 1% of what is devoted to the same item by the Young Workers' republic. I have been able to find no record of appropriations for those 10,000 Porto-Rican "besprizhorny"—but plenty has been spent there on bullets for the U. S. Marines.

There are more than 3,000 children's homes, colonies, schools and other institutions, in which 17,327 teachers and attendants look after 236,051 children. 55% are children of peasants, workers 29% and soldiers and sailors 20%. The Commissariat of Education Weekly), while out-relief is being given to 175,000 additional children.

During the next three years, according to government plans, a "Lenin Memorial Fund" of 100 million roubles will be devoted to the special task of wiping out the last traces of child homelessness. Since the problem of vocational guidance is the greatest, 590 new working communes are being planned with an equipment that is to cost'11 million roubles.

The Situation in Moscow.

The capitalist press charges that there is a homeless army of 65,000 children in Moscow, with room in the institutions for only 2,410; that 5,025 were assigned to these institutions by the authorities and that half of these have escaped. Not a single one of these figures is anywhere near the truth.

Below we give a list of the institutions in the Moscow gubernia and the number of children harbored in them. I am told that there are not more than between 500 and 1,000 children, practically none of them native to Moscow, encountered on the streets, and they are being gathered one by one, not by the police, but by conscientious volunteer and professional workers among these children.

The official census taken recently will give us accurate data. In the year from October, 1925 to October, 1926, there were 2,640 dependent and 612 delinquent children placed into Moscow institutions, a total of 3,252.

Boys Will Run Away.

As far as runaways go, of course, there are runaways, but the number is nowhere near that indicated. And running-away does not mean here going to live on their own, as the children in the states, climbing down leader pipes and crawling over walls studded with steel pickets and jagged broken glass bottles.

Thus far not a single one of the homes and other institutions locks the children in or takes any measures to hinder their going if they wish. An essential factor of the treatment these youngsters receive is to convince them that they are not being shut off from their fellow-workers, that they are not being kept against their will as though they were criminals.

Money For Clothes.

In one home I visited I found that all the boys, about 50, had been furnished work of one sort or another outside the home and that they kept the wages after paying (very low board) to do with as they pleased. These wages did not go, as might be supposed, for drink and dissipation,—the first possession the boys here invested in was a pair of fine shiny new "goloshes," and after that came the wide-pegged riding trousers now considered in Russian youth as one the acme of smart dressing. So running away here simply means the young vagabond holds out a little longer against the social influences that surround him and that are bent on enrolling him as a useful member of proletarian society.

Discuss Compulsion.

This month the first home for "brezprezhorni" at which any compulsion is to be introduced will be opened in Moscow. This home will be particularly well equipped, with gymnasium, manual training school, specially qualified teachers, etc., to make it so attractive that if possible the boys (who have run away from other institutions in the past before being sent here) will not want to run away—but if they do want to go will be prevented by force.

This is arousing considerable discussion, A. V. Lunacharsky, Commissar of Education, being opposed to the fact that so mild a method, which so distantly resembles, the police method of dealing with the problem, should arouse opposition of this kind. In my opinion it would be impossible is this fairy tale of an Arctic exile, and all the other tales of "children's hard labor prisons."

In Moscow there are about 200 institutions harboring about 25,000 children. About 80% of them came from outside of the gubernia during the great migration attending the war and famine.

The Teachers' Case

By JOSEPH KALAR.

Teachers are in absolute swinish slavery. Their personalities, and personality as the keynote of successful teaching, are ignored by the politicians who formulate the educational code. Teaching as a machine, a curious and humorous mechanical contrivance to enlighten the pupils in mathematics, reading, writing, geography, and the like. That he be able to perform his duties in a mechanical way is the first requisite. God help him if he attempts to use his own head! God help him if he tries to do any real cultural work, any work of real significance! He is only a machine, an automaton—and must perform as such, and if he steps outside of his immediate duties he is dealt with as we deal with a rusty machine, he is oiled back into shape, the oil in this case being threats.

In the first place teachers are not chosen for their real innate intelligence, for their personalities, for their ability to teach. Normal School Training is the mill from which all perfect teachers come! A County Superintendent of Schools in Minnesota sent a form letter to all of her dutiful slaves in which, among other things, she said, "I had to get rid of the best teacher I had in the county because she didn't know the proper training (i. e. the proper scrap of paper)." Get that! The best teacher she had! And what in this wonderful normal school training that will convert the most saur of old maids into a perfect teacher? High talk about eyespan, curves, poetry study (no wonder all school children hate poetry!), technique, observation—stuff that has no more actual relation to teaching than Cal Coolidge has intelligence. The other words a teacher that would frighten and revolt any child by the severity of her physiognomy, a teacher that looks upon children as brats, and very unruly brats, is yet a one hundred percent teacher because she has mastered (?) the purely mechanical aspects of education.

After graduating from a normal school a teacher is castrated of all original intelligence, all personality, all humanity. He is a machine.

In normal school he is forced to attend a period set aside for chapel. During this period he must join his voice with the rest in singing HOLY, HOLY, HOLY, and must sit mute and submissive through a tirade of pious vomit from some heavenly reverend.

The scrap of paper he receives on graduation presumably fits him for the arduous moulding of the brats in his charge into his own image. And what is this image? Let me tell you: the poetry of Eddie Guest, Cal Coolidge, the Stars and Stripes, the close relationship between the navy and the U. S. A. and God, white supremacy, antiered Longfellow, the Saturday Evening Post—that is the image in which, O Worker, your child shall be moulded.

His slavery, upon beginning to teach, is apparent to everyone except himself. He is told what to teach, how to live, how to love, what to read, what to believe, what church is especially ordained by God! For instance: if a teacher were so rash as to tell his pupils that the World War was hardly fought for democracy, and that the Germans were not rapers of crippled children, he would go on the mat. Not so long ago during National Education Week he was even told to tell his pupils all about the Red Menace (unexplicable definition), the Communist threat to religion, morals, etc.! That was National Education Week!

A very good friend of mine, possibly the only intelligent teacher I have yet met, once was so indiscreet as to read part of the "STORY OF EARL" Earl Sandsburg to his pupils. Almost immediately a colossal caricature of woman rushed to the board and told them that he was reading indecent literature. She read an extract that proved nothing of the sort, and then said with, "There is a lot more dirty stuff here, but I couldn't read it before all you men!!!"

We have the Anti-Evolution Bills. Science is a hated word among the plutocrats that control the educational system. New discoveries in the "spiritual" line of science are usually taught a century after they have been common knowledge everywhere. In certain rural communities a teacher has to teach Sunday School (and most of them are glad to)—or get out.

All of the history the teachers is a subtle propaganda for race and class hatred. Many pupils, upon graduating, find themselves in possession of an inexplicable revulsion for the English people. Many of them have never seen a real Englishman, and yet they have that prejudice.

The teachers are expected to teach that the Bolsheviks are a menace to civilisation, that they are aiming to destroy the very foundations of our government. Very well. But the teachers are not permitted to go into any detail concerning this chimerical foundation of our government, because if they did, the pupils would welcome the Red Menace!

A teacher is not rated according to ability or intelligence. There are those poor pitied teachers who possess only a second grade certificate, there is the middle class, or those possessing a first grade certificate, and the elite, the professional first class. I have known a teacher who had only a limited Second Grade (or Class) certificate, and yet she was a perfect, if not over intelligent teacher. She had more ability than that belongs to the elite, and he is worthless. Yet the former receives $70 a month and the latter about $150.

When such importance is placed on a mere scrap of paper, is it any wonder that our children grow up into Babbitts, into lynchers of the I. W. W., burners of Negroes, staunch upholders of the very class that exploits and brutalizes them?

* * *

The very irony of it is that very few teachers care to teach evolution or know anything about it, very few teachers are class conscious, or intelligent. But what can you expect? To be able to teach they had to go through the whole educational cesspool, and very few people are able to get through the cesspool without retaining a little of the odor. By the time they had the scrap of paper that gave them legal rights to teach they had become willing, unconscious slaves of the politicians who run the educational system.

The Letter-Box

Remember Ruthenberg in Alabama.

Editor, Daily Worker:—I have read of the "passing on" of my friend and comrade C. E. Ruthenberg. We have had many things in common—yes.

Both of us joined the socialist party the same time. Both of us were disciples of good old Robert Bandlow—at that time editor of the Cleveland Citizen—an idealist, a dreamer of the things to come. Many a time did we stand in wrapt attention listening to Max Hays explain his theories of socialism at the Square in Cleveland.

Soon young Ruthenberg (we called him Ruthy then) himself essayed the platform and often did I have the pleasure to introduce him to the audience from the box. I never became a speaker as so many of the boys did who "joined" at that time.

We met and had a good talk for the last time in some Jewish hall on E. 55th St., near Central Ave. in Cleveland—the tall, handsome, frail looking boy of 1909 had become a rather corpulent man. Among other things I remarked on his physical condition—he smiled that wry indulgent smile.

Fighting Flood and Famine in China to Save Millions

(By Nationalist News Agency).

HANKOW, China., Feb. 20 (By Mail).—It is not only enemy armies that the nationalist forces of China are fighting and defeating today, but a number, even greater enemy—flood and famine. Nationalist China is putting up defenses in Central China today that will cheat the floods on the Yangtze of ten million victims.

They came just in time last fall. Providentially, the peasants say. "One month later, and we should have been lost," the farmers tell you as they work feverishly under the supervision of the new Hupeh Dyke Commission of the Nationalist Government to repair the unprecedented breaks in the dykes caused by last year's torrents, which left the Yangtze dyke system in such a battered state that, it seemed, nothing but a miracle could prevent whoissale famine in 1927.

No Urging Needed

The Nationalist Government today is urging the peasants of Hupeh on, but their words are scarcely necessary. Seventy thousand peasants are working like mad men. They know, better than anyone can tell them, what is at stake. A chance of saving their homes and their very lives was offered them when the Kuomintang forces came last fall. They need no urging to help in the work of repairing the broken dykes.

Last year there was the worst flood in Central China has seen in fifty years. The waters came raging down from the uplands, down the Yangtze and the Han, and the dykes, which for thirty years have been neglected by the various warlords who had held the region, broke in a score of places. Thousands of acres of farm lands were under water. Crops were ruined. Hundreds died in the floods or, later, of starvation. And when in the early fall, the water subsided and the people came back to their land, they looked with dismay at the battered dykes, convinced that with the rising of the waters the next summer, nothing could save them.

No Help From Wu Pei-fu

These really seemed no hope for the peasants late last summer. To save Hupeh, repairs on a large scale, both organized labor and expert supervision were needed. It meant money, and the peasants were penniless.

Late last summer, Wu Pei-fu seemed secure in Hankow. And the peasants knew they could look for no help from him and his subordinate generals in the matter of dykes. Wu had watched last year's flood, as he had watched previous floods, without lifting a finger. All the money he could raise went into his armies. For years, the dykes had been neglected.

It is no wonder, then, that the peasants look upon the coming of the Nationalist armies to Hankow as a miracle. It meant that immediately money and men were thrown into the bottle against the coming of the floods. Labor, however, it was a part of the Nationalist plan. The Kuomintang knew in advance all about last year's breaks in the Yangtze dykes. They knew that disaster loomed ahead for the people of Hupeh and Hunan. This was one of the things that urged the armies on. Every day on the way, the leaders knew, meant a day lost on necessary work of repair. Ten million people were in danger of famine.

No Time Is Lost

When the Hankow region was finally taken last fall, no time was lost. Immediately a commission was formed, the Hupeh Dyke Commission, with Sung Ching-ling, head of the Ministry of Communications, Mr. Sun Fe, the head of the Ministry Finance, Mr. T. V. Soong, and General Chang Fa-kwei. There was a hasty survey of the damage from last year's flood, and a budget. Three and a half millions were needed immediately to mend the dykes sufficiently to prevent the flooding this year of half the province, including the Wuhan cities, Hankow, Wuchang and Hangang. Mr. Soong raised the money, and the work began. Actual supervision was placed in the hands of Mr. Wang Chi, a local Hupeh man, familiar with dyke problems. Under him were placed Chinese engineers. Recently, a foreign engineer, Mr. O. J. Todd, who has been in charge of engineering work for the International Famine Relief Commission, was employed as supervising engineer.

"It is a close race, this race against flood and famine," said Mr. Sun Fo in an interview yesterday, "but we believe we will win. We have started late, but we are working overtime. We must erect temporary barricades before the water comes. Half the province is at stake and the lives of ten million people."

Save Rich Rice District.

The region that is to be saved is the rich rice-producing district along the Yangtze, above Hankow, and along the Han, the rivar that enters the Yangtze at Hankow, and that is the city's name.

There are two places which are being given particular attention. Above the city on the Han, last year's torrents broke thru the dykes built, thirty years ago by the Viceroy Chang Chi-tung. It is this break that threatens the city of Hankow. The second bad break is at the Chieh Wan Dyke, above Hankow on the Yangtze, where repairs, costing $622.000. are under way. Twenty thousand peasants are on the job at that point.

The whole repair job this year will cost approximately three and a half millions. The work will be done by local, peasant labor, working at very low pay, twenty cents a day, just enough for food. It is because the peasants and willagee know what is at stake that it is possible to do the repairs for three and a half millions. Mr. Sun explained yesterday. The flood last year left the dykes in an appalling condition. There are a score or more places that must be repaired.

70,000 Volunteers On The Job

But the call for labor has had an immediate response. Seventy thousand volunteers are now working in frenzied haste, knowing that the time is short between now and the coming of the floods. Thirty thousand more are to be called, Mr. Sun Fo stated yesterday, and they will be gathered in a day.

"But even if we beat the floods, Hupeh will not be safe from the threat of famine," he stated. "These repairs are purely temporary makeshifts. The problem of floods along the Yangtze and the Han cannot be adequately solved until many times three and a half millions are spent. It involves work on a gigantic scale, the regulation of the whole Yangtze river system.

"But the present repairs will give us a breathing spell. The dykes will be fixed so that they will hold until we can start work on the big plan. These repairs should have been done long ago. The situation has been becoming more and more acute. The peasants are right in saying we came just in time. This year would have meant a disaster on such a scale that it challenges comprehension."

Floods Due to Neglect

When asked the cause of the disastrous flood of last year, Mr. Sun Fo said that it was partly the unusual torrent of water that came down from the uplands, but it was partly due to neglect. Nothing has been done on these important dykes for years, except local tinkering by the desperate peasants. Adequate repair meant money and organization, and all the money and organization of the former tupuns of Hupeh and Hunan have gone into armies. So it is by year with the dykes upon which the lives of the peasants depend, were allowed to fall into worse disrepair.

"This apparently meant nothing to the warlords," said Mr. Sun Fo, "But it means a great deal to the Kuomintang. Down in Canton last year, we knew that unless we could defeat the warlords' armies in Hankow as a miracle. It meant that immediately money and men were thrown into the bottle against the coming of the floods. Labor, however, it was a part of the Nationalist plan. The Kuomintang knew in advance all about last year's breaks in the Yangtze dykes. They knew that disaster loomed ahead for the people of Hupeh and Hunan. When the Hankow region was finally taken last fall, no time was lost. Immediately a commission was formed, the Hupeh Dyke Commission, with Sung Ching-ling, head of the Ministry of Communications, Mr. Sun Fe, the head of the Ministry Finance, Mr. T. V. Soong, and General Chang Fa-kwei. There was a hasty survey of the damage from last year's flood, and a budget. Three and a half millions were needed immediately to mend the dykes sufficiently to prevent the flooding this year of half the province, including the Wuhan cities, Hankow, Wuchang and Hangang. Mr. Soong raised the money, and the work began. Actual supervision was placed in the hands of Mr. Wang Chi, a local Hupeh man, familiar with dyke problems. Under him were placed Chinese engineers. Recently, a foreign engineer, Mr. O. J. Todd, who has been in charge of engineering work for the International Famine Relief Commission, was employed as supervising engineer.

"It is a close race, this race against flood and famine," said Mr. Sun Fo in an interview yesterday, "but we believe we will win. We have started late, but we are working overtime. We must erect temporary barricades before the water comes. Half the province is at stake and the lives of ten million people."

Save Rich Rice District.

The region that is to be saved is the rich rice-producing district along the Yangtze, above Hankow, and along the Han, the rivar that enters the Yangtze at Hankow, and that is the city's name.

There are two places which are being given particular attention. Above the city on the Han, last year's torrents broke thru the dykes built, thirty years ago by the Viceroy Chang Chi-tung. It is this break that threatens the city of Hankow. The second bad break is at the Chieh Wan Dyke, above Hankow on the Yangtze, where repairs, costing $622.000. are under way. Twenty

Michael Gold's 'Fiesta' Has In Hortense Alden Actress Worthy of It

"Fiesta" the drama of Mexico by Michael Gold, and the third production of the New Playwrights Theatre, bound to be unusually large and intercsting cast. Notable among the younger players in it, is Hortense Alden, who enacts the role of Guadalupe, a young orphan, a victim of the Mexican revolution.

Miss Alden has had a long and varied stage experience. Among the recent productions in which she has appeared are "Creoles" with Richard Bennett, "Ghosts," by the Actor's Theatre, "Arabesque" the Norman Bel Geddes presentation, and numerous roles with the Theatre Guild.

Although Miss Alden accepts the protection of the dominant male in "Fiesta," in real life, she is by her own confession a "feminist."

"I am very happy," she admits, "to be living in a generation, in which women have come into their own. That is as much true of the commercial world as it is in the realm of arts. Certainly on the stage, the triumphs of women have been so numerous and so great that they have far eclipsed those of the men. And in recent years, some of the outstanding hits have been written by women.

"Woman, also, have contributed the large audiances for the more intelligent and thoughtful plays. They do not come to theatres with prepared, bored attitudes, and so appreciable of the new and the stirring."

"Fiesta" in which she will appear, opens at the 52nd Street Theatre. The DAILY WORKER has bought out the house for the week of April 11. Tickets are now on sale at the local office, 108 East 14th Street, Phone Stuyvesant 6584.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN PHILADELPHIA CAUSES STARVING TO JOIN ARMY

By ART SHIELDS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 28. —Unemployment has crept on Philadelphia before the city was aware. While business men were still talking prosperity the unemployed were finding work harder to obtain than at any time since the winter depression of 1920-21.

This big industrial community on the Delaware has perhaps been harder hit than any other manufacturing city in the nation, except Detroit.

Join The Army.

Visit the block on Arch Street, between the 15th and 16th and you can feel the pulse of the job market. Here you will find a string of employment offices and side by side with them the army and navy recruiting stations. Men turned down at the employment offices have flooded the recruiting stations.

Both army and navy are breaking enlistment records since the Armstice and both are beginning to restrict enlistments as they find their quotas exceeded.

Captain W. C. Carlan of the army gives unemployment as the reason for the rush. "Work in civilian life is harder to get, is the claim of many men applying for enlistment," he says. The same story is told by Commander Gordon W. Haines, in charge of the navy recruiting station.

Forrester B. Washington, chief of the Philadelphia branch of the Armstrong Association, a Negro welfare organization is another one who is in intimate touch with the ebb and flow of the job market.

Many Negroes Unemployed.

"More Negro workers are unemployed than in seven years," says Mr. Washington. It is worst for Negroes because there are so few occupations open to them in Philadelphia. Longshoreing and building trades work are their usual avenues of employment and building is at a slump. Their wives, seeking to help out, have flooded the domestic servant field. And wages already low there have fallen farther as wealthy women take advantage of the opportunity to reduce conditions."

Several reasons are given by labor men for the slackness of Philadelphia employment. There is, first of all, the general depression in the manufacturing industries that has put the textile industry on part time, with reduced working forces and slowed up the metal trades. And in addition, the ending of the Sesqui-centennial celebration and the finishing of the subway construction work, throwing thousands of laborers and mechanics off the jobs. Then comes the building drop. The orgy of speculative house building of the last few years has left housing a drag on the market.

Empty Houses.

Data on empty houses is given by Bernard J. Newman, director of the Philadelphia Housing Association, who has made a careful survey. He finds that 74% of recently constructed houses selling at $5,000 and under are unoccupied; 54% of houses of $5,000 to $6,000 and 48% of houses of $6,000 to $7,000.

DENVER WORKER CORRESPONDENT TELLS HOW THEY GET THE NEWS TO THE DAILY WORKER

By L. W. LANG

(Worker Correspondent).

Beginning with March 1, 1926 and ending with Feb. 28, 1927, the Workers' Correspondents of Denver have written a total of 64 articles for The DAILY WORKER and The Young Worker. If there are comrades in any other city that think they had more articles published than Denver let them speak up.

The writer is the literature agent for the Workers Party. He made an attempt to organize a group of Worker Correspondents last year composed of members of the Workers Party and Young Workers' League; and while the organization was by no perfected yet, the meetings were interesting and resulted in interesting a number of the comrades in the work.

Gets In The News.

The members were urged that whenever they had secured any information for an article for the press they should write it up and send it to the DAILY WORKER or Young Worker, but, in case they could not write the article they should at least see to it that the information was handed to the writer and he would send it in.

One of the members of the Y. W. L., H. Singer, has been continued enough to send in four or five articles to the Young Worker. He is to be commended because he does a lot of work for the Young Workers' League also.

Watches Articles.

Of the 64 articles appearing in print about one-half were in regard to lectures, entertainments, meetings, etc., held under the auspices of the Workers Party, while the other half were articles, or series, on industrial conditions of the workers and also on miscellaneous matters, but, of a nature to be of interest to the readers of The DAILY WORKER. Every issue is scanned very closely by the writer for articles that appear from Denver and every article is clipped and placed on a cardboard for record. Not only is a record kept in this way, but, at the end of the month when the organization requests a report of a Worker Correspondent all he has to do is to hold up the card for the past month which has the articles pasted on it and also states the number of articles for the month. By this way of reporting it is a constant reminder to the members that they ought to get busy in this work.

At every lecture and entertainment the writer always has a large display of literature and the correspondence records on cards are also displayed so that the workers and their friends attending the meetings have their attention called to the work as well as to The DAILY WORKER.

Old Man Writes.

One of the oldest correspondents in Denver is O. Inge Skjegstad (71) who has been stricken down with a paralytic stroke and for the past year has been in a hospital. He reads the Daily each day and is still very enthusiastic about the Correspondence work.

The writer being a member of the Window Cleaners' Union furnishes the local labor press with union news as well as news of interest about the Workers Party of Denver is doing. He is a delegate to the central labor body and in that way keeps in close touch with the conditions under which the workers have to live.

During the year of 1927 the writer intends to interest many more members of the party in the work of correspondence for the labor press.

The DAILY WORKER needs a right-on-the-job Worker Correspondent like this one in every city throughout the country. Are the other cities going to let Denver show more pep than they? Ed.

GILLETTE RAZOR COMPANY PROFITS ARE ABOUT EIGHTY THOUSAND PERCENT A YEAR

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Profits totaling $100,000,000 on an investment of $500a—that's the 25-year record of Gillette Safety Razor at the expense of self-shavers throughout the world. It means an average return of something like 80,000% a year. The owners have taken about $50,000,000 in cash dividends and have used the balance of the hoarded male's contributions to build up a $50,000,000 industry.

"From an original investment of $5,000," says Vice President Fahey, "the company has earned for its shareholders almost $100,000,000. The cost of its real estate, building, machinery and equipment—representing many millions of dollars—has always been paid from current funds and with no need of financing."

Will Cash In.

But getting their investment back 20,000 times over is just a beginning for Gillette stockholders. They survey the world of potential self-shavers and count each downy cheek as a potential source of gold. Says the vice president:

"The company's statistical department estimates the world market for Gillette razors at 900,000,000. The company has sold 70,000,000 razors, leaving a tremendous potentiality. The number of young men annually reaching the shaving age runs into millions; each of these individuals is a safety razor possibility. In addition there are the ladies who have become factors of no small importance in our company's distribution. The company has sold 3,500,000,000 blades. Today with its tremendous distribution through its agents, Gillette practically dominates the safety razor business of the world."

Big Profits.

The profits the last 5 years follow: Gillette Razor Profits after Ample Reserves for Taxes, Depreciation, etc.

1922	$7,602,939
1923	8,441,776
1924	10,122,473
1925	12,089,857
1926	13,311,412
Total	$51,568,457

Gillette affords an unusually clear picture of how wealth pours into the pockets of a few individuals who have pinched little of value in the venture. These excessive profits seem to take but a few pennies out of the individual consumer's pocket. The price of the commodity is low enough viewed by itself. But a thousand and one such commodities, sold under a trade mark popularized by millions of dollars of advertising, are enabling a small class to levy annual tribute on the world running into hundreds of millions of dollars.

BOSTON, March 28.—Boston's city council has started another red scare by asking Mayor Nichols and District Attorney Foley to hunt for distributers of Communist pamphlets among school children in two working class districts. Lithuanian Fascism Is Opposed By Milwaukee I. L. D. Mass Meeting

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 28. —A protest against the bloody reign of terror in Lithuania was raised at a mass meeting held in the Pyels Gemeinder Hall, under the auspices of the International Labor Defense, and a copy of the resolution adopted by the workers has been forwarded to the Lithuanian Embassy at Washington.

This resolution states that:

"Whereas, there is now in Lithuania a bloody terror, from which men, women and even children do not escape;

"And whereas, this terror is practiced upon workers, teachers, socialists, laborites, communists and trade-unionists;

"And whereas, the Lithuanian government is a fascisti, composed of rulers of the old czarist regime, and Polish landlords;

"And whereas, already scores have been tortured to death, and hundreds arrested and imprisoned;

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we demand this reign of terror be immediately stopped;

"And be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the ambassador at Washington, D. C., and to the press.

Resolution Committee,
International Labor Defense."

I. L. D. and I. W. W. Form Class-War Prisoners' Defense

By L. P. RINDALL.

(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — While Irishmen, supporters of the Free State and followers of DeValera, celebrated St. Patrick's day in this city, members of the I. L. D. and the I. W. W. held a conference concerning the welfare of the class war prisoners in general and in behalf of the eight Centralia victims in particular. The latter, victims of the American Legion and the lumber trust are now serving a 25 to 40 year sentence in the state penitentiary for the crime of defending themselves in their hall from murderous attacks by the world war "heroes" during the armistice parade in 1918 at Centralia, Washington.

To Hold Mass Meeting.

The conference decided to hold a large protest meeting on Sunday, April 24, at the Music Box Hall, 233 So. Broadway, under the joint auspices of the I. L. D. and the I. W. W. Tom Conner, formerly secretary of the General Defense at San Francisco, and one of Judge Busick's victims, was elected chairman of the meeting. Conner will be released from San Quentin, Calif., in the first part of April.

This joint action will stimulate the local defense activity, which has been very much hampered in the past due to the hostility between the two factions.

Gold and Lawson Join In Workers' Play Talk

Several hundred people joined in a spirited discussion following the symposium at the New Playwrights' Theatre, 52nd St. and 8th Ave., yesterday afternoon when Michael Gold, Edith Ellis, Romney Brent, and John Howard Lawson discussed the subject, "What kind of play best reflects American life?"

Gold, whose play "Fiesta," opens at the theatre on Wednesday, April 6, declared that the New Playwrights Theatre was a "transitional" theatre. "We are now only creating the beginnings of a workers' theatre; the process will be long and arduous."

John Howard Lawson, whose play, "Loud Speaker," is now being presented at the theatre, asserted that "in the final analysis the theatre must be 'theatrical'," and that "the elements of a good play must remain the conflict of emotions."

"At the same time," declared Lawson, "should a good workers' drama be offered us we would take it without hesitation."

The New Playwrights Theatre opened early in March with the object of providing young American playwrights an opportunity for experimenting in the newer dramatic forms.

Post-War Conditions Brot About Housing Situation; Tenants Enemies Exposed

"What and who brought about the present housing situation?" is the question answered in today's article by Will de Kalb, DAILY WORKER housing investigator. In the subsequent articles in the series, the proof of the existence of a housing shortage will be revealed, the danger of the slums to the health and morals of the inhabitants will be described, and the methods by which the situation is being met will be cited.

By WILL DE KALB.

That a crime has been committed against the public weal has been proved by previous articles in this series. Now the question of paramount importance is, "Who and who caused the housing shortage?"

After the war, the American expeditionary forces were demobilized in and near New York. This brought many new prospective tenants into the clutches of the landlord. Post-war depression made it difficult for people to get jobs elsewhere, so they flocked to New York, "wonder city of the world," as it has been press-agented. Workers in foreign countries found the rehabilitation period too difficult to live in, since only the wealthy were being rehabilitated, so they emigrated to America, were admitted through Ellis Island and they settled in New York. Conditions became unbearable down on the farm, so many countryfolk left their homesteads and came to the big city. All in all, New York became a lodestone that attracted all classes and races of people, all anxious to work, make a living, and live good, normal and productive lives.

Landlords Reorganize.

But the landlords sensed this new demand for rooms. They knew that the line of applicants would increase, instead of diminish. He saw his chance. He re-organized his dying organizations. He started new ones. Rents were raised. Tenants, who could not be raised high enough, were evicted. No repairs were ever to bring a fresco to the brow of an all-powerful landlord. His were the legislator and the jurist. All he had to do was gather in the coin.

Then the era of rent-gouging began. In the coldest nights of winter, families were forced on the streets, with all their possessions, because they could not meet an additional raise. People starved to pay the landlord. As many as a dozen lived in one room. Two and three families occupied one three-room apartment, meant only for one. Boarders were taken in, in addition to the family, and morals were thrown by the board. People lived in squalor and filth that almost belied the fact that this is the twentieth century.

Legislators Revenge.

Then the emergency rent laws, after much agitation, were passed. The landlords' organizations had a powerful lobby that made days of debate necessary before the bill received a majority. Many law-makers did not attend the sessions so that they would not have to declare themselves.

But the public demanded relief. The law-makers knew that their chances for re-election were not worth anything if they did not remedy the housing situation. The emergency rent laws were passed and the rent-gouging activities of the landlords were curbed.

Laws Curb Gougers.

The landlord could gouge almost as much as ever, though. Only, if he raised the rent too high, the tenant could fight him in court. He also had to "improve" the flat a little before he could raise beyond the limit fixed by law. And if a judge who had political aspirations was sitting on the bench, he occasionally turned down the graft offered by the landlords' organization, and decided against him. So the landlord had to watch his step. But always his organizations were behind him, fighting for him, conniving new ways to beat the tenants, and bombarding with legal experts the new ways and means of breaking the law.

Who are the men, and organizations who brought about the housing situation? Who are the men who conspired for the high rents paid by the workers oven today? Right at the outset, I would mention Stewart Browne, president of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, and untiring fighter for the "rights" of the landlord. For the past ten years, Browne has headed his organization, and it is freely admitted that there is none who can succeed him.

Browne, The Lobbyist.

At every session of the legislature, Browne is to be found, lobbying, talking, pleading, conniving, to get laws passed and quashed, all to the favor and for the benefit of the landlord. Browne has as his lieutenants Charles W. Eldt and Ernest N. Adler, two of the cleverest realtors in the city. A polished tongue-orator, it is he who sliders the tenant's side of the question.

The "big-moneyed" gang, however, is the Real Estate Board of New York. It is this organization, to which many of the builders are affiliated, which brought influence to bear so that only less than one per cent of the new buildings in Manhattan, and two per cent in the Bronx and Brooklyn, rented for less than $12.50 a room. Headed by Lawrence W. Elliman, this organization is next in importance to the United, in the score of machinations against the rent-payer.

Other Organizations.

Other organizations add individuals include H. M. Decker, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; S. C. Loeb, president of the Long Island Real Estate Board; Charles Partridge, president of the Real Estate Board of Brooklyn, the Real Estate Board of the Bronx, the Real Estate Board of Staten Island, and the Real Estate Owners' Protective Association, an organization that guarantees to employ legal trickery to enable a landlord to continue his gouging policies.

And the tenants have other enemies, in their own camp. There is former alderman, Louis Zeltzer, a leader in the East Side Board of Trade, who denies the existence of slums, and opposes legislation that would do away with them. There is Harry Schlacht, president of the Downtown Chamber of Commerce, who has opposed legislation to curb the rent-gouging of landlords in the poorer districts.

Vicious Enemies.

Most vicious of all, though, are Senator Reiburn and Assemblyman Geragan, from Manhattan, who were the leading opponents to the emergency rent laws, attacking them as "class legislation." They said they were proposed to benefit one class at the expense of the other. But the politicians would not grant that the laws are made for the benefit of the majority of the people. They were frank and blunt, and admitted that laws are made for the moneyed class.

To make their effrontery more acceptable to their real estate friends, the assemblyman, with the endorsement of the senator, introduced a bill into the house to protect the property

Rev. Dr. Williams Was Not "One of the Best Friends That China Has Ever Had"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE Rev. Dr. A. Edwin Kelgwin, pastor of the West End Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, devoted his Sunday sermon to the death of the Rev. Dr John E. Williams, the lone American killed in the much exploited "massacre" that was supposed to have taken place last Thursday when the People's Army took over Nanking. In fact tots "massacre" took place only on the pages of the world imperialist press.

The Rev. Dr. Kelgwin is reported to have said that, "The man who shot to death the Rev. Dr. John E Williams, Vice President of Nanking University, shot one of the best friends China ever had."

The New York Times publishes more than a column report of the sermon. It is difficult to discover from this report how Williams had befriended the Chinese people. No attempt is made to differentiate between him and other missionaries, to show that he did not also try to keep the eyes of the Chinese workers and peasants on a promised heppy futurs in the sky, while the profiteers were going thru their pockets, picking them clean of the necessary wherewithal for providing food, clothing and shelter on earth.

In fact the sermon was conclusive testimony proving that Williams was an excellent agent of imperialism, the kind that Cecil Rhodes was glad to invite into South Africa to make native labor feel content under the worst conditions imposed on them in the diamond mines owned by Britain's ruthless capitalist overlord.

It was Sir Frederick Lugard, one of England's foremost "empire builders," who wrote in 1906 eulogising the part played consciously or unconsciously by missionaries in preparing the way for capitalist development of the so-called "backward" elements among the peoples of the earth. Sir Frederick spoke especially of the "heathen" of South Africa, but what he had to say is equally applicable to similar efforts in China. It is applicable to Williams. Sir Frederick said:

"There is one agency which has done more, perhaps, than any other for the development of British possessions. This is the pioneer work of the missionaries—of such men as Livingstone and Moffatt. I put aside the spiritual aspect of such work, and am now looking at its economic advantages to a State.

"Missionaries are usually active agents in teaching industrial work among the natives and in creating within them new habits and desires, all of which tend to the increase of commerce. In missionary enterprises of today the necessity of teaching the native some indnstry whereby he can obtain his living after conversion, is more and more recognized.

"I feel convinced that that government is wise that will foster and encourage missionary effort for the salve, not only of spiritual advantages, but also of temporal.

Under those conditions the best type of missionary is one who has two qualities:

First. He does not interfere with or question the nature of the profit social system that he serves, especially as it exploits the subject peoples with whom he comes directly in contact.

Second. He does not concern himself with the politics of the government to which he gives his allegiance. In other words, he is perfectly servile, christianlike in his non-resistance, with hands clasped meekly and eyes turned solemnly heavenward.

If what the Rev. Dr. Kelgwin said is to be believed then the Rev. Dr Williams was such a missionary of imperialism. Kelgwin said:

First, "Williams never allowed himself to be entangled in the commercial structure in China."

Imperialism could not want a more abject slave.

China's whole struggle grows out of the efforts of other nations to dominate it politically, in order that the commercial interests of the various capitalist states may be subjugated satisfactorily.

According to his friend Kelgwin, whose church provided Williams with the necessary funds to carry on his "work" in the Orient, Williams had nothing to say about the bludgeoning of China by "The Powers" these many years. The opium war was to him a matter of no concern. The ruthless suppression of the so-called "Boxer Uprising" concerned somebody else. If the bayonets of the imperialist soldiers dripped the blood of the Chinese workers, Williams evidently felt his hands were clean because he turned his face the other way. It was not for him to question the police power of the capitalist state

Similarly, Williams held aloof, it is claimed, from the "commercial structure." Business might be a sordid affair. But Williams would not say so. Women and children might be enslaved in industry, crushed in the capitalist industrial machine. Williams did not allow himself to become "entangled." The striking Shanghai textile workers might be slaughtered in the streets. But that was no concern to the Reversnd Doctor, except that he might offer up a prayer to the christian god, in whose name the murders were originally committed, the military and naval forces being well supplied with godfearing chnplains.

Thus Williams was the best type of tool of imperialism in the Orient. He helped give the looting of the handit profiteers a respectable face that even fooled some Chinese workers and peasants.

It is no more possible to be neutral in the class struggle in Shanghai, Nanking or Canton, than it is to institute "class peace" in New York, Chicago or San Francisco.

When Williams did not attack the imperialist system for the pillage of subject peoples, he supported it passively, which is none the less effectively, which is the mission of the missionary

Williams was a "good" missionary. In addition he had ability. This was plainly shown by the fact that he was repeatedly offered positions as director of mercantile agencies at fabulous salaries, according to Kelgwin.

Big business, seeking profits in a foreign land, does not pick those as its servants who criticise it, who differ with its policies, who are hostile to the capitalist state of honor that protects it, with army and navy, even to the waging of war. Tha "commercial structure" had taken inventory of the Rev. Dr. John E. Williams, as vice president of Nanking Univarsity, and it had not found him wanting

As the favored son, therefore, of American imperialism, the Rev. Dr. Williams could not have been, in any sense of the word, one of the "best friends that China ever had." He was one of its worst enemies: in that the bloodier deeds of the capitalist state could be shrouded somewhat successfully nndar his coat that seemed clean.

It is because the Chinese workers and peasants have discovered the blood shed by imperialism under the white cloak of christianity, that they have been able to open their eyes and see the real nature of the struggle confronts them.

Factors in the Mining Situation

THE power of the United Mine Workers as an agent to foh the country provided the 100,000 former union miners now working for nonunion mines walk out if the union strikes April 1. That is the view of government circles according to Paul Wooton, Washington correspondent of Coal Age.

The big question, he says, is, will they go out if a general snapsnalon is ordered. If not the strike will mean a drop of only 1,000,000 tons a week in coal production and with present reserves the country can stand that for 10 weeks before reaching the danger point. But many thousends of nonunion miners walked out in the Connellsville, Somerset and adjacent Pennsylvania districts in 1922.

Joining Forces

Union activities in certain non-union fields are noted by Coal Age and the Chicago Journal of Commerce. Coal Age speaks of considerable headway in reorganizing western Kentucky. The Journel cites a report that Muhlanburg county miners in this section have voted to strike in the event of a suspension in the central competitive field. In southern West Virginia, also, according to Coal Age, union officials claim about 5000 members, with many nonunion miners ready to follow the union lead if the unionization drive gets under way after April 1.

"Nonunion" Means Low Wage

A sympathetic walkout of nonunion miners would be assured if they took to heart a recent statement by the operators association which shows historically that periods of nonunion operation have been synonymous with low prices, low wages, low profits and irregular employment. Going far back in their history of negotiations the operators say:

"In 1885 the condition of the miners in the mining camps of America was almost unbearable. Wages were low, hours of labor long and employment intermittent. The average coal company in the whole competitive field was earning little if any dividends and the general situation to all parties at interest was most unsatisfactory."

"There followed a short period of collective bargaining in the central competitive field, 1886 to 1889, but this broke down as a result of keen competition and the weakness of the union. Then, "beginning 1890 and continuing during the depression up to the strike of July 4, 1897, chaos reigned, wages were low with little employment and great loss to the coal companies."

Mast Unite

"In January 1898," continues the brief history, "the operators and miners of the central competitive field again reestablished joint bargaining, which resulted in the Chicago and Columbus agreement. The Chicago agreement covered tonnage rates and hours of labor, the Columbus agreement the dockage rates. Since this agreement day rates have increased from $1.75 to $7.50 per day in the central competitive field. During these years the United Mine Workers of America have developed from an organization of 10,000 members to one of 400,000 and have exercised control in the central competitive field.

"The miners' union," say the operators, "has been unable to exercise any considerable influence upon the wages and working conditions south of the Ohio river, their membership in that territory being very small. Hence since 1898 Ohio has increased her tonnage 100 per cent. Indiana 365 per cent., Illinois 271 per cent., while the territory known as West Virginia and Kentucky have, increased their tonnage 785 per cent. and 1530 per cent respectively."

The statement makes clear the interest of all miners in extending unionControl until coal will be mined only for decent wages and in reasonable hours.

Job Hunting on a Rainy Day

By FRED HARRIS.

THESE few lines are written in my "furnished room" at 8 o'clock, Monday morning, possibly one of the most unprosaic of places and unusual of hours imaginable for writing an article. And yet, there is a logical reason for this, for altho most people are still sleeping or are just about to be awakened by the melodious ring of an alarm clock, I have already at this early hour had an adventure warranting the penning of these lines.

"Man is the subject (and victim too) of his environment." The verocity of this maxim is obvious. My environment at the present time is "rainy," hence instead of working at my trade on some job, I am sitting in my furnished room and scribbling.

I have been "up" since 6 o'clock, and have gone thru the usual routine preparatory to putting in a day's work. I am somewhat eager too, for this is to be my first job since November, some four months ago. It has been a tough winter, with jobs at a minimum. Friday I applied for work at the Benning Painting Co., and was told to "come around" on Monday morning. To be sure, I got no definite promise, but had reason to believe that if the boss would feel alright, if the weather be permissable, if I come early enough to be at the head of the waiting line and if I should strike the boss's fancy at that time, that there would then be a job for me on Monday morning. The many "if's" seemed to be insurmountable, still there was a fighting chance.

It is a well known fact that an old-time sea captain, of the windjammer type, will avoid going to sea on a Friday, which factor can be explained by the religion of the ancient Norsemen. Friday was the day of Frya, the goddess of the sea, and the religious services rendered to that lady on Fridays usually kept the Norsemen in port. Altho the religious ceremonies have ceased long ago, yet the tradition of not going to sea on a Friday remains.

Tha same principle, tho of a different nature, prevails among painter bosses, who, because of the interference of rain with outside housepainting, will not hire men on a wet day, altho most of the work today is inside of the buildings, unmolested by outside weather conditions.

This morning it is raining. My intelligence should have told me to stay home, but I had a vague promise for the job and jobs are very scarce, so an effort had to be made to land among the clover. However, within an hour I am home again in my furnished room, sadder but wiser. The old tradition of "no sunshine — no work" still holds good.

My inquiry for work was answered in the negative. The boss certainly knows how to say an emphatic "no." Myself and other fifty fellow workers, who should join me with me are witness of that. I am just now counting the expenses which I incurred during the extravagance of looking for work. I have shoved my morning slumber by about four hours, and as "time is money" a considerable expense item falls on the debit side of the ledger. I have ordered breakfast at 6.30 a. m. a 40 cent breakfast, when I wasn't hungry yet, but had to eat in preparation to getting a job. Since I painted some sometimes see to a job outside of the radius of rastraurants, I also bought a 50 cent lunch and finally had to spend ten cents for fare. Thus my looking for work this morning cost me four hours of peaceful rest and one dollar in cash.

Right now I am meditating on what to do next. If this sort of thing keeps up then I may have to change my trade to that of a professional politician, a bootlegger, burglar or some other honest occupation; for it is obvious that my present calling will bring me to a stage of bankruptcy. If my conscience should bother me and say that work is honest and that burglars sometimes go to jail, then I shall answer such tender admonition by firmly reminding my subtle "better self" that workers sometimes fall from the scaffolding, break their neck and get buried in a grave.

Facts indeed seem to favor burglary. As soon as that trade gets organized I shall ditch the futile and expensive passion of looking for a painter's job to that of an easier and more remunerative burglar profession.

Structural Steel Board Still Fighting Workers

NEW YORK (FP)—Continuance of the Iron League's open shop policy toward structural iron workers is announced by the Structural Steel Board of Trade of New York, which replaces the Iron League after April 1. The latter organization is superseded. The steel board of trade is composed of steel construction contractors who do not employ union ironworkers.

THE PERFECT POEM

(To An Electrical Wizard Now Dead)

These spindly fellows strut on this new stage
With smiles of cynical morbidity,
With warped intelligences bathing angrily
In the modern sea of sordidness. With rage
Titanic they hear the continuous steely clang
Of the smoothly oiled machines, and grind
Their colgated teeth in derision against the mind
That set forth the machines that bang
So rudely on the drum of their esthatic ear.

And you old fellow, with contorted shape
Plying with skilled hands did rape
That muse the poets call their own sweet dear.
Listen, old fallow, hunching over your daity,
Gazing with loving eyes on the lurid spark
Created by your hand shoot through the dark,
Oblivious to all except this, your ecstacy,
Flannt your poem in the highest sky,
And burl to all eyes your flaming jagged "I."

BOOKS

ECONOMIC GEOGRAPHY.

An Outline of Economic Geography. Plebs Textbooks Number 4. Plebs League, London. 6.7s.

Any worker who wishes to understand the actual practice of imperialism must begin by studying geography. Only by studying the map of the world, by studying geographical locations, climate, distribution of natural resources, and trade routes can one understand why it is that the U. S. Marines "run the world."

The Plebs "Outline of Economic Geography" covers a very important field and does it, even from the purely technical point of view, much better than most of the more pretentious bourgeois texts on this subject. It is very interestingly, simply, and clearly written, and no worker need fear that he will find it above his head. The book does not attempt to be impartial but has a decided working class viewpoint, not dragged in by the neck, but inherent in the work and developed consistently.

The book falls into two main sections: first, an analysis of geographic factors in their influence on history and second, the world today. Particular attention is paid to the growth of world economic inter-dependence from earliest times up to the present day.

Some criticisms can undoubtedly be made. The treatment of the world as divided among five mutually opposing groups (four imperialist and one soviet) seems to be a little too static. Then, too, the following statements should not be passed without challenge: "The failure of the revolution in Hungary should be a standing warning to revolutionists against ignoring geographical factors"; and, in another portion of the book, "The problem of the food supply, the problem of communications and of access to raw materials—these and other such questions have to be faced and solved before the workers can successfully take over, and maintain, control." Both these statements represent a serious exaggeration of the importance of the geographical factor. Many reasons may be advanced for the failure of the Hungarian Revolution:—the extreme treachery of the Social Democrats, the lack of a clear-cut Communist Party, the failure to secure a firm alliance with the peasantry by dividing up the big estates and giving the peasants the land—and so on. But one thing is sure: the Hungarian Revolution was not foredoomed by geographical factors. The second statement is open to a similar criticism. The geographical problems have to be faced by the workers (just as all other problems must be faced) but they do not necessarily have to be solved before taking over control. This would in nine cases out of ten mean an indefinite postponement of all attempts at revolution.

It is interesting to note that although the book is marked "Reprinted with corrections" as late as January 1926, the Chinese question is put as "Who is to exploit China?" Things have moved fast in the past year and it seems reasonably sure today that China is going to be exploited by nobody but the Chinese. The reader must make his own additions to the chapter on the Far East.

However, the few errors stand out only by contrast with the rest of the book which maintains an unusually high level as regards reliability and accuracy. A large number of maps illustrating every important point in the text make the book especially easy to follow. It is essentially a textbook for workers and should be recommended unraservedly.

"THE HAMMER."

"The Hammer," the Yiddish Communist monthly, seems determined to be a serious magazine at any cost. This is decidedly ingenious. Most magazines are only pseudo-serious. It is assumed that the readers suffer from chronic mental indigestion. Hence the tough, solid, marrowy stuff is carefully refined, pulverised, attenuated until it becomes a soft, soothing zero. Or else it is camouflaged with spices, floral decorations and lots of soda water.

The current nnmber of "The Hammer" continues the serious tempo that the magazine set from the start. Its 64 large, double-column pages exemplify a variety that makes no sacrifice of depth.

There is, for example, an article called "The Economic Life of the United States in 1926," by A. G. Bosse. It is the sort of thing which "The Nation" might have done very entertainingly in about 1,500 words, with lots of hillowy generalizations to fill the gaps. In "The Hammer" it becomes a thing almost forbidding aspect. Divisions and subdivisions: Industrial production, employmant, industrialization of the South, the building industry, railroads, agriculture, foreign and domestic commerce, etc. Bare, meaningful sentences, figures, facts. This is not for the tired business man, but for the skilled worker and student who want to know what is hiding behind the great blank mask, Prosperity.

An article of a similar sort is one on "The Problem of the Aliens in France and the Condition of the Jewish Workers," by Simchah Livv.

The contemporary scene is, however, not the only concern of "The Hammer." Vividly written articles such as "The Paris Commune," by M. Garvit, and "Ludlow," by I. Sultan, present the history of great revolutionary struggles of the past against the background of the social, economic and political conditions that molded their course.

The same distinction may be found in the department devoted to the arts. One of the features of the present issue is a remarkable series of peasant poems by Ch. Weinerman, one of an interesting group of poets that have sprung up in the Jewish colonies in Soviet Russia. There are also many other poems, short stories and essays, both original and translated, and a number of reproductions of woodcuts and paintings.

My chief criticisms are technical. I think the editors ought to indicate whenever an article, poem or story is translated and give the name of the translator. Slim Martin, for example, would be surprised to discover that he has learned how to write Yiddish.

My second criticism is more in the nature of a plea to the editors to improva the typography and paper. The eyesight of Jewish workers is notoriously bad. And the print is so funersal and foggy that it at times requires a strong effort to read through a long article. "The Hammer" is poor, I know. So poor that it can't even afford to pay its writers, all of whom are voluntary contributors. But typography and the general appearance of a magazine ars, I think, important.

"The Hammer," it seems to me, is fulfilling three important functions. It is presenting pictures of the contemporary social, economic and political scena throughout the world with special reference to the United States, and applying throughout a Marxist interpretation; it is showing the historic continnity of the revolutionary movemant by descriptions of great working class struggiee of the past; and it is attempting to integrate the struggle for a new social and economic order with the efforts to avolve a working class culture by offering examples of literature and art that are close to the fundamental interests and aspirations of the workers. To fulfill these three functions is to become one of the most important weapons of the class-conscious Jawish proletariat of America.

BEAUTY IN THE RAND SCHOOL.

Several weeks ago in an essay called, "The Rand School: A Memory," I implied that this former workers' institution was very much on the decline. I also suggested that the directors of the school had departed from the original aims of the school, which was founded to train workers for the class struggle.

* * *

In a spirited bit of correspondence in a current issua of "The American Mercury," Algernon Lee, director of the Rand School, in leaping to tha defense of beauties in the Socialist Party, offars an illuminating clue as to some of the school's most recent "revolutionary" activities. It seems that "The Mercury" had bemoaned the alleged lack of personal charms among the young women in the Socialist movament, ete.

Here's Lee's vigorous reply:

"That 'distinguished journalist' is an old fraud The fact is, he never poked his nose inside tha Rand School. If he had, not even a plea of jaundice, strabismus, and chronic indigestion would be sufficient to excuse his failure to admire the personal charms of our girls. I know where he got his grouch.

"Being a self-conscious Tory, he once started out on what thought was a slumming expedition, happened into the 'New Leader' ball, and couldn't find a partner, because all the lassies had laddies more to their taste—and their taste is discriminating, do ya mind—so the only way he can save face for himself is to libel the faces of the Daughters of the Coming Revointion."

Minimum Wages.—Court decisions in recent years have stricken minimum wage laws for women and children off the statute books of Arizona, Arkansas, the District of Columbia, and Kansas. Such laws therefore now exist in only 11 states—California, Colorado, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North Dakota, Oregon, Porto Rico, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wisconsin—out of the 16 which once had them. The Wisconsin law is now confined to children. No change in the situation occurred in 1926.

District Contracts For Miners' Union

Lewis' Policy Committee Proposes to End Central Competitive Basic Wage Agreement

INDIANAPOLIS, March 29.—The policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America, International President John L. Lewis presiding, today announced that it proposes to the coal operators to make separate agreements in the four districts of the union covering the central competitive field.

The basic national contract idea is definitely abandoned, at least temporarily, just as the progressives in the miners' union repeatedly warned during the last union elections the Lewis machine contemplated doing.

The proposition now is that district union presidents and executive boards have authority to negotiate separate agreements with the coal company associations in their fields, the implication in President Lewis' statement being that they may cut the wages below the present Jacksonville scale if they wish.

"The attitude of the operators is that they do not want interstate conferences. Well, here is a chance to make district agreements. They say that conditions in each state are different. Very well, let them make district agreements," said President Lewis, announcing the new policy.

Work To Continue

Meanwhile, it is proposed that the miners stay at work. Lewis says:

"In the past the operators have said that we were not willing to remain at work pending wage negotiations. This resolution shows we are willing to accommodate them."

Lewis stated that the new policy means, "While we are making over the situation let's don't fight."

In case the coal operators' associations in the central competitive field will not confer with the district union presidents, the policy committee proposes that miners in all mines which permit them to do so, shall go on working at the present wage, without a contract.

Danger of Bad Conditions

Progressives have repeatedly warned that even where contracts for a specified wage exist, the companies lower the wage by requiring more unpaid work of the men, or save money at the miners' expense by worsening their conditions in some other way. The union policy committee has not yet considered any action when this problem arises on a large scale during attempts to work without agreements for independent companies, after the contract expires, April 1.

Outlying Contracts

Many miners will remain at work, also, even if there is a widespread lock-out in the central competitive field, these men being in other districts, in Wyoming, Iowa, Kansas, and parts of Pennsylvania. Contracts of indefinite terms, which expire at the will of the operators, have been drawn up with some of the operators in these more distant districts. In them the miners will produce coal during any strike or lock-out in the more important fields, and will take whatever wage is finally agreed upon in the central competitive field.

Probable Lock-Out

Latest indications were that the majority of the Illinois and Ohio operators favor a lock-out, at least until their common surplus stocks of coal are consumed. The coal bureau of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce

Current Events

THE French and Japanese governments are observing caution in the Chinese situation. The Paris papers are reflecting on the accuracy of the news appearing in the London press. The British are telling the world in one breath that the French concession in Shanghai is in danger of attack from the Nationalists and in another breath that the French officials in China have agreed to place their armed forces under command of the British General Duncan. To all this the French say that it simply is not so.

* * *

THE British are angry with General Tai in command of the Nationalist armies in Shanghai. Tai visited the foreign consulates in the international settlement and delivered a short impromptu speech after the ordeal was over. He was seen smiling on leaving the Soviet consulate and stated that he had friendly conversations in the Japanese and French consulates, but that in the British consulate he noted that the chilly atmosphere of imperialism still prevails. The French and the Japanese prefer to trade with the Chinese nation than to see Anglo-American imperialism, thru a puppet government on the Nicaraguan model, establish hegemony over that vast country.

* * *

THIS seems to be the attitude of the French and Japanese governments at this time. It is not wise to make long-distance predictions where capitalist powers are concerned. The French love the Chinese as much as they love the Moroccans and the Syrians whom they destroyed by the thousand. The Japanese have shown by their treatment of the Koreans that their motives in adopting a reasonably neutral attitude towards the Nationalists in China are not altruistic. They are holding aloof because they think they will gain more by so doing than by getting in front of a revolutionary buzz-saw that has over 400,000,000 people behind it.

SHANGHAI TRADES UNION COUNCIL PROTESTS ARREST OF MILITANTS

SHANGHAI, March 29.—In spite of the declaration of the commander of the National troops at Shanghai that he guarantees order and the full safety for all foreigners, military preparations are continuing at the international settlement where there are actually concentrated 15,000 foreign troops, of which 11,000 are British. All members of the volunteer corps, consisting of 3,000 men, likewise are being mobilized.

There was fighting near Wusung between northern and southern naval forces. The northern warships fled.

In Shanghai workers continue to hold meetings and demonstrations against bombardment of Nanking. Commander-in-Chief of the National army, Chiang Kai-Shek is in Shanghai.

In view of the refusal of employers to take back to work a number of workers known as active in the labor movement, the Shanghai trades union council addressed a letter to the municipal council wherein it points out that the recent strike was directed entirely against Chinese militarists and not against foreigners.

"Contrary to our expectations the municipal council has arrested a number of post office workers and it has erected barricades preventing traffic in the streets of the city. The situation is growing worse daily.

"You have arrested many workers illegally. You have moreover, refused to allow several workers to resume work. This provokes the indignation of the Chinese masses. We hope you will reconsider this question. If you do not order the resumption of work at the Shanghai Mills the strike cancellation order will be revoked and there may eventually be issued another order to begin a general strike, whose responsibility will fall on you."

Headquarters of China Trade Union Movement Is Moved to Shanghai

HANKOW, (By Mail)—Headquarters of the All-China Labor Union, central federation of the new labor movement in Nationalist China, have been moved to Hankow from Canton. Branch offices for the three southern Provinces of Kwangtung, Kwangsi and Fukien will be maintained in Canton, while other branch offices will be established in Shanghai.

A recent count of labor unions in Canton showed a total of 455. One of the most enterprising is that of the rickshs pullers, who have established clubhouses, special military force of their own, and a completa union agreement with their employers as to wages and conditions.

Sapiro Declares Reed Aided Him Boost Prices

Wheat King's Books Called For to Explain Income

DETROIT, Mich., March 29.—Aaron Sapiro, who swept 600,000 American farmers into cooperative marketing by his vision of an economically independent agriculture, faces a grueling cross-examination by attorneys for Henry Ford at the million dollar Ford-Sapiro libel suit, as soon as his testimony ends.

Sapiro told how he studied cooperative marketing, learned why some succeeded but many failed and finally drafted a new system of organization. In the end 600,000 farmers cramped themselves in cooperatives based on his plan. He took the stand to defend himself against the charges of Henry Ford's Dearborn Independent, that he had expoited the farmers.

Touching on the problems of California tomato growers during the war, Sapiro told of efforts to increase the basic price of $15 per ton fixed by the food administration.

British Miners Preparing For Next Fight

Bosses Discriminate Against Militant Diggers

THIS is the second of a series of three articles specially written for The DAILY WORKER by Louis Zoobock, who recently finished a study of the situation in the British mining industry. While the miners have suffered a stunning defeat due to the treachery of the right wing leaders their militancy is still strong and they are preparing for another tussle with the mine owners and the capitalist government.—Ed.

By LOUIS ZOOBOCK.

Article II.

It should be added, that in many places the employers are seeking to make the Saturday as long a working day as any other day in the week. This means not a forty-eight, but one bordering on sixty hours, if the double travelling time is taken into account.

What are the wages that the working miners are taking home at the end of their week's work? From those bits of news that creep into the labor press, one can readily see that the British miners are passing thru the most difficult times. Here are some examples of mining earnings in various places scattered throughout the coal fields of Great Britain: a South Wales miner's week of religion sent to the "Daily Herald" (January 21) his observations on the miners' position in the coal fields. The miners, according to his description, are expected to produce more coal in the extra hour for less wages. "One miner," writes the minister, "who was supposed to be one of the best workmen

Victims Torn to Pieces During Bombardment

Gassed and Burned to Death In Their Homes

Editor's Note.—Some reports seeping into New York City place the number of those slain by the British-American bombardment of Nanking as high as 20,000. This figure is contained in cabled dispatches reaching New York direct from China.

L'Humanite, the French Communist daily published at Paris, places the figure at 7,000. The figures received up to yesterday had been put at 2,000. The report from Paris is as follows:

PARIS, March 29.—The murderous bombardment of the unfortified city Nanking by the combined war fleets of the United States and Great Britain last Thursday killed and wounded 7,000 unarmed Chinese inhabitants, according to reports published in the Communist daily, L'Humanite, official organ of the French Communist Party.

Only three or four foreigners were killed there, it stated, but in revenge butchery was deliberately carried on by English and American authorities.

In opening fire with shells from the warships under the pretense of protecting their nationals on Socony Hill of the Standard Oil Company, the Communist paper said, the open and densely populated part of the city was attacked. Thousands of victims were torn to pieces in their homes and thousands of others poisoned by asphyxiating bombs, while others were roasted in resultant fires, it was stated.

"This assassination of men, women and children has made a deep impression upon the Chinese," Humanite declared. "Until now the English alone were considered by the Chinese as responsible for such wholesale murders, but they have evidently converted the Kings of Doliars to their bloody policy."

Porto Rico Workers Mourn the Death of Chas. E. Ruthenberg

PONCE, Porto Rico, March 29.—Regretting the death of C. E. Ruthenberg, founder of the Communist movement of America, the Communist League of Porto Rico has sent the following to the American working class:

"The Executive Committee of the Communist League of Porto Rico, and the general membership meeting at Ponce, on March 20, express deepest regret at the death of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg.

"The Communist League of Porto Rico recently came into existence thru the guidance and assistance of Comrade Ruthenberg, and the sudden loss of our great leader is a great blow to our young Communist movement in Porto Rico, which has yet needed his counsel.

"At the moment when we mourn the death of our leader, Comrade Ruthenberg, we pledge to redouble our efforts in developing our Communist League towards the Communist Party of Porto Rico, which in union with the revolutionary proletariat in all countries, under the banner of the Communist International, will lead the oppressed of this colony to the final victory over imperialism and capitalism.

Aid the Chinese Revolution With All Means, Appeal of The Communist International

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., March 29.—Appealing to workers and peasants thruout the world to prevent further intervention of imperialist powers in China, the Executive Committee of the Communist International has issued the following manifesto:

MANIFESTO OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL.

An atrocious crime has been committed against the Chinese people. "Civilized" barbarians, headed by the British and American imperialists, have destroyed Nanking, a former capital of China; they have razed the labor quarters of the city and heaped its streets with the corpses of thousands of peaceful inhabitants slaughtered by heavy artillery fire; they have set fire to one of the oldest cities—all because the victories of the Chinese revolution threatened the rule of the imperialists in China.

SEEK TO JUSTIFY GHASTLY CRIME.

This ghastly crime, this organized slaughter by foreign marauders under Anglo-American command, has been "justified" by brazen and insolent lies.

Henchman of the so-called civilized powers have circulated provocatory legends about the attack of Chinese revolutionists on the foreigners, the sacking of consulates, etc. These henchmen know that they are guilty of lying and forgery; they know that the revolutionary armies made no attempt to attack foreigners in spite of the fact that the military command and the civil authorities of the foreign "imperialists had exposed themselves as relentless enemies of the Chinese people; they know perfectly well that those who fired were Shautung troops, the allies of foreign counter-revolution.

This base legend has been circulated to cover their own crimes and the crimes which they have yet to commit. The British have killed hundreds by artillery fire, hundreds of Chinese at Wanhaien, now the imperialists, united under the leadership of the United States and Great Britain have destroyed Nanking, altho official Reuter reports describing the capture of the city emphasized the bloodless victory of the Nationalists! And now these "civilized" beasts may destroy the Chinese settlement at Shanghai from their "international" settlement, which they robbed from the Chinese people.

SCHEME TO PERPETRATE NEW CRIMES.

Unprecedented altimatums, the bombardment of Nanking, the further concentration of military and naval forces at Shanghai, military preparations in the "international" settlement, the arrival of Russian white guards—all these indicate schemes for the perpetration of further crimes.

The semi-official English Daily Telegraph has already dared to write that, "south of the Yangtze River exists no power, wherewith we could negotiate by methods of civilized diplomacy." British diplomacy could behave most politely to the militarists of Shanghai, who before its fail executed thousands of workers. But it cannot negotiate by methods of civilized diplomacy with those who spurned Shanghai today; it cannot negotiate with the people who began to shake off the yoke of feudalism, of bandit generals, manrers, foreign exploiters and slave owners.

British diplomacy fraternizes with the Russian white guards who were driven out of their own country after a bloody struggle. British diplomacy speaks with death-dealing guns when it deals with the mass of the Chinese people who are passionately struggling for their emancipation from the yoke of slavery. Especially fierce is British diplomacy against workers—those fearless Shanghai and Nanking workers who had with great sacrifice collected money to support the striking British miners, who anxiously followed the heroic struggle of the British working class. Against them was directed the fire of the Anglo-American guns.

BRITISH IMPERIALISM THROWS OFF MASK.

This fire is fire directed against the whole national-revolutionary front. British conservatives, who carried on their negotiations with cannon, quickly threw off their masks of bigotry and hypocrisy and appeared in their true light before the workers of the world, particularly the Chinese peoples—workers, peasants, village artisans, students—as ferocious oppressers and destroyers.

The United States which courted the National movement and flirted with the Chinese revolution immediately stripped its rosy veil and showed its leadership in mass murdara, destruction, looting.

Britain and the United States have launched a war against the Chinese people. None but traitors can sing pacifistic now, none but political charlatans can laud the League of Nations which, controlled by British conservatives, murdered Chinese women and children at Wanshein and Nanking.

The hypocritical lying bourgeoisie and social democrats, pretending that imperialist troops have been despatched to China for the "protection of women and children" have actually exposed themselves in their fail nakedness to the workers of the world.

MILITARISM PROTECTS PROFITS.

Imperialist forces are being despatched to China to protect the profits of the imperialists, to strangle the revolution, to oppress the Chinese workers and peasants, to help the war lords, and with the rabble and remnants of the czar's henchmen and the reactionary remnants of imperial China to strangle the struggle of the Chinese workers and peasants for liberation.

The executive committee of the Communist International calls upon the toilers thruout the world, upon all enemies of imperialist violence, upon all the oppressed to raise a mighty protest against the new war started by the henchmen of capitalism.

There can be no labor organization which at such a time as this refuses its voice in protest. Traitor is he who before the thousands of dead bodies of the victims of the Nanking massacre washes his hands and evades the struggle.

The executive committee of the Communist International calls upon the colonial and oppressed peoples of the world to protest energetically against imperialist violence in China. Against bourgeois diplomacy, evidently following the teachings of equality do not regard the Chinese as men; the peoples of Asia and Africa must realize this; Negroes, Indians, Malayans, Chinese—hundreds of millions of toilers groaning under the yoke of European and American plutocracy—must realize this.

MUST FIGHT IMPERIALIST OPPRESSION.

The Communist International calls upon you to fight imperialist oppression. Raise the banner of protest against the folly of imperialist diplo-

MOSCOW, March 29.—The sons of Chiang Kai Shek, Cantonese general, and Feng Yuh Siang, "Christian General," making speeches here today stated they were in Moscow to "learn Leninism in order to fight English and American imperialists."

Horrible Crime Stirs China From End to End

British Claim U. S. Troops Under Their Command

SHANGHAI, March 29.—China is today afira with indignation over the Nanking massacre news, of which has now seeped into every part of the vast area which supports one fourth of the world's population.

Thousands of meetings attended by millions are being held all over China and the Nationalist government, now recognized officially by two-thirds of the country is urged by the infuriated masses to make the British and American imperialists pay dearly for the murder of the Nanking citizens, men, women and children.

Dead Estimated at 10,000.

The number of dead and wounded as a result of the bombardment is now estimated at 7,000 with the toll mounting daily.

The Japanese and French not having participated in the massacre are not under the fire of Chinese anger. The brunt of the hatred is borne by the British and Americans.

Proud of Slaughter.

The British openly boast that they have scored a grant diplomatic success in showing the Chinese that the American government is with them in their Chinese policy. The fact that this diplomatic gesture resulted in the slaughter of thousands of unarmed people means nothing to those brutal agents of imperialism.

Chang Kai-Shek, commander-in-chief of the Nationalist armies today visited Admiral Williams on his flagship, Pittsburgh. It was noticed that the admiral boorishly refused to pay the general the courtesies usually accorded to officers of his rank. The Chinese general with the courtesy for which the Chinese are noted took no notice of the implied insult.

Kellogg Confers With Coolidge Over Letters

No Denial Yet That Calles Caught U. S. Plotting War

WASHINGTON, March 29.—While Secretary of State Kellogg still speaks nothing about the letters said to be from the state department to the American ambassador in Mexico, in which the latter was told to cooperate in plans to overthrow by armed force the Calles government in order to substitute some ruler amenable to the influence of the U. S. oil and mining interests, serious conferences are taking place between Kellogg and President Coolidge.

Also Robert F. Olds, assistant secretary of state in charge of Mexican affairs was late yesterday afternoon hurriedly summoned to appear before Coolidge and take up the matter.

It is intimated that there may be some sort of public statement before long of an official nature.

Much Explaining

Meanwhile, unofficially, official Washington is dividing into camps. Some take the easiest and most plausible explanation—that the documents are too forgeries at all, but regular letters written by Kellogg in the line of his service to American big business, intended to create another Haiti or Nicaragua of Mexico.

"Publish Them."

In the group which at least outwardly accepts the "explanation" of forgery, there are two factions.

The one party, which has a mouthpiece in certain metropolitan papers, such as the New York World, demands the publication of the "forgeries" as part of an educational campaign for the American people. "The

ESME HOWARD AT BON BANQUET IN RAGE OVER CHINA

Cheers Nanking Murder —Mad at Bolsheviki

WORCESTER, Mass., March 28.—At a joint banquet held here at the Bancroft hotel by the metal trades branch of the National Manufacturers' Association and the Central Massachusetts Employers' Association, the British ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, delivered a speech on the Chinese situation.

"I felt a thrill," said Esme, "as I read that the two governments have stood shoulder to shoulder," referring to the bombardment of Nanking and Shanghai by the U. S. and British warships. "We may have minor differences, but in an emergency we always shall be there to protect our own citizens as at Nanking."

Laments Over China.

Bewailing the plight of the imperialists in China, Sir Esme almost burst into tears when he said:

"We know who inspires all this anti-British agitation by which the poor and ignorant Chinese coolies are brought up to violence and pillage. The inspiration comes from Moscow, which from the first establishment of the Soviet Republic, has aimed at driving the British altogether out of Asia—believing that if it could accomplish this it would not be difficult to get rid of other western powers from the Asiatic continents, and thus secure it for their ideas; and believing, secondly, that if the British can be driven out of Asia, it will not be difficult to promote a Bolshevik revolution in Great Britain itself, which would be the precursor of similar revolutions in all European countries."

In protest against this attack on Russia, two British comrades, one of whom is a former officer in the Royal British military service, sent the following telegram to Sir Esme Howard.

"To the British Ambassador, Washington, D. C.

"Reference your outburst at the capitalist soviet of manufacturers, Worcester, Mass., we the undersigned British subjects, Anglo-Saxon to the narrow, hereby warn you and home government that we abhor your conscious-stricken attack on Soviet Russia, light of the world, the workers' fatherland.

"We pledge ourselves and all we can reach to boycott all British exports and services.

"Death to your imperialist civilization. Long live England's coming economic democracy.

Pravda, Moscow Communist Daily, Lashes Imperialist Massacre at Nanking, China

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., March 29.—The massacre of thousands of the peaceful Chinese population at Nanking by British and American troops is bitterly scored in a Pravda editorial, entitled "PUT IN THE PILLORY."

The bombardment of Nanking is one of the most ghastly in the long bloody history of imperialism, the editorial declares. "A great city of a half million population was set afire by Anglo-American warships. Thousands of people were killed and mutilated by shells, thousands of others were deprived of their homes. No sooner had the revolutionary banners flown over Nanking than the Anglo-American squadron bombarded the city.

MURDER CHILDREN.

"These criminals murder their job neatly; they know what artillery to use—heavy guns and incendiary projectiles; they know where to fire—where the population was thickest, where there were most women and children; where slavery is greatest, where slaves earns for them twopence a day, live in their miserable hovels.

"Six-inch guns against infants —such was the gallant, humane defence of 'civilization' by Admiral Williams—Herod, who within twenty minutes covered the streets of Nanking with corpses, who burned down half the city.

CHINESE WILL NOT FORGET.

"History will not forget the name of this 'hero of today.' The Chinese will not forget, the proletariat the world over will not forget, this monstrous and bloody massacre of a peaceful population.

"The bourgeoisie is applauding the massacre, the imperialist press is rejoicing, and the corrupt newspaper mou fill columns with inspired propaganda. Let Nanking burn—trampled 'civilization' has been restored! The moneyed mob is rejoicing, the mistresses of British and American officers are rejoicing—their 'friends' will receive orders of merit for slaughtering little children with six-inch cannon.

BLACK HUNDREDS APPLAUD.

"The black hundreds throughout the world applaud—the Chinese revolution has been 'warned'; Nanking may be razed to the ground, but imperialist 'prestige' has been restored.

PROPAGANDA BLOOD-STAINED.

"Anglo-American henchmen were only 'defending themselves', they were 'attacked.' They are raising the old infamous singsong. How can we believe the distorted reports of incendiaries and murderers? Their propaganda still smells of the warm blood of Nanking workers, of their wives, their mothers, their children—of those who died with malediction and hatred against the imperialist rabble on their lips."

BRITISH RAIDING EXPEDITION RAZES CHINESE VILLAGES

Nationalist Govt. Makes Strong Protest

(By Chinese Nationalist News Agency).

CANTON, March 29.—Four British warships and the aircraft carrier Hermes, transporting a landing force of 300 men, raided Chinese water and territory in the vicinity of Bias Bay. The expedition was secret. The landing forces, co-operating with airplanes flying over Chinese territory, and under the protection of naval guns, destroyed several villages, razing 140 houses and fifty junks.

The expedition was planned by the Hongkong British government for the ostensible purpose of pirate hunting, but no pirates were captured. The official reports appearing in Hongkong newspapers do not mention the capture of pirates or the recovery of pirated goods. Only inoffensive Chinese suffered.

The Canton government received a protest from villagers whose homes were destroyed by the British bombardment, demanding that strong protest be lodged against the continuation of British's gunboat policy.

The Canton government handed a note of protest to the British consul here, denouncing the violation of Chinese territory and making a reservation for reparations which will be demanded when the extent of the damage suffered by villagers has been ascertained.

Public opinion here shows deep indignation against such a deliberate violation of China's sovereignty, a violation which is clearly opposed to all the principles of international law.

mals. The executive of the Communist International calls upon the labor organizations of the world to struggle against the newly begun war whose consequences may be immeasurable.

Organize a mass protest against this criminal war! Demand the withdrawal of troops and gunboats from China! Prevent the de-patch of new forces to China! Expose everywhere the cowardice, the hypocrisy, the treachery of those glossing over the real nature of the war.

Comrades. Ten years ago the International bourgeoisie, headed by England, sought to defeat the working class of Russia and to restore czarism. It brought its forces into the country and bombarded towns. It allied itself with reactionary generals, organized plots and revolts, created lies about "Bolshevik atrocities," had recourse to the old tried methods of "civilized" diplomacy; but a mighty mass movement of the people throughout the world wrecked all plans of the enemies of the people—the landowners, monarchists, bonkers and generals.

THE PEOPLE AGAINST CAPITAL.

Now the people of China have risen. Against it is pitted international capital, headed by England and America. However many thousands these "christians" may murder, they will not be able to strangle the four hundred million people who have raised the banner of emancipation.

With all forces, with all means, we must aid the Chinese revolution.

Down with the war against China!

Down with the henchmen of capitalism!

Long live the organized resistance to imperialist depredation!

Long live the victory of the Chinese victory!

Kell Talks to Cal About "The Letters" country is entitled to an explanation", these people say, however sincerely, and seem to enjoy Kellogg, and the group of "diplomats" nearest to him squirm at the suggestion.

The latter faction among the public men of this capital are not prone to offer suggestions for publication. Their speculations start on the premise that the documents actually were forged, difficult as it is to imagine how they could be forged, or how the carefully guarded cipher of the state department could come into the hands of unscrupulous persons, or how the sealed diplomatic mail pouch, sent by courier, could be opened by anybody but Ambassador Sheffield himself, for the purpose of inserting forged documents.

Romance and Magic.

This clique speaks out of Washington thru such newspapers as the New York Times, organ of big business and first announcer of the "forgery".

Its argument runs to explanations which involve mysterious gangs of international conspirators, eager to create a war on the American continent, Mexican enemies of President Calles, anxious to destroy Kellogg and their own country no well?!, the Communist International (its reason for desiring the strengthening of the American empire not satisfactorily indicated by the "explainers") and finally, in some quarters, timidly, a suggestion that oil companies might have something to do with it. Not the American oil companies, of course, which refuse to obey the Mexican constitutional law or pay their taxes, but rivals of theirs who would like to get property in Mexico.

Kellogg Stands Mute.

Meanwhile the person most directly implicated, supposing the documents were not forged after all, Secretary of State Kellogg, is silent. He has nothing to say.

Kellogg Caught Lying.

The newspaper article which first announced the "forgery" was written by George Barr Baker, who is former assistant to Herbert Hoover, who directed the press publicity for Calvin Coolidge in the last presidential campaign and has recently gone to Mexico on business. It was he who published the figures on the oil companies that accepted and those that rejected the Mexican oil law, proving the Kellogg statement on that subject to be grossly inaccurate.

Baker now appears as the sponsor of the good name of Kellogg in Mexico City. His story offers to the state department an early avowal of retirement from any dangerous position into which it may have walked in its eagerness to bulldoze Mexico on behalf of the Mellon, Doheny and Sinclair oil interests.

Gives Kellogg Chance.

It appears that Calles had received documents which showed that Ambassador Sheffield, in Mexico City, was receiving from Kellogg advice and instructions of preparation for a pro-American revolt or for war between the two nations. Baker persuaded Calles to withhold judgment until Kellogg had been given a chance to disown the documents, which Kellogg seems to have done. The situation is now easier—at least for the moment—and it is Kellogg's next move in the game of coercing Mexico as to her oil law.

American Economic Life

By WALLPROL.

PRICES STILL ON DOWNWARD TREND —NEAR 1922 DEPTH

Overproduction Bringing on Competition

Downright astonishing to the guardians of the best of all possible systems is the plumb-like decline of the price level. Last week it reached the lowest level since early in 1922, when the bottom had completely dropped out of things.

The price index fell in one week from 143.5 to 142, reflecting further thuds of wheat and other farm products and a positively precipitous decline of seven points in coal. The decline in coal prices represents the cut in anthracite prices and the softening of bituminous prices due to the tremendous overupply and the judgment of industrial leaders on the consequences of the coal strike.

The decline points unerringly to over-production, so-called, bringing on sharper and sharper competition. The decline in interest rates, reflected when the U. S. Treasury was able to get $1,000,000,000 at 3½ per cent. to replace 4¼ bonds, is accompanying evidence of the increasing competition, brought about by the great flow of new capital being created out of surplus values wrung from underpaid workers and farmers.

The American economic system is literally staggering under the load of billions of dollars seeking investment both at home and abroad and in any project from unneeded 56-story apartment palaces to banana railroads in Panama.

Cotton Surplus to Be Even Greater, Is Prospect for 1927

King Cotton will continue his gorry reign over the bankrupt south this year. This much is promised by reports that there will be a slight decrease if any in acreage devoted to that commodity.

Everybody will please brush his brain and remember that last fall after the calamity of overproducing some five million bales had driven the southern cotton grower into desperation, there was a tendency to talk of reducing acreage. Eugene Meyer, representing Cal Coolidge himself, went down below the Mason and Dixon line and assured the democratic bankrupts that the republican administration would solve their problems.

That didn't help out the farmers much, but being politically backward, they gobbled the stuff greedily. At the same time they were selling their best cotton for 9 and 10 cents a pound while the second went for 3, 4 and 5 cents per pound, half the cost of production all around.

But the American farmer, God bless him, believes in individualism. And so, by god, he's going to raise as much cotton as he goi darn pieases. And so now that the speculators are tossing cotton around at 14 cents a pound, he's going to plant as big a crop as he did last year.

But take it from Wallprol, he'll get even less than 9 cents this fall. With a carryover of 5,000,000 bales in warehouses when he begins picking the bolls he will feel himself lucky if he can sell his cotton at all.

The department of commerce hos released its annual report of cotton ginned for 1926. Eighteen million bales, each weighing 500 pounds, constituted the amount ginned i. e., prepared for the market after picking.

State Department Policy Results in Less Soviet Trade

When the State Department pulls its head out of the ground and decides to "recognize" the Soviet Union, there'll be an appreciable gain over present trade totals. Even so, those totals amount to a tidy sum. For exampis, in the six months ending last December, we exported goods valued at $25,700,000 and imported $7,700,000 worth.

If America wants the business, it could easily multiply these figures by 10. That would keep automobile, tractor, agricultural machinery and railroad equipment shops humming at top speed.

Instead, the slow-witted State Department places every impediment in the way of any sort of trade relations at all. As a result, exports dropped $1,350,000 in January as against $6,160,000 in January, 1926. Exports dropped to $325,000 against $2,000,000 the previous January.

The Soviet Union is still in the market, much more so in fact than ever before. The decline therefore represents not a decline in Russia's business, but rather a shifting of business from America to Germany and England.

BUILDING RESTS ON SHAKY BASIS, SAYS ECONOMIST

But Housing Shortage More Acute Than Ever

Wallprol's warning last week in this column that the present industrial activity is the hectic fever of a patient preparing for bad chills is accepted by Benjamin Baker, economist for the Annalist as a correct statement of the situation. Rebar sees in steel and building activity merely the usual spring upturn, to be followed by duller months this summer and fall. He might have extended his diagnosis to include the preparations either for the coal strike on April 1, or the shutdown in the union fields if there is no actual strike.

At the expense of repetition, it is pointed out again that the undue spurt in building, entirely unneeded and unwanted, is not in the least a healthy sign for the business world. Baker very properly discounts it, too. Because building has been such a fanatical factor in prosperity since 1924, Wallprol emphasizes again that it reflects merely the pressure of finance capital for investment in any venture that shows promise of making a return. Or to put it in the more guarded phraseology of the Annalist:

"The question of how long this high volume of building contracts will continue substantially at last year's level can be answered only by the future behavior of the cheap money supply. There is seemingly little room to doubt that the intense building activity of the past three years has been as much due to the eagerness of investors to acquire certificates of one type or another promising a high rate of return, as to the real economic need of rentals of all sorts above the lower income levels.

"High cost apartments, hotels, office buildings and various other types have been provided in such abundance that it is difficult to believe there is any real shortage in these lines. The returns on low rental buildings are not great enough to support the excessive costs of construction and capital, and in this respect the tone of housing is probably more acute than ever. But it is not likely to be met until investors are content with much lower returns on their capital.

"This will probably be forced upon them within the next decade, unless the American rate of accumulation is greatly diminished or actually reversed.

Please notice the unpleasant threat in the last sentence. Talk of the diminishing or, perish the idea, of the "reversal" of the American rate of accumulation is downright economic treason when voiced by Scott Nearing or some other competent labor economist. Coming from the political expert of the New York Times' financial weekly, it may make the Carvers and the Poliyannas of our uuiversity departments of economics sit up and take notice.

Chevrolet Nearly Overtakes Ford in February's Sales

The news about Henry Ford is worse even than presumed by Wallprol in his comments last week on the terrible slump in flivvers. The official February auto figures, available this week, show that Ford lost 5 per cent of American production in just the month of February and that now the Ford is little more than 1 per cent ahead of the higher priced Chevrolet in sales. Here are the February registration (sales) expressed in percentages:

Percentages:	Feb.	Jan.
General Motors Group	38.31	34.97
Chevrolet	24.21	21.99
Ford	26.02	31.80

Hudson-Essex, Chrysler, Dodge, Willys-Overland, Nash, Studebaker, Durant and Packard follow, with the first named possessing only 7.51 per cent. Ford figures will continue to drop inasmuch as the auto buying public will wait for the promised model in midsummer rather than buy the present Model T which promises to be discarded in the near future.

America's Wealth Now 355 Billions

The national wealth amounts to 355 billions, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. Use the board's well known device of dividing by 110,000,000 and multiplying by five, and you'll find out how much you and your wife and kids own. Then compare that with what you really do own, if anything.

formation without question from Reuter's, the British official news agency. Moore's predictions of coming events in China are standing jokes in newspaper circles here.

It is reported here that the Nationalist commander at Wuhu issued an ultimatum to the British demanding an indemnity for the loss of 36 Chinese lives that were lost when a Chinese launch was struck by a British armed vessel. The Britishers are said to have deliberately ran down the Chinese vessel.

Orders have been issued to Americans in the centro of China to make their way quickly to the coast.

British Using Tea Cups.

The British are using all the arts at their command to draw Admiral Williams and General Smedley Butler into the social net and make them feel that "the two Anglo-Saxon peoples" should jointly slaughter the Chinese. The interests of Great Britain have been so thoroly blasted in China by her brutal and murderous policy that there is now no possibility of retrieving the situation. Thus Britain is angling, and successfully to induce the United States government in Washington to sanction the Nanking slaughter by an official declaration of a united front with Great Britain. It is said that Williams and Smedley now favor such a course.

Japanese are Cautious.

The Japanese naval and land officers are under the most rigid orders to take all possible care to avoid conflict with the Chinese. Especially the Nationalist military forces. They have been warned not to open fire upon the Chinese except as a final resort. The Japanese officers frequently go unarmed when mingling with the Chinese to show their friendliness. It is evident that Tokio is looking far into the future when the Cantonese government may be in absolute control without danger of outside interference.

GENEVA, March 29.—The United States delegation to the League of Nations preparatory disarmament conference, headed by Hugh Gibson, minister to Switzerland, met with that today in an effort to break the deadlock between Great Britain and France on the matter of land disarmament.

Gibson today offered a compromise suggesting that limitations be placed upon men under arms and also upon a certain proportion of younger reservists.

FRANCE EXPLOITS SYRIA FOR ITS WOOL AND COTTON

PARIS, (By Mail).—France is trying to convert Syria into one of its colonies. Syria is to be a screw in the colonial machine of France, the source of raw wool, cotton and other industrial products for the home country. The French manufacturers are ruining the national industry of Syria; first the customs' privileges which they enjoy make it possible for them to compete successfully with the goods produced by native industries.

Then the system of French taxation in Syria forces the whole population to surrender the lion's share of their earnings. Finally, compulsory French currency has been introduced in order to wrest the gold reserves from the population. The numbers emigrating from Syria bear eloquent witness to the present situation in the country: in 1926 36,000 people were forced to emigrate.

Syria Broken Up.

From the time of the occupation of the country in 1919 the French authorities under the protection of the occupational army of 70,000 have been exercising a severe colonial regime. Syria was broken up into a series of tiny states. This enabled France to maintain internecine strife and religious dissension among the native population to keep back the economic development of the country. According to a decree of 1920 Great Livan was declared an autonomous state. Desiring to win the support of the christian population in Syria, France artificially increased the influence of christian Livan by enlarging its frontiers and adding to it purely Musulman territory.

Spread Thru Country.

This regime of French democracy evoked in Syria a wide protest. The revolutionary movement is expanding. The Syrian nation has now been struggling several years for its independence. The last eruption of the national movement occurred in 1925 in the form of a local rising in the Djebel-Druze mountains, which despite the barriers set up by the French government, spread to the other parts of Syria. During 1926 the uprising spread from the south to the north. The French occupation forces used all means for suppressing the rising. In the summer of 1926 the whole world rang with the barbarous cruelties of the French authorities. To the repeated peace proposals made by the Syrians the valiant French commissars replied by bombarding peaceful towns, firing on the peaceful populations, ruining whole quarters in towns, smashing up whole villages. The French policy evoked the hatred and denunciation of the whole Musulman world. The Syrian war had a toll of 15,000 killed and the losses caused to the population are reckoned at 5,000,000 lire, the war costing France 2 milliard francs and 11,000 killed (including 10,000 colored soldiers). But repression was quite powerless to suppress the national movement. More and more sections of the Syrian population had been drawn into the fight against French imperialism. This movement is also participated in by the toiling masses, who, for the first time in the history of Syria, appeared upon the arena of the social struggle.

Together with the peasantry the workers bear the full brunt of imperialist oppression.

Great Strike Wave.

The regime of terror, the abrupt fall of the currency in 1926 and the rise of the cost of living caused a great strike wave to sweep over Syria. In the summer of 1926 the tramway workers in the town of Beirut went on strike. The movement spread to the workers in other branches of labor: the printing industry, the woodworking, the tobacco and others. The movement then began to spread to other towns. Two thousand textile workers downed tools in Damascus. Here a committee for organizing the trade unions was formed. It appealed to the workers of other cities to support the strikers. Strikes are also proceeding in Homs, Aleppo and elsewhere. The movement is everywhere accompanied by a campaign for the organization of trade unions. Together with economic demands, the freedom to form unions is being demanded.

The labor movement is being born in the throes of the struggle. The French authorities are attacking this second front of the labor movement, which goes shoulder to shoulder with the national-emancipatory movement. By order of the high commissioner many active workers are being placed under trial and deported. The police keeping an eagle eye on the movement, and participating in all conflicts, is assisting the military forces. But the French military clique will be powerless to stem the historical course of events: The Syrian workers and peasants already understand their problems, forming a united front with the nationalist movement, the workers and peasants of Syria will fight to their interest end in order to free themselves and the whole country from capitalist oppression.

Some Sections American Press Realizer Grabbing Has Killed China Trade

CHICAGO, March 29.—Realization that the profit grabbers of western Europe and America have gone too far in China and ruined their future is evident not only in Chinese publications in America but even in the western mouthpiece of American imperialism, the Chicago Tribune. In an editorial the Tribune admits that, "Certainly the common man in China has had a wretched life, judged at least by our standards, and the roseate promises of communism might well capture him."

The Chinese Guide in America, speaking for the Kuomintang, says: "The masses of the people of China see that the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has abolished all unequal treaties with China, given up the old czarist concessions and extraterritorial rights, while on the other hand those nations which dominate China are supporting the northern warlords and refuse to abrogate the unequal treaties and other forms of imperialist domination."

The Chinese Guide is a useful publication for labor editors. It is published at Stanford University, Cal., Box 2765 and is distributed free on request. H. T. Tsiang is the editor.

Australian Workers Are United Against Sending Armed Forces to China

By J. RYAN.

SYDNEY, Australia (By Mail).—The working class movement in Sydney is fully alive to the possibilities of the position in China. For months we have been explaining to the rank and file the happenings in that country from day to day. On Thursday, February 4th, the Labor Council of N. S. W. held a special session to discuss the question of China. Representatives of the Communist Party, I. W. W., Socialist Labor Party, and the Trade Union Educational League were present, as well as delegates from all over N. S. W. At this session a "Hands off China" committee was elected, and the enclosed manifesto adopted.

Since then a gigantic demonstration was held on the Sydney Domain and a further demonstration was held at the Sydney Town Hall. Movements of a similar character are developing in other states, and it is unlikely that many soldiers will be sent to China from Australia. The question of a delegation to Canton will be decided at the N. S. W. Trade Union Congress next Saturday.

Sapiro Claims Sen. Reed Aided Him Boost Prices

Senator James A. Reed of Missouri and he did something. As a result, the growers were allowed to sell their tomatoes at the open market prices.

Reed entered a formal objection to the answer before bowing to the witness.

"I wasn't being used as a gentile front," the senator added in a growl, "I was helping the industry."

Sapiro testified that his contribution to the science of cooperation was the idea of organizing on a commodity basis instead of on a locality basis.

He spoke of remitting the contracts of the berry growers, and of speaking to the Texas state legislature on cooperation.

Subpoena Books.

The interest of the jury and courtroom fans alike was aroused when Sapiro went into an explanation of the "million-dollar" fees received by him and his associates.

"Are you prepared to state the gross and net income of your firm during this period?" Gallagher asked, after Sapiro said he had "kept books."

The court allowed Sapiro to answer and the "cooperative king" said "No."

Reed then offered a motion to subpoena Sapiro's books and accounts.

Libel suit fans are speculating as to whether the Ford defense did or did not seek today to save Henry the ignominy of exposing himself on the witness stand by substituting a double. At least a double did appear, in the person of James E. Goodrich, and was seated at the Ford counsel table. Afterwards, it was explained as a joke.

AUSTRALIAN BOSS ENSLAVES WOMEN IN NEW GUINEA

Govt. "Protects" Morals But Wrecks Lives

By W. FRANCIS ABERN

SYDNEY, Australia (FP) (By Mail)—Frank Anstey, deputy leader of the Labor Party in the Australian federal parliament, who has just returned from New Guinea, formerly owned by Germany and now mandated to Australia, tells a ghastly story of female slavery in that country. Said Anstey:

"Women slavery is the ghastly spectacle we have right before us. We hear constant talk of the black races being the sacred trust of civilization, but in official circles and administrative circles there is never a single mention of the native women who are the real slaves in the territory.

"I have seen them climbing and plodding over mountains and down valleys—their eyes dull, their faces strained and worn, their manner sullen, and their whole bearing one of stupefaction—carrying burdens of up to 120 pounds on their weary tortured bodies. They never smile for there is nothing to induce mirth. They are regarded as nothing but machines to work. Many of them give birth to children by the roadsides and die in the muck of the beaten tracks."

Deaths Double Births.

The enforced slavery of the female natives is causing the deterioration of the race, said Anstey, for the women could not produce healthy children under such conditions. In one village alone last year there were twice as many deaths as births. There was a suspicion that the government sanctioned this slavery of the women. When a native girl reached the age of 12 she became a slave, and the burdens which she was obliged to carry were graded in accordance with the increase in her strength.

With a meticulous regard for the morality of the natives, the government prohibited certain wood carvings and dances of the natives held to be obscene. Yet the enslaving of the native women was allowed to continue unchecked.

Coolidge and Co. See Chinese Nationalism As Blow To Profiteering

WASHINGTON (FP). — Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told a dinner audience, including politicians and diplomats, that he suspected that "Nationalism has marched into Shanghai," and he hoped it would stay there.

This sentiment, uttered on the night after publication of accounts of the attack on Americans and other foreigners in Nanking, was applauded by at least a majority of the listeners.

But at the White House, the state department, and the busy offices of the war and navy departments, the Chinese revolution was not seen as a Nationalist movement so much as a working class revolt, highly dangerous to the capitalists who have backed big money in the Orient. In most of the dispatches from consuls and diplomats were references to "radical labor" elements, or to "radical forces," and to strikes and strike perils that have kept the foreigners anxious.

Not Nationalism but imperialism is the picture as the American government sees it.

For Shorter Hours.

BRISBANE, Queensland (By Mail) (FP)—Building trades workers in Queensland have put their 40-hour week into operation. In some cases men have been dismissed for not working the 44 hours, but the various unions are standing solid for the shorter working week and say that no workers do more than the 44 hours any longer. It is expected that the 40-hour week will soon become general for all workers engaged in the building trades in Queensland.

Iron Workers On Strike.

SYDNEY, Australia (By Mail) (FP)—Iron workers at the steel mills at Lithgow, near Sydney are on strike against a new agreement which demands they shall work three shifts daily, also overtime. The men object to this, particularly the overtime as many others are out of work. They say they will not resume until the objectionable features of the new agreement are removed.

claims that at present there are between 90,000,000 and 100,000,000 tons of soft coal stored above ground, the greatest reserve supply in history.

Ohio Chamber Active.

The Chamber of Commerce makes a special point in favor of the operators in a coal strike next month, of the Lewis program of signing contracts in outlying districts. It says in its special report yesterday:

"In addition to the non-union production, there will be some production from what are termed 'outlying' unionized districts, an important one being Central Pennsylvania. The outlying districts are distinguished from the unionized central competitive field which comprises the large producing regions of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Western Pennsylvania. At present union officials have agreed to permit outlying territories to continue operations at the present wage scale, with the understanding that the operators shall have the option to terminate the existing agreement at any time."

Ohio Lock-Out.

Reports arrive from Martins Ferry, Ohio, that the lock-out is already beginning, where 500 machine miners in Eastern Ohio having done their last work yesterday, with the plan of the bosses understood to be the closing down of all mines by today. There are 1,000 machine men in the Eastern Ohio field, and about 14,000 other miners.

Evils of Low Wage.

HARRISBURG, (FP) — "Lower wages in the bituminous industry will not bring steadier work or greater production," said Thos. Kennedy, Secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, speaking at the Middle Atlantic regional meeting of the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems, in Harrisburg on March 20.

"Lower wages," he continued, "will not guarantee one hour's work more than now. The bituminous industry is a victim of over development, and low wages is not the cure.

Collective Contract Desired

"We have tried nearly every industrial theory, and have become convinced that the only plan that protects us and saves our liberties is free and voluntary trade unionism and the collective contract. Back in the years between the disastrous strike of 1887 and the rise of the U. M. W. A. at the close of the last century and the first years of this, we tried company unionism and the so-called 'Divine Right Baer's Plan.' We have tried a form of profit sharing. We have worked under government control during war time. We have tried arbitration. 'Direct action' organizations were even experimented with in the industry. Cooperative mining, too, has been tried out. All these have failed. . . .

Blames Financiers

"We have strikes, we encounter difficulties in the anthracite industry and to a great extent also in the bituminous industry because of the intrusion of bankers and outside financiers in the wage policies of the coal fields. The practical mining executives have nothing to say. They are for us; the absent bankers have been against us and their word would have stood were it not that the union has steadily resisted being 'deflated' at their command and to their profit. In the anthracite industry the First National Bank of New York and the Stotesbury interests of Philadelphia have attempted to rule."

Kennedy declared that members of all races brought into the mines by the employers have become union men. He added that "our organization has done more to restore freedom to the community and bring peace and social welfare than any other organization in the state."

HUNGARY TYRANTS SILENTLY ADMIT TORTURE CHARGES

Do Not Take Trouble To Deny Outrages

In July 1926 I was in Budapest at the occasion of the trial against Rakosi. I had the opportunity to interview the police president Hetenyi. In the presence of an English journalist I asked him whether it was true that the political prisoners were maltreated in the Budapest police presidium. In the course of a longer conversation Mr. Hetenyi affirms solemnly and with his word of honor that prisoners had never been maltreated in the Budapest police presidium. The English witness of this conversation is able at any time to verify my statement.

In the course of the last few weeks the Berlin and Viennese press again reported terrible facts about many cases of maltreatment of arrested Communists and socialists in the Budapest police presidium. On the 11th of this month I therefore sent a telegram to Mr. Hetenyi in Budapest, pointing to the strong rumors about new serious cases of maltreatment in the Budapest police presidium. I reminded him in my telegram of my conversation with him in July of last year and urged him to inform me by wire whether there was any truth in the rumors. Since that time three days have passed. Mr. Hetenyi has kept silent. This is the clearest and most convincing admission that the reports on the shameful tortures against prisoners in Budapest are true. The heads of the Hungarian police do not even consider it necessary to deny, but manifest with cynical openness that they torture imprisoned workers. The rulers of Hungary wish to prove at any price their devotion to Chamberlain. —Arthur Rosenberg. (Berlin, March 14.)

'STUTTERING AL' MAY LORD IT OVER AUSTRALIA

Son of Royal Souse Is Not In High Favor

SYDNEY, Australia (By Mail) (FP).—The coming visit of the Duke of York to Australia and New Zealand may have a much deeper imperialistic significance than was originally supposed. At the present time suggestions are being made, no doubt, with the object of testing Australian feeling. The latest is that the Duke's trip may have an important political bearing "in view of the new organization of the empire, now that governor-generals are no longer political appointees." In some quarters it is hinted that the duke may be the future governor-general of Australia. This hint-at arrangement would be exceedingly gratifying to the imperialists, but just what the unsympathetic portion of Australians would think of it is rather a different matter.

Owing to an impediment in his speech, the duke is known amongst the proletariat as "Stuttering Albert," while his only accomplishment in the way of political stagecraft is that he plays a passable game of squash raquets. As is well known his brother, Edward Wales, is Britain's champion horse-saddle tumbler.

It is quite apparent that the British and United States governments are prepared for intervention on a large scale. The massacre of Nanking perpetrated by the British and American naval officers when their guns opened fire on the unarmed and peaceful inhabitants is one of the most horrible deeds in the annals of history. Yet the hireling correspondents and government officials of both countries hail the chief murderers as heroes. All the imperialist propaganda mud guns that were rusting in the cellars since the end of the World War are now squirting their offal at the Nationalists. Soon the United States may be treated to another crusade to save civilization from the Chinese. The German "Menace" is now safely barnassed to the Dawes Plan.

NEW YORK movie houses are now showing pictures of German military reviews and the goose-stepping soldiers are cheered as they march past the monarchist president of Germany. The American ambassador is shown accompanying the reviewing officers to the parade grounds. This is the nation that had to be crushed in 1917-18 if civilization was to survive. Now it is China, our ally in that crusade.

ONE of the chemiest attempts to get out from under ever attempted by a secretary of state caught politically undressed is the efforts of Mr. Kellogg to make the public believe that his incendiary instructions to his agents in Mexico, instructing them to work for the overthrow of the Calles government, were forgeries perpetrated by elements that favored a rupture of relations between Mexico and the United States. Who those elements are we are not told. How they secured documents which are admittedly in part state department documents is a mystery. Mr. Kellogg should have loaned the expert forgers from Scotland Yard that forged the famous "Zhovier" letter that helped the conservative party into office in 1923.

UNDER president Harding the cabinet was composed of a mixture of crooks, grafters, and uncaught imperialist tools. Coolidge inherited those who were too clever to be apprehended. Most of his acquisitions quit before their finger prints were taken. But Kellogg remained too long. The current issue of Collier's weekly predicts that "Nervous Nelly" is about to duck out. It would be interesting however to see him go out in a glare of publicity. Here is a chance for "Bill" Borah to do a little investigating with the aid of Mr. Kellogg who no doubt would be glad to lend his assistance in the task of tracing the forger to his lair. This would be interesting indeed.

The Task of the "Save the Union" Bloc In the United Mine Workers

The worst possible result of the John L. Lewis policy for the United Mine Workers has accrued. His most recent announcement shows that the fatal step toward district agreements and the division of the miners' union into sections has been taken.

The "Save the Union" bloc in the UMWA feared that this would be the outcome of the Lewis policy, told the membership it must guard against such a backward move and were denounced as disrupters of the union and "agents of Moscow" by the Lewis machine for their pains.

The Lewis statement is very definite:

"The attitude of the operators is that they do not want interstate conferences. Well, here is a chance to make district agreements. They say that conditions in each state are different. Very well, let them make district agreements."

Altho the above statement is accompanied by the announcement that the Jacksonville wage scale must be paid pending negotiations it is clear that Lewis is prepared to ignore the instructions of the Indianapolis convention and make substantial concessions on the wage scale in return for district agreements. The raid on the working conditions of the miners that started immediately after the Jacksonville contract was signed and which is still going on makes it certain that Lewis will make concessions in this connection also—in fact has already done so by ignoring the immense pile of grievances and contract violations which have accumulated in the three years in which the coal barons have been "normalizing" the industry by starving out union miners.

The Union Mine Workers, by reason of the Lewis control of the organization are thus forced into a position of abandoning the policy of national agreements, accepting a reduction in wages and worsening of their working conditions.

The Lewis machine has capitulated to the operators. It had nothing left to do after it refused to accept the program of the "Save the Union" bloc and begin at once an intensive organization drive in the non-union fields—now producing a minimum of 65 per cent. of the total coal tonnage. A strike on a national scale is foreign to the Lewis policy because it means open struggle with the coal barons and the necessity for organization work. Without a strong organization drive in the non-union fields as part of the strike action the union can bring little pressure on the operators.

Lewis has chosen the route of surrender and what we are witnessing is a series of vents which threaten to destroy the most important union in the Labor Movement. The coal barons will show no merey to the rank and file of the miners altho it is noticeable that the Lewis "peace" policy provides the opportunity for friendly comment in the capitalist press.

The "Save the Union" bloc will have to turn the suspensions and lockouts which will follow the refusal of many powerful coal companies to pay the present scale into militant strikes. It will have to give these movements a national character and force organization work on a big scale in West Virginia and Kentucky.

The successful carrying out of this program alone will save the miners' union from actual destruction or from becoming an ineffective adjunct to the production machinery of the coal barons.

Some Results of the Massacre At Nanking

The bombardment of Nanking and the massacre of Chinese by American and British forces has had two important consequences:

1.—It has given a tremendous impetus to the revolutionary left wing of the Kuomintang and the labor movement. It is evident from the news of Labor demonstrations, strikes and mass meetings that the fierce resentment aroused by the imperialist mass murder has enabled the People's party to carry out much more rapidly than otherwise would have been possible the program of militant action put forward by the Communists and left wing and adopted at the recent Canton conference.

2.—It has intensified the friction between France and Great Britain as evidenced by the warning of the semi-official Paris Temps, quoted by the New York Times, to disregard the news of Chinese activities coming thru London.

There is also noticeable in the last two days a deliberate attempt on the part of even such rabidly anti-Russian sheets as the New York Times to tone down its "Soviet menace in China" propaganda. This undoubtedly results from the fear that too much emphasis on this point brings American policy too closely in line with that of Britain. The Times editorial in its issue of March 29, entitled "Moscow of Two Minds," is evidence of this.

In the meantime the People's government is consolidating its power the length and breadth of the Yangtse valley and in Shanghai it appears that preparations are being made for an anti-imperialist boycott which will exceed in intensity anything yet attempted by the Chinese masses.

Bombardments produce boycotts but they cannot stop them.

Learn From Kellogg's Lies!

Capitalist diplomats, when documentary proof of their war plots is discovered, always deny the authenticity of the documents.

Secretary of state Kellogg finds in this method his only means of escape from public condemnation in connection with his conspiracy against the masses of Mexican and American workers and farmers upon whom the burden of a war would fall.

This conspiracy is disclosed in documents which secretary of state Kellogg claims are forgeries.

We are asked to believed that some one secured possession of the diplomatic mail pouch sent to Ambassador Sheffield by the state department, opened it and held it for a length of time sufficient to execute forgeries so clever that they deceived President Calles to whom the signature of Kellogg and his under-secretaries are as familiar as his own.

The only persons who will believe the Kellogg explanation are followers of Aimee Semple McPherson and the simple Simons who still think that the late war was fought to make the world safe for democracy.

The Wall-Street-Coolidge-Kellogg administration must not be allowed to get away with their bed-time story. It has insulted the intelligence of the American masses and must be forced to publish the disputed documents in full. If Senator Borah has been doing anything else besides boosting himself for the Presidency he will demand the fullest possible public investigation and the resignation of Kellogg.

It is well to remember that preparations for war upon another country without the advice and consent of the senate is an impeachable offense and that Coolidge is responsible for Kellogg. The impeachment of Coolidge would be a great achievement. It would oust from the White House an administration that has perpetrated the grossest deceptions upon the legislative wing of the government and the American masses and would teach a valuable lesson to the Wall Street clique which has been playing fast and loose with the lives of Americans and Latin Americans and is now, without the semblance of a mandate for its actions, making war jointly with Great Britain upon the Chinese people.

Constitutional government, always a polite fiction since its inception, has now become in America merely a fig leaf for the Wall Street dictatorship. Even the small restrictions which capitalist democracy puts upon imperialistic adventures have become too onerous for the avaricious and arrogant plutocracy of the United States.

The American workingclass can learn much from the Kellogg incident. It means that if imperialist war is to be avoided, if the American workingclass is not to become the gunmen of Wall Street in Latin America and the Far East, if it is not to be the reservoir from which is drawn the cannon-fodder of American imperialism, it must built a powerful trade union movement, organize its own political party with the unions as its base and prepare to take the government power into its hands.

The Disintegration of the Socialist Party

By DAVID EVITKO.

ARTICLE 4.

A DEPRESSING mood is gripping the membership of the socialist party. Those who have not been thinned out to such an extent that one loses heart by just looking at them; from without, on the election map, it is almost "completely wiped out." This pessimistic mood is a result of the slow death the socialist party is undergoing. On one hand, it is terrified with the look upon the irrevitable destruction, on the other, it is impossible to live without hopes. Yes not even all hopes are alike. Those are full-blooded and patriotic ones. The socialist party hopes are rather revery than expectation, and by whare can the depressive burden of time and space be eliminated, if not in a state of revery?

THERE was a time when at the convention of miners out of a thousand delegates four hundred could beast membership in the socialist party. If those members were responsible for their work before the party, if the party were really its spiritual guide, the influence of such numbers could be felt amongst the miners.

The absolutistic reign of a Lewis could not be possible. But between the socialist party and trade union there has been no living bond which could exert pressure in ease of treachery or slacking down of a party member. Because the socialist party was a political vote catching machine, it exerted no influence upon the membership, and now the socialist party is abandoned both by the trade union membership and voters.

THERE is small wonder that the remaining members feel lost, and that there is no way out of the state of paralysis, besides the hope that the "spree" of the American people will sometime be over.

THE HEROLD of this philosophy of weariness and fatalism is Mr. David Berenberg. "It is quite true," he says, "that the party has in the past gone after will-o-the-wisps in its pursuits of the illusion success. I have repeatedly voiced an isolated protest against success mongering and the higher salesmanship in our election campaigns.

"But I believe that even my then antagonists in the party will balk at success bought at the price Mr. Ghent asks. At his price, why a party? The new Tammany Hall, Local Al. Smith, or the progressive Republicans, section Senator Borah, offer speedier and more certain hope of such success."

BERENBERG hit the nail on the head when he says that the "higher salesmanship in our election campaigns and success mongering" have been partial causes of the disintegration of the socialist party, and he rightly feels that the socialist maturity tendencies of today lead into the direction of a "new Local Al. Smith or Section Senator Borah." Why a party brother Berenberg? Because "we must belong", as the hairy ape says. And since belong we must, Local Al. Smith will do.

THE ANALYSIS of the socialist party by one who has been all these years with it and by one of the most intelligent leaders, is very interesting. It characterizes the inner state of affairs of the socialist party. From his analysis we learn that the golden age was only cheap gilt. In his own words: "What was the party in 1912 and in the decade that preceded that year that we should so earnestly want to resurrect those days? Trus, the party grew from 1902 to 1912. Time has proved that the growth has been spurious. It brought into the movement the man who had

CLOAKMAKERS WIN BOSTON STRIKE; 40-HOUR WEEK

Workers' Solidarity Too Much for Bosses

BOSTON, Mass., March 29.—The forty-hour week for capmakers of this city, will begin July 1st accordingly to the terms of the agreement ratified today by a mass meeting of the workers, which formally ended the general strike that has been in progress since the beginning of February.

A general revision of wages was also conceded by the bosses, and the strikers are enthusiastic over the victory which grants their main demands and leaves their union—Local 7—in a stronger position than ever.

Agreed On Settlement.

The settlement, which was presented to the workers today by J. Miller, chairman of the Strike Committee, was agreed upon late last Saturday after several days of conference between representatives of the union and the manufacturers association.

This capmakers' strike has been a bitter fight, in which the employers felt confident they would destroy the union completely. The usual police brutalities have been frequent, and there have been injunctions and quantities of false propaganda aiming to break the strike.

Solidarity Broke Resistance.

The splendid solidarity of the strikers brought about a first break in the employers' ranks last week when they offered the forty-hour week if other cap centers granted it, but refused to consider the raise in wages.

The workers rejected this offer, and after another week of the strike, the present agreement was signed giving the union its principal demands.

All workers will be back in their shops within a few days.

Rich State of Illinois Carefully Considers $5 A Week Pension to Aged

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—(FP)—The state of Illinois places the full value of the property within its borders at about $10,000,000,000. Can it spare from 1 to $5 a week for a small proportion of its old people to keep them from starvation or the poorhouse? This question is put before the state legislature by senate bill 85 and house bill 48 which has reached its second reading in the house, supported by organized labor and opposed by insurance companies and other corporation interests.

So modest is this crumb for the aged poor that the drain on the state treasury will be comparatively slight. Only American citizens will be eligible and these must have lived in Illinois at least 20 years. They must be at least 70 years old. They must be of good moral character. They must, finally, if they have any income or support from other sources the maximum of $260 a year from the state will be cut down dollar for dollar. That is, if they have as much as $5 a week from any other quarter they will get nothing from the state.

It is urged that old age pensions are cheaper in the long run than poorhouses and are a more humane way of dealing with the veterans of industry and agriculture who have given their lives to the development and production of the country.

Tax Collections Have Decreased, Announced

WASHINGTON, March 29. — Sharp slumping off of income tax collections since March 15 indicated. Collections are about 700,000,000 or $55,000,000 under the estimated, it was announced at the treasury today.

The drop is not expected to have serious effect on contemplated tax reduction at the next congress.

HEARTBEATS ARE BROADCAST

Dr. Clarence J. Gamble (center) of the University of Pennsylvania medical school, Philadelphia, is photographed demonstrating results of the newly invented stethophone to students. Phonograph records of heart beats are made. Then, by means of a radio device, the heart-beats are magnified ten billion times and sent out into the air through a loud speaker with horns. Or they may be heard through individual ear attachments. Students make charts on a blackboard of heart beats as they come pounding in.

SIGMAN AGENTS GO INTO HOMES TO SABOTAGE DEFENSE OF UNIONISTS

The defeasless cloakmakers who are behind prison bars are the latest victims to be attacked by Morris Sigman, the reactionary right wing president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in his ruthless, union-smashing campaign.

Personal Calls.

Sigman is endeavoring to hamper the raising of funds for the legal defense and the aid of the families of the cloak strikers who were so heavily sentenced by Judge Rosalsky two months ago. His representatives have been making personal calls to try to prevent individuals from making contributions to the defense fund; and in yesterday's capitalist papers he published a letter, purporting to come from four of the imprisoned cloakmakers, in which the defense fund is denounced and workers are urged not to help with it.

It is quite evident that this letter, with its well-known phrases of denunciation of the Joint Board, was drawn up in Sigman's office and did not originate with the workers themselves even tho they may have been induced to sign it, because they were promised a speedy release from jail. It is typical of the sort of statements which Sigman's agents have repeatedly tried to get the prisoners to sign, according to letters sent by them to the Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers whose officials Morris Sigman is seeking to frame up.

Sigman, The Jailer.

In commenting upon Sigman's efforts to prevent the raising of funds for defense of the cloakmakers and furriers, C. S. Zimmerman of the cloak and dressmakers' Joint Board, said:

"President Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is now making desperate attempts to prevent a successful campaign among workers and labor sympathizers for sums with which to defend the cases of workers arrested for picketing during the last strike, and for the relief of their families.

"His letters received from prisoners', with which he is trying to bolster up these attempts are outrageous in view of the circumstances. Before these prisoners came to trial, officers of the International carried on propaganda to the affect that these men were sluggers, which greatly prejudiced their cases; and on the day of the trial their lawyer, H. Bushell, withdrew from the cases altogether.

To Whip Them Into Line.

"The purpose evidently was to secure long terms for these men so as to provoke them into implicating leaders of the Joint Board.

"Agents of the International have been visiting all prisoners in jail, and with false promises of securing their freedom, they have attempted again and again to secure from them just such statements as this so-called 'letter' which Sigman has given out. Most of the prisoners have not fallen into this trap.

"The letters from prisoners to the Joint Board they have exposed this conspiracy of Sigman to frame up the leaders. Max Borenstein, Morris Turetsky, Charles Walfish, Paul Kalichman, Samuel Grossman, Arthur Zinn, Harry Friedman and Anton Kutzuk have written that they were visited by an agent of the International who promised he would get them free if they signed various ready made statements. They were told that they would get out of jail at once if they signed.

Reject Proposition.

"They refused to sign and wrote up to inform the Joint Board, and to call other cloakmakers to resist the union-splitters who are attempting to take advantage of their unfortunate position in this way.

"We shall secure affidavits from the prisoners as to their full experiences with Sigman's agents, and what intimidations they have suffered as they have revealed them to us in their letters."

Letter From Friedmen.

These tactics of Sigman were exposed in a letter from Harry Friedman, one of the prisoners, which The DAILY WORKER published on March 17th. Friedman told then that Sigman had sent him a telegram promising help if he would denounce the Joint Board. Apparently all the prisoners have been subjected to this form of persecution.

BRITISH CABINET IN EXTRAORDINARY SESSION ADMITS CHINESE NATIONALISTS HAVE WON WAR

LONDON, March 29.—The British cabinet met today in extraordinary session to discuss the Chinese situation.

Immediately before the cabinet in Downing St., Chamberlain met Austen Chamberlain, his brother, the foreign minister then off the Cantonese, who has just yet.

It is believed that the cabinet will be considered by the foreign office to proceed to Nanking to investigate the losses and prepare the claims. Nothing said about lives and property destroyed by the imperialists' warships.

Magistrate McAdoo Not Saying Anything About Green's Bribery Charge

No announcement was issued yesterday by Magistrate McAdoo concerning his decision on the report of the investigation of the fur strike which was handed to him last Friday by Mayor Walker.

It has been stated that the Chief Magistrate would inform the mayor of his decision as soon as contemplated in view of the alleged bribery of the police of fur workers. However, the report was so long it took more time to read it than Mr. McAdoo had anticipated, so it is said. It is possible no announcement on this matter will be made for several days.

Meetings of all four locals—1, 5, 10, 15—affiliated with the New York Furriers Joint Board will be held on Thursday evening, March 31, at 8 P. M. The halls will be announced later.

Worker Drowns.

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., March 29.—The body of Michael Daly, was recovered from the Peconic River at the foot of the town dock today. Riley is believed to have slipped from a plank between two barges on the Fred M. Lewis Barge Company, by whom he was employed as a cook, on Saturday night, when he was last seen alive.

DEFY INJUNCTION AND PICKET IN DRESS STRIKE

Guerilla Cuts Girl's Eye; Court Releases Strikers

The injunction secured by the Association of Dress Manufacturers, Inc., last week did not prevent a large picket demonstration early Monday morning before shops called on strike by the New York Joint Board of the cloak and dressmakers.

At the Arline Dress Shop, 355 Seventh avenue, which was one of the firms for whom the injunction was secured, police arrested Fanais Goles, a business agent and four other pickets, after clerks of the Dress Association and the shop had handed out leaflets containing the restraining order. The girls refused to desist from picketing even after the arrest of the five, who were later discharged in Jefferson Market court.

Renewed attacks by guerillas occurred at the Gans and Brandmiller dress shop, at 118 West 27th street. Ida Schneider, a picket, was struck in the eye and badly injured by one of them, who arrived in an automobile with Max Schecter, executive board member of Sigmen's scab Local 38 and a worker in this shop.

Attack Girls.

When Schectar appeared under the protection of the gangsters the pickets shouted "scab," whereupon the guerillas who were "protecting" Schecter attacked the girls. Several furriers on their way to work attempted to interfere, and George Weiss, a furrier, demanded that the police arrest Ida Schneider's assailants. Weiss himself was finally taken into custody, but even after his arrest insisted that the gangster be arrested, so that the police placed him under arrest as well as the girls on the picket line. While they were waiting for the patrol wagon, a policemen came up and led the gangster away, and set him free.

Wounded Picket In Court.

The police were censured by Magistrate McKantry in Jefferson Market court for failing to bring to court the assailant of Ida Schneider, who appeared before him bleeding from cuts about the eye. He dismissed all of the pickets. Attorneys for the Joint Board have been furnished with the number of the policeman who freed the gangster, and will conduct an investigation into the matter.

Judge Cropsey Refuses A Permanent Injunction Against Shoe Workers

Declaring that he "had been imposed upon," Justice Cropsey, in the supreme court, Brooklyn, has denied the application of the Fisher-Gordon Shoe Co. to make permanent the injunction which was granted to them recently, which restrains their workers now on strike from picketing.

The judge said that he had "been imposed upon," as he has now discovered that the affidavits of the company were drawn three days before the injunction, which sets out the shoe business from another concern against which the strike had been declared, was actually incorporated.

20,000,000 By 1965 Predicted for New York By Committee

Belief that the population of New York will reach 20,000,000 by 1965 was predicted by the Committee on Regional Plan of New York.

Its report the committee claims that the greatest needs of this city at the present time is an improvement of living and working conditions and the preservation and development of the existing harbor.

The report declares that there is ample space to provide for any expected increase of population with out overcrowding, holding that congestion is due to wrong distribution and not to lack of space. No mention is made of how open spaces will be benefited by the building of new houses if the rents continue to be high.

Governors Included In 7 State Compact Meet

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 29.—A new conference of governors or representatives of the states originally included in the so-called seven state compact on the Colorado River project, has been called by Governor George Dern of Utah.

Letters were sent, Governor Dern said, to governors of Arizona, California, New Mexico, Nevada and Colorado.

"Arizona," Governor Dern said, "had agreed to be represented at the meeting."

Word has also been received from California, tentatively accepting the invitation to the new conference.

Worker Drowned.

Albert Buehmann, 43, of 166 Cornelius street, Astoria, L. I., was drowned this afternoon when he fell from a tugboat tied up at Staten Island pier. He was an engineer aboard the vessel.

MINERS PREPARE FOR NEXT FIGHT

in a pit in the anthracite area, before the stoppage, and who earned nearly a pound per day, showed he his pay ticket that week.

"His total earnings for himself and his mate for six days of eight hours each, 54 6s. 9d. From this total was deducted for powder, the sum of 9s, leaving a balance of £3..11s. 9d. Out of this his mate was paid the sum of £2. 9s., leaving him £1. 2s. 9d. for his week's work. Further stoppages of 5s., so that his net wage, after six days' work, was 17/9.

"This is not an isolated case. I have in my possession at present no less than 400 pay tickets and some of these show that the miner went home with as little as from 6s to 10s for a week's work of 48 hours."

In Somerset.

In Somerset, conditions are not better. Here the wage of adult surface laborers are 5/6 a shift, which equals 32/6 gross wage for a full week of 51½ hours—approximately 7½d. an hour. The wages of the vast majority of adult mine workers in the district range between 5/6 and 7/9 a shift.

Conditions in some of the collieries, according to descriptions of worker correspondents, are absolutely intolerable. In Fall-by-Stirling, a certain family, consisting of husband, wife, and seven children under fourteen years of age live in one room. The wages of the husband, who is a surface worker, are £1. 11s. 11d. per week of six shifts. In general, a terrible state of affairs prevails in this region. Empty houses in the villages are being reserved for the scabs who worked during the lockout, while active fighters are forced to live under hellish conditions.

In Blackhall, where there is the most up-to date colliery in Durham, wages are at a starvation level. "One poor chap," writes a worker correspondent, "has a family of ten and his wages were 21s. Ho applied to the guardians for relief, but was told he was working and that he could get nothing."

Similar conditions prevail in other collieries. The owners, far from being satisfied with the extension of the working day and the intensification processes that have been introduced in many places have adopted every known method to force further sacrifices from the men. All the customs and extra payments which have been secured thru many years of bitter struggles in the minefields are being ruthlessly swept aside by the employers. The real reductions which the miners have to submit to are much greater than those provided for in the agreements recently signed.

New "Non-Political" Unions.

In their attempts to impose the harsh terms upon the miners, the employers are greatly aided by some of the local leaders of the Spencer type who attempted to form "company" or, as they call them, "non-political trade unions." This was the first one to start this movement in Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire. And quite rightly, the term Spencerism has become a synonym for treachery and robbery.

Spencer, it is to be recalled, signed an agreement with the Nottinghamshire nineowners before the last delegate conference of the miners on November 14th, decided to recommend the districts to accept the terms of settlement as proposed by the government. For this breach of discipline he was expelled from the Miners' Federation. Aided by the employers he immediately formed a scab or company union. The essential object of the new union is that it is to be entirely disassociated from party politics as such; its aim is to promote more amicable relations between employers and employe. There is no doubt that without the coal owners' assistance "Spencerism" would have a very brief career. But the owners saw hars the finest opportunity of the age to strike a deadly blow at organised labor. They have done all they could to boost the movement of Spencer. They have refused to recognise the Notts Miners' Association; in many pits notices to this effect have been posted for quite a long time; contributions to the Notts Association yvere not allowed to be taken on colliery premises.

Spencer also appealed to the owners for an immediate grant of £10,000 in order that pensions might be paid in the near future to those men who had grown old in the service of the different colliery companies. The employers, of course, agreed to help Spencer, provided they are given representation on the board of control. A true principle of class collaboration: really the employers are to decide who is to be entitled to any pension and who is not!

But even with all the help of the owners, the attempt of Spencer to expand his union ended in dismal failure. Up to the present time it has been unable to enlist more than from 250 to 500 men. Seeing that the state of Spencer's union is so rotten, the owners who have backed him have reduced their much boosted grant to the pension fund from £10,000 to £2,500.

"Spencerism," in the words of Cook "is dying a very inglorious death and will not have even a decent funeral! His blacking association will never survive."

Other "non-political" unions have been formed in Cannock Chase, in some county of Durham, in Derbyshire and in South Wales.

These unions do not differ from the one set up by Spencer. Their main objects are: no strikes, no politics, class collaboration, good-will and conciliation between employers and employed. The following extract from the constitution of the South Wales "non-political" union is typical for all the other "new" unions:

"The union to be a non-political organization. Any member raising a political issue at a Lodge meeting shall be reported to the committee who shall warn the member. If the member continues to raise political questions the committee shall have power to suspend or expel the member from the union."

This most important clause shows the real nature of these unions. They are to serve as detective agencies for the employers, trying to check all attempts by the workers to raise any "political" questions. The term "political," of course, is very broadly interpreted: it may include such questions as demands for better working conditions, demands for nationalization, demands for abolishing system of payment to royalty owners, etc.

What is the future of all these unions? Will they survive or not? To these questions a more or less correct answer is provided by the special correspondent of "The Times". He writes: "While at least 12 months will be needed to reform the Federation to anything approaching its old strength, the future of the small independent industrial unions which have been formed in Durham, South Wales, and other areas is not very promising. The new organisation led by Mr. George Spencer M. P. in Nottinghamshire has a fair chance of survival, as it has the official recognition and, so far as its pension fund is concerned, the financial backing of the coal owners. The other unions are as yet weak in membership, and they lack experienced leaders. Unless they can be substantially strengthened and grouped they will continue to function only as long as the original district associations are wanting in power."

All that can be added to this statement is that even Spencer's union with all the backing it has from the mine owners has no chance of survival. The future of all these "non political" unions is certain: they are all doomed to an inglorious death.

Unity of Anglo-American Labor Against the Unity of Anglo-American Greed

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

GREAT BRITAIN'S foreign secretary, Austen Chamberlain, announced in the House of Commons, on Monday, that there would be no further surrender of British rights in China "until the Chinese could preserve order wherever their authority existed."

That stand immediately becomes of interest to all labor in this country, because the policies of British imperialism in the Orient more and more dovetail with the policies of Washington and Wall Street.

Thus there originates in London the following International News Service dispatch:

"LONDON, March 29, (INS).—Reports that the United States government has agreed to place its forces in Shanghai under the general British command were current here today, altho the reports stated that there is soma conflict between the leaders of the American and British forces in Shangbai as to how this co-operation shall be carried out."

This report is partially confirmed from Washington where it is admitted that, "a certain amount of co-operation between the various powers is recognized as necessary in the disturbed situation at Shanghai."

To be sure the Washington government, for the sake of appearances, tries to put on the face of independent action. The report from the White House offers this camouflage:

"American forces in China will be maintained under complete American control and direction, and will not be 'pooled' with the forces of other powers, or subjected to any international control, it was announced at the White House today, following the cabinet meeting.

". . . It was emphasized that the U. S. marines and bluejackets will retain their identities, and there will be no unified control."

The sugar-coating on this bitter imperialist pill should not fool American labor. If the enemy imperialists can pool their interests in fighting the Chinese workers and peasants, then the workers of the United States and Great Britain ought to be able to develop their solidarity in support of the Chinese working class.

In the House of Commons, Monday, Ernest Thurtle, Labor Party member from Shoreditch, called the attention of Sir Austen Chamberlain to the charge of General Chang Kai-Shek of the People's Armies, that the Nanking looting and outrages were committed by northern troops driven out when the Southern Army entered the city.

Of course, Austen Chamberlain, after the best manner of our own secretary of state, Kellogg, who has a lie mill all his own that is now busy trying to get him out of his latest dilemma in Mexico, answered:

"Information derived from British and American sources is to the contrary."

The lies of the American kept press are as welcome to Chamberlain as the support from American guns.

The same dispatch, as to what took place in the British House of Commons, declared:

"A few other Laborites questioned him (Chamberlain) regarding the happenings in Nanking, but the Laborite Leaders remained quiet, and the government benches shouted down anything that sounded like criticism of the government's policy."

Thus the toiling masses in Great Britain, and the situation is the same in the United States, must develop their own struggle, against their own imperialist traitor leadership, in support of the Chinese working class.

* * *

The clash in China just now centers in the Yangtze Kiang Valley, where "interests" of Great Britain are dominant among the imperialists. The British are invaders in the Yangtze. Every "right" claimed by the British, which Chamberlain says proud Britain will not surrender, is a privilege imposed on the Chinese people.

In his book "The Awakening of China," James H. Dolsen points out:

"When the other great powers at the close of the last century were parceling China among themselves into "spheres of influence," England secured the recognition of her priority rights for the exploitation of the Yangtze Kiang Valley.

"This district includes the rich central provinces in which her financiers have heavily invested in coal and iron mines. The very powerful British and Chinese Corporation, Ltd.,—formed jointly by the Hongkong-Shanghai Banking Corporation, the great English bank of the Orient, and Jardine, Matheson & Co., the leading British commercial firm in the Far East,—represents the interests of Great Britain in that part of the world. . . .

"While British commerce with the Orient suffered greatly during the World War and the trade of Japan and the United States largely increased, England is still the largest factor in China's world commerce thru her control of Hongkong.

"Of late years British capitalists have invested large sums in the erection of cotton factories, silk mills, etc. Indicative of the spread of their interests is the rise in the number of English firms in China from 236 in 1880 to 590 in 1913. Five of the largest cotton mills in Shanghai are British owned."

It is to protect these British "interests," as well as American investments, that will be reviewed in another article, that a new regiment of marines is being hurriedly assembled in this country to be rushed to the other side of the earth. The Anglo-American Imperialist Alliance is being knit together in defense of profits in the Orient. Before Nanking the murder guns of the navies of both Great Britain and the United States joined in slaughtering thousands of peaceful inhabitants.

Nanking was shelled contrary to all the laws of so-called "civilized warfare." Nanking is an unfortified city, teeming with half a million people. This would have been protection enough against the rain of death that only the weapons of modern warfare are able to inflict. But profits are at stake in Nanking and the People's army had taken over Nanking bringing it under the revolutionary banner and the laws of "civilized warfare" did not apply.

In the name of profits, the Anglo-American allies holds Shanghai. It plans to duplicate there, on a lesser scale, the wholesale murders that it committed at Nanking.

"WAR" on the Chinese people is the plan of the Wall Street imperialists. This can easily be read into the latest report of Minister to China MacMurray and Admiral C. S. Williams, commander of the Wall Street's Asiatic Fleet, that all Americans be withdrawn from Nationalist territory "and the undertaking of some action sufficiently strong to prevent perpetration of further violence by Chinese."

This is merely propaganda to help ease the American people into the slaughter. The violence in China has been the violence of the imperialist invaders under Anglo-American leadership. Against the Anglo-American imperialists the fist of Anglo-American labor in aid of the courageous, struggling Chinese working class.

The Baumes Law: A New Weapon Against Labor

By I. JEROME

Although the Baumes Crime Commission was ostensibly appointed by the New York State legislature to investigate the "causes and prevention of crime," not a single one of the twenty-old measures proposed by the Commission and written into law by the 1926 legislature gives evidence of the slightest attempt on the part of the sponsors of those measures to understand the causes of crime. The work of the Commission was seeming, conducted in utter disregard of causal relationship. Indeed, by its omission to give heed to a single bill designed against the mainspring of crime, by its complete silence regarding the present social system which is the source and the breeder of crime, the Baumes Commission has in effect denied causality to crime. Whatever investigation the Commission has made has been solely in the direction of punishment, and to that end it has effected the enactment of a series of laws that for sheer savagery, for blind, ineffectual vengefulness, should turn the heart of Mussolini green with envy.

In the light of capitalist justice the Baumes Laws are, of course, the proper and regular mode of procedure. Capitalism cannot eliminate the source of crime! The structure of capitalism is built on criminal foundations, and an axe at the base of crime would be an axe at the base of capitalism. To destroy crime Capitalism would have to destroy the marsh where crimes are bred. It would have to end the basis of the present economic system. It would have to put an end to the state where conflict is the condition of human relationship, where profit is made anti-social, and the innate quality of co-operation degenerates into competition. It would have to abolish the evil of classes. It would have to destroy the crime of private property and the vast pyramid of crimes built upon it. It would have to end exploitation, poverty, unemployment, wars. It would have to cease brutalizing human beings with toil and degenerating them with opium, exploining the frail bodies of children in mines and mills, cease driving girls and women in despair to the streets, cease wringing the brawn from workers in their prime, to throw them used-up on the scrap-heap, cease sending millions into the mouths of cannon. It would have to destroy the crimes on which it flourishes. IT WOULD HAVE TO CUT THE GROUND FROM UNDER ITS FEET. IT WOULD HAVE TO END ITSELF.

Capitalism does not end crime. It can only engage in a continuous building of an intricate, artificial, legal system for the protection of the source of its power—private property. Property commands all duties and is above all restraint. It is preeminent over social welfare and is holier than human life. Property is the Supreme Being in the Capitalist religion. All things serve it. And Justice serves it and enforces capitalism in a uniformed sentinel mounting guard, bludgeon in hand, before the sacred door of Property. Before the eyes of Justice human happiness may be violated, human brotherhood trodden under foot. Justice, the sentinel, is blind. He sees only the one concept that is his concern, the God in whose image he is made—Property, before whose inviolate door he has been commanded to stand, against the wails of Need, against the moans of Despair—bludgeon in hand.

The exclusively punitive character of the Baumes laws is apparent to all who study them. There is a law to strengthen the system of identification and detection of criminals. There is a law compelling physicians to report to the police any case treated for pistol-shot wounds. There is a law providing for the taking of finger-prints on arrest and before conviction. A number of laws have been enacted to make bailing very difficult. One law—worthy of the best days of Mitchel Palmer, provides for a joint trial, in the discretion of the court, of defendants jointly indicted, instead of a separate trial to which each defendant was previously entitled. Another law relieves the prosecuting attorney of the necessity of offering evidence immediately after his opening address. By making the opening address of the defense follow that of the prosecuter and not, as heretofore, upon the closing of the case for the State, the law hopes to hamper the defense. Then come the infamous series of sentence-dead-alings—the crowning success of the Baumes Punitive Expedition. For robbery or burglary in the first degree the punishment has been raised to a minimum of fifteen years. For the same offence in the second degree the maximum punishments have been increased from ten to fifteen years and from five to ten years respectively. To the existing penalty for felony five to ten years have been added to the first offense, ten to fifteen years to the second, fifteen to twenty-five years to the third, and life-sentence is made mandatory for the fourth offender. In addition there are laws setting obstacles in the way of appeals; a check has been put on executive clemency; indeterminate sentences have been extended by making two-thirds of the previous maximum sentence the new minimum; commutation of a sentence cannot be made to less than a year; the grant of parole has been restricted; and commutation for good conduct has been considerably diminished.

On such stuff is the salve our healers offer to the crime-infested body of society based. In an age when criminology has definitely established the economic substratum of crime, when statistics show the incontrovertible correlation of crime and economic conditions, when judges and lawyers in confessional moments, attest that practically every criminal case that comes before them is directly or indirectly chargeable to one of the many social evils resulting from our heinous economic system—in such an age the lawgivers of the Empire State of the greatest, the grandest, the most enlightened, etc., land in the world bring before the people with much pomp and circumstance a criminal code that takes no cognizance of the social order from which crime springs. The Baumes laws are an attempt to bring back mediaevalism. They will no more deliver us from crime than the rack and the torture-chamber in whose spirit they have been created. They are punitive and brutal in intent, procreated by reactionaries and procreating reaction.

In what way will the workers be affected by the Baumes laws? In one way or another every repressive law is utilized against labor. The Espionage Act, nominally a war-time measure designed against offenders who might give aid and comfort to the enemy, was turned into a savage onslaught on the labor and radical movements. The Clayton Act, notwithstanding its pro-labor sections, has been repeatedly turned against labor in times of strikes.

It stands to reason that the bosses will not be slow to utilize the Baumes laws against the workers on every protest. The fact that these laws are so framed that bail-labor language will not stand in the way of their being used against the workers. Militant workers are always felons in the eyes of the capitalist law; and all the laws against felony will be used against them. They will be fingerprinted and stigmatized. They will be refused bail. They will be arrested for strike-duties, and their offenses will be counted as felonies punishable with long prison-terms. They will be arrested in masses while picketing nud be given a blanket-trial to expedite their conviction and imprisonment.

The workers of New York must take a stand against the infamous Baumes laws. They must not wait until the laws have done their deadly work. They must also on the part of the bosses to throttle labor must be frustrated, every effort nipped in the bud. Organized labor throughout New York State must demand the immediate repeal of the monstrous Baumes laws and the abolition of the Baumes Commission.

Nanking, 1927.

We taught them decency and love,
The white man's brother's good will;
Tore down their temples and idols
And named the place Socony Hill.
We carried the gospel to coolies,
Made them swallow Jonah and Noah
Because blood is thicker than water
But oil is more costly than blood.

We're sending the marines to Nanking
The crusade is propelled by oil,
Christ's message will bark in shrapnel
Around Saint Socony's soil.
On speed the dividend boys
They'll shoot Chinks for their own good
Because blood is thicker than water
But oil is more costly than blood.

And Jesus grins from another hillock
For Golgotha is untouched by drill
And Christian oil may yet gush forth
To make it a Socony Hill.
We'd have you amend his slogans
For his was that old fashioned dud:
That blood is thicker than water—
Whea oil is more costly than blood.

—CHARLES RECHT.

NEW BOOK BY KOLLONTAY

By I. DE WITT TALMADGE.

COMRADE Alexandra Kollontay, the Soviet ambassador to Mexico, makes her literary debut, today, to the American reading public, with "Red Love," a psychological study of sex relations in the post-war period. It is one of the most thought stimulating books written for some time and will undoubtedly create a furore.

Very little is known in this country of the world's foremost woman diplomat. With the exception of a few articles printed in the Novy Mir in 1919, and later in The DAILY WORKER, nothing written by her has ever appeared in the American press. The only American journalist who ever gave a true portrayal of her was Louise Bryant in her "Mirrors of Moscow," published in 1923. It will therefore, be doubly interesting for the American worker, to read the book by this distinguished Comrade-diplomat who, in Russia, thoroughly considers the foremost authority on woman problems.

"Our criteria in sex morals are always changing," she writes in the introduction to her book. "There is never a standstill. There are merely periods in human history when the evolution of morals goes on more rapidly, other periods (with a general stagnation in all fields of life) when change seems to relax. Only half a century ago Dumas-fils wrote of a "divorcee" as of a fallen creature, while today France openly discusses the question of equalling the rights of non-legal mothers with those of legally married women. There remains less and less of the old bourgeois hypocrisy in our way of thinking and judging of sex morals.

"I do hope that this book will aid in combating the old, bourgeois prejudices. The moral values and shoe once more that we are beginning to respect woman, not for her 'good morals,' but for her efficiency, for her ingenuity with respect to her duties toward her class, her country and humanity as a whole."

THE QUESTION.

Who is your favorite contemporary author? Why?

THE PLACE.

Public Library, 42nd street and Fifth avenue.

THE ANSWERS.

W. Lee Thorne, 57 West 93rd street, textile salesman: "H G. Wells is my favorite. I believe he has the keenest insight into modern psychology and philosophy, coupled with an admirable style."

Lilian J. Levenson, 209 Prospect avenue, Bronx, college student: "John Erskina is my favorite contemporary author. Thank fortune for his scintillating wit! It's frothy, yes, but when it bubbles away, there's a clear, sweet liquid left. Three cheers for Helen and Galahad."

H. M. Landau, 340 Riverside Drive, writer: "I don't read any contemporary stuff. Arthur Schnitzler is my favorite; "Aldous Huxley is my choice, decidedly. His style of presenting the curious workings of the mind saves him from the boring tone of the psychologist. A philosopher, a stylist, a psychologist all in one—and an entertaining one, too!"

Hyman Bakstansky, 95 Haberton avenue, Staten Island, salesman: "James Joyce. He more than any other modern writer, appreciates the spirit of the times—the Zeit Geist. Not alone does he portray realistically the activities of men but probes beneath the surface, trying to get the motivations for men's behavior."

Dorothy E. Rivers, 1061 Osoclusko street, Brooklyn, college student: "John Galsworthy—I like the way he preaches, not from the pulpit but from the last pew."

EGDAMLAT SAYS: With the possible exception of H. G. Wells, none of the aforenamed authors have written anything of what might be called enduring significance. They have concerned themselves primarily with the petty problems of the individual—weltschmerz, introspection, however. He knows him to limn a pathological case in a most entrancing manner. I also admire Conrad as a stylist."

ENTOMB 300 MINERS AS DRIVE ON UNION STARTS

Torn Bodies of Chinese Workers Strew Nanking

U. S. and British Warships Pour Five Hundred Tons of Shells Into Crowded Streets

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

SHANGHAI, March 30.—The horrible details of the Nanking bombardment, when American and British ships poured over five hundred tons of shells into the crowded streets of the defenseless city, have just reached Shanghai.

That the object of the bombardment was to smash the Nationalist drive and not to rescue a few missionaries was clearly indicated by the reports received here.

The American command shelled not only the right bank of the Yangtse in order to "clear a path" to the warships in the harbor, but also the left bank of the river, where the Nationalist troops were pushing on against Pukow. The shot and shell from the American guns in the harbor opened a free passage for the Shantungese, who were attempting to leave the city.

Kill 7,000.

The imperialist guns swept the crowded streets of the city, killing and maiming 7,000 non combatants who had flocked from their houses to greet the victorious Nationalist troops. Shells from six inch guns ripped open the match-box houses in the workers section, while inflammatory missiles started countless fires throughout the city.

Thousands Homeless.

When the bombardment was over the torn and mutilated bodies of thousands of poorly-clad workers lined the streets. Malmed men, women and children squirmed in agony while the flaming walls of their burning houses fell about them. Thousands were forced from their homes by the flames, and wandered about the city searching for scraps of food.

The brutality of the bombardment has stirred Chinese throught the country. Huge meetings are being held in cities thruout the Yangtze basin to protest the slaughter of 7,000 peaceful Chinese citizens in Nanking.

More than 150,000 crowded the streets of Shanghai in a huge protest meeting Sunday. Groups of workers bore huge placards in Chinese, Russian and English calling upon the workers of the world to help them combat imperialism.

Denies Kuomintang Split.

Denying a split in the Kuomintang when interviewed by newspapermen after the meeting, Chiang Kai-Shek, Nationlist general, declared that the party is united in its present struggle. Replying to a question regarding his attitude towards Communists, Chiang said, "The Nationalist movement at the present stage is the means of achieving revolutionary ends. Therefore, consider all participating in this movement, regardless of their political faith, as members of the same party." Chiang bitterly scored imperialist powers for the bombardment of Nanking.

The flag of the General Council of Trade Unions was hoisted in the Chapei (workers') district yesterday afternoon before an enthusiastic mass of workers.

COMMENT made by Will Rogers on Americans in China is original enough to be worthy of reproduction here. He says: "Any person that will stay in the middle of a civil war for six months and don't know enough to even send his family out, it won't do much good to rescue him. You bring him back home and he will run right in front of a Ford. We had to shell that Chinese town to let our people know it was time to come out and be rescued. Yours for home missions."

WHY does not the United States send missionaries to Japan? Is it because the Buddhist darkness in which the heathen souls of the Japanese are enveloped is less spiritually deadly than the Confucian pall that hangs over the souls of the Chinese? Or is it because Japan is able to meet the bibles of the christians with the bayonets of the Shintoists? It is interesting to note that while the guns of the christian British and Americans were snuffing out the lives of peaceful Chinese the guns of the heathen Japanese were silent. Yes, it is quite evident that our missionaries are needed in the Orient.

THE United States is chock full of atheists, agnostics, evolutionists and other "criminals" that need the spiritual meditation of preachers that do not happen to be on the inside of a hoosegow for forgery, race murder or other crimes common to a christian society. Why is it that John D. Rockefeller, Gopy, Morgan and others keep a tight hold on their purse strings when appealed to for funds to save the souls of our native damned? Is it because saving souls does not pay spiritual dividends only when the saved can be induced to put their pesky in the profit-making yoke? We are willing to wager our hat, a good one in its prime, that the "heathen" Chinese could go to the devil without let or hinderance if they happened to live in a country that was not blessed with untold mineral wealth.

PHILADELPHIA HOLDS BIG PARADE TO FIGHT INTERVENTION IN CHINA

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The huge parade-demonstration and mass meeting held here mulled thousands of Philadelphia white and Chinese workers to demand "Hands Off China."

The line of march, starting at Broad & Race streets, stretched for four blocks, under a sea of banners and placards demanding no intervention in China, and the right of self-determination of the New China. Several thousand strong, including the members of the Kuomintang, Workers Communist Party, Young Workers Communist League, and the Pioneers, marched up Broad street to Locust and hence east to the Labor Institute, 8th & Locust streets. Enthusiasm ran high, and the capacious hall of the Labor Institute was overflowed within a few minutes of the parades' arrival.

Tribute to Dr. Sun.

The stage, where sat the seven speakers, was bannered and placarded galore, with a huge Chinese flag draped around the rostrum.

A solemn hush fell over the audience as all rose in silent tribute to the memory of Dr. Sun Yet Sen, while his departing message was read in Chinese and then translated in English. Then the co-chairman, Sherman Chang, turned the chair over to Alex Bail, chairman of the meeting.

Japanese Commander Commits Suicide Over Nanking Horror Scene

SHANGHAI March 30—Lieutenant K. Araki, in command of the Japanese destroyer Hinoki, arrived in Shanghai today from Nanking and went aboard the flagship of the Japanese forces and reported to the admiral and then committed suicide.

China Revolution Driven Forward By Oppression

Victory Now Assured Even Against Intervention

PEKING, March 30.—The Soviet Union's part in the present Chinese uprising is not basic and all the Russian citizens with the Nationalist forces might be dropped and the Cantonese movement would continue to succeed.

This official statement was made today by a Soviet official in Peking.

The Chinese Nationalist movement is not anti-foreign but anti-imperialistic according to the U. S. S. R. viewpoint.

Supporting the U. S. S. R. claim that the new spirit of China is not Russian-inspired it was pointed out that in the northern sections of China, where there are no Russian advisers, a strong and determined effort is being made to secure the return of the concessions and the abolition of unequal treaties.

The spirit of revolution and awakened nationalism will make up for what deficiencies the Nationalists may have in the matter of military strength, according to the Russian viewpoint. It was pointed out that during the Russian revolution, peasants armed with pitchforks, had no hesitancy in attacking armored trains.

The Nationalist army leaders, trained in the Whampoa cadet school, are regarded as being very efficient leaders by the Russians, who feel that now the Nationalists movement has moved on to the heights of success in Shanghai that it can not be checked, even though there be actual foreign intervention.

Recognition of the Nationalists and equalization of treaties by the powers is itevitable, according to the Russian views.

BORAH LAUDS U. S. INTERVENTION IN CHINA, NICARAGUA

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 30.—Senator Borah has come out with a flat justification of American intervention in China and Nicaragua.

In response to a question about American policy in China put forward at a convention of students at Syracuse University yesterday afternoon, Senator Borah declared, "The United States government is simply protecting the lives of its citizens there."

Defending by implication the bombardment of Nanking, Senator Borah continued, "The Government has gone no further and will continue to protect its citizens until the spirit of the revolution has died down."

In addition to advocating intervention in China, Senator Borah defended the despatch of American marines to Nicaragua. When a student at the conference asked, "Why do you object to our policy in regard to Nicaragua?" he replied, "I object to the Nicaraguan situation not so much because our marines are there to protect life, but because we recognized the wrong individual."

Motor Accident May Keep Ford Off Stand

Reed Cross Examines Sapiro To Prove Extortion

DETROIT, March 30.—The headlights in the Sapiro million dollar libel suit against Henry Ford today were the earnest attempts during cross examination of Sapiro by Jim Reed, to show that the wheat king exploited farmers, and the announcement by Ford's lawyers of the accident to their client.

"Drove Alone"

Their formal statement issued at the trial reads as follows:

"At 8:30 p. m., Sunday March 27th, a Ford coupe driven by Henry Ford and occupied alone by him, was forced off the south drive of Michigan Avenue a few feet east of the Rouge River Bridge, and plunged down a steep embankment into a tree. Mr. Ford states that he was forced over the embankment by a car which came upon him from behind as he emerged from the driveway of the Ford Laboratories at Dearborn. After a period of daze or unconsciousness, Mr. Ford walked with difficulty several hundred feet to the gate keeper on his estate who summoned Mrs. Ford.

"Dr. R. D. McClure, chief surgeon of the Henry Ford Hospital was immediately called and remained with the injured man until Tuesday night, when he was removed in an ambulance to the Henry Ford Hospital where he is now undergoing treatment. There has been a minor operation.

"Because of the lawsuit now in progress and the unavoidable and unfounded inferences that may be drawn, the facts were withheld from the public although communicated to the court Monday morning.

"Today, however, it dwsioped that the newspapers had somehow obtained information, and a statement is issued."

There is a report that a Studebaker car waited outside of the Ford plant until his ear started, then struck it and knocked it over the grade.

"Ford Not Alone"

It becams known today, also, that two yourths, Ernest Wilhelmi, 20, and Carl Machlvitz, 19, were eyewitnesses to the accident. Their story is radically different from the official explanation however. They say that Ford had someone with him, and that he ran off the grade himself, and was not hit by any other car.

It is expected that the accidant to Ford will keep him from testifying for at least two weeks. The trial may not iast that long, as the jury, which has had, in the line of duty, to listen to the accounting of hundreds of thousands of dollars, seems likely to be deprived of its pay. A report was made today to the court by U. S. Marshall Frank Newton that $2,000 was already owed for jury fees, with only $2,000 on hand. The failure of congress to provide appropriations for the federal courts is the reason.

Sapiro Got Big Half

The news of the accidant to Ford came to the court room just as Reed was cross-examining Sapiro.

Sapiro said his split of the law fees was sixty per cent., and admitted a suit with his partnors over the division.

The Missourian jumbed back to Sapiro's service with the California poultry producers. Sapiro said he got $25 a month before his salary was increased to $100 a month. He received special fees too from the producers and in 1922 he got $6,000 in all from the association.

The California Bean Growers paid him a retainer of $1,200 a year from 1918 to 1924 inclusive, Sapiro testified. In addition he received special fees amounting to $574 in 1918, $10,896 in 1919, $1,035 in 1920, $4,000 in 1921, $285 in 1922, $1,359 in 1923, and $5,218 in 1924. This mada a total of $31,761 Sapiro's firm received from the Bean Growers in seven years.

Sapiro also told of receiving $4,169 from the Central California Berry Growers in the same period. Reed was curious about every dollar received by Sapiro and his associates.

British Miners Preparing For Next Fight

Bosses Discriminate Against Militant Diggers

THIS is the third of a series of three articles specially written for The DAILY WORKER by Louis Zoobock, who recently finished a study of the situation in the British mining industry. While the miners have suffered a stunning defeat due to the treachery of the right wing leaders their militancy is still strong and they are preparing for another tussle with the mine owners and the capitalist government.—Ed.

Article III.

By LOUIS ZOOBOCK.

Miners Think of Next Time.

There is no doubt that at the present time the miners are on the bottom. They have been compelled by the united forces of the government, capitalists and treacherous leadership of the general council to accept dictated and unjust terms. But will they endure these terms for long? Will they wait until these forced "agreements" expire? All signs point to the contrary: the miners

Almost No Hope For Ehrenfeld Victims

Terrific Explosion Of Gas and Dust Could Have Been Prevented; Police Called In

BACKGROUND OF THE COAL MINING SITUATION

1. The Jacksonville contract (so-called because negotiated at a joint meeting of coal operators and union representatives in Jacksonville, Fla., 1924), expires at midnight tonight.

2. It provided for a basic wage scale of $7.50 for men working by the day, tonnage rates for contract coal digging and loading and fixed working conditions.

3. Following the signing of Jacksonville contract, described as the basis of stabilization of the industry which had expanded tremendously during the war period, the coal operators in the union fields began a systematic campaign to starve out the miners by widespread shutdowns extending over periods of from three months to two years as in the Illinois field. Violations of the contract working conditions in the mines still operating became common.

4. Expansion of operations in the non-union fields of West Virginia, Kentucky and other sections was undertaken with the result that today non-union tonnage totals about 70 per cent of all production.

5. Employment in the union fields reached a high point last summer and fall only as a result of the shortage in the world markets created by the British strike and the storing of coal by operators and consumers.

6. As a result of the bad conditions there developed in the union a strong left wing movement which, in addition to certain internal reforms, demanded a militant organization campaign in the non-union fields as the best method of strengthening the union.

7. National strikes were waged by the United Mine Workers in 1919 and 1922. The 1919 strike was outlawed by a federal injunction and called off by President Lewis, who issued a statement saying that "we cannot fight our government."

8. The coal operators are demanding a revision downward of the basic wage scale contained in the Jacksonville agreement.

9. President Lewis has discarded the established policy of a national agreement based on the central competitive field—Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania—and announced that the Policy Committee is ready to sign district agreements.

10. This policy is in direct contradiction to the decisions of the Indianapolis convention which went on record as being opposed to any "backward step."

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

CRESSON, Pa., March 30.—Between 300 and 500 miners working in the Ehrenfeld mine at South Fork, near Grafton, Pa., were today entombed by a terrific gas or dust explosion. There is practically no hope that they may be alive, as the force of the blast was sufficient even to wreck the small company office several hundred feet from the mouth of the drift. It occurred at 12:20 P. M.

A rescue crew which penetrated the drift found tons of debris piled high, blocking the path to the point at which the men were working. The roof is so badly shattered that temporary braces will have to be installed, as excavation goes forward.

Automobile loads of state police have rushed to the mine in readiness to suppress any attempt at a strike which might take place here, but now are being used to keep grief-stricken miners' wives and families outside of the roped-off area, behind which go on such rescue activities as the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Co., owner of the mine, sees fit to initiate.

At present the community is prostrated with horror, but already voices have been raised, demanding strict investigation. The U. S. Bureau of Mines is authority for the statement several years ago, that dust and gas explosions are preventable by proper inspection and use of rock dust.

Unionists Warn.

Union miners in adjacent territories point to the overwork, the rush, and deterioration of safety provisions in the Ehrenberg mines as a condition likely to become normal in all mines if the present union-smashing drive of the operators is successful.

Company Pleads Ignorance.

The Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Company has issued from Cresson a statement that its officials neither know what caused the explosion, nor how many men were at work in the

CHICAGO ELECTION CAMPAIGN HAS EXPOSED CAPITALIST POLITICIANS

By ARNE SWABECK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHICAGO.—Supporters of the various political rivals for the office of Mayor of Chicago are now beating their drums throughout the city, expecting that those who can make the most noise will get the major share of the spoils. The victor in these coming elections of April 5 may dispense over a payroll of 20,000 jobs and a yearly budget of $200,000,000. These indeed are attractive steak for capitalist politicians. Since the death of C. E. Ruthenberg there are no labor candidates in the field.

Favorite Candidate

Straw votes conducted in local theatres indicate "Big Bill" Thompson as the favorite candidate. He is now one of the most powerful factors in the C. B. B. T. clique.—The Crowe, Brundage, Thompson, Republican faction. Thompson draws his main economic support from those who figured prominently in the Illinois Slush Fund exposures, the big Utilities Corporation. The Chicago Traction companies now also adorn his list of financial backers. Mayor Dever, the Democratic candidate, seems to enjoy the support of the big financial and industrial interests as represented by the Chicago Daily News and The Daily Tribune. Since the defeat of Senator Heneen's candidate, Litsinger, in the Republican primaries, both papers have now turned towarfi the Democratic candidate.

CANTON HONORS DEAD MARTYRS OF 1910 REVOLUTION

100,000 March to Tomb Of Early Rebels

(Chinese Nationalist News Agency.)

CANTON, March 30.—The 17th anniversary of the martyrdom of 72 revolutionary heroes, who were killed in an abortive attempt, in 1910, to overthrow the Monchu imperial regime, was observed here yesterday. Bad weather failed to dampen the ardor of more than 100,000 paraders who marched through the streets of this city to the monument which stands on Sunflower Mountain in memory of the fallen patriots. (The monument is a pyramidal mound of greystone at the peak of which stands a replica of New York Harbor's Statue of Liberty.)

The procession was orderly. Police and military forces provided to maintain order had little else to do than to witness the march of the pilgrims through the streets.

The ceremonies at the monument were participated in by government officials, Kuomintang members, students, workers, peasants, cadets, soldiers, members of various organizations, and men and women of all classes.

RUSSIAN WORKERS SCORE NANKING MASSACRE; PLEDGE AID TO CHINA

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., March 30.—A manifesto issued by the Central Council of Trade Unions yesterday bitterly attacks the British and American imperialists for the bombardment of Nanking. Pointing to the successful struggle of Russian workers against exploitation, the manifesto attacks the Chinese workers and peasants to continue their heroic struggle against their foreign oppressors.

The complete text of the manifesto follows:

"The British and American imperialists have committed an unprecedented act of violence against the Chinese people. Under the cover of provocatory lies, and alleging that Nationalist troops had attacked foreigners, the British and American ships shelled Nanking with heavy artillery, killing seven thousand inhabitants and destroying hundreds of houses.

"This new atrocious act was committed because great Chinese masses have arisen in a struggle against foreign imperialism. This is not the first time that the imperialists have massacred Chinese toilers, but what has happened at Nanking leaves far behind it anything that has thus far been committed, even the Wanhsien and Shanghai shootings.

"Each time that the imperialists have attempted to drown in a sea of blood the struggle of the Chinese masses, the flame of hatred against the exploiters has grown stronger and stronger. The same thing will happen again. The unprecedented crime committed at Nanking will but strengthen the resolve of the toilers of China to carry their struggle thru to a complete victory.

"Workers and peasants of the Soviet Union have themselves experienced the benefits of bourgeois civilization. For four years they fought off the onslaughts of the imperialists and of their Russian white guard bands. The toilers of Russia can appreciate the events in China because those who are trying to crush the Chinese revolution waged war against us yesterday and are ready to repeat the experiment at the first suitable moment.

"Chinese workers under the leadership of their trade unions seized Shanghai upon the arrival of the Nationalist troops. It was against them that the international settlement has erected barbed wire entanglements.

"But the Chinese workers cannot fight the battle alone. They need the support of workers throughout the world. Send your greetings to the heroic Chinese workers and their glorious trade unions, fighting in the front line of the world revolution. The Central Council of Trade Unions of the Soviet Union calls upon all organized toilers of the Soviet Union to raise a voice of protest against the slaughter of Chinese workers.

"Hands off Awake new China! Down with the imperialist robbers! Long live the Chinese revolution!"

LESSIG, SPY ON PATERSON LABOR, TURNS MERCHANT

Bosses' Stool-pigeon For 14 Years

PATERSON, March 30.—Adolph Lessig, forger of a grievance union official, who for 14 years served as undercover informant of the International Auxiliary Co., labor spy corporation, has gone into business. He has opened a newspaper and magazine store, and is said definitely to be out of the spy game.

Workers here declare that the spy corporation dropped Lessig from the payroll when it saw he was no longer valuable, as he had lost all influence in the Associated Silk Workers.

Lessig was exposed in 1925 by Col. Casimir Pilsnau Palmer, a former Scotland Yard man, and formerly on the general staff of the U. S. naval intelligence. Palmer came across Lessig's name while making an investigation of the books of the International Auxiliary Co., which operates also under the name of the Eastern Engineering Co., at 17 West 60th St., New York. It is one of America's biggest labor spy concerns and has operated actively in the textile industries.

Formal charges were brought against Lessig by officers of the union and Palmer appeared to testify as to what he had seen in the spy bureau. Lessig failed to carry out the instructions of the union, which offered to assist him in a libel suit against Palmer in order to bring the matter into the courts. Instead he broke from the union and brought a suit for slander against the union official who had reed the charges against him at the trial.

The charges against Lessig declared him "guilty of conduct unbecoming a member of our union in that he has been in the employ of a private detective agency and furnishing information regarding our union, intended to be transmitted to our employers, and that he sent communications to the detective agency during the progress of the recent strike (1924) in the broad silk industry of Paterson.

Lessig's suit against the union official, Frank Fried, is pending in the Passaic county court. The union officials hope it will be pressed in order that the whole matter may be cleared up. Lessig declares himself ready to testify at any time as to what he saw on the books of the spy agency. He charges Fried and the International Auxiliary Co. with having shadowed him and with having attempted to persecute and discredit him since he first brought the charges against Lessig two years ago. Lessig hired both Paterson and New York detectives in an effort to "get" Palmer.

Suspension Appears Inevitable.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Complete suspension of soft coal mining in the central competitive union field on April 1, when the Jacksonville wage scale agreement expires, appeared inevitable today.

The coal operators association of Illinois was standing pat on its announced policy of shutting down its mines unless the United Mine Workers agree specifically, and in advance of negotiations, that they will sign contracts for a cut in the miners' already low wages.

Snub Policy Committee.

Not even the tempting prospect of separate agreements for the various union districts as suggested to the operators by the union policy committee yesterday will budge them from their determination to lock out the coal miners, use up the surplus stocks of coal, and then begin negotiations for worse conditions and lower wages.

Rice Miller, president of the Illinois Operators Association, has stated that his organization executive board meets in Chicago tomorrow, on the first day of the old agreement, but that it expects to have only formal decisions to make, the coal mine owners being united on the matter of a lock-out.

No Scabs In Illinois.

Miller also claims that organizations of coal companies in Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania have notified him that they will carry out the same policy.

"As far as the Illinois field is concerned," said Miller, "there will be no attempt to run the mines with strikebreakers after the suspension. We are not opposed to the union."

Miller said he knew of no Illinois companies that expected to sign individual temporary extensions of the existing contracts. "Complete suspension on April 1 appears inevitable," he said.

No scabs have been used in Illinois since the later strip mines at Herrin attempted to work with them, in the 1922 strike. The result was disastrous to the strikebreakers, who attempted to terrorize the neighborhood in the manner employed in other industries, and were beaten in the fight. Illinois is the very heart of union territory, being solidly organized, and including about a third of the membership of the United Mine Workers of America.

Miller's Claims Agreements.

Miller's statement that none of the Illinois operators will continue work after April 1 is contradicted. Approximately thirty bituminous coal operators, both independents and those affiliated with the Illinois coal operators' association, have completed agreements with the Illinois mine president (District No. 7 Illinois) United Mine Workers of America, announced today.

Fishwick, stating the list was incomplete, refused to make public the mines to be operated. He named only the United Electric Company mine at Danville, stating that the remainder were in all parts of the state, the majority being in northern Illinois counties.

Big Rent Signs Up.

The first announced break in the solid ranks of the operators in the central competitive field, comes, however, from Brazil, Indiana, where the Big Rend Coal Co., in the Indiana block coal region a small concern producing about 200,000 tons a year, has signed a temporary agreement to continue at the Jacksonville scale until a decision is made in the rest of the field.

The block coal field of Indiana is a separate district of the union, and is controlled by operators and union officials as something like the outlying districts in Montana, Wyoming, Iowa and such states as have already signed similar temporary agreements, for the duration of the strike or lockout unless terminated before by the company. It is expected that other block-coal companies will follow the example of the Big Bend.

Fight for "Check-off."

SCRANTON, Pa. (FP).—The miners' leaders in the three anthracite districts are making an issue of the "check-off" demand at the coming meeting of the anthracite conciliation board in Philadelphia, April 21st.

The conciliation board represents the union and the employers in the hard coal region. It is a higher court, whose job is to interpret the agreement and to settle grievances. The union is contending that the agreement of 1925, signed by Lewis of the anthracite strike of 1920-26, called for the "check-off." This the operators deny.

Has "Reciprocal" Clause.

In the text of the agreement is a clause calling for "reciprocal cooperation and efficiency." International President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America says the clause was understood to mean that the "check-off" would be applied. The "check-off" is a cooperative arrangement that has long been used in the union bituminous fields. It is a plan by which union dues are collected by the company payroll department from the men's monthly earnings and turned over to the U. M. of A.

The advantage of the "check-off" to the union is that it means one hundred pee cent organization in a given mine.

"Button strikes" are called to enforce hundred per cent membership and other forms of pressure are exerted, but they do not as thorough financial results as the "check-off."

Need Strike Funds.

With bituminous strikes to support, the International union needs all the dues that can be gotten from the anthracite, and the "check-off" is regarded as of the utmost importance.

The union brought up the issue at the last meeting of the conciliation board but the operators managed to delay it till the next meeting. The board is presided over by a chairman from outside the industry who will have the balance of power.

The "check-off" decision will depend on the official interpretation that will be given to the "reciprocal cooperation and efficiency" clause. Lewis will be the chief witness for the union as to the operators' verbal assurances that the clause meant the "check-off." He will be seconded by Rinaldo Cappellini, Andrew Mattay and Christ Golden, president of the three hard coal districts. An important witness will be Richard I. Grant of the Hudson coal interests, who played the leading role in arranging the settlement.

Coal Operator Arrested.

SCRANTON, Pa. (FP).—The question whether a wealthy coal operator can continue to wreck the streets of south Scranton and endanger the lives of its inhabitants will be tested in the Lackawanna county courts. Robert Barron, president of the Baron Coal Company, has been arrested on a charge of violating the Kohler mine cave law.

Miners' wives have been living in a state of terror as portions of the streets caved in one after another, over the tunnels of the Barron Coal Company, not far underneath the surface of the city. Houses began to settle, it is feared as though at any moment buildings might crash through. At last a citizens' petition brought action from the district attorney.

Leaders of both locals are determined to organize the large number of barbers who remain outside of the union. Leaders have hitherto neglected to do their own real organization campaign.

Organize the Traction Workers

ARTICLE XIII—BETWEEN STRIKES; THE RELIGIOUS ISSUE

By ROBERT MITCHELL

The story of the traction workers appears to be a record of successive strikes. In reality the struggles for organization are merely highlights in years of obscurity and consistent exploitation. The years between strikes were not of course as peaceful to the Interborough would have the public believe. Underneath the surface there raged at all times the pent up forces of bitterness and discontent. Throughout these in between years we find records of consistent dissatisfaction for "agitating." Men were always being "put on the carpet" for real or fancied attempts at arousing their fellow workers to the injustice of their conditions.

Fostering Superiority.

The methods by which the Interborough succeeded in holding down its men have already been related. The spy system was here developed to a high art. The normal divisions between workers in different kinds of occupations were played upon until there was built up chasms of craft pride and pretended superiority of one grade over another.

In addition, one other means of dividing the men was utilized. This method must be carefully explained and clearly understood because it has played a considerable part in preventing organization in the past. During the last strike it acted as a barrier to unification of the man's ranks. Unless it is overcome and its true nature exposed, the next attempt of the men to better their conditions will likewise be placed in jeopardy.

Dividing the Workers.

This is the method of dividing the men on the basis of their religious beliefs, Protestant against Catholic.

Beginning with the highest officials of the company down to the lowest worker in the shops, the personnel is divided on this issue. The important thing to note is that this division is not spontaneous and deliberate plan of the Interborough.

Frank Hedley, for instance, is a protestant and a Mason. Vice President George Keegan is a catholic and a Knights of Columbus member. If you were to go down the line of the road superintendents, the shop foremen, the inspectors, the dispatchers, you would find a similar pairing of men on this basis. The head of power, instead of a division might, for example be a Mason. In this case, it would inevitably follow that his assistant would be a Knight.

Organize Clubs.

These are also numerous clubs and associations which are interborough based on this distinction. Such are the catholic and Masonic Transportation Clubs. These clubs, organized manifestly to promote the welfare of the service, are really agencies utilized by the company better to control the men. The rank and file members of these clubs are not, of course, all aware of the true part played by them. The controlling officers, however, are quite certain of their purposes.

A new man coming to the Interborough is immediately given "the once over." Then an attempt is made to line him up where he belongs. Once "assigned" to one or the other of the divisions, he is thereafter kept from learning the true facts of the other side. The "dollar-a-day" men play an important part in this connection by spreading false rumors and deceptions among the men to foster suspicion and hatred of the opposing group.

Fool the Workers.

Especially during elections does this religious prejudice play an important role. The information is broadcast that the particular candidate is a Knight oe a Mason. The suggestions are thrown out that he is seeking office merely to control the men foe tha interest of the paeticular body to which he is attached.

To what extent this division may be carried and the danger of the practice is vividly illustrated from the experience of the last strike. One of the leaders of the motormen before the strike was a man by the name of Post. Post is a mason. The evidence seem to be, though we cannot say definitely, that he was knowingly or otherwise as a tool to offset the growing popularity of Ed. Lavin who is a catholic. The strong fact about Lavin had always been his careful avoidance of this issue. It seems that this did not satisfy Post and underneath the surface he always utilized the fact that Lavin was a catholic to influence certain men.

Was Unsuccessful.

That he was strikingly successful in dividing the motormen on this false issue is clearly evidenced from the 100% walkout last July. Significantly enough, however, it was Post whom the interborough used as the first means of breaking the ranks of the men. As is now well known, Post turned traitor, went over to the company and attempted to draw his fellowers with him.

The company union is likewise controlled upon this basis of division. Paddy Connolly is a catholic while some of his right hand men in the company union machine are protestants. The delegates of the "Brotherhood" are lined up as soon as possible into the various clubs. Instructions are always outlined to them as to their activities among the man. The fact of common religious connections or membership in the same fraternal organization is utilized for the low purposes of beating down the men and casting suspicion and lies among them.

Sent Telegrams.

During the strike, both the catholic and masonic organizations sent telegrams urging the men to return to work. Other influences, direct and indirect, were utilized to break down the moral of the workers.

The lesson of these facts is clear: The interests of the workers are one! All issues which result in the fact of division among the workers will be found to have as their source the propaganda of the bosses. The capitalists use religion just as freely as they use the government and the police force to maintain and carry out their purposes. The religious habits and instincts of the American workers are still strongly ingrained.

But the workers must realize that like all other forces in the life around them, these habits arise out of the conditions under which we live. These conditions are, of course, controlled by the capitalists. They therefore control the religious feelings just as easily as they control the feelings of patriotism. The traction workers, like all others will realize that the only dependable force is the solidarity of the working class.

drift. The company estimates that probably 200 were entombed, but other observers say the number is certainly much higher. At times as many as six hundred men have worked in the part of the mine destroyed.

The officials of the U. S. bureau of mines have sent a mine rescue car with government equipment from Herby, Pa., and the state department of mines has also been notified.

Suspension Appears Inevitable.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Complete suspension of soft coal mining in the central competitive union field on April 1, when the Jacksonville wage scale agreement expires, appeared inevitable today.

The coal operators association of Illinois was standing pat on its announced policy of shutting down its mines unless the United Mine Workers agree specifically, and in advance of negotiations, that they will sign contracts for a cut in the miners' already low wages.

FASCISTS RENEW PERSECUTION OF ITALIAN WORKERS

Hundreds to Face Trial By Field Court Martial

PARIS, (By Mail).—After the period of deportations and arrests, a period of huge trials against representatives of the working class, who dared to stand up in defiance of the Fascist terror, is now setting in. Numerous trials are in preparation, most of which will be brought before the Field Court Martial. Considering that the Court Martial is composed of officers of the Fascist militia, one may conclude that the slightest offence, such as the distribution of leaflets, or an insult of Mussolini, etc., will be severely punished.

Apart from the numerous small trials, there are also several monster Communist trials in preparation. Thus, 30 Communists were arrested about 7 months ago in Cantania (Sicily) on the charge of being agents of the Communist Party and the International Red Aid, and of preparing an armed rising against the Fascist dictatorship. Although no documents were found on the arrested comrades to prove that they had any such intentions, the Fascist government considers their Communist Party membership as sufficient evidence against them.

Police Arrest Workers.

Another trial will involve about 50 workers, members of various political parties, who met in the vicinity of Tarrant to discuss some immediate problems concerning their every-day struggles. The police discovered the meeting and arrested all present on charges of high treason. The prisoners have been kept in prison for months without knowing what charges were made against them. The Tarrant workers are showing their solidarity by collecting money which they place at the disposal of the IRA.

About 60 comrades were arrested some fourteen months ago in Bari; they are still kept in prison without any charges having been brought against them. The investigating magistrate made a plea for the liberation of some of these comrades but the public prosecutor objected; now that Emergency Powers are being introduced, the fact that they are members of the Communist Party will be sufficient ground for passing heavy sentences upon them.

Leaflets as Evidence.

Another trial is being prepared in Florence. Also in this case 60 Communists, who have already been imprisoned for about a year will be tried for plotting against the existing order. Some Communist leaflets and a circular letter of the Central Committee of the Party, found in the possession of one of the arrested comrades, will be used as evidence. The trial was scheduled to take place shortly, but has been postponed, evidently, also with the view of bringing it before the court martial. Similar mass trials, almost exclusively against Communists, are being prepared in Verona, Padua, Trieste, Bologna and Rome. In Bologna there are 71 comrades under charges, and another 23 were arrested a few days ago.

One trial which may well be considered as a trial against the Communist Party, merits special consideration. Many comrades arrested before and after the attempt on Mussolini's life, among whom are such prominent leaders of the Communist Party as Gramsci, Terasini, Bibolli, Scoccimaro and others, are accused of having plotted against the State. The scheduled individual trials of some of these comrades were all suspended and all of them will have to face the court martial in a body.

A Beloved Leader.

The attitude of the population to these trials may be judged from the ovations the especially beloved Comrade Gramsci received on his way to Milan, from Ustica island, where he had been in exile. In Neapoli, workers brought him food and cigarettes to the prison, and on leaving the next morning, women workers brought him coffee and bread to the station. All along his journey, the stations were guarded by police so as to prevent solidarity demonstrations.

The Italian workers have not been frightened by the Fascist terror, and the pending trials will only make them still firmer and more determined fighters in the struggle.

Australian Agent of Employers' Government Refuses Workers' Plea

SYDNEY, Australia (By Mail).—That before the end of 1926, the Industrial Commissioner in New South Wales (Mr. Fiddington) threw a bombshell among the ranks of the workers of that state by side-stepping the declaration of an effective basic wage. He laid down the basic wage at $20.16 per week (exactly the same as it was during the previous 15 months, despite the rise in the cost of living) and recommended that the government introduce legislation to make provision for childhood endowment.

He also stated that $25.44 was a reasonable wage for a man, wife and three children. The workers' representatives on the commission submitted a minority report recommending a basic wage of $31.20 and the employers' representatives thought that $18.84 was enough to live on. The mass of the workers are furious at government declare an effective basic wage, and are demanding that the government declare an effective basic wage. They are all the more indignant because the conciliation committee's chairmen have been refusing to grant increases in wages because of the expected rise in the declared basic wage.

MINERS STRIKE AS GOVERNMENT INCREASES HOURS

Railroad Men Failed To Back Coal Diggers

MELBOURNE, Australia (By Mail) (FPI).—About 1,000 men employed at the brown coal mines near Melbourne, and owned by the Victorian State government, ceased work as a protest against an award of the Arbitration Court which fixed their hours of work at 48 per week, whereas previously the majority of the men had worked only 45 hours a week. The men demanded a 44-hour week, and made overtures to the engine drivers and firemen to assist them in the fight. Unfortunately that assistance was not forthcoming and the miners had to fight the issue on their own.

The Melbourne Trades Hall Council's Dispute Committee took the matter up and held several conferences with the government and finally at a mass meeting of strikers the strike was declared off on the following terms: No victimization, and several small points satisfactorily agreed to, the question of hours to be left to the Arbitration Court. Now they, the short sat and refused to reduce the hours of work, but gave the workers a sop to keep them quiet in the shape of a day to increase in wages.

German Reactionaries Bring Up For Passage Bill For Ten Hour Day

BERLIN, March 30.—Bitter denunciation has risen from every corner of Germany at the 10-hour bill which the new Reich government, dominated by big employers through the Nationalist party, has just brought out.

"This bill," says the Berlin office of the Intl. Federation of Trade Unions, "has relegated the German government to a place among those backward, and yet native governments, which are still seriously of opinion that they can suppress the eight-hour day. Belgium has ratified unconditionally. France is ready to ratify, and in Britain matters are at least so far that the adherents of the conservative government monopoly publicly and unequivocally in favor of ratification, and will ultimately force ratification through. In fact, the general trend is towards ratification. And yet the reactionary parties in Germany are still opposing it in deadly earnest."

MARINES 'FIGHT' IN NICARAGUA BECOMES 'BATTLE'

Navy Enlarges On First Account of Firing

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The firing on the marine corps plane near Managua, Nicaragua, which was yesterday officially stated to be an isolated incident in which some unknown person on the ground shot at the aviator, is now seized upon as the basis for the announcement of a regular battle.

The navy department today says that a detachment of several hundred Liberals engaged the plane with machine guns and rifles, that the plane replied with its machine guns, and as the its fliers were not hit, the propellors and tail were riddled.

The Constitutional army, supporting President Juan Sacasa against the Wall Street hireling Diaz, whom the United States recognizes as president of Nicaragua, has been restraining its natural fury against the American marines who snatch away all its victories over Diaz by occupying "neutral zones." Under international law, they have excellent grounds for attempting to drive the invading marines from the country, but in spite of the navy department story it is not believed that they have yet resorted to hostilities.

Largest Jewish Farmer Colony Is Founded in U. S. S. R.; Has 27,000

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., March 30.—The largest Jewish agricultural center in the U. S. S. R. was recently formed in the Kherson district when the Soviet government recently apportioned 50,000 hectares of land in the district to the Jewish agricultural community.

In the last two years 15,000 Jewish settlers have founded 38 new settlements in Kherson. These settlers together with the 12,000 Jewish colonists already occupying land there form a Jewish agricultural population of 27,000 people.

The newly-organized Kherson Jewish area, which will have a regional Executive Committee seated in the Seyde-Menukhe colony, will be made up of six Jewish village Soviets. The remaining Jewish settlements are located near the Novo-Borzalav colony and are administered by separate village soviets.

The elections to these soviets in the recent electoral campaign aroused a great deal of interest in the district.

Startling Progress!

"Lightning changes in The DAILY WORKER," one of our friends has called them. This is what has taken place in the paper during the course of the last few weeks. This is but a slight taste of what is coming. With our removal to New York, The DAILY WORKER has made a bold leap forward in the field of labor journalism, so much so that it has already aroused the deep ire of Green, Woll and the rest of the reactionary gang.

It is this ability to make lightning changes, when the situation demands it, that is a necessary qualification of a revolutionary organization. It is this faculty which insures our movement against the dead hand of tradition and conservatism. It is this ability which was one of the outstanding qualities of Comrade Ruthenberg. It is this tendency toward rapid self-improvement in our paper which must be encouraged in every possible way.

There is no better way of insuring the introduction of new features and even more interesting matter than by the building up of a large Sustaining Fund for the purpose. The Ruthenberg DAILY WORKER Sustaining Fund is a guarantee of the growth and development of our paper. Upon the size of the Sustaining Fund, upon the energy and enthusiasm with which it is supported, will depend the amount of "startling progress" we can make in the future. British Miners Prepare for Next Fight will rise again; they cannot and will not be crushed. The lessons of the last lockout and, there is no doubt, that the victors of today will live to regret their unjust treatment of the miners.

Already the coal fields are seething with revolt. The miners' reply to the regime of oppression, wage-cutting at the present time is a series of guerrilla lightning strikes throughout the mining fields of Great Britain. In Fifeshire, lightning strikes have already taken place in some of the collieries—in particular, Gelorang and Rawhill, where the men struck against victimization and the refusal of the manager to make men up to the minimum wage.

In both instances the men made a magnificent response to their local leaders, and remained on strike for two days until their demands were conceded.

In Bickleton Main Colliery (Yorkshire), in the middle of December, 5,000 men stopped work, refusing to work with scabs. In the Cambria collieries, 10,000 miners struck for one day, on January 24th, as a protest against the victimization of active men, and in order to enforce the observance of long established customs concerning the supply of house coal. These are merely a few examples of the many lightning strikes which are raveling like wild-fire throughout the mining regions. And it must be stated that in most cases the miners win their demands.

But these lightning strikes and guerrilla warfare are merely means to gain some immediate demands, such as reinstatement of victimized comrades, the enforcement of local victories gained through long years of struggle, etc. Besides this, the miners look out for the day of victory, our fight against the employers; they are already beginning to prepare for "next time." The miners are now more than ever alive to the fact that only power counts. And power in the first instance consists in building up machinery of struggle suitable to meet the combined forces of capitalism. This machinery must be placed in the hands of trusted and tried class fighters.

Therefore, the miners' task, which is also the task of the Miners' Minority Movement, reduces itself: 1) to rebuilding the Miners' Federation into one National Industrial Union and, 2) to building up a new and fighting rank-and-file which the miners were lacking during the last lockout.

The lack of effective, centralized organization, has been one of the greatest weakening forces throughout the whole lockout. The cause of this is to be found in the structure of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain.

The M. F. G. B. is merely a federation of county or district unions, which have their own executive committees, and who until recently conducted all the local and district fights and negotiations. Of these the largest are South Wales, Yorkshire, Scotland and Cheshire.

Several of these constituent county associations are themselves federations of small unions retaining to a large degree their own autonomy.

The stated objects of the federation are simply:

(a) To provide funds to carry on the business of the Federation;

(b) To safeguard and promote the industrial and trade interests of the affiliated membership;

(c) To provide funds to safeguard and promote the political and legislative interests of the affiliated membership.

The machinery of the Federation is composed of national officials, Executive Committee, Annual and special conferences. The national officials are chairman, vice-chairman, treasurer and secretary, the first three being chosen by the national executive.

The secretary of the Federation is a permanent official, but is also a member of the Executive. He is elected directly by ballot of the 800,000 members of the Federation. He is the only paid official, while all the other national officials are paid by the respective county associations of which they are leaders.

Between conferences the conduct of the business of the MFGB is vested in an executive committee, consisting of seven members. This executive committee is responsible to the delegate conference, consisting of nearly 200 delegates elected under varying rules from the county associations.

For purpose of policy, the delegate conference is the sovereign governing body, but this sovereignity is limited in two ways. First on supremely important questions such as the declaration of a strike, or the termination of either a strike or a lockout, the membership is consulted by means of a ballot vote. Secondly, by the method of referring its decisions back to districts for final ratification. It is the last method that proved to be a great source of weakness during the last strike; the county associations were in the hands of reactionary leaders, who were not interested in carrying out decisions of the delegate conferences. And when the South Wales proposals were adopted no district felt it was under a direct obligation to carry them out.

Still more, attending a delegate conference of the MFGB is not looked upon, in many cases, as an important duty, but as a kind of excursion or pleasure trip. And in many districts the practice has been to give each miners' lodge a turn to send a delegate. As a result, at every national conference since the lockout, a different delegate has been sent. This greatly demoralized the work of the conferences.

The county associations are in most cases older than the Federation. They have their own traditions, history and customs. They have a full-sized administrative machine, and their own finances, accumulated funds, contributions, benefits, etc.

All these things prove conclusively that the MFGB lacks central authority. It is more of a louse alliance of mining unions than a strongly knit centralized body. The members of the central executive committee sit there not so much as responsible for the whole of the minefields, as ambassadors representing the separate county associations.

This machinery proved to be a failure in the last lockout and, in order to successfully fight the combined forces of capitalism, it must be supplanted by a national industrial union with a fighting leadership. This great task is already being carried out by the minority movement. It has already drawn up a proposed plan for the amalgamation of the existing unions into one Miners' Union. This plan is being circulated throughout the lodges of Great Britain for discussion. The most active members of the minority movement are being thrown into the coal fields to carry on the agitation for this change. And, it can be stated, that this agitation is already producing good results.

Every coal field is discussing this most urgent problem and the M. M. is assured of the acceptance of the principle of the Union. In a letter from Scotland written by two miners, we read. "The question of reorganization is occupying the mind of our National Union. It is apparent that the formation of a Scottish National Union cannot be long delayed. In Scotland we have about 80 county unions. The defect of such a system is apparent in organization. A strong powerful machine much be built up in Scotland which will abolish all these small unions, with their glaring deficiencies.

"It is hoped that the reorganization of the Scottish coalfields will not be long delayed, as Scotland has an important part to play in the building up of the National Miners' Union of Great Britain" ("The Miner, January 29th, 1927).

Similar reports come from other districts. Resolutions are being passed in the districts as well as in many lodges demanding the reorganization of the MFBG into one miners' union, on the lines proposed by the miners' minority movement.

The changing of the machinery also means the removal of the incompetent local officials and county bureaucrats of the Straker-Vorley type. This process is also beginning to develop. From all quarters comes news of successes registered by the minority movement men in their candidature for lodge offices. The old reformist gang is being respectfully removed. They are being gradually superceded by fighting militants, in some instances with tremendous majorities.

The last miners' lockout is only a beginning of a long series of struggles which will decide the fate of British capitalism. In these struggles the miners will play a decisive role. Thought at present defeated, the miners are neither dismayed nor destroyed. Their spirit, as Will Lawther, the fighting leader of Durham puts it, "is the spirit that laughs at tyrants and 'will break them." And this they will accomplish by a complete re-organizations of their trade union machinery and by supplanting of the old reformist leadership by a new revolutionary leadership, which must come from the ranks of the minority movement.

The United Mine Workers Face the Greatest Crisis In Its History

The most disgraceful surrender in the history of the American labor movement has been made by the Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers. The capitalist press is jubilant.

A fair sample of the comment is the following from the New York World:

"It is a source of satisfaction to friends of industrial peace to find the United Mine Workers making a proposition to the operators in the bituminous coal field providing for the continuance of work in the mines, pending negotiation of a wage agreement in April. In the usual course nothing less than a suspension of work in this field would be declared on April 1.

"This is a move in the right direction. Nor is this the only concession the miners are making. Accepting the operators' position that differing conditions in different states make an interstate conference and agreement impossible or impracticable, the miners propose that district scales be made. Thus President Lewis and his colleagues among the officials of the miners' organization have signified a disposition to go as far as possible to prevent a suspension that would be costly to the public. This recognition of public interest in an industrial controversy involving a basic industry is highly commendable."

Unfortunately for the coal miners President Lewis is supposed to represent them. Actually he appears in this life and death struggle of the most important union in the American Labor movement as a representative of the "public"—that mythical entity which is used to justify all attacks on workingclass and its living standard.

The New York World and the other capitalist papers are proving the charges made against the Lewis machine by the Communists and the left wing in the miners' union. We have said time and time again that Lewis does not fight for the interests of the miners and his surrender without even an attempt to strike a blow, his reversion to the futile and fatal policy of district agreements, is the crowning corroboration of our statements.

Lewis talks peace while the union is being cut to pieces. He weeps for the public while the non-union territories are strangling the United Mine Workers of America.

Cynically the New York World says:

"Unless the primary object of the operators is to take advantage of the situation to wreck the miners' organization, some basis of agreement which takes into consideration the varying conditions in the different districts ought to be possible."

The surest way to destroy the miners' union is to substitute district agreements for one uniform national agreement and this is what Lewis has agreed to do. "The primary purpose of the operators" IS to destroy the miners' union and Lewis is playing into their hands while he prates of the public interest.

Lewis has thrown away the greatest weapon the miners ever forged—the national agreement for which the coal diggers fought years to obtain.

This is the labor leader who wars on Communists and other militant workers, boosts his salary to $12,000 per year and spends the union money organizing fake delegations to conventions instead of organizing the non-union fields.

The UMWA faces the greatest crisis in its history. The "Save the Union" bloc must play the role its name implies—it must fight uncompromisingly for its program of no district agreements, no wage cut, organization of the non-union fields and honest and militant leadership.

It must rally the rank and file to its program and to save the union is its immediate task.

The Nanking Massacre

Details slowly coming thru the deluge of lies reveal that the bombardment of Nanking by British and American warships is one of those bloody and wanton atrocities which redden the path of imperialism.

Five hundred tons of metal and explosives were poured into an unfortified city and its helpless population. Not only was Nanking laid in ruins but Pukow was shelled and burned. Both sides of the Yangtse were bombarded and one gets the picture of noble British and American naval heroes, their warships anchored in the river, as safe as if they were in the Hudson, murdering with modern artillery men, women and children unable to defend themselves. No more cowardly proceeding is recorded by history.

But the result has been to strengthen the anti-imperialist drive of the Chinese masses and with the bodies of the 7000 victims of the British and American murderers will be buried the corpse of imperialism in China.

No more costly target practice has ever been indulged in by the gunboats of Britain and America.

TELEGRAPH WORKERS LOSE OUT ON BONUSES

By SIDNEY TEPPER.

"Why did we get a smaller bonus this year compared with last"—is the question asked by the workers of the Western Union Telegraph Co. The company made more money and did a greater business, during the last year of 1926 than in the previous year.

Some workers simply shug their shoulders: "We do not know how they figure the bonus, how much they have to have before they give us something. One thing we do know. This year we got only a half of the sum received last year."

Less Bonus—Fewer Jobs.

Others who understand the company's figures, state: "The Western Union Telegraph Co., has spent about four million dollars for installation of new simplex automatic machinery and other improvements. This was taken out of the profits and figured in as expenses, therefore, we received a smaller bonus. We paid with our bonus for new improvements. The immediate results of these improvements already has been felt by the Morse operators who were either laid off or put on part time basis.

Plenty of Net Profit.

The sum taken in during 1926 was 136 million. Net profit,—after deducting maintenance expenses, depreciation, repair taxes and appropriations for new contracts—was 15¾ million dollars. Last year's total income was 129 million, with a net profit of 15 million dollars.

The big appropriations for new circuits accounts for almost the same net profit as a year before, although the business exceeded by 7 million dollars that of last year.
